Humanity, surrounded by four Happy Children, dances onto the scene. The music for her entrance is of a light and happy strain, but as soon as she has reached the foreground it changes to a more solemn march. Slowly from one side of the scene enter a group of weary refugees, who advance slowly toward Humanity, halting timidly at the side. One of the refugees steps forward and holds out her child to Humanity, who takes it in her arms. She contrasts the sad-faced, poorly-dressed refugee children with her own little ones.

Humanity goes to the back of the scene and summons Justice, who advances slowly and impressively to the foreground. Justice is followed by two aides. Humanity points out the refugees to Justice and emphasizes the contrast between the two groups of children. Justice dispatches her aides to summon the nations to the cause of Humanity.

They go out on either side of the foreground and return immediately, ushering in the nations of the world, who advance from either side, making an obeisance to Justice and Humanity. They take their stand on either side of the entrance, at the back of the scene, forming an aisle. The music becomes more martial in character, and the symbols of modern warfare, the Warrior, the Red Cross, the War Loan, Food Supply enter and proceed in the front of the stage, pausing before Justice and Humanity.

At this moment there is a loud blast of a trumpet or horn; Humanity and Justice each step to one side of the stage, and the symbols of war group themselves beside them, the Warrior and the War Loan standing beside Justice, and the Red Cross and Food Supply beside Humanity. While the band plays the audience sings the "Star Spangled Banner" and Freedom enters, followed by two aides, who carry as a background for her a large American Flag. Freedom advances to the center of the scene, through the aisle made by the various nations. When she has reached the foreground the various nations break their aisle formation and take their position on either side of the stage immediately behind Freedom, the Symbols of War, Justice, and Humanity. They raise their flags and all join in singing the "Battle Hymn of Republic," which completes the pageant.

At the close of the pageant the various characters should be arranged in the following order:

Freedom, her aides holding the American Flag immediately behind her, in the center of the stage. On one side of her and in a curved formation are the Red Cross, Food Supply, Humanity, and the Happy Children; on the other side are the warrior, War Loan, Justice, and the group of refugees. Immediately behind this first line and also arranged in a semicircle, are the nations of the world, with those representing the principal allies, the United States, England, France, and Italy, in the center. If it is found advisable to have the actors march off the scene, Freedom should lead the way, followed by Justice and Humanity and the symbols of war, and then by the nations.

Costumes.

The picture is entirely symbolic and all costumes should consist of loose classic draperies. They are simple and easily made. No gauze or cheesecloth should be used, as these are among the needs of the Red Cross, and should therefore be conserved. It is possible to obtain equally good effects with muslin or other inexpensive material. The garments can be home dyed. Care should be taken to have colors harmonize with each other.

Humanity.

A girl garbed in a blue gown ornamented here and there with slight touches of red and white. She is a light and happy figure. The children who accompany her are dressed in soft colors (pink and blue).

Refugees.

A group consisting of one old man, two women, and four children, dressed in ragged gray robes.

Justice.

A man or woman clad in a purple gown, and carrying the symbolic scales of justice in one hand and a sword in the other. The two aides of justice are dressed also in purple or in mauve trimmed with purple.

Warrior.

A man in a robe, symbolizing an ancient warrior, carrying a shield and sword.

Red Cross.

War Loan.

A man or woman dressed in green, carrying two money bags.

Food Supply.

A girl dressed in yellow, carrying a sheaf of wheat in her arms.

Freedom.

A tall woman dressed in a white robe. Immediately behind her come two aides, also in white, who hold behind her, as a background, a large American Flag.

The Nations.

Girls dressed in white classic gowns, each having the flag of one of the nations. If the community has a foreign group not represented among the allies, but in sympathy with the United States in the war, such a group might appropriately be represented among the nations. The following is a list of the allies:

United States	Japan	Nicaragua
England	China	Montenegro
France	Belgium	Brazil
Italy	Serbia	Liberia
Russia	Greece	San Marino
Panama	Roumania	Siam
Cuba	Guatemala	Portugal

The following is a list of foreign peoples which might be included if they are represented in the community and desire to express their loyalty to the cause of freedom:

Finns	Hungarians	Croatians
Swedes	Armenians	Dalmatians
Danes	Lithuanians	Dutch
Norwegians	Poles	Spaniards
Assyrians	Czechs-Slovaks
	(Bohemians)

It adds to the value of the pageant if a nation can be presented by a native member of its group in the community.

In working out a pageant of this sort it is suggested that the chairman of the celebration committee avail himself of the advice and aid of the local librarian or school-teacher, or anyone in the community having special experience or talent for this sort of work.

"Give Boy Farmers An Honest Chance"

(By Frank B. McClain, Chairman Pennsylvania Agricultural Labor Service Committee.)

The U. S. Boys' Working Reserve as a source of farm labor gives promise of good results; in fact, it promises to be by far the best agency for relief in the existing farm labor shortage. In a few sections of the Commonwealth some farmers take a very narrow view of the proposition. * * *

Agricultural preparedness is just as necessary as military preparedness, and unless the boy volunteers are given training and a chance to show what they can do this season, there may be a serious shortage, yes, a much more serious shortage of farm help and farm production next year than exists this year. If the United States within the next two years is, as high military authorities say, destined to furnish an army for service abroad of from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 men, many farmers' sons—many "regular" farm boys who thus far have been exempted from the draft—will necessarily later on have to respond to the call for troops. And it is, therefore, the part of wisdom, and as well a patriotic duty on the part of farmers, to give these young volunteer helpers a chance and thuswise prepare for future contingencies.

Boys Will Learn Readily.

Of course, the city boy, fresh from school, cannot handle horses and mules with all the proficiency of a boy who has been brought up to that kind of work. Of course, he doesn't know how to handle a team, or how much a team can stand, but he can learn, and he will learn if he is given a chance. Naturally, the highschool boy cannot operate the various kinds of farm machinery now in use with all the efficiency of a veteran. But if he is given intelligent instruction, he will learn how to operate it in much less time than will an inexperienced man of twice his age; because boys at the age of sixteen to eighteen are naturally inquisitive and acquisitive in all such matters.

I will hazard the prediction that those farmers who today belittle the value of the Boys' Working Reserve and protest against their wearing a semi-military uniform while at work, will next year, should the war continue and the farm labor shortage grow more acute, change their mind, and they will be eagerly inquiring where and how to get some of this particular kind of help.

"It's a lot better for the whole of us to be eating American oats, or rice, or corn or barley, or Irish-American pertatoes than to have the Kaiser feeding us German crow at the point of a sixteen-inch gun," says Mrs. O'Flaherty.

Business As Usual Must Give Way More and More

War Cannot Be Won with Men, Money and Materials Left Over, and Industries Essential to the Success of the Cause Must Be Supplied with Fuel

(By Evans Woolen, Member State Council of Defense and Federal Fuel Administrator for Indiana)

The people of the State of Indiana are yielding to the Fuel Administration as they are yielding to all other governmental instrumentalities ungrudging support. It is important to have that ungrudging support and the people of the State will continue to yield it if only they understand the reason for a fuel administration and the methods of the fuel administration. Briefly, then, why a fuel administration? There are two reasons. One of them is debatable, perhaps. The other is not debatable. The first is that in times of extraordinary conditions such as those under which we are living prices ought to be controlled by the Government and indeed it may be said that coal last winter at fifteen dollars a ton would have added greatly to the difficulties of living. On the other hand it may be contended that price-control tends to repress production. The question is academic, because price-control is the established policy of the Government and it becomes us not to debate the question but to accept the policy of the Government and to do each his utmost in the administration of that policy.

The other reason, the undebatable reason, is that in time of fuel shortage the distribution of fuel must, in the presence of war, be controlled. The significance of that statement applied here is just this: In a community where there is a shortage of fuel the toy factory and the pleasure-vehicle factory must not have coal that is necessary to keep the canner of food in operation. This undebatable reason assumes a coal shortage. Why this assumption of a coal shortage?

We know, of course, that the supply of coal beneath the soil of Indiana is sufficient to meet any demand that may be put upon it. Why, then, should there be any shortage? In one word, transportation. The fact which controls the fuel situation is that bituminous coal can be produced only as the empty car is at the tippie. The empty car can be at the tippie only as the railroad can bring its motive power to bear upon the movement of the car from its supply of empties. It was transportation which limited the supply of coal last winter, is limiting it now and will limit it next winter in greater measure possibly than last winter.

The reason I mention this is that a year ago in this state we were engaged in an agitation with reference to the coal supply. Prices were mounting. We were in the midst of a buyer's market, a market in which buyers contended each against the others to get coal out of an insufficient supply. In the course of that agitation we, you and I, did an unfair thing that we are prone to do. We assumed to judge our fellow citizens in the coal business not as individuals, some good and some bad, but as a class we denounced the class as wholly bad. It is unfair, it is unintelligent to attribute our coal problem wholly to the shortcomings of any group of our fellow citizens. I wish there were time to go into the consideration of the unavoidableness of the effect of transportation conditions on the coal problem. This morning, a half hour ago, I was told that we shall probably not get until December our first deliveries out of the one hundred thousand coal cars that have been ordered by the railroad administration and that the first deliveries of new motive power into Indiana will be not earlier than January. Conditions next winter with reference to transportation, you may depend upon it, will be unsatisfactory and perhaps more so than last winter.

What can we do towards remedying this situation? There are three remedies. The first is the zoning system, which is designed to promote efficiency of transportation. By way of illustration, two million tons of Pocahontas have normally gone into the Chicago market after a haul of some six hundred miles. None of that Pocahontas will go into Chicago this year. In its place two million tons will be supplied from the Illinois mines with an average haul of some three hundred miles. The saving in transportation facilities will be sufficient for the movement of 150,000 tons of coal.

The second remedy is the storage of coal now. Transportation, as you all know, steadily decreases in efficiency with the coming of cold weather. The efficiency of motive power, I am led to understand, declines not less than one per cent. per degree of temperature decline. Accordingly, we can help by enlarging the movement of coal during those months in which it can be moved most efficiently. That means that each of you should supply himself during this spring and summer with the coal that will be needed to take care of his industry throughout the forthcoming season.

The third remedy is in the recognition, as we have not yet recognized in this country, that business cannot go on as usual in the presence of this war. Our greatest trouble today is that we have been trying during the year since we entered the war to do at once three things the doing of all of which at once is beyond our capacity. We have been trying to carry on the normal business of a people active in industry and commerce. We have been trying to do within a few months in preparation for war that which our enemy has been doing through thirty years. And we have been trying to carry on our part in the greatest of wars.

The three things are too much. They are too much for the available supply of men and material. Business as usual must more and more give way. If we have business as usual in this country we cannot win the war. The war cannot be won with the men and the materials that are left over by business as usual. Business must have only the materials and the labor that are left over by the war. That means, applied to the coal problem, that those things which bear directly and inevitably and essentially upon winning the war must have coal. The things which do not bear similarly upon winning the war must if necessary be deprived of coal.

I do not need to say that it is the duty of the fuel administration to exert itself to the utmost that the activity of none of our industries be impaired by the lack of coal, but you must help. You must help in the way I have pointed out. You must regard it as the dictate both of business prudence and of patriotism to store coal now and not to depend on the fact that you may be on the list of preferred consumers. * * * It is essential towards the winning of the war that the morale of our people be maintained and to that end the homes of the country must be warmed. They must be warmed even though the canners do not get coal. The railroads must run. They must get coal even though the canners do not get coal. The hospitals must be warm. The cantonments must be warm. The navy must be supplied and so on. There is a very considerable list of consumers nearer the top than canners. Accordingly I suggest that in the interest of yourselves as well as in the discharge of your patriotic duty, it behooves you to do each his utmost in supplying himself under the present favorable conditions with his next winter's supply of coal.

While labor is short farmers must fight shoulder to shoulder, neighbor by neighbor, where the battle is thickest.

If you eat contrary to the Food Administration's request, the Kaiser's representative and your boy may fill the vacant chair at your table.

Special Training for Women War Workers

Courses in Home Economics at Purdue University and Social Service at Indiana University.

Miss Mary L. Mathews of Purdue University, chairman of the Home Economics committee of the Woman's section State Council of Defense, announces a course in war work for women to be held at Purdue University under the direction of the Home Economics department from June 17 to 22.

The course is planned to give assistance along the lines of helping women who are anxious at this time to carry out to the best of their ability the regulations regarding food substitution, to do canning, drying and preserving, and so to manage their households that more time may be devoted to outside activities such as Red Cross work, French Relief work or other war activities.

The course includes canning, drying, and preserving; war time cookery; "make-over" garments, (this including the problem of buying textiles, removing stains, cleaning and dyeing material for "make-over" purposes, suggestions for clothes economy); demonstration work, home nursing, and general lectures on war work in Indiana.

Community work of various kinds that should be carried on, or helped by women, will be discussed by various leaders of the different movements in the state. During the week, talks will be given by Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle, chairman of the Woman's section, Dr. H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator, and others of prominence.

This course will be of special value to women interested in council of defense work, food administration activities, or other organizations aiding war work, or to the home-maker who desires to use to the best ability her resources at home.

The cost for the week, room rent, board, and incidentals, amounts to eight dollars.

Social Service Summer Course.

The attention of women interested in war work is called to the announcement of the summer course offered by the Social Service department of Indiana university under the direction of Miss Edna Henry. The lectures and classes will be held in the building of the School of Medicine, 102 North Senate Avenue, Indianapolis. The case work will be done both from the branch office of the department in that building, and from the main office in the Robert W. Long hospital. The course will comprise lectures, classes, and acquaintance with both dispensary and hospital work, the study, and making of records, observation of the work of co-operating agencies and actual helpful case work with the patients of the Indianapolis city dispensary and the Robert W. Long hospital who are brought to the attention of the department.

"This course is offered for the reason that there is an increasing demand for both professional and volunteer social workers. At this time, when the Red Cross is placing its ever growing burden upon the shoulders of volunteers, there is no lack of people ready to serve it, but there is a lack of people properly equipped to serve," says Miss Henry. "The public demands a proper education of these helpers, an education of all social workers, of all who deal with many men."

"This course commends itself to all who are interested in Council of Defense work."

Rooster Week, June 3 to 8.

June 3-8 was designated by the Food Production and Conservation Committee as "Rooster Week" in Indiana, and farmers and back yard poultry keepers in Indiana had an opportunity to "swat the rooster" as an aid in the food production campaign.

Figures compiled by statisticians show that the loss from fertile eggs, caused by roosters being with laying flocks in hot weather, is approximately $1,000,000 a year in Indiana.

Indiana poultry producers market annually around 60,000,000 dozen eggs. Under war-time conditions every one of these $20,000,000 worth of eggs should be good eggs. Government estimates say that 17 out of every 100 are unfit for food by the time they reach the consumer, an annual state loss of over three million dollars.

This big loss in food and money to the producer could have been prevented had the roosters been killed, sold or penned up during the summer. Every farmer in the State was asked to kill, sell or confine his roosters during the first week of June, keeping only the best for breeding purposes next fall.

Necrology

Charles Warren Fairbanks, former Vice-President of the United States, United States Senator from Indiana, and a member of the Indiana State Council of Defense, died at his residence in Indianapolis on the evening of June 4th. He was 66 years of age. His death followed an illness of several months.

Mr. Fairbanks, until his enforced absence while in California, where he went last winter for his health, was an interested and active member of the Indiana State Council. He was chairman of the Committee on Public Policy and as such gave the council and the commonwealth the benefit of his wisdom, judgment and experience. He was a national figure, and the nation shares with Indiana the great loss in his death.

Carolyn R. Fairbank, of Ft. Wayne, the original woman member of the Indiana State Council of Defense, died at her home June 1st, after an illness of a year's duration. Mrs. Fairbank was forced to resign her position on the council because of her health before she had been able to enter actively into the duties of the position. She was a prominent club woman, a leader, and widely beloved.

Silo Campaigns Are Meeting With Success

Maurice Douglas, state leader of the silo campaign, says that one of the most important aids in establishing a profitable livestock system is the silo, and that this is being forcibly demonstrated in the silo tours over the State each day.

Special meetings and silo tours were scheduled for the first week in June in Benton County, Allen County, and Whitley County. Tours scheduled for the second week in June are in Marshall, Grant, Fulton, and Greene Counties. It is reported from various parts of the State that farmers are placing their orders for silos rapidly in order to insure early delivery.

It is being shown in the various counties that upon practically all livestock farms the silo has become indispensable. The increased income enjoyed by livestock farmers is illustrated in Pulaski County. Livestock men there are receiving six times as much for their labor as their grain-growing neighbors. Each of these livestock farmers feeds corn silage.

The average forty-bushel corn crop will make eight tons of a palatable, succulent feed that is keenly relished by livestock. It has been found, using eight years' cattle feeding data from the Purdue Experiment Station, that the acreage needed to grow feed for a two-year-old steer for 150 days could be decreased from 20 to 40 per cent by the use of silage in the ration. In feeding a carload of twenty steers it required approximately 38½ acres to grow the feed needed for 150 days when corn, oil meal, oat straw and stover was fed. When corn and clover hay was fed it required 35 acres, and when corn, cottonseed meal, clover hay and silage was fed only 24 acres were used.

Demand for Boys to Do Productive Labor

store with an impending shortage in harvest labor on Indiana farms. Every reserve director and school superintendent and principal is charged with the responsibility of urging upon all able bodied boys to accept employment on farms in order that the Reserve may accomplish its primary object—stimulating food production.

This Is the Life.

Those who doubted the practicability of sending city boys to farms will be interested in the following letter, one of many received by the State Council of Defense which so clearly portray the patriotic spirit with which every red-blooded American boy is filled today.

"Not until one follows a plow along what seems endless acres of ground does he know the stuff that makes a man out of him. When I came here I thought it would be a cinch, but oh, boy, the farmer makes me step. We have everything planted and have spent the last few days repairing fences and posts, and yesterday we patched the roof on the barn. The feed they put out here is great. All the pancakes you can eat for breakfast along with home-smoked sausage or bacon, and a big feast for dinner and on Sundays—chicken.

"I have acquired a coat of tan that makes me look like some Fiji Islander and I bet I can lick a half dozen of those same islanders with my right arm.

"The farmer has a 'tin Lizzie' and we drive to town on Saturday evening for supplies. The nearest town has a population of about 600, but it has one drug store where they put out good 'cokes.' A coco-cola is a diversion after fresh milk, but I can't say that it is any healthier. I don't believe I would want another job elsewhere after these few weeks here because this is the life."

Principle—Honesty—Decency.

"In ordinary times the farmer gets what the city leaves over. Tramps and loafers have made up the greater part of the harvest labor supply in the past," said Mr. Straus, State director. "The Boys' Working Reserve comes along and offers clean, intelligent, strong, willing young men who have all the qualifications excepting a knowledge of practical farm work. Even so, the Reserve boy will learn more in a month than the average loafer will learn in a life time—and he can be trusted much farther. In all sincerity, a decently-raised, clean, conscientious, ambitious young man with an education is worth a half dozen such men.

"They are the finest types of average American boys. The majority of them are sons of men and women who were reared on farms. That probably accounts for the fact that when put to the test, they soon measure up to the splendid standard set by the country-reared boy. The great thing about them is that they possess principle—honesty—decency. And the farmers are quick to recognize it as one wrote: 'The boy I hired from you is surpassing my expectations. I am thankful for the service of the Boys' Working Reserve. This co-operation on the part of the council of defense and the young men in the cities is certainly on the right road at a time like this.'"

Schoolhouse Gatherings.

"In these schoolhouse gatherings we are to find a great deal of comfort, because we are beginning now to share the sorrows of war. Your boys are there, more of them are going, and one of the sources of goodness in this evil of war is the fact that suffering brings sympathy and that we are drawn closer to each other—elbow to elbow and heart to heart—touched by common suffering in sympathy. We will derive great strength and mutual support by this gathering together of communities, carrying out our old New England town meeting idea into every remote district of the country."—Dr. J. A. B. Scherer, representing the Council of National Defense.

It is the supreme task of civilization to put an end to Prussianism. To listen to proposals for a Prussian peace, to compromise with the butchers of individuals and of nations so that they would by agreement gain a benefit from their crimes, would be to compound an international felony, which this Republic will never do.—ROBERT LANSING, Secretary of State.

Council Hears of Conservation Plans

Dr. Barnard Says Beef Must Be Saved and Pork Used Instead—Other Matters.

Announcement was made of the purpose of John H. Winterbotham to bring to Indianapolis, June 17th, C. R. Keiley, Secretary of the Virginia State Council of Defense, for the purpose of investigating the organization and the activities of the Indiana State Council of Defense, and "to let him see a real one," at the meeting of the Indiana State Council June 12th, by the reading of a communication from Mr. Winterbotham. The Council will welcome the visit of Mr. Keiley, and endeavor to convey the information desired.

The report of E. M. Wilson, of the Committee on Military Affairs, in reference to recommending an official war photographer, was opposed to making any such recommendation. The council learned from Mr. Wilson that it is inconsistent with the policies of the War Department and the several training camps and cantonments to permit the taking of photographs therein, as was proposed by Herbert Eiler, of Indianapolis. The latter requested that he be recommended as official photographer for the State of Indiana. The council concurred in the recommendation of the committee.

H. H. Friedley, State Fire Marshal, presented for the consideration of the council a resolution having for its object the protection of stored grain by fire-proofing elevators along railroad rights of way. The resolution was referred to the Committee on Transportation, with the suggestion that it consider a recommendation to the Council of National Defense that it take up this proposition with the Director-General of Railroads.

Evans Woollen, Federal Fuel Administrator for Indiana, in response to the question as to whether Indiana thrashermen would be obliged to use Indiana coal during the thrashing season, stated that no other coal will be available, and a statement to this effect will be filed with the chairman for the information of thrashermen and others who have made inquiries on the subject.

William V. Rooker presented to the council a statement of his position relative to the proposed permanent improvement of roads leading from Indianapolis to Fort Benjamin Harrison. The council referred him to its previous action in reference to the Pendleton pike question, and invited him to submit any other matters pertinent for the council's consideration.

Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana, presented to the council a statement of the serious developments in reference to the meat situation, and the plan of the administration to effect, where possible, the substitution of pork and pork products for beef. Dr. Barnard also discussed the growing seriousness of the sugar situation, and the necessity for restricting further the allotment to manufacturers, especially of non-essentials, and individuals. He stated that the fifty-fifty rule in reference to the use of wheat flour and wheat products would probably continue indefinitely, notwithstanding the prospects for an enormous wheat yield in Indiana and the nation. Dr. Barnard asked the support of the council in these conservation measures, and was assured that the same would be forthcoming.

The importance of providing facilities for grain storage was emphasized, and the recommendation of the food administrator that the council continue its appeal to farmers to anticipate this need was indorsed.

I. D. Straus, federal state director of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, reported the offer of financial assistance from the U. S. Department of Labor for the establishment of a training camp for boys who expect to do productive labor. Mr. Straus described his experience at the State College of Pennsylvania, where he said 1,000 boys are being trained in the rudiments of agricultural work. The question of establishing a similar camp in Indiana has been deferred, he said, pending a decision of his advisory committee as to the timeliness of undertaking the work this year.

Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle inquired as to the position of the council in reference to the encouragement of thrift and economy on the part of individuals. She said that her organization of women in Indiana desires to avoid any conflict or duplication of the plans of the State Council, but that she felt this work deserved attention. After a discussion, the council authorized Mrs. Carlisle to proceed with her program, which she declared involved a retrenchment of the individual's expense for clothing and incidentals not actually needed.

Charles Fox reported an arrangement to have copies of the Indiana Bulletin mailed to representatives of labor unions in Indiana, from whom, he said, he had received requests. The council approved the arrangement.

The Speakers' Bureau reported a tentative plan whereby it hopes to assign a patriotic speaker to each of the ninety-two county institutes to be held in Indiana before the opening of the next school year. The bureau is now at work enrolling speakers for this purpose, more details of which will be available later.

The chairman then read to the council a letter from Governor James P. Goodrich, calling attention to the anticipated increase in prices for thrashing grain in Indiana, which letter appears elsewhere in this issue of the Bulletin. The action of the chairman in securing reports from county councils of defense on thrashing price schedules was approved by the council, as was also his statement that he considers this a very important and serious business, and "that he did not propose to permit the people of Indiana to be imposed upon by any unfair practice on the part of thrashermen." He added that he would expect an explanation for the large discrepancies discovered in the prices proposed for thrashing in adjacent counties.

Appearance of Glass.

Corn flour under the microscope shows many hard, flinty pieces of the endosperm (germ), which have a very glassy appearance. When baked in a quick oven some of these particles retain their glass-like appearance, though in the ordinary process of baking this appearance is lost, is the explanation given by experts employed by the international union of bakers and confectionery workers.

In bran flours, a nervous person might easily fancy that particles of the hard outer husk were glass. And dextrine sometimes solidifies into a hard, transparent mass which might be mistaken for glass.

The natural conclusion is that most of the people who reported having found glass in their bread were deceived by the appearance of the new materials.

Best Wheat in History Of Indiana Is Located

Cutting Has Started in Counties Bordering Along the Ohio River—Plan to Increase Yield Next Year.

Farmers, millers, bankers, grain men and every one concerned in the campaign to maintain the present wheat acreage next year and increase the yield are showing the best co-operation possible with the representatives of the Purdue Extension Division, who are waging the drive under the auspices of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation.

These men started more than a week ago in Southern Indiana locating the best fields of wheat free from disease and from which seed will be taken for the sowing next fall. From six to a dozen such fields have been located already in counties in the south part of the State and farmers in these counties will be informed shortly where and at what price they can obtain the seed. Men locating these fields are working with the county agents, and expect to keep a week ahead, at least, of the threshers.

Cutting has started already in some of the counties bordering the Ohio River, and some of the best wheat in the history of the State is being found.

Following the selection of the seed fields, the best methods of tillage will be urged. Then use of fertilizers containing large amounts of phosphates will be advocated. With chances given every farmer to obtain good seed, and every man knowing the importance of good tillage and proper fertilization, it is hoped that the yield will be higher next year than this and that the present acreage will be maintained.

State Food Director G. I. Christie urges all farmers to order their fertilizer now for this fall, because after the wheat crop starts moving, which will be by the middle of July, the car shortage threatens to become acute and all shipments will, of course, be subject to delay.

Silo Campaign Meetings.

A silo will be given away in Cass County to the farmer drawing the lucky number at a special booster meeting held in Spencer Park at Logansport. The Executive Committee of the Better Farming Association, and the County Agent, hope to secure an aeroplane from the Dayton aviation school as a special attraction. It has been announced by the management that the date for this unusual silo meeting will be either June 20th or 27th.

Other special silo meetings will be held the week of June 10-15 in Benton, Greene, and Marshall counties. The next week large meetings are planned for Allen and Fulton counties.

John J. Lawler, of Jasper County, is one of the largest cattle feeders in Indiana. He says: "In my twenty-five years of cattle feeding I have found no method as profitable as I have with the silo." He is the owner of twenty-eight hundred acres of land in Jasper and Newton counties, feeds about three thousand head of cattle every year, and during 1918 his buying on the Chicago market averaged five thousand head of cattle per week. On his Indiana ranch there is a battery of seventeen silos, the best proof in the world of his faith in this institution.

Patriotism in Indiana

Allen County.—The Allen County Council of Defense has arranged to take a complete census of all persons in the county over eighteen years of age. The purpose is to obtain a complete report of property owned by aliens who may be located in this or other counties, also to learn what amount of voluntary support each individual has given to the government. . . . C. M. Niezer is organizing a committee to arrange a "real old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration," keeping in mind particularly the importance of interesting foreigners in the day and its significance. . . . The Ft. Wayne Federation of Labor is co-operating with the Ft. Wayne school board in establishing courses in vocational education. The organization will work in conjunction with the instructors in endeavoring to supply the demands of the federal government for skilled workmen. The Ft. Wayne schools have a first-class equipment and a teaching staff believed equal to the task of furnishing Allen County's share of the State's quota of skilled workmen needed for war emergencies.

Adams County.—The Washington Township Council of Defense is increasing its membership, activities and interest. The total enrollment now approximates 100. Fred Busche is chairman, William Faurete is secretary, and district chairmen have been appointed as follows: Frank Heiman, Grant Owens, Phillip Carper, C. O. McKean, Freeman Walters, J. D. Engle, Homer Raubach, Roy Runyon and Harvey L. Smith. Schoolhouse meetings are being conducted with much success, and the programs at these meetings consist of patriotic discussions and practical suggestions as to what can be done to assist the government in successfully prosecuting the war.

Bartholomew County.—The Fear and Cooper county line roads, the construction of which was considered by the Indiana State Council of Defense, will not be built until after the war is ended. The county commissioners have reached this decision, which has met with the approval of a large majority of the taxpayers of both counties, notwithstanding the fact that the roads have been in serious need of repairs for a period of five years. The Decatur county commissioners voted to let the contract for the improvement, but the protest of the Bartholomew County Council of Defense was sufficient to delay action until after the State Council had made an investigation and recommended deferring the work.

Clay County.—Representatives of seventy-five food clubs met at the Brazil high school recently. C. W. Culbertson, county food administrator, recommended the "dinner pail" plan for the threshing season. Mr. Culbertson suggested that every workman, except members of the threshing crew, carry his own lunch, which arrangement, he said, would not only save a great quantity of food, but would relieve the farmers' wives of much of the drudgery incident to threshing. The county food clubs expect to hold regular monthly mass meetings, at which an effort will be made to secure speakers of special qualifications. . . . Superintendent C. P. Keller has compiled a report showing that Clay County teachers bought $8,840 worth of Liberty Bonds and War Certificates, and the pupils bought $28,330 worth. In addition to these subscriptions, the teachers show 100 per cent Red Cross membership and 100 per cent subscription to the Red Cross and Y. M. C. A. funds.

Dekalb County.—A number of Dekalb County farmers were called before the County Council of Defense for not contributing to the Red Cross campaign drive. Their reasons not being satisfactory, they were given a lecture as to what constitutes their patriotic duty, and in each instance the contribution was forthcoming. A number of others against whom reports of disloyalty had been filed with the county council were called in and placed on probation with the warning that a repetition of their offense would mean the presentation of the facts to the United States district attorney at Indianapolis.

Delaware County.—Girls are being instructed by the Central Union Telephone Company at Muncie how to put in telephones and telephone equipment. Men workers now travel about the country on motorcycles, but for the present the girls who are to do the same work will use traction cars in making trips outside the city. Women already have largely taken the places of men in clerical and supplies departments of the Muncie Central Union plant on account of the need of man power.

Dubois County.—A. L. Gray, secretary of the Dubois County Council of Defense, has issued the following public notice: "At a meeting of the county defense council, May 27th, it was ordered that full publicity be given to all slackers, and this means those who refuse to contribute to the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., K. C. or any war need, as well as to subscribe for Liberty Loan Bonds, or buy War Savings Stamps. Full reports are being made to the county defense council and this step has been taken that all many know who our friends and supporters are."

Elkhart County.—County Agricultural Agent G. E. Metzger is enrolling 150 men to help in the wheat harvest. The manufacturers of Goshen are co-operating to the extent that sixty of their employees have offered two weeks each of their time during the vacation period for work as assigned.

Fayette County.—Thirty young women of Connersville have been banded into a unit known as the Joans of Arc. These young women will be schooled in the fundamental principles of squad and company drill, such as is being taught to four hundred Liberty Guardsmen. Forney L.

Behymer, Second Lieutenant, Company B, Liberty Guards, has been elected to act as instructor. . . . L. A. Frazee, chairman of the Fayette County Council of Defense, has announced that there will be no more "kid glove" methods in handling alien enemies, pro-Germans or their sympathizers. He cites the modified espionage act as indicative of his authority to deal with all German propaganda, and says he will promptly arrest and turn over to the federal authorities any one found guilty of violating the provisions of this law. The effect of Chairman Frazee's public declaration has been very salutary.

Floyd County.—The organization of thirty-two food clubs has been completed in New Albany and Floyd County by the women in various neighborhoods and the work of forming other clubs still in progress, the purpose being the conservation of the food supply. The slogan, "Join the Nearest Food Club," was originated by Mrs. Wm. J. Reecever, township chairman for New Albany Township, and was adopted by the state conservation committee and is now used on posters that have been distributed among all cities of the State. Mrs. Reecever has prepared a list of the names and addresses of the chairmen of the thirty-two neighborhood food clubs with whom women may enroll as members of the organizations.

Gibson County.—The Gibson County Council of Defense has issued a warning to all loafers that they must find some useful work or face prosecution. The council has enlisted its offices to enforce the ordinance recently passed by the Princeton city council, which provides a penalty for idlers and loafers. Such persons are expected to find some useful and productive work. . . . A committee headed by Henry A. Yeager, and including a representative of each township in the county, is making arrangements for a county-wide celebration of July 4th. This is in line with the suggestion which came from the State Council of Defense and from the National Council.

Howard County.—The Howard County Council of Defense has assumed a form in which it is felt it will be able to serve most efficiently as a central body for carrying forward all branches of local war work. The membership has been considerably increased, so as to give every department of local war endeavor individual representation. The personnel of the council as it now stands is as follows: President, Lloyd McClure; secretary, Mrs. Nellie Dawson; representative of Liberty Loan, Henry C. Davis; representative of Red Cross, Mrs. James C. Patten; representative of Food Administration, Mrs. Geo. E. Bruner; representative of Fuel Administration, W. H. Turner; representative of Labor, James Burrows; representative of War Stamps Organization, J. E. Fredrick; representative of Knights of Columbus, League, O. H. Buck; representative of American Protective Union, J. W. Johnson; representative of Jewish Welfare Society, J. S. Levi; representative of Y. M. C. A., Geo. W. Landon; representative of Chamber of Commerce, W. H. Arnett; representatives of Howard County as a whole, C. S. Wadman, Russiaville; J. D. Haworth, Greentown; H. O. Lybrook, Ervin Township; C. B. Tudor, Oxford. . . . The County Council of Defense has gone on record as favoring the proposition that the grocers and general merchants reach an agreement under which a half holiday can be observed each week. This action is taken along the line of conserving the manpower of the county, with the belief that with the recreation secured merchants can lend themselves the more ardently to helping in all war tasks which fall to their lot. . . . Mrs. W. G. Kitzelman, child welfare chairman, has completed the work of registering and measuring children under six years in Kokomo. Up to date more than 600 cards have been returned, and many more are expected. Plans are being considered for a meeting of mothers, especially at some later date when an authority on the care of babies will be brought to the city to speak. The evident interest of the mothers of the community makes the step worth while. Mrs. Kitzelman is well pleased with the results of her six weeks of work.

Huntington County.—B. H. Hurd, of Huntington, has been appointed by the county council of defense to organize an Americanization committee. This committee will endeavor to further the education of foreigners in the English language, and particularly as relates to questions of government and national ideas. . . . Miss Grace Walkup has been commissioned by the county council of defense to co-operate with local organizations in furthering the policy of economy, particularly as applied to household management. The county council of defense has issued notice "that every man, woman and child should at once begin to practice economy. Not every one can fight at the front, but every one can fight against waste at home."

Jackson County.—Officials of this county, one of the smallest in the State, recently made an appropriation of $30,000 from the general fund of the county as a start toward caring for the Red Cross and other war relief work of the county. . . . John E. Hunnacker has arranged to have a survey of Jackson County highways made in conformity with the bulletin received from the Indiana State Council of Defense, asking the appointment of a highways transport committee and outlining its purposes. The county engineer, E. B. Douglas, expects to recommend the Jackson County link in the proposed South Bend-Jeffersonville road, which is said to be a part of the government's program for military purposes. Arrangements are being made also to provide for the proposed motor mail route between Indianapolis and Louisville.

Johnson County.—Johnson County has a 100 per cent record in the organization of United States food clubs. This distinction is shared with only two other Indiana counties, Posey and Allen.

Knox County.—Miss Clementine Weisert has been appointed county statistician for the Knox County Council of Defense by Miss Holland, secretary of the defense council.

Miss Weisert's duties will consist in enrolling all Knox County men in government service, and to keep letters and diaries pertaining to the county soldiers and sailors. The material will be used for future reference, and is expected to prove of value in years to come. . . . The Vincennes school board has arranged for a summer school for vocational training of men wanted by the federal government for radio and buzzer work. The school will use the equipment furnished earlier in the year by the federal government. Ray Price, railroad telegraph operator, has volunteered to instruct the students. Arrangements are being made also for the continuation of other vocational work in line with the desires of the federal government.

Kosciusko County.—Farmers have organized a wolf drive. An animal recently killed is believed to have been responsible for serious depredations on live stock.

Lake County.—An appropriation of $1,200 has been made for the employment of a stenographer by Mrs. Jennie Wheeler, secretary of the Lake County Council of Defense. . . . The appointment of a deputy United States marshal for Lake County is asked in a special resolution passed by the Lake County Council of Defense. This is due to the increasing need for the presence of a federal official in this community, the council says. Many arrests have been made recently, and more are expected since the passage of the amended session law. . . . Township councils of defense have been asked to investigate reports of hoarding on farms. . . . The appointment of a county agricultural agent has been recommended by the council of defense as a war measure. . . . The strict enforcement of the "work or fight" order recently promulgated by the Provost Marshal General is expected to assist the peace officers of this community in relieving the streets from a number of chronic loafers. The Council of Defense is co-operating in this movement.

Lagrange County.—The Lagrange County Council of Defense has succeeded in organizing township councils of defense, and is now ready to respond promptly to all demands that come from the state and federal government, having to do with the prosecution of the war. Following is the complete county personnel: County Council of Defense—Frank J. Duntan, chairman, Lagrange; LeRoy A. Foster, secretary, Lagrange; Charles S. Nichols, treasurer, Howe; Claud Smith, Monroe; Dr. S. M. Eash, Shipshewana; John H. Yeager, Wolcottville; Mrs. Alice D. Ballou, Lagrange. Township Councils of Defense—Lima: A. S. Atwater, Howe; Roy McKinzie, Howe; Mrs. Curtis Miller, Howe. VanBuren: Fred Boehmer, Howe; Emmet Hagerty, Howe; Mrs. E. B. Hagerty, Howe; Edna: John W. Priest, Topeka; Henry Herald, Topeka; Mrs. Venona Meroney, Topeka. Newbury: C. W. Freedy, Shipshewana; John J. Farver, Shipshewana; Mrs. Effie Hunn, Shipshewana. Clearspring: Dale Sigley, Topeka; John Hoak, Lagrange; Mrs. Edith Hilderbrand, Topeka. Johnson: Dr. Dea McDonald, Wolcottville; Charles Rowe, Valentine; Mrs. Viola Smith, Wolcottville. Springfield: Howard G. Helwig, Lagrange; C. R. Vall, Lagrange; Miss Hilda Hughes, Lagrange. Milford: Dr. C. W. Dancer, Stroh; Ambrose Logue, South Milford; Mrs. Crossie Wible, South Milford. Greenfield: Harvey O. Plank, Howe; Frank McMahon, Orland; Mrs. Fred Smeltzley, Howe. Bloomfield: James Billman, Lagrange; Clarence Robinson, Lagrange; Mrs. Hiram Norris, Lagrange. Clay: Ed Zimmerman, Lagrange; Thomas Seaney, Lagrange; Mrs. A. H. Bogue, Lagrange.

Laporte County.—The Laporte chamber of commerce, through a committee consisting of Sam Steinberg, H. G. Phillips, E. H. Speece and Secretary L. M. Vaughn, are making a canvass of the business and professional men of Laporte in a campaign for 200 men who will volunteer to assist in the harvest fields. A survey of the county indicates a need of that many additional men, and no other source of supply is available. The pledges are for days' work beginning the middle of June and continuing until about the first of August. The plan is in line with the suggestion made by the Public Service Reserve.

Madison County.—James H. Larmore, chamber of commerce director, is heading a movement among Anderson business men to spend their vacations working on farms instead of idling away time at the lakes. The following have agreed to adopt Larmore's plan: R. O. Bright, president Arvae manufacturing plant; Edward C. Toner, editor Anderson Herald; E. R. Stilson, president Ward-Stilson Regalia Company; F. H. Brock, Charles D. Smith, Nathan Speier, William Pollak, Maurice Weslow, Edward A. Smith, Percy Williams, Lester Bing, Earl Berkebile and Glen Gates, leading merchants; Joseph Essington, city clerk; and George H. Marshall, physical director of the Anderson Y. M. C. A. . . . Strong resolutions were adopted by the Madison County Council of Defense, directed at persons who are considered as shirking their fair share of the burden of financing war activities. A list of persons who have contributed to war fund campaigns and who have bought Liberty Bonds, and of those who have failed to do so, is being prepared. The council is considering a recommendation to the county commissioners that an appropriation be requested from the public funds to meet all future demands for war relief work. The council will meet twice a month hereafter. Dr. Underwood has accepted the chairmanship of the committee on morals, and D. O. Teasley, county food administrator, has opened an office with the county agricultural agent on the authorization of the council.

Montgomery County.—Red Cross work in this county has been reorganized. In all departments hereafter requisitions are to be made and materials furnished entirely from the division supply house. The work has been allotted and plans made for enlisting new workers. An announcement to the several chapters in the county states, "In accordance with the enormous number of men now being hurried to the front, our quotas are large. Our products must supply not only the departments of military relief among our own soldiers, but are for the use of the French and Italian relief commissions as well. Definite quotas will be given out in turn to the several county auxiliaries, and it is hoped that every one who possibly can do so will rally to the call. More workers will be needed in all departments than have ever before volunteered. . . . The Brown Township Council of Defense has reorganized as follows: Dr. K. K. Straughan, president; R. H. Hodkin, vice-president; Dr. B. M. Harbeson, secretary; Mrs. U. G. Vail, treasurer. The duties of the organization, whose membership consists of persons from all parts of the township, are advisory and supervisory of all war work within Brown Township. After discussion it was the unanimous opinion of the council that patriotism and the best interests of the community would be served in keeping the stores open of evenings during the rush season on the farm.

Noble County.—C. J. Munton, county director of the Boys' Working Reserve, has issued a notice to farmers asking that they indicate as nearly as possible their probable labor requirements. Mr. Munton announces his purpose to assist in every way possible in preventing a serious labor shortage, and urges the farmers to co-operate by reporting immediately what help they will need and when they will need it. Up to date no requests have been filed for boys.

Orange County.—The Orange County Council of Defense has appropriated money for the compilation of a permanent record to be made and kept at the office of the county clerk, containing the names of all young men who have gone from this county into the federal service. The record is intended to show men who have been drafted, and volunteers, and the branch of the service they have entered. The council expects to have the record become a part of the Orange County archives, and special pains will be taken to see that the record is accurate and complete.

Perry County.—An indignation meeting was called by Chairman Shallcross, of the county council, and H. M. Clemens, manager of the Red Cross campaign in this county, following the discovery of crepe on the door of the Red Cross shop at Cannelton. Indignation was expressed by every one present, and $87.71 was contributed as a fund to be spent in detective work to apprehend the guilty person or persons. J. C. Shallcross, J. T. Hay, H. M. Clemens and T. J. Trumpy were appointed a committee on safety to guard against any further manifestations of disloyalty. The people of the community are thoroughly aroused, and are determined to weed out all disloyalty.

Pulaski County.—The Pulaski County Council of Defense has purchased 210 lantern slides from the United States Committee on Public Information. These have already been shown to a large number of people. Speakers have volunteered to give their services to the purpose that these pictures may be shown in every school building in the county. . . . Clarence Paul announces the completion of the organization for the silo campaign. Township committee men have been named and are acting. Mr. Paul has spoken before twelve public gatherings. Each week the testimonials of silo users are run in the local papers. By persistent letters, circulars, and personal visits, it seems now that Pulaski County will far exceed her quota of 139 silos.

Randolph County.—Through the efforts of Dr. Charles Botkin an organization of the American Defense Society is being started here with very encouraging results. Following are a few things for which the society stands, and every true and full-blooded American should at once become a member: To arouse the 100 millions of Americans to a full realization of the German plan of world domination and the subordination of all peoples; the German character and philosophy as reflected in its laws of war; the German campaign of inhumanity and frightfulness; Germany under alien—which stops at nothing; to emphasize the imminence of our peril unless we win this war—and that speedily; to dispel the lethargy of our people; to awaken every citizen to the fact that this is his war; to warn against the danger of temporizing with the "enemies within our borders." That the administration be asked to raise and send an overwhelming force to France. To intern alien enemies and enemy sympathizers whose conduct imperils or impedes the war. That Congress be asked to declare that a state of war exists with Bulgaria and Turkey. To enact a law providing for the universal military training of Americans between the ages of 18 and 21. That it be recommended to the various authorities to forbid the publication of newspapers and magazines in the German language during the war, and to forbid the compulsory study of German in the public schools.

Ripley County.—Arrangements have been made for the examination of all children of this county under six years of age, by competent physicians, June 12 to 15, from 2 to 5 daily, at the Batesville high school building. Parents have been asked to co-operate in this work, which is under the direction of Mrs. A. E. Wachman. Mrs. Wachman has endeavored to make it clear to all mothers that this is a work intended primarily for the benefit of the children themselves, and is being done at the request of the State and National Councils of Defense as a conservation measure.

Rush County.—Persistent reports of food hoarding in Rushville are being investigated, and the promise is made that the information will be turned over to the United States district attorney for his consideration, unless the situation improves. . . . The county council appropriated $2,000 for the use of the County Council of Defense, and $875 to assist in paying the expenses of a county agricultural agent, whose employment is considered vital to the success of Rush County agricultural activities, which have greatly enlarged for the period of the war. . . . A. L. Stewart is making a canvass of Rushville citizens who will agree to assist the farmers of the county during the harvest.

Scott County.—Will Storen, cashier of the Scott County State Bank, and member of the County Council of Defense, has been selected as secretary to succeed Paul Fishback, who resigned because of his accepting a position with the Polk Canning Co. Mr. Storen is active, energetic and capable of filling this important position.

Shelby County.—William Blakely, scout executive of this city, has offered thirty scouts for any kind of work that the State Council of Defense wants them to do in the United States Boys' Working Reserve. In reply to Blakely's offer, answered by C. B. Fritsche, assistant state director of the Boys' Working Reserve, he states that the boys can not be used at the present time unless there is a shortage in strawberry pickers, although he assures the executive that his thirty young patriotic lads will be used some time during the summer, as there will be a serious shortage of labor at harvest time. Blakely is now prepared for a call at any time, as he has all the essentials of a camp for thirty boys, and he knows how handle them with his experience on the Manistee bean farm while executive of the scouts at Manistee, Mich.

Starke County.—Carrying out the suggestions of the State and National Councils of Defense, that every county arrange a model Fourth of July celebration this year, L. E. Bernethy, chairman of the Starke County Council of Defense, has appointed the following committee to make plans for a fitting observance of this memorable day in North Judson: Rev. A. C. VanRie, Rev. W. B. Collier, Rev. Wm. Heine, C. A. McCormick, Chas. Hruska, Joe Dolezal, G. N. Peterson, Melvin Bybee, Ben Donchin and Miss Lois C. Foust. This committee will organize and select auxiliary committees.

St. Joseph County.—Miss Ada Hillier, representing the home economics section of the state food administration, told the fourteen-minute women of this county that the food situation is increasingly critical, and that special efforts should be made to arouse the housewives to its importance. Miss Hillier urged that the local speakers devote themselves to a campaign having for its purpose the encouragement of the consumption of perishable produce wherever possible, in substitution for staples. A recently organized motor corps will assume responsibility for transporting produce from the farms surrounding South Bend, and a clearing-house will be established, perhaps at the high school. Women volunteers will can any surplus after each day's market. A corps of high school girls has volunteered to assist in harvesting local produce. . . . Sixty per cent of the children registered in Green Township were pronounced physically perfect. Chief defects among the remainder were found to be affected tonsils and adenoids, which will be corrected on the physicians' recommendation to the parents. In one case treatment of the eyes was recommended, and this will be supplied. Mrs. Charles Byers, township chairman, believes the registration and examination has been of great value, and she is particularly well pleased with the spirit of co-operation manifested by the mothers of the township. . . . The South Bend motor corps, composed of young women, is organizing. Miss Catherine Oliver is acting as chairman of the local corps. Both regulars and volunteers must furnish their own cars and must bear all expenses necessary to keep the cars in running order. Already the young women are answering many calls in connection with the baby registration now in progress, and in the future will be allied with all local war campaigns, will aid in the transportation of supplies about the city, and will assist farmers in delivering their products to city consumers. Those who have joined the regular corps are: Miss Catherine Oliver, Miss Geraldine Robertson, Miss Madeline Shidler, Miss Josephine Sullivan, Miss Mary Russ, Miss Mildred Duttera, Miss Hazel Hanch, Mrs. J. M. Stephenson, Miss Helen Lower, Miss Mary Leeper, Miss Jane Smith, Miss Helen Houghton, and Miss Frances Hager. Miss Mary Boles will have charge of the organization of a corps in Mishawaka which will work under the supervision of the South Bend Corps. Miss Esther Fulton has volunteered her services as a typist to work in the office of the corps.

Switzerland County.—This county of 9,900 inhabitants is believed to hold the record for patriotism in Indiana. One out of every thirty-three of its population is now in the service. If the same record prevailed throughout the United States, Uncle Sam would have an army of more than 3,000,000 men. During May a war chest organization was perfected. It had been hoped to raise $12,000 for the year, but when the reports from solicitors were all in it was found that the fund subscribed amounted to more than $25,000. The city of Vevay went over the top in the War Stamp drive two weeks ago, and was the first county seat in Indiana to exceed its quota for the year. In the W. S. S. drive during the latter part of May the county exceeded its quota for the week $1 per capita. In the Third Liberty Loan drive Switzerland County exceeded its quota 150 per cent.

Tippecanoe County.—Not even a remote section of the county was missed in the inspiring series of war conferences held, and great enthusiastic gatherings of people enjoyed the spirited addresses. There were twenty meetings in all and the county council of defense, which had arranged the programs, saw to it that no community was neglected and that some of the most fluent speakers in this section of the State were available. Special music was provided for every meeting, some of the musical organizations appearing before two or three audiences during the course of the day. . . . The Franchise League took charge of the War Savings Stamp sale and made it a success after the original organization had failed. Mrs. F. Wm. Greve, Jr., co-operated with the township councils of defense, and distributed a total of $109,842 worth of stamps.

Tipton County.—E. W. Teeter, of near Goldsmith, has agreed to make an inspection of all threshing machines in Tipton County. This is a part of the Food Administration's program, which has for its object the saving of wheat heretofore wasted through defective threshing machines and careless handling of the grain. There are thirty-two registered threshing machines in Tipton County, and all will be examined and placed in good condition before the threshing season starts.

Vandeburgh County.—William Elmendorf and Dr. Sidney Eichel were named a special committee by the County Council of Defense to consult with the mayor of Evansville and the city attorney, on the enforcement of the city ordinance against loafing and vagrancy. The council expressed itself as of the opinion that immediate action should be taken, and that every able-bodied man should either go to work or go to jail. . . . Clinton F. Rose and Frank Laughlin were nominated to organize a Fourth of July executive committee. . . . The council will appeal to the wives of farmers to refrain this year from a waste of food in connection with the harvest. Attention is called to the words of Herbert Hoover, federal food administrator, indicating the need of conservation and economy, and requesting that the usual extravagant dinners that have marked threshing days heretofore be abandoned this year, and that only sufficient food be provided.

Vigo County.—Co-operation of the women's auxiliary motor corps and the public schools delivered in one day to gardens in the vicinity of Terre Haute 175 boys, who began picking the largest pea crop ever grown in the county. The gardeners appealed to John S. Ahlgren, federal food administration, for help when the recent warm weather matured the crop and threatened heavy loss unless picking was done at once. Boys who volunteered to work were excused from school and the women called out motor cars to convey the workers to the gardens. With more volunteers enrolled for the remainder of the week, it is said today that the entire crop will be harvested without loss. . . . Members of the local union of butchers and meat cutters tonight voted to give their Thursday afternoons to the Vigo County national war fund association, the community war chest. The half holiday was made possible by the agreement of merchants to close meat stores at noon Thursdays during June, July and August. . . . The recently passed espionage law and its application to local conditions was discussed at a called meeting of the Indiana Patriotic League. Any known violation of this act should at once be reported to the executive committee of the league, which consists of John J. Cleary, Homer Williams, Lee R. Whitney, John Carmack, Earl Houck, Judge A. L. Miller and Frank E. Scott.

Wabash County.—Acting in accordance with directions received from the State Council of Defense, Thomas A. Penbody, as local chairman, last week had the hedge of domestic barberry removed from the property of William Pearson. Miles Clark, as soon as it was found that a part of his was of the objectionable variety, promptly removed it. One bush was found on the campus at Manchester College, and it was removed. This accounts for all the objectionable kind of barberry that has been located.

Warrick County.—The threshers of Warrick County were called together at Boonville. Some sixty threshers were present. Plans and methods of saving grain and of co-operating with the farmers were discussed. These men are already organized in what is known as the Southern Indiana Threshers' Association and in their constitution and by-laws they have pledged themselves to see that their machines are working and that no grain shall be wasted due to them. They are further pledged to interest the farmers in every possible way and instruct them in the best methods of handling their grain. The following committee was appointed to handle the threshing situation: Louis Schaber, Boonville; Tom Hull, Boonville, a member from the County Council of Defense, Dorsey Reed, Food Administrator, and Geo. X. Reed, County Agent. The following threshers were appointed to act as the county chairman might see fit at the season advances: Wm. Tooley, Chas. Wiggers, West Cannon and J. W. Winsett.

Wayne County.—The Richmond Commercial Club has appointed a war garden committee, consisting of E. M. Campfield, Harry Gilbert, Leo B. Nushbaum, E. B. Harris and C. W. Jordan. There are 4,520 war gardens in Richmond. This organization has also appointed an Americanization committee composed of the following members: Dr. M. F. Johnston, W. Z. Carr, Charles W. Jordan, J. T. Giles and J. H. Bentley. The county council appropriated $7,500 for the use of the Wayne County Council of Defense. L. S. Bowman has succeeded Denver Harlan as a member of the council. . . . A Red Cross training course has been added to the summer school curriculum at Earlham College. This action was taken in response to a request from the Wayne County Red Cross Society. Instructions will be given in first aid, home care of the sick, and dietetics. Miss Elsie Marshall, professor of home economics at Earlham, will have charge of the dietetics course, and Red Cross nurses under Miss S. M. Erb, of Reid Memorial Hospital, will give instructions in elementary hygiene and home care of the sick. The course continues for five weeks.

White County.—An appropriation of $1,000 has been made by the county council for the use of the county council of defense. The action was taken on the recommendation of the county commissioners, who pointed out that the classification of the counties by the State Board of Accounts authorizes White County to appropriate up to $8,750 for this purpose.

Whitley County.—Capt. S. N. Markley and County Agent Hummel are taking a census of business and professional men who will agree to help the farmers of this community care for their crops. Their action is with the full endorsement and approval of the Columbia City Commercial Club, which has made a special appeal to its members to join in this work. Pledges are being taken from every man able to perform farm labor, to go where assigned, and accept such compensation as the farmer himself considers fair and reasonable.

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and state governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Attention, County Councils

General Bulletin No. 156.

June 10, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

We are advised by the Council of National Defense that the Committee on Public Information has requested the mayors of all cities of over 20,000 population to form committees of foreign-born citizens for the purpose of organizing and holding loyalty celebrations on the Fourth of July, in accordance with the President's communication of May 28, which was quoted to you in the enclosure with Bulletin No. 152.

The State Council of Defense has been requested to ask the County Councils of Defense in counties having cities of the size above mentioned to co-operate, either directly or through their Township Councils of Defense, with the mayors of such cities and this committee of foreign-born citizens. In this connection it will be important to bear in mind that the foreign born should control and manage their part of this celebration, all others merely cordially assisting.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

General Bulletin No. 157.

June 11, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

The "Work or Fight" order of Provost-Marshal General E. H. Crowder becomes effective July 1, 1918. The local draft boards have full instructions regarding and are responsible for the enforcement of this new order.

The State Council of Defense has been called on to enlist the service of County and Township Councils of Defense in bringing to the attention of the local draft boards all registrants who are idlers or who are engaged in the non-useful occupations, specified by Major-General Crowder as follows:

- Persons engaged in the serving of food and drink, or either, in public places, including hotels and social clubs;
- Passenger elevator operators and attendants, and doormen, footmen, carriage openers and other attendants in clubs, hotels, stores, apartment houses, office buildings and bath houses;
- Persons, including ushers and other attendants, engaged and occupied in and in connection with games, sports and amusements, excepting actual performers, in legitimate concerts, operas, or theatrical performances;
- Persons employed in domestic service;
- Sales clerks and other clerks employed in stores and other mercantile establishments.

Shipments of sugar from Cuba to the United States are scarcely 5 per cent below last year's shipments for the corresponding time in spite of the serious shortage of ships. About three-fourths of our sugar imports this year have been from Cuba.

Readable War Books, Old and New

Any of the following may be borrowed from the Indiana State Library by any citizen of the State. Ask your local librarian to apply for them, or if there is no library in the town, write to the State Library for registration blanks. The only expense is that of transportation.

Aldrich, M. Hilltop on the Marne.

Aldrich, M. On the Edge of the War Zone. (Experiences of an American woman whose home in France was on the edge of the great battlefield of the Marne.)

Bairnsfather, B. Bullets and Billets. (Told with humor and illustrated by some of the author's famous cartoons.)

Barbusse, H. Under Fire. (Translation of a famous French book depicting war life with unrelenting realism.)

Davis, R. H. With the Allies. (Davis had a narrow escape from being shot by the Germans as a spy. His story-telling gift makes his account of it seem more like fiction than the too serious fact that it was.)

Empey, A. G. Over the Top.

Empey, A. G. First Call. ("Over the Top" is a story of personal experience. "First Call" is a "guide book to the trenches.")

Gerard, J. W. Face to Face with Kaiserism. (German conditions and characteristics as seen by our ambassador.)

Gibbs, P. Battle of the Somme. (Vividly written description of the great campaign on the Somme and the first use of tanks.)

Hay, I. First Hundred Thousand.

Hay, I. All in It; "K I Carries On." (Humorous accounts of the adventures of a typical regiment of "Kitchener's Mob" from its training to its service in France.)

Latzko, A. Men in War. (By an Austrian officer. Fiction, but, like Barbusse, almost too realistically presented. Full of the horror and hatred of war.)

Palmer, F. My Year of the Great War.

Palmer, F. My Second Year of the Great War. (Two fascinating books describing events from the beginning to the battles of the Somme.)

U. S. Public Service Reserve

Bulletin No. 25.

To All U. S. Public Service Reserve Enrolling Agents:

We discover that in certain parts of the State there is a feeling predominant that the Farm Labor Reserve is not practical and that the farmers are skeptical of using their city brothers in saving the crops. We feel that this is due largely because the proposition has not been thoroughly studied by those who have been entrusted with its working and that it has not been properly presented to the citizens of the towns and the country.

There is probably no justification for any county in Indiana not organizing and having ready a Farm Labor Reserve for this summer. The State Farm Labor Help Specialist, Mr. Brumfiel, and the U. S. Department of Agriculture have studied this proposition very carefully and recommend it as being a splendid emergency farm labor plan. They know that the men from the towns are not going to make as good a class of help as the farmers have previously had. They also know that many of the men will not be capable of doing a full day's work, but the situation they find to be this: we are reaching a stage, on account of the war, where we cannot expect anything to be as it formerly was. If there is a shortage of help at the harvest time and any of the crops are not harvested and allowed to spoil it would be a blow to our plans to defeat Germany. Therefore, every county in Indiana should organize the Farm Labor Reserve along lines set out for you in previous bulletins. The responsibility for this depends upon you and you should not allow your county to fall down in this movement. It may be that in many counties the Reserve will not have to be called on to any extent, but you have the satisfaction of knowing that you have it ready and also next year it will undoubtedly be needed far more than this, and we should get accustomed to it by the time that we need it so badly.

The proposition will be easy to handle with proper organization. You must get whatever help necessary to put this over from prominent citizens in your town. Use either your commercial body or some other organization.

If you feel the need of a competent speaker to outline this proposition to the farmers of your county and others so that they will know what it is, and so that they will not through ignorance of it fail to call on it, we will be glad to furnish such a speaker. You will please get in touch with the Speakers' Bureau of the State Council of Defense, Room 80, State House, Indianapolis, stating what date you can arrange a meeting of those who should be interested in this, and the Speakers' Bureau will supply you with a speaker. We suggest that it may be hard at this time to get a great number of farmers to attend any public meeting, but this meeting is to be held in their interest and you can arrange to get several representative farmers from townships in your county to attend such a meeting. When these farmers are told the story they will pass the word on to their neighbors. Therefore, if your meeting only has fifty or sixty of the right kind of men it will serve the purpose. We do not ask you to hold a meeting unless you think it would be of benefit to you, but we do ask if you do want a speaker that you communicate at once.

You are placed in a responsible position in the matter of this Farm Labor Reserve and you should not fail to organize it because you do not personally believe in the plan. If you fail to organize it, it should only be after you have upon conference with many farmers and others come to the place that you know that your county will not have to have the Reserve this summer. If the situation goes bad in the county this summer because of lack of farm labor next fall your failure to do this well reflect upon you. Many of the most progressive counties in Indiana are going after this proposition with a vengeance and we venture to say that they will not suffer any loss of crops this summer.

Very truly yours,

N. E. SQUIBB, State Director,
U. S. Public Service Reserve.

Women Slackers.

One can't help wondering what will be done with the "women slackers"—the girls who pace the streets aimlessly, day after day, without producing anything for the good of the world? The men loafers have been called slackers and the law has even taken them in hand. If no fight—work! Some one suggests that the girls who gad about might be put into a sort of tread-mill arrangement whereby Red Cross supplies could be produced while they tread. The mother of one girl-gad-about appeared recently in a store and sat down—nearly "tuckered" out from scrubbing and working about the house. At the same time her daughter was heard planning an eighteen-mile "hike" with apparently no purpose in mind, other than pleasure.—Decatur Democrat.

Woman's Section

Bulletin No. 68.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 6, 1918.

To the Woman Member of the County Council of Defense:

Dear Madam—Some counties have already organized their motor corps to work with the Woman's Section of the County Council of Defense, but as yet some have not been heard from in this connection.

If you have a motor corps kindly communicate with me and I will tell you how to proceed to put it under military regulations. If you have not already started a corps will you kindly take steps to organize at an early date, and communicate with me?

Hoping for an early reply, I remain,

Very truly yours,

HELEN DEAN,
State Commander, Motor Corps.

Patriotic Press Comment

Stamp It Out.

Daily we read of pro-German vandalism in America—poisoned food, fires, German propaganda and so forth. Occasionally we read of a hanging by parties of enraged citizens. But still we don't wake up. Only recently a railroad shop in Lima, Ohio, was burned—fired in three places, the water turned off and the fire hose cut in two places. Locomotives and freight cars and coaches, ready for shipment to France, besides other needed supplies, were destroyed. In Kentucky recently 750 artillery horses were poisoned. In Kansas City the nurses in a hospital were poisoned through German access to the kitchen—and one of these nurses is a Spencer girl. A Gospel preacher threatened twice by anonymous letters and then poisoned by candy. Four of our Owen county boys dead in this war against the German beast. And still we sleep. And still we sleep.

The County Council of Defense is enlarging its force by creating township councils of seven members. There's one thing these councils must do and do thoroughly—stamp out the pro-German sentiment in every community. An American in Germany could not cheer his flag and get by with it; not for a minute. And we must put a stop to German sympathy in America.

In proceeding against pro-Germanism or disloyalty, a sworn statement is necessary. Folks hesitate to make affidavit because they fear to "hurt someone's feelings." In God's name! What do you care for their feelings? These Germanites don't hesitate to burn your factories, poison your children, dynamite your homes. They have no consideration for your feelings; why should you consider theirs? Get busy in your community; go after every red-handed devil in your neighborhood who dares to whisper German sympathy.

We need more of the spirit that was shown recently at Worthington when a doctor had the spunk to take a Holy Roller preacher by the throat and choke his tongue out. We need more people who will thrash the everlasting daylights out of the flippant chap who speaks disparagingly of the government as was done last week at Freedom. It's up to the individual to report anything that he hears; back it up with affidavit and get action. Pro-Germanism must be stamped out in Owen county.—Owen Leader (Spencer, Ind.)

Bond Shavers.

Quite a number of men of means in Pike County are reported as saying that they have not bought Liberty Bonds at par on account of wanting to keep their money to buy the bonds at a shave from the poor devils who have bought fifties and hundreds, who are not able to buy them. We wonder what the boys who are now in the trenches will think of these fellows when they come home. Will they recognize them or will they turn up their noses at them? The boys who quit their jobs at $5 a day to work for Uncle Sam at $30 per month and left their homes and staked their very lives to boot will not feel like associating to any marked degree with the men who are disposed to feather their nest during the war at their expense.—Winslow Dispatch.

Bugle Call to Boys!

With the approach of harvest season, the demand for boy labor on farms is rapidly increasing. During the past week applications from farmers have been received by the State Council of Defense at the rate of fifteen to twenty each day. From present indications, at least 5,000 boys will be needed to help harvest the splendid crops which are thriving under the favorable weather which prevails this season. County agents in many counties report that clover and hay harvest, wheat cutting and corn plowing will all confront the farmer at the same time this year, there being strong indications in certain sections of the State that wheat will ripen two or three weeks earlier than in ordinary seasons.

"To be prepared to meet any emergency, should be the slogan of all directors and members of the Boys' Working Reserve," says Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director. "There must be no shortage of labor to harvest the bumper crops with which it is now apparent our country will be blessed. All directors of the Reserve are urged to get in touch with their boys in order to know where to turn to secure those who are available. Boys who are not already engaged in productive employment should not hesitate to give up some soft snap in order to answer the call of the farmer and Uncle Sam to the harvest fields."

STATE OF INDIANA. EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 11, 1918.

Hon. Michael E. Foley, Chairman, State Council of Defense, State House:

My Dear Sir—My attention has been called to the fact that there is a movement on foot in Indiana to increase the price for thrashing grain nearly one hundred per cent in certain communities in the State. In some of the fine agricultural counties of the State the thrashermen have met and have decided upon the following rates for thrashing: Oats, five cents; wheat, ten cents; rye, twelve cents.

These rates are, I think, clearly too high, and steps ought to be taken at once to secure more reasonable prices for thrashing grain to the farmers of our State. I am advised that the above rates are suggested in many of the leading agricultural counties of the State where roads are good, the crops large, and where the machines will thereby be enabled to show a large return each day.

In other counties of the State, not any more advantageously situated, I am advised thrashers are only asking two and one-half cents for oats, six cents for wheat, and seven cents for rye. The government has limited the price that the farmer can charge for his wheat. This in a way affects the price of other food products raised on the farm, and while I realize that the thrashers of the State are entitled to an increase sufficient to take care of their added cost of operation, interest on their investment and fair depreciation charges, but no advantage should be taken of the war situation to exact more than a reasonable return for the services rendered.

It occurs to me that a committee from the State Council, acting in conjunction with the thrashers and various farmer organizations, might be able to work out this problem so as to secure the farmers of our State a reasonable price for the thrashing of their grain.

Very truly yours,

J. P. GOODRICH,
Governor.

The above communication was read by Chairman Michael E. Foley to the Indiana State Council of Defense, at its meeting June 12, 1918. The chairman's announcement of his purpose to act in conformity with the Governor's suggestion was approved by the Council.

Red Cross Activities

Indiana Red Cross chapters during May gave assistance to 1,186 families of soldiers, according to the May report of James L. Fieser, Lake Division Director of Civilian Relief.

Red Cross Home Service Sections in the Lake Division in May spent $17,338.18 in giving the financial assistance to dependent families and in assisting soldiers and sailors in emergencies. Of this amount $13,591.92 was spent by Ohio chapters, $2,926.54 by Indiana chapters, and $819.72 by Kentucky chapters.

Mr. Fieser's report points out that 96 per cent of Indiana chapters are organized for Home Service work.

The Red Cross Lake Division News says $12,598,873 is the Lake Division's subscription in the second war fund to June 3. Of this sum Indiana's figures follow:

During the first five days of the Red Cross campaign to enroll nurses for military service, 206 nurses have been enrolled by Lake Division chapters. Of the 206 reported, 54 were Indiana nurses. Indiana has been asked to supply 423. Chapter reports indicate that the Red Cross is securing a large number of young women to enter nursing training schools and that a large body of home defense nurses is being recruited.

The Red Cross is now prepared to act as intermediary in three classes of communications between residents of the United States and residents in enemy countries and American soldiers in Europe. The Bureau of Military Relief for the Lake Division, American Red Cross, has just placed full explanation of the communication service in the hands of secretaries of the 355 chapters in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

The three classes of communication service are: communication with residents in enemy countries, communication with prisoners of war in Germany and casualty communications.

The work connected with this Red Cross service is to be conducted locally, either by the chapter secretary or under the secretary's direction. The secretary will receive messages to be transmitted and will forward them to the division bureau of military relief.

Threshing Prices Asked.

M. E. Foley, Chairman of the State Council of Defense, has addressed a questionnaire to the chairmen of the County Councils of Defense asking them to report figures at the earliest possible time on prevailing quotations for threshing wheat, rye, oats and barley.

Chairman Foley suggests an immediate inquiry, including an interview with thrashermen, and where an organization exists an interview with the officers.

"It is my purpose to get a reply from every county in the State, and then undertake to put this service upon a reasonably fair basis. I want the men who own the machines to have a good compensation for their services, but I do not want them to impose on any one by charging excessive prices," says Mr. Foley's letter.

Indiana in the Third Loan.

Indiana subscribed a total of $70,822,450 for Liberty Bonds on the third drive, recently completed, according to the final statement given out by the state headquarters. This is 131.71 per cent of the original minimum allotment for the State. The figures show a falling off from those announced at the close of the campaign as reported by the county chairmen to the state headquarters. A total slightly in excess of $73,000,000 was reported by the county chairmen.

The German Menace in Indiana

William Wirt, of the Gary schools, brought out an important point in the discussion, the other evening, whether German language teaching should be ousted from the high schools. Mr. Wirt, it may be stated, is against ousting German from high schools if students desire it, because colleges have not waived foreign language requirements, and he points out that we cannot fight smallpox by shutting our eyes. In his studies of the language question in France, Germany and England, Dr. Wirt found that where we have one student perfecting himself in other tongues those countries have ten, and Germany has specialized in English as France has specialized in German. To know the German ideals better and to realize the murderous aspect of them, Dr. Wirt says we must know the German language.

Wirt is a firm believer in having high school and college students study German in order that this country may be able to compete with others in the trade revival that will follow this war. He is against German language teaching in the grade schools and insists that where German is taught that it be by American teachers and not by German teachers, most of whom are the propagandists of the kaiser system.

Whether one agrees or disagrees with Dr. Wirt, his statement that the agitation against German in the public school is the work of pro-Germans and that they are shrewdly taking advantage of well-meaning Americans to cover up the real issue is worth investigating. This real issue, Dr. Wirt holds, is that 2,000,000 school children in this country attend common schools, parochial ones, where German or some other language is used to teach spelling, arithmetic, reading and other studies. In Gary one school, the German Lutheran, employs the Hun language to teach young Americans, he says, and in Fort Wayne nearly half the children go to schools that use Hun text-books instead of those printed in the English language.

That means that nearly one in every five children in America's schools are taught in the Hun language, and that is something very serious. It is a real issue.

The National Educational Association has recommended that federal and state legislation be initiated toward prohibiting all foreign languages in grade schools; and in Indiana the State Council of Defense has named a committee to suggest legislation.

Whether it is the German, the Polish or the Slavonic language, these foreign tongues should not be used in text-books in American grade schools, regardless of what church or private institution conducts them. Over two years ago the new archbishop of Chicago, Dr. Mundelein, stopped the use of German, Polish and other foreign language text-books in Chicago's Catholic schools, prescribing that English, the language of America, be employed. That was one of the greatest steps toward Americanization ever taken in Chicago.

When Indiana's Legislature meets, if the national Congress has not acted in the meantime, it should move to prohibit the use of any foreign language text-books in the public or parochial schools of common grade in this State. The children are Americans, not of this or that foreign nationality, and it is high time to realize this. Every school that uses foreign language text-books to teach common school subjects is not wholly American and far from desirable.—Lake County Times.

The maximum price at which farmers may sell cattle for slaughter in Switzerland has been fixed at 23 cents per pound on the farm. Maximum prices for meats have also been established.

All private stocks of olive oil in Italy in excess of actual family needs have been requisitioned by the government.

Shipments of rice from China to the United States increased greatly during 1917 and, according to present indications, will break all records this year.

Elkhart County Council of Defense Issues Information for Townships

General Bulletin No. 1 Sets Forth the Purpose and Duties of the Local Organizations That Have Been Recommended by the State and National Authorities as Necessary to an Effective War Program

In the promotion of effective township councils of defense, the County Council of Defense of Elkhart County has issued a General Bulletin No. 1, of "Official Information," that is suggestive and helpful. It follows:

Township Councils of Defense and Their Connection with the General Organizations for Assistance in War Work.

The Council of National Defense, created by Act of Congress, has its headquarters at Washington, D. C., and is composed of the Secretaries of War, Navy, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce, and Labor. Walter S. Gifford is Director, and Grosvenor B. Clarkson, Secretary, who are respectively Director and Secretary of an Advisory Commission acting for and under the National Defense Council.

State Councils of Defense, or bodies acting as such under this or similar title are in active duty in the 48 states and some dependencies, and are formed to carry out the instructions from the National Council, and correlate them to the varying conditions existing, besides working out local war problems. Michael E. Foley is Chairman, and John V. Wilson is Secretary of the State Council of Defense of Indiana, headquarters, State House, Indianapolis, Indiana.

County Councils of Defense were formed in Indiana shortly after the declaration of war, in each of the ninety-two counties, and are composed of seven or eight members in each county, together with various advisory heads, committees, and committee chairmen.

The Elkhart County Council of Defense is composed of: I. O. Wood, chairman; W. C. Peters, secretary; S. F. Spohn and Mrs. J. A. S. Mitchell, of Goshen; Judge J. L. Harman, F. E. Smith and James H. Calkins, of Elkhart; Frank Coppes, of Nappanee. Mrs. A. H. Beardley of Elkhart is chairman of the Elkhart Division of Woman's Committee.

The Township Councils of Defense of Elkhart County are composed of from seven to thirteen or more members in each of the several townships, with the exception of the townships in which Elkhart city, and Goshen city are situated, their activities being looked after by the County Council itself.

At this date, May 10, 1918, it is expected that all the Councils of Defense will shortly be duly legalized as such and strict assertion of their duties and powers set forth. Their standing at present is clearly, though informally recognized in all the several states.

Appointments of a Federal Character are made upon the direct recommendation of the Councils—State and County—and in a general way such appointees are answerable for their conduct to the recommending bodies.

State Councils trace their membership to the appointment by the Governors; County Councils by the Judges of the Circuit Courts; Township Councils by the County Councils.

TOWNSHIP COUNCILS—Their Duties and Standing

In their important position locally, the Township Councils of Defense are charged with handling the war matters and problems in their several jurisdictions, as instructions are given them from time to time by the State or County Councils of Defense. Generally speaking, all these bodies are seeking in the most active and intimate ways possible to assist in everything bearing upon the victorious ending of the war. This in itself outlines clearly Township Councils' duties.

1. Universal patriotism. Practice it. Preach it. Stand up for Loyalty, first, last, and to the end. Stamp out every vestige of disloyalty, sedition and treason.
2. Assist in recruiting for army, navy, and civilian war work. Lend your aid to soldiers' and sailors' welfare movements, and the welfare of dependents left behind.
3. Help the maintenance of all branches of an intelligent labor bureau or clearing house. Primarily, assist the National Government in obtaining the necessary civilian labor needed from time to time. Secondly, give your ablest assistance in solving labor problems of all character in the county and township.
4. Assist food production in every way in your power. Add your effort to National, State and County Food Production representatives' activities. Initiate home movements to increase food production of a direct neighborhood character.
5. Conserve food. Urge all to conserve. See that the laws and rules of the Food Directors are lived up to on all sides. Report violations, but more particularly seek the saving of food by example and patriotic effort; you know the necessity—explain it to the careless or indifferent; and turn the disloyal food waster over to the County Food Director through your County Council.
6. Officially and individually lend your fullest assistance with or without specific invitation to Liberty Bond sales, Red Cross drives, and Y. M. C. A. Fund campaigns. Usually these movements are conducted by specially appointed individuals. Help them in the ranks and side lines. They have their own official heads.
7. Particularly give your heartiest assistance to all branches of woman's war activities. Your woman member or members constitute the leadership of this branch. Encourage them. Knitting, sewing and Red Cross hospital supply materials are keenly needed.

EACH TOWNSHIP COUNCIL MUST ORGANIZE

If your Township Council has not already fully organized, hold a meeting at once. Select the following officers, committees, etc.:

Chairman. Secretary-Treasurer.

Finance Committee of three members; your Township Chairman may be the Finance Committee Chairman.

Protection Committee of three members to investigate all cases of disloyalty in the township or locality.

Woman's Committee of not less than three members. Your woman member to be chairman, or to choose their chairman if there are two women in your Council, adding one or more members from the men of your Council to the committee if you wish.

MEETINGS

Meetings should be held once a week or at least once in two weeks; oftener when occasion demands, and upon call of the Chairman and Secretary. Meetings must be called when two other members so request of the Chairman.

The Chairman as official head shall preside.

The Secretary is expected to provide a simple but permanent book for minutes of all meetings. The minutes may be brief and informal, but must show roll-call; action on matters discussed, besides accurate information as to Committees' activities from time to time.

Bulletins from State and County Councils should be read at succeeding meetings, and action thereon reported to the County Council promptly by the Secretary.

Eliminate red tape. Action and understandable reports are all that is necessary.

Keep your membership roll full. If a member removes from the township, fill his place promptly. Let no capable member resign on the plea of "being too busy." Nothing is so important as this war, and the work entailed upon all of us. We are each of us "called to the colors" and each must do his full share.

Council members from the lowest to the highest work without any compensation whatever. Remember it is all for the good of the cause, and what we do for our country we do for ourselves.

While it is expected that the personnel of the various Township Councils of Defense shall remain unchanged for the period of the war, the County Council of Defense reserves to itself the right to make such changes in the membership, officers, etc., of the various Township Councils as may be deemed necessary from time to time. This rule is in accordance with instructions from the State Council.

A directory of the fourteen township councils is appended.

Helps in Using Substitute Foods

(This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers wishing to meet the requests of the Food Administration and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.)

Menus For Wheatless Days.

"The only question for every true-hearted American today is: What can I do to help win the war? The only answer: Give instantly the service needed. That service now is, until the harvest, for you to share your wheat with your comrades across the sea—for you who can afford it to give your whole share to them."

Every household should on certain days each week, give up wheat. In some households it may be possible to do this every day and where this plan is practical it should be followed.

The planning of wheatless meals is sometimes a difficult task for the woman who has always been accustomed to using wheat breads, cakes and pies. A wheatless meal should as far as possible be planned without the use of wheat in any form. This means eliminating breads, pastry, cakes and breakfast foods containing wheat and the substituting of other cereals in these products.

Yeast breads, as a rule, must be made with part wheat flour, therefore on wheatless days quick breads, which are entirely wheatless, will have to be employed.

Crackers and wafers made of whole wheat, graham or wheat flours should be avoided.

Cake should only be used in the menu when furnishing a portion of the required food value, and on wheatless days cakes containing no wheat should be used.

Pies should only be used in meals where the added food value is required and the crusts should be wheatless.

Wheat breakfast foods should be eliminated entirely from the diet except in the case of children or of invalids.

The following menus may be helpful in working out plans for wheatless days. Recipes for the dishes suggested may be found in the Food Emergency Leaflets, which are "Use Less Sugar," "Liberty Breads," "Menus for Meatless Days," "Substitutes for Meat," "The Use of Fish," may be obtained upon application to the Department of Agricultural Extension, Purdue University, Lafayette, Indiana.

Menus suitable for families where members are doing hard manual labor or work out of doors in winter.

Food Administration

Plans for a state-wide conference of United States food club presidents, county and township, are being perfected by Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana, and his assistants.

Indiana threshermen are responding in a very satisfactory manner to the food administration's appeal for the conservation of the 3½ per cent of the wheat usually lost because of defective machinery or careless handling. The threshing committees are being named in the grain growing counties, and full co-operation is being pledged the food administration in this important conservation campaign.

No new bakery licenses will be issued by the United States Food Administration until after August 1st. No baker will be permitted to sell his license with his business. In case of sale he must surrender his license and the purchaser apply anew.

A new campaign of education and for the conservation of garbage has been inaugurated by the food administration. Housewives are being asked as a patriotic duty to refrain from including substances such as broken pottery, which should go to the trash box, in their garbage pails.

Indiana hotels and restaurants have been directed by the United States Food Administrator, Dr. Harry E. Barnard, to refrain from placing on their menus or serving boiled beef for more than two meals weekly, beefsteak for more than one meal a week, and roast beef for more than one meal a week. Householders are asked under no circumstances to buy more than one and one-fourth pounds of beef per week clear, or one and a half pounds with bone, for each member of the household. The use of pork and pork products in substitution is urged. The rule is expected to hold until September 15th.

For making a false affidavit that they had not purchased any sugar on contract, the establishment of Zarafonitis Brothers, of Clinton, Ind., has been ordered closed by Dr. Barnard. The firm was found to have 2,000 pounds of sugar in transit from a Chicago wholesale house when it made application for an allotment of 9,100 pounds for ice cream and candy making purposes. Dr. Barnard directed Wm. C. Wait, Food Administrator of Vermillion, to close the place, post an order of suspension of business and to warn the firm that its members would be prosecuted for perjury on a repetition of the offense.

Child Welfare Campaign Is Succeeding in France

In connection with the child welfare campaign, in Indiana, which has for its object the saving of nearly 3,000 babies who under ordinary conditions would die from preventable causes—a part of the first great national reconstruction effort—the experience of Dr. William P. Lucas, head of the American Red Cross infant welfare work in France, is timely and interesting. In the Red Cross Bulletin for May 20th, Dr. Lucas writes, in part, as follows:

"The first of the year, in co-operation with their Public Health Service, in their Department of the Interior, and with the National Infant Mortality Association, and the Red Cross—a sort of triangular association—we have entered upon an infant mortality campaign, not because infant mortality is so high in France, but because every baby in France, precious though it has always been, is twice as precious now as in normal time. The birth rate has fallen, as it has in each of the belligerent countries, and has fallen tremendously in France. The death rate is somewhere between 80,000 and 100,000 a year. Our cry is that we want to save at least 50,000 this year. That is the thing we are trying to do.

"The infant mortality work has three or four phases. One is directly through our centers where the public comes for preventive work. France was the first country that started preventive work for infants, and has the best organization where the doctor meets the mother and child. But there is no organization for home visiting, and we are assisting to create schools to train women in the home visiting work, taking the best type of women with the training they have had and giving them tuberculosis, children's work, and practical home visiting courses. We have four schools at the present time of that type, at Paris, Lyons, Bordeaux and Marseilles—all four in connection with the tuberculosis work of the Red Cross and the Rockefeller Foundation.

Lyons Surpasses Philadelphia.

"Two months ago we started an educational campaign with a traveling automobile—simply a Ford car with a good infant welfare exhibit. The first town we opened in was Chartres and the success there and the general interest and the questions asked and requests for permanent work were immense. We immediately started work and organized the most successful infant welfare exhibits I have ever seen. The best American record was one in Philadelphia, in 1912, when a nine-day baby show was visited by 67,000 people. In Lyons our infant welfare exhibit was visited by 71,955 in the same first nine days. We had at that exhibit much more than at any infant welfare exhibit in this country. We had kindergarten work, recreational, playground, food exhibits, moving pictures, lantern slides, demonstrators washing babies. That is the type of work we are doing.

"On August 11th we had eleven in our bureau. When I left we had 400. We started in one room and when I left we were occupying one whole floor of a rather large building. This is our Paris office. We have an office in Marseilles and another in Bordeaux, growing very rapidly.

"The best thing we are doing, the biggest we are doing, comes through that intangible contact with the spirit of the French, that opportunity which gives us a closer and better understanding of their fine spirit.

"How does it affect the soldier in the trenches, this women's and children's work—for what we are really trying to do is to win this fight. It has a very definite effect. We try to get in touch with the father of every child we take care of. We let him know everything we are doing. He sees us. For instance, at the Lyons exhibit we had a poulu come in. We saw him examining the food exhibit and writing down the food best suited for a child between the ages of four and five years. Our demonstrator was interested and upon questioning him found that he had come to the exhibit through all the rain to see if there was anything of use to him. He had seen the food exhibit and was writing it down.

"When the war started, he said, he had seven children and now he had but three left. He said the four who died probably died through lack of proper feeding, and he was writing down the proper food to save his wife the trouble, for he intended to bring his wife to see the exhibit when it ceased raining. Three days later, when the weather cleared up, he came with his wife and three children."

Comparative Sugar Prices.

During the first year of the war the United States consumed more than four million tons of sugar. The wholesale price of refined sugar in this country at the present time is $7.30 per hundred pounds, as compared with $9.15 last August. The regulated wholesale price of sugar in various foreign countries makes an interesting comparison:

	Per 100 Lbs.
United Kingdom .....	$12 59
France .....	12 28
Italy .....	26 30
Canada .....	8 07
United States .....	7 30

An increase of one cent per pound in the price of sugar in the United States would take at least $82,185,820 out of the pockets of American consumers in one year.

Committee on Construction

The following report was adopted by the Indiana State Council of Defense at its meeting, June 12th:

Indiana State Council of Defense:

Your Committee on Proposed Construction respectfully recommends:

1. That the letter of the city attorney of Gary, dated June 8th, be answered as follows: "The Council approves the practice by the city of Gary of engaging in such construction only as is 'absolutely necessary', and inasmuch as the proposed widening of Washington street is not necessary, but only desirable, recommends postponement thereof until after the war."
2. That the Vanderburgh Anti-Tuberculosis Society be advised to proceed with a referendum vote this autumn, but on condition that there be no building until after the war.
3. That, on the representation of the Cass County Council of Defense that the Swayzer ditch will bring four or five hundred acres under cultivation, its construction be not opposed.
4. That the Wallace road in Clinton County be not improved at this time.
5. That no objection be interposed to the construction of two miles of road near Newburgh, which is under contract, and, in the opinion of the Fuel Administration, is needed for the utilization of coal from several Warrick County mines.

Respectfully,

(Signed) EVANS WOOLLEN.
CHARLES FOX.
J. L. KEACH.
GEORGE ADE.

Lumber Agents' Authority.

In reply to an inquiry as to the authority of agents who are buying oak and walnut timber in Indiana, representing that they are commissioned by the federal government, the Indiana State Council of Defense has received the following from the Ordnance Chief of the War Department, which he asks be given widespread publicity:

"You are informed that the government does not purchase walnut or oak lumber directly, but that it is endeavoring to assist certain contractors who have contracts for the manufacture of gunstocks or other parts, in obtaining the lumber necessary for their purposes.

"It is entirely a mistake, however, to say that the government has commandeered lumber of this description, nor has it issued any orders which might induce the holders of timber to dispose of it under coercion or under a threat to seize the same. You are advised that such acts are entirely without authority and can only be due to excessive zeal on the part of lumber cruisers, or others.

"This Department will appreciate being advised of any conditions of this nature."

Best Wheat in History Of Indiana Is Located

Mr. Lawler expects to erect several more this year, in addition to the four he put up last season.

The advice of one of the leading cattle feeders in the State, and surely one of the most successful, regarding the silo should not pass unregarded by any man who has just entered the business, and even the most experienced cattle feeder might well take note.

Moderate shipments of wheat and flour are being made from Australia to the Pacific coast of the United States.

In spite of scarcity of implements and shortage of farm labor, England, Scotland and Wales have all increased their acreage of wheat.

"This, the most appalling and dreadful thing that has come to humanity since the dawn of civilization, is to me the outstanding creation of German militarism."

Report of Committee Defining Policy As To Pro-Germanism and Pacifism in State

Indiana Has a Program for the Extension of the Work that the Council of National Defense Regards As Imperative to Creating a Unified Spirit of Loyalty

After a discussion and unanimous indorsement of the recommendations contained therein, the Indiana State Council of Defense, at its meeting June 19th, agreed that steps should be taken at once to carry out and follow up the proposals of the committee appointed to define a policy relative to combating the pro-German and pacifist arguments "that are met with every day."

The committee's report, in full, follows:

To the Indiana State Council of Defense:

The memorandum minutes of the Council show that on February 13, 1918, Mr. Stout, of the publicity Department, "called the attention of the Council to the necessity for some steps being taken by the protection department of the Council, and patriotic citizens, to combat the pro-German and pacifist arguments that are met with every day, citing instances."

Your committee now reporting was appointed to recommend a policy to the Council on the subject.

The scope and the importance of the field of your committee's report are obvious. The complete eradication of the spirit which supports the cause of Germany in the present struggle offers a complex problem, the solution of which throughout the country would materially simplify the task of our government in the prosecution of the war. The problem has a two-fold aspect. First is the case of those who actively or passively sympathize with Germany, hoping that she may win the war and impose such a peace as she desires. Second is the case of those who, without intentionally favoring Germany, yet because of cowardice, indolence or indifference, fallacious social or religious views, low mentality, or other cause, are blind to the primary duty of citizenship, and by failure to sustain or by indirect attempts to weaken the cause of the United States and her allies do in fact give aid and comfort to the imperial German government.

Some facts with relation to the proportion of our population, that is, of foreign birth or immediate foreign descent, and particularly of Austrian or German birth or immediate descent, are of interest in connection with the general question.

According to the United States census for 1910, of the total Indiana population of 2,700,876 the native population was 2,480,639 or 91.8 per cent, and the foreign-born white population was 159,322 or 5.9 per cent, leaving the total non-white population 60,915, or 2.3 per cent of the total population.

Of the native white population, 2,130,688, or 78.9 per cent of the total population, were of native parentage, that is, both parents were born in the United States; 159,322, or 5.9 per cent, were of foreign birth; 211,008, or 7.8 per cent, were of foreign parentage, that is, both parents were born abroad; and 139,543, or 5.2 per cent, were of mixed parentage, that is, having one parent native born and one foreign born. The total number of those of foreign parentage, mixed parentage and foreign birth was 509,873, or 18.9 per cent of the total population. The Official Census Report for 1910, after stating that a comparison with the results of the 1900 census, indicates "a slight increase in the relative importance of the native whites of native parentage," says:

"In most of the counties, the proportion of whites of foreign birth or of foreign or mixed parentage is small. There is, however, one county (Lake) in which the foreign born whites constitute more than one-fourth of the total population, and six counties in which the native whites of foreign or mixed parentage exceed that proportion."

The six counties referred to are Lake, Porter, Laporte, St. Joseph, Allen and Vanderburgh.

Of the total white population of foreign birth or foreign parentage, already stated as 509,873, Germany is accredited with 264,198, or 51.8 per cent, and Austria with 17,835, or 3.5 per cent, making the total for the two countries 282,033, or 54.3 per cent of the entire population of foreign birth or parentage, or 10.4 per cent of the total population of the State.

Taking the country as a whole, the white population was 88.9 per cent of the total population, but the white population of native parentage was only 53.8 per cent of the total population, while the population of foreign or mixed parentage or foreign birth was 35.2 per cent of the total. In fourteen of the States less than 50 per cent of the white population was of native parentage, and in half of these States, including Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York, less than 40 per cent was of such parentage. In two States—Minnesota and North Dakota—less than 30 per cent of the white population was of native parentage.

Considering only the white population of the country, 60.5 per cent was of native parentage, 23.1 per cent of foreign or mixed parentage, and 16.3 per cent of foreign birth. Considering only the white population of Indiana, 80.7 per cent was of native parentage, 13.3 per cent of foreign or mixed parentage, and 6 per cent foreign born. In other words, considering only the white population, 60.5 per cent the country over was of native parentage, while in Indiana alone 80.7 per cent was of such parentage; or, stating the same facts in another way, 39.5 per cent the country over was of foreign or mixed parentage or of foreign birth, while in Indiana alone 19.3 per cent was of such parentage or birth.

Comparing the white population of Indiana with that of its immediate northern neighbors, the results are as follows:

	Native Parentage	Foreign or Mixed Parentage	Foreign Born	Total Foreign or Mixed, Native and Foreign Born
Indiana .....	80.7	13.3	6.0	19.3
Ohio .....	65.2	22.0	12.8	34.8
Illinois .....	47.1	31.1	21.8	52.9
Michigan ....	44.0	34.6	21.4	56.0

In 1910 the total foreign white stock of the United States was 32,243,382, or 35.2 per cent of the total population, of whom 13,345,545 were foreign born and 18,897,837 were of parents one or both of whom were born abroad. Of the entire foreign white stock, 2,001,559, or 6.2 per cent, were of Austrian origin and 8,282,618, or 25.7 per cent, were of German origin, making the total of Austrian or German origin 10,284,177, equal to 31.9 per cent of the foreign white stock, or 11.1 per cent of the total population.

Comparing Indiana with its immediate northern neighbors with respect only to those of Austrian or German birth, results are as follows:

	Austrian or German Born. Numbers.	Per cent of Total Population.
Indiana .....	74,010	2.7%
Ohio .....	247,982	5.2%
Illinois .....	482,224	8.5%
Michigan .....	262,620	9.3%

A safe conclusion from these and other figures contained in the census report is that, so far as the existence of pro-German sympathies depends on foreign birth or foreign or mixed parentage or birth, Indiana is confronted with no such an acute or extensive problem as are a number of the other States of the Union. This statement is not, however, to be taken as meaning that the problem does not exist in the State, or that it does not require serious thought or careful attention.

Your committee has endeavored to ascertain the extent to which actual pro-German sympathy exists in Indiana. Besides resort to the usual sources of information, confidential reports have been received from many county councils of defense of the State. Your committee has been aided also in its study of the broad problem by the hearings before the sub-committee of the Committee on Judiciary of the United States Senate on the bill to repeal the act to incorporate the national German-American Alliance, by investigations and reports of other state councils of defense, and by numerous addresses, magazine articles, and other publications.

It is clear that at the outbreak of the war in 1914 the sympathies of the great bulk of the so-called German-Americans went at once to the central powers. These citizens accepted the explanation by the imperial German government of the causes of the war. They regarded the war as defensive on Germany's part. They viewed the conflict as forced on Germany by the machinations of covetous powers envious of her growth and success. They were attached to Germany by ties of the deepest sentiment. To them Germany was still the Fatherland of old—the home of their ancestors and the source of customs, art, music, literature, science and learning, in which they felt a just racial pride.

The German government, adroitly and sedulously through every means of affecting public opinion, fostered these beliefs and feelings. As a result, the invasion of Belgium, the unwarned sinking of the Lusitania and other ships, the bombardment from sea or air of practically defenseless towns and cities, and the many other violations by the German government of the rules and principles of international law were widely accepted by German-Americans as mere incidents of the war, sad and unfortunate incidents to be sure, but yet justified by the laws of war and of no more than sentimental concern to the United States. It is doubtless true that many German-Americans were profoundly shocked by some of the extreme measures which Germany adopted, but it is equally true that, generally speaking, the explanations and justifications officially put forth by the German government were accepted as incontrovertible. To people thus believing and thus feeling, the formal entry of the United States into the war came both as a tragedy and an awakening. It was difficult for men and women of German descent to lay aside at once the predilections of a lifetime and to discard carefully formed views as to what the war was about and where the duty and interest of the United States lay, and to recognize the fact that the country of their adoption and that of

(County Councils of Defense whose activities have not been noted in the INDIANA BULLETIN are urged to report them to the Publicity Bureau, Indiana State Council of Defense, Room 81 State House, Indianapolis, Ind. Every county council should charge its publicity committee with responsibility for seeing that the INDIANA BULLETIN has a full and complete record of all activities.—Editor.)

Allen County.—Chairman Scheiman, who with others, accepted the assignment from the state council to deal with the highway transportation matter, reports that the committee met and with the aid of Mr. Grosvenor, county surveyor, has prepared a map showing good and bad roads. Mr. Scheiman said the failure to build good roads was due to the township trustees. He advised referring the matter to the township councils of defense, with instructions to build up the connecting links as a war necessity. In cases where the stretch of bad roads extends into other counties, he advised reporting the facts to the state council with the suggestion that it bring to bear its full power of authority upon the other township trustees to make their ends of the bad stretches of road passable at all times and in all weathers. The council approved the report, and adopted the suggestion. The request of Food Administrator George Haffner for assistance in providing speakers in the interest of food conservation at public meetings, picnics, etc., was referred to Mr. Smalley, county agricultural agent, with power to act. Chairman Scheiman reported that the entertainment given by the Federation of Industrial Clubs of the Y. W. C. A. showed a net return of $314 for French orphans. The matter of a canteen organization of some kind for soldiers passing through was referred to C. T. Lane, chairman of the civilian relief committee. The council approved an arrangement with George Chenoweth for supervision during the summer of the Boys' Working Reserve—salary and expenses not to exceed $100 per month. Grocers and other persons in the city and county who are displaying posters advertising the third liberty loan, the Red Cross campaign, and other drives that have been carried to completion are thanked by the council of defense and asked by that body to remove them, in order that they will not be before the public eye any longer, and when a new drive is inaugurated fresh signs may be posted and the public advised of it. Bill posters will be asked to remove the large signs from their boards also.

Boone County.—The Boone County Council of Defense held its regular meeting Tuesday, several of the township chairmen and all of the committees being present. A resolution concerning thrashing was passed, as follows: "That it is the sense of the council of defense, after careful investigation, that the prices for thrashing in Boone County ought not to exceed 4 cents for wheat and 8 cents for rye." This conclusion was based on reports submitted as to prices for thrashing in other counties in this district. The Independence Day celebration was also discussed and Mayor Paul O. Tauer will be asked by the council to request all local merchants to close their places of business on the afternoon of the fourth.

Clay County.—Judge Rawley, chairman of the Soldiers' Welfare League of Clay County, recently invited all the attorneys of the county to join the league and donate their services to soldiers and their dependents needing legal advice. Every member of the Clay County bar accepted the invitation. No fee will be charged for legal service for any Clay County man in the federal service, by members of the league. A suggestion that the business houses of Brazil close for a certain period each week during the harvest season, in order that their employees may help with the harvest, is being considered by the business men of Brazil. The suggestion was made by J. D. Martin, who believes that the addition of a couple of hundred men to the Clay County farm labor forces would help greatly through the emergency.

Crawford County.—The Crawford County Council of Defense has ordered an investigation as to why there is so much waste land in this county. Each owner of a field that is not planted in something useful will have an opportunity to explain, and the explanation, together with the name of the owner, will be filed with the council of defense.

Davess County.—The committee appointed by the Davess Council of Defense to serve on a board to look into all disloyal acts and to take up all cases where citizens have failed to respond to the call of the government to support the war work in all its phases, has been active and has found much to do. The board meets every Friday at the federal building in this city. Edward C. Faith is chairman, F. A. Seal acts as attorney, Grand Keith as advisor and E. E. Forsythe is secretary. Many cases have been before the board where citizens have failed to meet the government call for war funds. The committee has shown no favorites and has made it plain that every one must do his part or suffer the consequences. In bringing the parties before the board for its hearings the committee has seen fit to give them notice to appear voluntarily, and so far it has never been necessary to send for any one. In every case, too, the recommendations to each party summoned have been met. It has been found that in most cases these parties lacked an understanding of just what had been expected of them.

Decatur County.—Thrashermen in this county have adopted the following prices for this season: Oats, 6 cents a bushel; wheat, 9 cents; barley, 7 cents, and rye, 10 cents.

Delaware County.—More boys are wanted for the Boys' Working Reserve in Delaware County. Charles Van Matre, in charge of the Boys' Working Reserve in this county, has places for twelve boys on farms but is not able to fill one of them. Through the efforts of the reserve, several farmers have been given help this year and with the close of the city schools it is expected that more places will be filled. Mr. Van Matre met with the Men's War Service Club and enlisted the aid of that organization in helping to find boys for the farm. The Men's War Service Club is organized to give temporary help to farmers and much work along this line has been done, but the assistance given is only for a day or two. The Boys' Working Reserve is placing young men on the farm for the full summer's work. The last day of the six-day baby welfare campaign in Delaware County will be one to be long remembered by all who attended. The banner baby exhibition was held at the Commercial Club. Mrs. E. W. Barrett made a talk on the progress which baby welfare has made in the county. Following this, the names of the forty babies' mothers were read by Mrs. Blackburn, chairman of the child welfare committee, and the mothers brought the banner babies forward and stood them on the large table in the lecture room. Of the lucky children, three were awarded prizes of Thrift Stamps, which had been donated by one of Muncie's patriotic mothers. The lucky three were Ralph Butler, Mary Lewellyn Sims and John Ernest Bingan. One coincidence in the scoring of the babies was noticed. Mrs. Sims, the mother of Mary Lewellyn, also had another banner baby to show, her little son, which is the only case where two children in the same family were pronounced banner babies. The trustees of the Muncie schools have arranged to comply with the government's recent request for the continuance of vocational training classes for emergency war work, during the summer months. Muncie expects to furnish 100 radio operators. The present school equipment will permit of the training of a school of about 85, and more than 80 are now enrolled. The class meets Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings. Instruction is given by Chester M. Fields of the Postal Telegraph Co. A vocational director is making a special appeal to registered men. Two hundred hours of concentrated work are said to be necessary for the training of a radio operator capable of handling twenty words a minute. Center Township canning clubs are now being organized, the work being done in connection with the garden project. This is a movement having for its purpose the saving of food and the school boys and girls are to be encouraged in this as a war measure. The common school graduates are especially urged to attend the meetings and become members of the canning clubs. No more patriotic move could be made by our boys and girls to serve their country. All can join whether they have a garden or not. W. F. Rutledge is club leader of Center Township.

Elkhart County.—County Agent G. E. Metzger announces that G. L. Burkholder, who is sent out from the experiment station at Lafayette, Ind., will be in Elkhart soon to make a thorough investigation regarding the hatching of the second brood of the codling moth, an insect which causes the fruit to drop.

Fayette County.—Every Fayette County farmer who averages thirty or more bushels of wheat on any five acres anywhere on his farm this summer will receive a medal. The county agricultural agent conceived the plan and a local board has agreed to provide the medals.

Floyd County.—Notice has been issued by the Floyd County Council of Defense, C. D. Kelo, chairman, regarding the taking of a census of idlers in New Albany and vicinity. After setting out the classifications of Provost Marshal-General Crowder's "work or fight" order, the county council adds: "The county council of defense intends to pay particular attention to those persons who are now swarming about the places where gaming is carried on and especially the places where the Louisville race horse gamblers assemble and carry on their occupation and trade in violation of the law."

Fountain County.—Dan C. Reed, chairman of the Fountain County Council of Defense, has met with a committee of thrashermen and the following prices have been agreed on: Wheat, 6 to 8 cents a bushel; oats, 4 to 5 cents, and rye, 9 cents. The county agricultural agent has asked that all thrashing machines be inspected before thrashing begins.

Fulton County.—A committee consisting of E. E. Murphy, Charles Bailey, John Hoover, County Agent Binding and Bernard Clayton is listing every man in Rochester and Fulton County who is willing to give at least one day's labor during the coming harvest to farmers who are in need of help. John Barr, L. R. Binding, Charles Copen, Perry Hill and W. H. Bright have been named to co-operate with the Food Administration's program directed against the loss of wheat either through defective thrashing machinery or careless handling. The county council of defense is co-operating with Rev. A. S. Warriner in an effort to accumulate a coal supply for use in emergencies next winter. Rev. Warriner appeals especially, he says, in behalf of the poor, who are likely to be the greatest sufferers in the event of extreme cold weather, such as obtained last winter.

Gibson County.—Warning to all loafers to seek useful employment was issued by the Gibson County Council of Defense following complaint that there were a number of men in Princeton and other towns of the county who had no visible means of support. The resolution adopted by the defense council declares that unless the warning is heeded drastic steps will be taken to put the men to work. A Liberty Guard company was organized by the citizens of Patoka Wednesday night with a membership roll of fifty-six. The officers elected were: Owen J. Roberts, captain; J. L. Turpin, first lieutenant; Homer Adams, second lieutenant. The company will drill each Tuesday evening and on Sunday afternoons. Meetings will be held in every town in Gibson County, of business men, laboring men and farmers, for the purpose of perfecting plans toward lending assistance to the farmers in harvesting their wheat crop. County Agent Marshall has perfected a plan and a representative from his office will be in attendance at every meeting.

Huntington County.—The county council of defense suggests that the grass that has grown along the highways of the county and in the vacant lots of the city be mowed. Blue grass is especially good as feed for horses and cattle. It is needed and it would be wrong and wasteful to waste it. Those in charge of the work of cutting it should get permission of the owners of the adjoining land and lots. The appearance of high grass both along the highways and in the vacant lots in the city is a detriment to the property, and it would beautify the land and avert fires which might occur. It has been estimated by the county council that 100 tons or more of the grass could be utilized by the method that they suggest in Huntington County.

Johnson County.—Merchants of Franklin have been asked to volunteer for work in Johnson County harvest fields. The County Council of Defense has arranged for the taking of pledges, and Miss Edith Hitz is in charge of the work. A committee consisting of R. M. Miller, Garrie Tilson, G. W. Wyrick, P. T. Casady and Prof. C. A. Deppe will canvass the entire business district of Franklin, and employers will be asked to release men for half-day periods where it is impossible for them to give an entire day. Grocers of Franklin have already agreed to close their stores on Wednesday afternoons, and spend the time where most needed under the direction of County Food Administrator Blizzard.

Knox County.—An agricultural executive board, with Jos. H. Barr as chairman, was appointed by the Knox County Council of Defense, to provide a means of preventing waste of wheat after thrashing. A survey of the county disclosed only 35 per cent of the required storage facilities, and it is expected that shortage of elevators and car capacity will make necessary immediate relief measures. The county council has appealed to all farmers and warehousemen to co-operate, in order that no wheat may be lost. Lumbermen are considering an appeal to join in the construction of large temporary bins.

Lake County.—Attorney Hoy D. Davis has been appointed chairman of the legal advisory board for the Lake County Council of Defense. Chairman Davis will name a number of Gary attorneys as members of the legal board and that body will, without fee or other compensation, take care of the rights of women whose husbands or other near relatives are in the war. Similar boards will be established in every city and town in Lake County, it being the purpose of the county council of defense to put a stop to the practice of attorneys who have been charging for such services. Chairman Davis and his board will take care of all legal services in assisting the wives of soldiers to secure their rights under the allotment and insurance laws enacted for their benefit and this will be done without cost to them.

Marion County.—The National Council of Defense is encouraging a plan inaugurated by the wholesale trade division of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, for improving merchandise transportation out of Indianapolis. Merchants, even in nearby cities, have been handicapped by delayed deliveries ranging from two to thirty days. It is estimated that from 100 to 400 automobile trucks enter Indianapolis each day. A majority of these carry live stock, and about 90 per cent of this number have been returning to surrounding towns empty. Under the new plan, an office has been established at the Indianapolis stock yards, for the purpose of encouraging truck drivers to take loads of freight out of the city instead of returning with empty trucks. These trucks will be listed, and arrangements made with the wholesale houses and other shippers for their use. R. A. Smith is in charge of the office.

Marshall County.—Reports received at the meeting of the woman's section of the council of defense indicate that the Red Cross, registration of women, and child welfare work is progressing satisfactorily. Mrs. Cordick, of the foreign and domestic relief work, will spend six weeks of the summer at Cleveland, Ohio, studying problems pertaining to this work. Arrangements have been made for the appointment of a chairman of the department of education, and provision will be made for the preservation of historical documents. All present agreed that the food problem is the most vital question of the hour, and with this thought in mind, in the immediate future most intense interest and effort will concentrate on this line of work. As the best means of securing results, the organization of food clubs in every community in Marshall County will be pushed forward with all possible dispatch. Three trained food demonstrators have offered their services free of charge.

Montgomery County.—Fuel Administrator Thomas Mathews has issued the following warning to the thrashmen of Montgomery County: "This is to warn you to lay in your supply of coal for thrashing purposes at the earliest moment possible. Do not delay it a single day. There may be a further scarcity of coal when you most need it for thrashing. In some localities in Montgomery County there is a quantity of coal now available for thrashing purposes. To conserve your time and have the proper fuel supply please secure the supply now." Thrashermen are urged to warn the farmers to have available a supply of fuel themselves so there may be no interference during the thrashing season.

Owen County.—Flag Day was observed in Jackson Township by the raising of a large flag at the Bunny farm. A pole erected on one of the highest points in the neighborhood can be seen from many points. The committee in charge was Dennie Lehr, Dr. J. A. Ralston, Wm. Lehr, James Smith and Dan Neese. Visitors from Indianapolis attended.

Rush County.—Orange, a little town on the Rush-Fayette county line, is organizing a Liberty Guard company. Residents of Noble Township in Rush County and Orange Township in Fayette County are being accepted for membership. Weekly drill is held on Monday evenings. W. R. Phillips is captain of the company; William McKee, first lieutenant, and Morris Young, second lieutenant. The company expects to appear shortly in uniforms and equipment.

St. Joseph County.—Events of the past week have shown very clearly the fact that the Mishawaka battalion of the home guards is a very valuable organization for the city. While most everyone knows that the guards were helping the police in the search for the man who committed a murder last Sunday, it is perhaps not generally known that inside of three-quarters of an hour after the call was issued the guards, fully seventy-five men in uniform, fully armed, had moved from the armory under the direction of their officers. This is an extremely fine showing, particularly in view of the fact that the call was not issued until around half past five on the afternoon of a holiday, so that a great majority of the men were away from home with their families or friends. L. company, which is being organized under the command of Capt. H. W. Gillis, who is without question one of the best officers in the regiment, has room for about thirty more members.

Tippecanoe County.—A movement is now on foot to have all of the attorneys in Lafayette close their offices for a week and go into the fields and assist the farmers in the harvest. No wages will be charged and all that will be required of the tillers of the soil is to furnish the meals for the workers.

Vanderburgh County.—Mrs. F. M. Hostetter, chairman of the woman's section of the county council of defense, is organizing a motor corps of women. The purpose will be to assist the men's organization in emergency cases, and particularly to encourage the marketing of home-grown produce.... Henry B. Walker, director of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, reports a total enrollment of 1,650, more than half of whom are available for farm work. County Agricultural Agent Ross N. Atkinson is enrolling volunteers from among business and professional men of Evansville for emergency farm work, as suggested by the public service reserve.... The Vanderburgh County war mothers Thursday afternoon unanimously voted to nationalize their organizations, inviting all organizations of mothers of soldiers and sailors all over the country to become a part of a united war mothers of America. Mrs. Alice Dodd will be the honorary president of the national organization, with the local mothers as the head of it. The local association of mothers was formed within a few days after the men of the first draft were sent to Camp Taylor, early last fall.

Vigo County.—The Vigo County Council of Defense announced a schedule of prices Monday for thrashing wheat for the season. This followed a conference with the farmers and thrashers. The following prices were agreed on: Wheat, 7 cents a bushel; oats, 4 cents; rye, 9 cents, and barley, 6½ cents.

Wabash County.—Notice has been given to owners of unused pasture land by Milo Meredith, chairman of the county council of defense, as follows: "I have been authorized by the federal government to investigate the matter of unused pastures and I find that approximately there are 50,000 acres of fine pasture land that is not being made use of in Wabash County. The owners of some of this land have no stock of their own to fatten on this grass, nor will they rent it to farmers who do own a lot of cattle that ought to be fattened on grass during June and July. I want to give such parties fair warning that the federal government will not permit your son or mine to be a 'slacker' in this crisis in the nation's history, neither will it permit any owner of fine pasture land to let it lie idle at this time when we need all the beef and pork we can produce to feed our soldier boys in this country and in France and our associates in this war. If any owner of beef cattle cannot obtain enough pasture for his stock from any owner of such land without sufficient stock to occupy the pasture and refuses to rent said pasture to the owner of beef cattle, will give me the facts, I will investigate the case, and, if found correct, I will, in the name of the federal government at Washington, commandeer such pasture and the owner will have to accept reasonable rental for such pasture. We want no 'slacker' land in Wabash County."

Wayne County.—The Richmond Commercial Club is co-operating with the county agent in the organization of a farm labor reserve. The organization has been given the name of the Wayne County Shock Forces. An especial appeal is being made to the men employed in cities who have had farm experience, but the organization will not be restricted to this class.... Center Township Registered Men's Club has organized and appointed the following committees: Wheat Saving Committee—Clarence Rohe, chairman; Emory Bowman, Earl Stevens, Bert Skinner and Linley Morgan. Silo Building Committee—Charles Pike, chairman; Earl Medaris, Harry Teelogue, Clarence Brumfield and Frank Teelogue. Live Stock Committee—Carl Petro, chairman; Clayburn King, Frank King, Walter Williams and Russell Pierce. Other committees appointed to look after the work of the registered men's club in this township are as follows: General Committee—Elmer Jackson, chairman; Orville Daily, Gaar Eliason, Clinton Russell and Fred Demoss. Finance Committee—John F. Townsend, chairman; Albert Higgins, Ora Bell, Wayne Stanley and Howard Mathews. A committee was also appointed to co-operate with the farmers in Center Township in an effort to secure labor. Following is the committee: Clinton Crull, chairman; Tony Walker, Oscar Russel, Stanley Campbell and George Pinnick.

Wells County.—D. M. Lowdermilk, chairman of the Wells County Thrashers' Association and vice-president of the Indiana Brotherhood of Thrashers, announces the adoption of a scale of prices for thrashing in Wells County this year. This list has been submitted to the State Council of Defense and will be the scale followed unless the state council makes some changes. The prices adopted as the maximum are as follows: Oats, 3½ cents per bushel; wheat, 6 cents; barley, 5 cents; rye, 7 cents; clover seed $1.50 per bushel from machine, and $2 re-cleaned.

White County.—Some time ago the county council of defense made a request of the county commissioners for an appropriation from the county funds for their use in the work that came before them. When the county commissioners met for their regular June session this particular allowance was taken up and acted upon. After some discussion it was voted to ask the county council for an appropriation of $1,000 for the use of the county council of defense. This is for the remainder of the year or until January 1.... All men subject to draft in White County were called to Monticello in order to organize an auxiliary county council of defense, and perfect township organizations. The members constitute an active committee on all war business, and will hold regular monthly meetings at the Round Grove headquarters.

THERE'LL BE NO OTHER!

Threshermen have announced that they would be unable to operate this season unless they were permitted to secure other than Indiana coal. In this connection the following self-explanatory letter is of interest:

UNITED STATES FUEL ADMINISTRATION.

Indianapolis, June 12, 1918.

Mr. M. E. Foley, Chairman,
Indiana State Council of Defense,
State House,
City.

Dear Mr. Foley:

Referring to your request today for an expression by the Fuel Administration in the matter of coal for threshing, I beg to advise you that the Fuel Administration in this state is unable to do anything toward procuring non-Indiana coal especially for threshing purposes.

Yours truly,

EVANS WOOLLEN,
Federal Fuel Administrator for Indiana.

Keiley on Inspection.

C. R. Keiley, executive secretary of the Virginia State Council of Defense, accompanied by John H. Winterbotham, of the Western division, State Section of the Council of National Defense, with headquarters in Chicago, spent Monday, June 17th, inspecting the Indiana State Council of Defense plan of organization and personnel. Mr. Keiley has undertaken to reorganize the work in Virginia and expressed himself as well pleased with the information and inspiration secured in Indiana. His visit is the third of the kind that has been made to Indiana, on the recommendation of the Federal defense officials, who point out the Indiana Council as a model.

Priority Policies As Affecting Industries

Statement Communicated to County Council for Their Guidance During the War.

A statement of the priority policies of the War Industries Board affecting industries, has been received by the Indiana State Council of Defense, and communicated to the county councils of defense for their guidance in matters pertaining to fuel, transportation, supply and distribution of raw materials, finished products, etc. The War Industries Board announces it will give preference treatment with respect to new construction in the following order:

Ships.

Including destroyers and submarine chasers.

Aircraft.

Munitions, Military and Naval Supplies and Operations.

Building construction for Government needs. Equipment for same.

Fuel.

Domestic consumption. Manufacturing necessities named herein.

Foodstuffs for human consumption, and plants handling same.

Feeding stuffs for domestic fowls and animals, and plants handling same.

All tools, utensils, implements, machinery, and equipment required for production, harvesting and distribution, milling, preparing, canning and refining foods and feeds such as seeds of foods and feeds, binder twine, etc.

Food and Collateral Industries.

Products of collateral industries, such as fertilizer, fertilizer ingredients, insecticides and fungicides, containers for foods and feeds, collateral products.

Materials and equipment for preservation of foods and feeds, such as ammonia and other refrigeration supplies, including ice.

Clothing.

For civilian population.

Railroad.

Or other necessary transportation equipment, including water transportation.

Public Utilities.

Serving war industries, army, navy and civilian population.

(Note—From Ships to Public Utilities, inclusive.—Including all necessary raw materials partially manufactured parts and supplies for completion of products.)

The board calls attention to its resolution discouraging all new undertakings not essential to and not contributing either directly or indirectly toward winning the war, which involve the utilization of labor, material and capital, "notwithstanding they may be of local importance and of a character which should in normal times meet every encouragement. The board declares it will withhold from all such projects priority assistance, without which they may be found impracticable. The board announces it has not undertaken to classify any legitimate industries as "non-essential," but adds that only through the exercise of priority directions can it insure war industries with 100 per cent of their requirements.

Women Are Its Source.

Sacrifice is the spirit of England today. If such a trivial word can be pardoned—it is the fashion. The women of England are the source and the force of it. Before the world's great struggle for freedom can be won it must become the spirit of America as well.—John Russell.

Attention,
County Councils

General Bulletin No. 15r.

June 18, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

The chairman of the National War Savings Committee has requested, through the Council of National Defense, the assistance of the State and County Councils of Defense in the intensive thrift campaigns now in progress or about to be launched in those counties that have not made up their quotas in Thrift and War Saving Stamps.

The object of these campaigns is to make every individual in the United States an owner of Thrift or War Savings Stamps and pledged in the future systematically to purchase as much as he can. This is directly in line with the campaign for thrift and economy which was advocated by the Council of National Defense in its resolution of May 6, enclosed in our Bulletin No. 144.

It is anticipated that the campaign will culminate on Friday, June 28, which has been designated as National War Savings Day.

If you have not already done so, please confer with your County War Savings Chairman, arranging to give him every possible assistance along such lines as will harmonize with his plans.

We are enclosing for your guidance and use a copy of the President's proclamation of May 29.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

President Wilson has issued the following:

This war is one of nations—not of armies—and all of our one hundred million people must be economically and industrially adjusted to war conditions if this nation is to play its full part in the conflict. The problem before us is not primarily a financial problem but rather a problem of increased production of war essentials and the saving of the materials and the labor necessary for the support and equipment of our army and navy. Thoughtless expenditure of money for non-essentials uses up the labor of men, the products of the farm, mines, and factories, and overburdens transportation, all of which must be used to the utmost and at their best for war purposes.

The great results which we seek can be obtained only by the participation of every member of the nation, young and old, in a national concerted thrift movement. I therefore urge that our people everywhere pledge themselves, as suggested by the Secretary of the Treasury, to the practice of thrift; to serve the Government to their utmost in increasing production in all fields necessary to the winning of the war; to conserve food and fuel and useful materials of every kind; to devote their labor only to the most necessary tasks; and to buy only those things which are essential to individual health and efficiency; and that the people, as evidence of their loyalty, invest all that they can save in Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps. The securities issued by the Treasury Department are so many of them within the reach of every one that the door of opportunity in this matter is wide open to all of us. To practice thrift in peace times is a virtue and brings great benefit to the individual at all times; with the desperate need of the civilized world today for materials and labor with which to end the war, the practice of individual thrift is a patriotic duty and a necessity.

I appeal to all who now own either Liberty Bonds or War Savings Stamps to continue to practice economy and thrift and to appeal to all who do not own Government securities to do likewise and purchase them to the extent of their means. The man who buys Government securities transfers the purchasing power of his money to the United States Government until after this war, and to that same degree does not buy in competition with the Government.

I earnestly appeal to every man, woman, and child to pledge themselves on or before the 28th of June to save constantly and to buy as regularly as possible the securities of the Government; and to do this as far as possible through membership in War Savings Societies. The 28th of June ends this special period of enlistment in the great volunteer army of production and saving here at home. May there be none unenlisted on that day. (Signed) WOODROW WILSON.

Indiana's Contribution.

"The contribution that Indiana has made toward the cause of Winning the War is a large one, and is one that you may all feel specially proud of. It is the writer's great pleasure to quote what is being done in such states as Indiana when he goes back to New England—not that they are not doing well there, but I regret to say they travel so little that it is a surprise to them to learn how much is being done and how splendid the spirit is in the western and middle western states."

*"Faithfully yours,
"UNITED STATES FOOD ADMINISTRATION,
"States Administration Division.
(Signed) "William Arthur Dupee."
To Dr. Harry E. Barnard,
Federal Food Administrator for Indiana."*

Food is sacred. To waste it is sinful.

The collapse of Russia was partly due to the lack of food supply for the Army and the people.

Governor Goodrich Says:—The Wheat Campaign
Is Vital to This Country and Her Allies

June 18th, 1918.

Warren T. McCray, Chairman,
Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation.

Dear Sir:

I wish to commend the state-wide campaign for more and better wheat, inaugurated by the Wheat Division of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, as a movement of the greatest importance as there is nothing more vital to this country and her allies than the supply of breadstuffs.

Indiana is harvesting one of the largest wheat crops in the history of the State, which is a direct result of the call for twenty-five per cent increase in the wheat acreage last fall. In addition to this, Indiana has been asked to maintain her acreage and at the same time increase her production.

No Indiana farmer can discharge his full obligation to the Nation, who does not exercise the greatest care in preparing for the 1919 wheat crop. As a farmer and grain dealer I realize the utmost importance of good seed, the proper use of fertilizers, and thorough seed bed preparation. The work of your committee is to be especially commended because it will show the Indiana farmer the way to make this increase which not only contributes toward winning the war, but contributes toward the permanent advancement of Indiana agriculture.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) JAMES P. GOODRICH,
Governor.

Shock Troops Form To Work on Farms

County Seat Dwellers Respond to Call of the Land for Harvest Labor.

Nearly three dozen county seats in the state responded to the call to enlist city dwellers for help during harvest and the movement has been taken up in dozens of smaller towns, according to advices reaching The State Food Committee from W. L. Brumfiel, farm help specialist from the department of agriculture. The work has been accomplished largely through the efforts of the Public Service Reserve and the Indiana State Council of Defense. It is expected and hoped that this plan will be taken up in every county so that the city men can be prepared to meet any emergency which may arise at any time this summer.

Some of the cities which have taken up the plan are Huntington, Crawfordsville, Connersville, Rushville, Evansville, Boonville, Muncie, Bluffton, Logansport, Richmond, Lafayette, Princeton, South Bend, Elkhart, Rensselaer, Washington and Wabash.

In these places, the county agent co-operating with the central commercial organization and the county director of the Public Service Reserve, has started the plan for enrolling men to devote a day or two a week or the evenings after office or working hours in the stores or factories.

In Boonville, the "Shock Troops" have been organized and one evening this week forty men went out and shocked the wheat on eighty acres which had been cut during the day. They will continue this work in Warrick County, the men being hauled to and from their homes by automobile owners. The same plan is being taken up rapidly in other counties.

The recent investigation of the labor situation in Randolph County reveals some striking conditions. One farmer had twenty-two acres of old corn standing in the field, which he refused to harvest and prepare the land for another crop. On June 12th the county council of defense ordered that the land be put to work. Through the Exempted Men's organization a large force was mobilized, the corn shocked, the ground prepared, and sowed to buckwheat. Thus twenty-two "slacker" acres were put to work.

On another farm the crops were very much neglected, livestock in poor condition, in fact, the hogs were about to die from starvation and want of water. A widow woman and two sons were supposed to be operating this place. Upon investigation, the neglect was directly traceable to a new automobile which had been run over thirteen hundred miles in the last five weeks; the difficulty being a lack of administration rather than a lack of labor.

The second farm down the road from this, was operated by a man and his daughter. At the time the investigating committee were there they were cultivating a seventy-acre field of corn. The man was driving a tractor hitched to a two-row cultivator, and the daughter handling a team and a double cultivator. None of the crops were neglected and no complaint was made by them concerning a labor shortage.

From the investigations in Randolph County it would seem that the labor situation is not as acute as the lack of intelligent farm management.

Committee on Construction

The following report of the Committee on Proposed Construction was adopted at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense June 19th:

Indiana State Council of Defense:

The Committee on Proposed Construction recommends:

1. That the attached letter and a copy of the council's resolution of March 13th be sent to the county councils.

2. That Wells County Council of Defense be advised to oppose the construction of the R. M.

Caley road at this time unless it is convinced that the spirit of the resolution of March 13th will not be thereby violated.

3. That no objection be made to the reconstruction of a building for the general store and postoffice in the village eight miles east of Rensselaer on the Monon.

4. That the completion of the street in Wayne-town leading to the elevator and railroad station be not opposed.

Respectfully,

(Signed) EVANS WOOLLEN.
JAMES L. KEACH.
E. M. WILSON.

"County Councils of Defense:

"Again we ask your attention to the supreme importance of preventing new construction. It is not so much that the money should be saved as it is that transportation and labor and materials are desperately needed in doing the things and making the things necessary for the war.

"Permit us to suggest that you be on the alert to discover and discourage projected undertakings that would violate the national policy as stated in the accompanying resolution of March 13, 1918.

"We have a special committee composed of George Ade, Charles Fox, James L. Keach, E. M. Wilson and Evans Woollen that will be glad to be helpful to you in this matter."

Food Administration

More than forty Indianapolis bakers, confectioners and restaurant keepers have been cited to appear before the federal food administrator during the past week for failure to make correct reports and for not conforming to the regulations as to the use of substitutes. Various excuses were offered and all were released on parole, on their promises to reform. Warnings were issued that further violations meant suspension of federal licenses, in all cases.

Licenses of Nickolas Prescan and N. K. Manolea, Indianapolis bakers, were revoked for their failure to make proper reports and not using the required substitutes on bread and rolls.

William Greisinger, a South Bend confectioner, was found to have made a false affidavit as to having purchased sugar on contract, and as a result A. E. Eby, St. Joseph County Food Administrator, was directed by Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana, to take charge of his business and not permit him to handle it until July 15th. The sugar secured through misrepresentation was seized.

Roast beef at noon Monday; stewed or boiled beef hash at noon Wednesday; beefsteak or hamburger steak at noon Thursday; stewed beef, boiled beef or beef hash at noon Saturday, with by-products such as ox tails, livers, tongues, sweet breads, hearts, kidneys, brains and tripe at any time, is Hoover's suggestion of a meat menu in order that beef consumption be limited to 1½ pounds per person per week. Hotels and public eating houses have been directed by the food administration in Indiana to fix some such arrangement and then refrain from advertising the service, in order not to induce an excess consumption on the days when beef is served.

To be wholly patriotic a Fourth of July celebration must not include iced tea or lemonade, or candy in which sugar is used in excess of the three pounds per person per month ration.

The sugar syruped sundae at soda fountains is prohibited in Indiana and county food administrators have been so notified. All special and fancy concoctions in which sugar syrups are used are also under the ban.

Sales of sugar have been limited to two pounds for city customers and five pounds for rural customers, with a maximum limit of 25 pounds for canning and preserving purposes. Purchase of sugar for the latter purposes must be on a sworn affidavit.

Manufacturers of non-essentials such as candy, chewing gum, etc., are no longer permitted to buy sugar in anticipation of their allotment for the three months following July 1st. No sugar sales are legal in Indiana except upon certificates and then proportioned as per the recently promulgated regulations.

No relaxation in the conservation rules that have enabled the United States to feed Europe out of a short harvest will be possible if a surplus is to be built up against a crop shortage next year or in 1920, says Herbert Hoover. The American people who have shown that they can save must conserve still further if the benefits already secured are to be permanent.

Liberty Guards Lights

Company C, of the First Provisional Battalion at Connersville, Indiana, raised the snug sum of $250.00 by leasing a local theatre building and presenting to the public the five-reel film drama, "The Re-making of a Nation." The film was obtained from the Committee on Publicity, Bureau of Films, No. 10 Jackson Place, Washington, D. C., and was furnished free of charge (except the shipping charges) to the local organization. If any of the companies of Liberty Guards desire to enhance their company funds in this way, communicate at once with the Bureau and obtain the same courtesy shown to the Connersville company.

Four captains of the Indiana Liberty Guards, many of the lieutenants and hundreds of the membership of the Guard, have been called to the colors since this organization was started. Captain Black, of Albion, was called to take charge of the small arms practice at Camp Perry, Ohio; Captain Wall, of Worthington, was called to Washington to take charge of some form of guard duty in that city; Captain Iglehart, of Newberry, was called to take charge of supervising contracts at the Jeffersonville, Indiana, quartermaster's depot; Captain Mangus, of Ladoga, was called to Mussel Shoals, Alabama, as an inspector of construction there. The guard keenly feels the loss of these efficient officers, but the membership is glad to know that they can be of service in these important posts.

The adjutant general of Indiana has arranged with a manufacturer for a supply of "Crossed Rifles" and the bronze letters "I. L. G.," which are worn as lapel insignias of the Liberty Guardsmen. With the postage included, they cost 25c for a set of one each, and can be ordered thru the Adjutant General's office, accompanying the order with remittance.

Elkhart Leader in Liberty War Gardens.

Mrs. Hortense Tapp Moore of Rockville, State chairman of the Food Production Committee, Woman's Section, Indiana Council of Defense, reports that Elkhart County is the banner county so far in Liberty Gardens. The county has fifty garden clubs, three thousand five hundred town gardens, one garden supervisor, and the agricultural agent has distributed fifteen hundred bulletins. Steps are being taken to overcome an anticipated shortage in labor by inducing men and boys to go out to the farms for the season, and getting women to take their places in stores and shops. The women of Elkhart County expect to try out a modified form of the Woman's Land Army, a movement that is having fine results in some of the eastern states.

One hundred seventy-five garden units are reported in Henry County, and Marshall County has six towns which have garden supervisors under whose direction vacant lots have been listed and distributed.

Greensburg, in Decatur County, has a city garden committee, the high school vocational department, superintendent of schools, the county agent and the home demonstration agent all co-operating in garden work.

In Putnam County, where there is already a shortage of labor, some farmers are using women laborers in light farm work, such as cultivating corn and driving corn planters.

Training Camp for Boys of U. S. Reserve

Patriotic Youth of Indiana to Receive Instructions for Productive Work.

Under the direction of the State Council of Defense and financed by the United States Department of Labor, an agricultural training camp for members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve will open at Purdue university Monday, June 24th, and continue for two weeks.

One hundred boys apportioned on a basis of at least one boy from each county in the state, will attend the first camp. These boys will be chosen by the local director of the Boys' Working Reserve by and with the advice of the chairman of the local county council of defense.

Candidates, who are notified of their acceptance, will present themselves to the office of Dr. Stanley Coulter, dean of the school of science, at the university, on Monday morning, June 24th, before the noon hour. Transportation to and from the camp must be paid by the candidate. All other expenses will be defrayed out of the appropriation provided by the United States Department of Labor.

Cash Deposit Required.

Each candidate will be required to deposit with the registrar of the camp, a sum of money equal to the actual railroad or interurban fare from his home to Lafayette, Indiana, plus $1.00. This money will be returned to the boy when his two weeks' course of training is completed, thus providing him with the cost of transportation to the farm on which he will be employed. He will be required to present a certificate signed by a physician or a competent physical director, also stating that he is physically sound.

Faculty and Supervisors.

Dr. Stanley Coulter will be in charge of the camp. Professors and instructors from the Purdue Agricultural Experiment Station will train the boys in the rudiments of farm work.

It is planned to have officers from the United States Army Vocational School at Purdue instruct the boys in school of the squad and school soldier, this military discipline being provided in order to aid in the development of the boys physically.

The Y. M. C. A. will provide an experienced boys' work secretary, who will safeguard them morally and provide for recreation.

A competent physician will be available at all times to administer to any boys who might become indisposed.

Housing and Food.

Through the generosity of the Greek Letter societies at Purdue the boys will live in five fraternity houses, twenty boys to each house, each group of twenty boys being in charge of a mature man of good character and proven ability. Inasmuch as these houses are provided with beds and bed clothes, the boys will not need to bring anything with them but wearing apparel.

Meals will be provided by a very capable woman who has been conducting one of the most popular boarding houses for Purdue students for years. The food will be wholesome and diet will be carefully selected in order that the boys may be well nourished for the duties for which they are training themselves.

Outfit Required.

Each boy will be expected to bring with him towels, sweater, pajamas, changes of underwear, socks, swimming tights, laundry bag, toilet articles and plenty of old clothes. It is recommended that each boy bring an extra suit of heavy woolen underwear.

No regular camp uniform is required. However, it is recommended that each boy provide himself, if possible, with a cheap pair of khaki colored breeches, which can be purchased for about $1.25; a pair of canvas leggings, which will cost about $1.25; two blue chambray shirts, which can be purchased for about 90 cents each, and a blue shop cap costing about 50 cents. However, this clothing is not a requirement for admission to the camp.

Athletic equipment, as well as a camera, and musical instruments, may well be brought. Any boys who can play instruments used in a band are urged to bring them.

Qualifications.

In order to qualify, candidates must be over 16 and under 21 years of age; five feet five inches or over in height, barefoot, and must weigh 120 pounds or over stripped. They must be of good character—preferably boys who have at least finished the 8th grade; they must pass a physical examination as prescribed below; they must not be engaged in agricultural work at this time, inasmuch as it would be a mistake in any way to disturb any labor that is now profitably employed on farms; they must have consent in writing from their parents, permitting them to engage in food production or conservation for a period of at least four weeks following the completion of their course at Purdue.

County and city directors of the Reserve are urged to send to Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director, 83 State House, Indianapolis, the names of at least three local boys chosen and qualified for these camps in order that the personnel of succeeding camps may be selected early.

Indiana Honored.

In recognition of the activity of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve in this State, which from all reports has lead other States and has been referred to by Wm. E. Hall, National Director, as a model organization, Indiana is the first State in the Union to be honored with a federal appropriation for the conduct of an agricultural training camp. Pennsylvania, Maine and Massachusetts are conducting similar camps financed by the state funds. It was planned to secure a state appropriation in the event a special session of the Legislature was held in Indiana. As soon as Mr. Hall learned that this special session did not materialize, he promptly offered the financial assistance of the U. S. Department of Labor, stating that the influence of the establishment and conduct of a successful training camp in Indiana might be felt nationally.

Woman's Section

Wayne County's Food Production Committee reports a garden acreage double that of last year. This county has also an increased acreage of sorghum. In one township, a sorghum mill has been established. In another township, a Boys' and Girls' Club is making an especial effort to raise pigs and poultry. Several talks have been scheduled on the necessity of growing more and better vegetables, allowing absolutely no waste in what is produced, trying to induce everyone to produce better laying strains of poultry, thereby increasing egg production during the winter months. An effort is also being made to establish a parcel post system between country and city people. Articles on "Why Sorghum Should be Grown" and "Save Eggs and Help Your Neighbor Save," were published in the local papers.

The Home Economics Committee of Wayne County reports that two meetings have been held to organize a "Better Homes Association" to further the work of the Woman County Agent.

During the last week in May and the first week of June two thousand women in Cass County were reached by the Fourteen-Minute Women, who addressed these audiences on Food Conservation, Child Welfare, Thrift Stamps, Red Cross and general patriotic subjects. On Sunday, June 9th, an address was given by a Fourteen-Minute Woman in every church and Sunday school in Cass County.

In Wayne County there were thirty-four calls in May for Fourteen-Minute Women as speakers at township patriotic meetings. Two speakers went to each meeting, sometimes accompanied by a Four-Minute Man. The talks were on Child Welfare, Red Cross, Food Clubs, etc.

Miami County reports eighteen speeches in May by Fourteen-Minute Women on Red Cross, War Chest, Food and Child Welfare at lodge, W. C. T. U., missionary, parent-teacher, and other meetings.

Bulletin No. 71.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 12, 1918.

To the County Chairman of the Registration Committee:

Word has come to us that in a few instances people who have no right to the information on the registration cards have asked to use these cards.

We feel that we cannot emphasize too strongly the fact that our registration cards are not to be used by any one but our Registration Committee. You, as chairman of this Registration Committee, are responsible for these cards, and no one but you and those whom you appoint shall have access to them. I would suggest that you be rather careful not to give information to anyone unless you know he has a right to it.

Our State Registration Committee will in the near future work out a plan for making use of the patriotic service which has been offered.

Assuring you of my appreciation of the good work which you and your assistants have done, I remain,

Very truly yours,

ANNA STUDEBAKER CARLISLE,
Chairman Woman's Section
State Council of Defense.

Bulletin No. 72.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 15, 1918.

To the Woman Member of the County Council of Defense:

We find that sending the bulletins of the various committees to the woman member of the county council to be distributed has not been a success, as we had hoped. In some counties the woman member has delayed too long in getting the bulletins to the chairmen, and in some cases the bulletins have not been distributed at all, while in the balance of the counties the woman member has been most prompt. Sending the bulletins to one person to be distributed saves both postage and time in this office.

In future we will send four copies of bulletin direct to the chairman of the committee interested, and hold her responsible for the distribution of the bulletin as follows:

One copy to be retained for committee files.

One copy to the woman member.

One copy to the Chairman of Publicity.

One copy to the Chairman of the Fourteen-Minute Women.

Asking your co-operation in this matter until we see if it will bring desired results, I am

Very truly yours,

ANNE STUDEBAKER CARLISLE,
Chairman Woman's Section
State Council of Defense.

Important Recommendation.

"Here is a very important recommendation—that you coordinate within the State Defense Council, state-wise, county-wise and community-wise, all the various war activities—Fuel Administration, Food Administration, Red Cross, War Savings, Liberty Loan, Labor Bureau, Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus, Young Men's Hebrew Association, Smileage Book, etc.—combine all various war activities. It does not mean they surrender their identity but that there shall be that essential of all organizations if Democracy is to be made efficient—efficient team work that there shall not be waste or duplication. It does seem there are certain organizations so jealous of their prerogatives they consider the winning of the war but a by-product. We cannot have our little petty selfishness and ambitions. This is a time that tries men's souls and cannot tolerate that spirit. There must be co-ordination of all activities—co-ordination with the State Defense Council of permanent local institutions."—George B. Chandler, representing the Council: National Defense.

Report of Committee Defining Policy

their origin were enemies in a war which must be fought to a decisive victory. Your committee is nevertheless convinced from its investigations that the great mass of the German-Americans of Indiana have loyally accepted the situation, and are giving their hearty support to the Government of the United States in the prosecution of the war.

Change of view did not, however, come in a day. It was necessary to convince those who prior to April 6, 1917, had upheld the cause of Germany, not only that the United States could not longer refrain from becoming an active participant in the war without at the same time losing its self-respect and its standing in the family of nations, but also that the success of Germany would imperil the future of the United States. Many facts have come to light since the United States declared war which have powerfully affected the views held by former sympathizers with Germany. Even before that declaration the telegraphic directions addressed by the German foreign office to certain of its foreign representatives, commanding attempts to instigate war by Mexico and Japan against the United States, produced a strong revulsion of sentiment on the part of many who previously sustained the German cause. It will be remembered that so unbelievable did it appear that the German government should thus attempt to stir up war among friendly peoples that the extreme partisans of Germany bitterly denounced the United States Government for giving out what they pronounced to be clumsy forgeries. The mouths of these men were, however, soon closed by the admissions of the German foreign office itself.

Of the disclosures of consequence since the United States entered the war, one of the most important is the confidential memorandum of Prince Lichnowsky, German ambassador to Great Britain when the war began, which places the responsibility for the outbreak directly upon Germany. The reply of the former German foreign minister, Herr Von Jagow, is a virtual acknowledgment of Prince Lichnowsky's statements, and these are again confirmed by the account given by former United States Ambassador Morgenthau, himself a German by birth, of his conferences with Baron von Wangenheim, the German ambassador at Constantinople. In the light of all this cumulative evidence, even those who at the outset in good faith looked on the war as imposed on Germany against its will now accept as something more than mere rhetoric the statement of Maximilian Harden, the German journalist, written in October, 1914, only three months after the war began:

"Let us renounce those miserable efforts to excuse the actions of Germany in declaring war. It is not against our will that we have thrown ourselves into this gigantic adventure. The war has not been imposed upon us by others and by surprise. We have willed the war. It was our duty to will it. We decline to appear before the tribunal of united Europe. We reject its jurisdiction. One principle alone counts and no other—one principle which contains and sums up all the others—MIGHT."

Against the background of all that is now known of Germany's course in beginning and carrying on the war, the fact stands out distinctly that the Germany which is fighting the present war is not the Germany which Americans of Teutonic descent hold in fond reverence. Otto Kahn, of New York, a man of German birth and of service in the German army, has put the case clearly. He says:

"The Germany of today is not the Germany of old. It is not the Germany which men now of middle age and over knew in their youth. It is not the Germany of the first Emperor William, a modest and God-fearing gentleman. It is not the Germany, even, of Bismarck, man of blood and iron though he was, who often warned the nation in his old age against the very spirit which, alas! came to have sway over it, and against the very war which that spirit unchained. The Germany which brought the war upon the world and at whose deeds and doctrines the nations of the earth stand aghast started into definite being less than thirty years ago. I speak as one who has seen the spirit of the Prussian governing class at work from close by, having at its disposal and using to the full practically every agency for moulding the public mind.

I have watched it proceed with relentless persistency and profound cunning to instill into the nation the demoniacal obsession of power-worship and world dominion, to modify and pervert the mentality—indeed the very fibre and moral substance—of the German people, a people which, until misled, corrupted and systematically poisoned by the Prussian ruling caste, was, and deserved to be, an honored member of the family of nations.

Less than thirty years ago a 'new course' was flamboyantly proclaimed by those in authority and the term 'new course' became the order of the day. That new course brought to Germany achievements in a material sense, and stimulated the qualities of efficiency, industry and enterprise to a degree and in a measure at which the whole world stood in admiration and to which there is no parallel in history. Germany was conquering the world by peaceful penetration, by its superior ability in organization, by its hard work and sustained effort, by its thoroughness and far-sighted planning, and no one stood in its way. It had free access to all the seas and all the lands of the world. It was rapidly gaining upon the British, even in their own colonies. The leading commercial houses throughout the world came more and more to be German. The country prospered outwardly and grew as none other. In its municipal administration and in various other respects it set models for the world to follow.

But for all these great and glittering attainments and benefits Prussianism asked its price, a fearful price—the soul of the German people. And the price was paid.

What induced Germany in a fateful moment to stake on the dreadful card or war everything it had already gained and everything which was bound to come to it by the pursuit of the same methods it had followed with such amazing success for the past thirty years? The answer is all too plain. With the 'new course' and from it and after it there came a new and false god, new prophets, a new philosophy, new ethics, a new mode of life and thought. There came an unholy alliance between the 'junkers' and capitalists and teachers of the nation's youth. There came a contempt for all the virtues of peace and for all the old-fashioned teachings of tolerance, forbearance and respect for the weak. There came a philosophy that everything is permitted to the strong and that no limits are set to the rights of those powerful enough to dictate their will. There came greed and lust and luxury and immorality and overweening arrogance and irreligion. There came a belief that nothing counted in the world but success. The old ideals and traditions were thrown in the scrap-heap, the noble sentiments of the fathers were smiled at with sneering indulgence and, what is worse, there came a belief that other nations thought and felt and meant to act as the German nation did. The evil which had crept into their own soul made them see nothing but evil in others. The poison which the Prussianized ruling caste had instilled into their hearts was eating away what was highest and noblest in them and left them, for the time being, the helpless victims of a veritable mania of materialism and power worship. History affords no parallel to the spiritual poisoning of a whole people in the incredibly short space of twenty-five years. Nor would I believe that such a dreadful phenomenon could take place were it not for the evidence of my own eyes and my own ears."

Recognition of the revolution in German spirit and ideals which less than half a century has brought forth has contributed greatly to the uprooting of pro-German sympathy among American citizens of German descent.

Your committee was instructed to report a policy for combatting pro-Germanism. The Council of National Defense has recently spoken on the subject by their bulletin No. 99, headed "Loyalty and Sedition," in which the Council says:

"The Council of National Defense is looking to the state and local councils of defense to arouse and sustain the loyalty and support of all citizens in the prosecution of this war. Upon this the ultimate victory depends.

In accomplishing this task, constructive methods must be utilized—the suppression of disloyalty must be achieved primarily through arousing loyalty. Coercive methods of forcing a show of patriotism defeat their own ends.

The state councils of defense have already undertaken extensive work to arouse loyalty. Through their speakers and the press they are carrying the message of the war throughout the State and through their local and community councils they are enlisting all citizens in the war work of the nation. But all citizens are not reached by a general appeal. Many have not yet had this war message brought home to them and many still stand apart from the fellowship of war workers. We ask the state councils to expand this work so as to reach the unresponsive and the unsympathetic.

The suppression of sedition, on the other hand, rests entirely with the Department of Justice. It is a technical and delicate task which outside agencies are likely to confuse and obstruct.

The Council of National Defense therefore calls on you

1. To conduct a vigorous and persistent campaign through publicity, through local organization and through personal contact to arouse the loyalty of each citizen; and to draw him into active participation in the war work of America, paying special attention to the apathetic and apparently disloyal persons.

2. To undertake no work for the detection or repression of sedition except such as is expressly requested or authorized by the local representatives of the United States Department of Justice and done on its behalf."

A carefully prepared program accompanies the bulletin in which the Council advises use of the following means and agencies to arouse loyalty:

(1) PUBLICITY. The Council advises the focusing of "the existing publicity machinery of the State Council of Defense upon those people who through misunderstanding, apathy or kinship with our enemies are subject to disloyal tendencies, or who foster unpatriotic discontent." The platform, the pulpit, the press, and other means of publicity are mentioned specifically.

(2) WAR WORK. It is advised that every member of each community be drawn into some form of war work.

(3) PERSONAL CONTACT AND PERSUASION. It is advised that all people of doubtful loyalty or known apathy be reached by personal contact through the supervised work of discreet and tactful persons.

(4) EXISTING AGENCIES. Mobilization of all available existing agencies, especially societies of the foreign born, is urged.

The general principles declared by the National Council are those which your committee understands have guided this Council and the county councils of the State in the loyalty work done throughout Indiana. That this work has been effective is clear from the confidential reports made to your committee from all parts of the State. We cite instances:

The report from one county having approximately 600 of German and Austrian birth says: "Before the United States declared war the larger part of this class I think were pro-German, or rather anti-English, but since the United States has declared war I think 98 per cent anyway are thoroughly in accord with the government."

A report from another county having approximately 3,500 persons of German and Austrian birth or parentage states that 3 per cent of this number are anti-loyal, and that "the 3 per cent, while anti-loyal, are keeping very still, do not commit themselves. There has been a marked tendency to change to loyal in the past six months."

Another county having about 150 persons of German and Austrian birth reports that "I would estimate at least 90 per cent of them as undoubtedly loyal, with the balance as either neutral or of uncertain loyalty. There are none known to me as anti-loyal. Before our declaration of war I am of the opinion most of them were pro-German in their sympathy, but they have quietly changed from that time to this to about the percentage given now."

Another county having approximately 8,000 persons of German and Austrian birth or parentage states that one per cent are anti-loyal, and that the changes in six months have been from passive loyalty to active loyalty.

The reports from practically all counties indicate important changes from indifference or disloyalty to loyalty during the past six months.

Your committee is in full accord with the policy outlined by the National Council in the bulletin referred to, and recommends the official adoption of such policy by this Council.

Your committee further recommends that the attention of the various county councils be called to the policy adopted, with the request that such councils actively undertake to carry out the program laid down by the National Council.

Respectfully submitted,

ARTI W. WADY,
WILL G. IRWIN,
H. R. KURRIE.

Building of Hospitals May Be War Necessity

Dr. Emerson Says Increase of Tuberculosis and Nervous Diseases Is to Be Expected.

Following a discussion of the recommendations of the committee named to define a policy relative to pro-Germanism and pacifism, which appears in full elsewhere in this Bulletin, the Indiana State Council of Defense, at its meeting June 19th, authorized Chairman Foley to urge county councils of defense to give special consideration to the element of foreign born among their population in arranging Fourth of July celebrations. In connection with a suggestion from "one or two counties" that the council permit of an observance of Independence Day in some manner other than an entire day's celebration in order that the time be not lost to the harvest field, it was agreed that where such circumstances obtained, to permit local citizens and conditions adjust themselves. The council will make no modification of its Fourth of July recommendations already in the hands of county councils.

The inability of James Artman, a Marion County farmer, and his neighbors to secure service from public scales because they were buying coal direct and not through members of a retailers' association was referred to the fuel administrator of Marion County.

At the request of Dr. Chas. P. Emerson, head of the medical section of the council, the council delayed a definite or binding statement of its attitude toward the construction of county tuberculosis hospitals or provisions for the caring for the tubercular or nervously diseased civilians, whose number, Dr. Emerson said, would likely increase with the progress of the war. Dr. Emerson said the profession felt that it might be highly desirable that such hospital facilities be provided by counties where there is a disposition to anticipate such conditions. Dr. Emerson said he felt that the council might err in taking a radical opposition to such construction as a war-time policy, and it was agreed that the state charity and sociologic authorities should be called into conference before further action is taken.

A resolution urging greater precautions against fires in elevators along railroads, proposed by State Fire Marshal H. H. Friedley and referred to A. W. Brady of the Committee on Transportation, was reported back with slight modification by Mr. Brady, and on his motion adopted by the council. The resolution follows:

Whereas, The great struggle in which our country is engaged makes it necessary that we carefully conserve our resources, especially doing all within our power to eliminate the danger from fire in food warehouses; and,

Whereas, Many elevators and other warehouses located along railroad rights of way are covered with combustible roofings; and,

Whereas, Due to such coverings and the fact that railroads find it necessary in many localities to use a low grade of coal in locomotives, elevators and other warehouses on the rights of way are in great danger from fire; therefore, be it

Resolved by the State Council of Defense of Indiana, That it recommend that from and after this date there be embodied in every lease granted by a railroad company for buildings located along its right of way in the State of Indiana a provision setting forth that the lease is granted on condition that such building be covered with a non-combustible roof; and be it further

Resolved, That in as much as elevators are peculiarly susceptible to the lightning hazard, and as such hazard may be eliminated by completely covering the building with an approved grade of iron, we believe the iron covering for elevators is preferable; and be it

Resolved further, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Director General of Railroads with the request that he give the same proper consideration.

C. W. DeMiller, of the United States Employment Service, discussed the proposed extension of his agency and its plans for the dilution and allocation of labor, especially skilled workers, to meet the war emergency. The council approved the suggestion that county councils be asked to designate a member who with the woman member of the council would co-operate with the service in working out the government's labor plans. Mr. DeMiller said every county in the State will be included in the organization, which will prevent, he said, the proselyting of labor, and assist farmers, manufacturers and others honestly and deservedly seeking help.

In this connection, on motion of J. L. Keach, the council adopted the following resolution:

June 17, 1918.

Whereas, The purpose of the Federal Employment Service is to unify and centralize all demands for labor; and,

Whereas, The Federal Employment Service is prepared to furnish farm helpers, and supply necessary labor to manufacturers of essential commodities, and when justified supply workers for manufacture of non-essentials; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the State Council of Defense ask the co-operation of farmers and manufacturers, together with all unemployed labor, with the Federal Employment Service, to the end that the needs of all may be best served, and labor distributed to the best advantage of the federal government.

H. H. Buskirk explained to the council how the United States Public Service Reserve works with the employment service, without conflict or duplication, in that it registers skilled men or men wanted for special purposes by the government to further the war program, who are enlisted in the established branches of governmental activity or referred to the employment service for assignment as wanted. Mr. Buskirk also discussed the Department of Labor's plan for the regulation of non-essential industries in the employment of skilled men needed for war work, and for the proposed standardization of wages which will serve to assist in the allocation of skilled workers.

A communication relative to the employment of loyal school teachers in Indianapolis was referred by Chairman Foley to the Marion County Council of Defense.

A request from the war mothers for funds was referred by the chairman to the woman's section.

Walker Winslow, Secretary of the Highway Transport Committee, read the following report of his activities:

Mr. Isaac D. Straus, Chairman Highways Transport Committee, State Council of Defense, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—A summary of the report given on another page, in detail, of the meeting of the States Highways Transport Committees, which was held in Washington, June 4th and 5th, with comments as follows:

The very seriously congested condition of the railroads and other carriers has very seriously embarrassed the administration in the prosecution of this war program and the alternative to this mode of transportation in an effort to find a relief has been designated, by the Council of National Defense, as highways transport. The committee which embraces this name is endeavoring to develop motor truck transportation in the form of return loads bureaus, which is designed to make the trucks now in operation 100 per cent efficient, and to encourage the further use and utilization of our great highways systems in connection with the motor truck to engage in this class of traffic exclusively.

The Eastern States have taken the lead in this respect and are securing some remarkable results in this direction. Representatives from these districts have stated that it has resulted in increased production, decreased carrying congestion and added very materially in the resumption of normal transportation conditions.

The first apparent objection and difficulty found in the inauguration of this system was the cost per mile. This was, however, found to be only apparent when the fact was taken into consideration that the commodity was taken from the door of the producer and delivered to the door of the consumer, eliminating at least three transfers and handlings by various agencies or individuals.

The Council of National Defense has passed a resolution approving the widest possible use of the motor truck as a transportation agency, and requests the state councils of defense and other state authorities to take all necessary steps to facilitate such means of transportation, removing any regulations that tend to restrict and discourage such use. This program is further endorsed by the United States Food Administration, giving assurance that a greatly increased food production will result; by the labor administration, believing that many men will be left on farms which would otherwise necessitate frequent visits to the commercial centers in delivering and returning with supplies; by the truck operators, as enjoying a profitable and patriotic business; by the railroad administration, because of the tremendous relief it will give in short haul traffic; by the War Department, because of the increased facilities for delivering all munitions and supplies for war use, and by the French commission representing allied interests, which states that the establishment of highways transport has made possible the defense against great odds on the French front. Even the shipping board is taking advantage of the highways and motor trucks in moving their entire offices and equipment from New York to Philadelphia. Without exception each representative of the various departments at Washington endorsed and encouraged without restriction the essentiality of the efforts being expended by this committee.

Succeeding the evidence of attitude and policy of the government toward highways transport, a general discussion among representatives present was entered into for the purpose of exchange of ideas and developments, which would besiege the inauguration of such a program. It was the general opinion in many instances that the highways in their present state of repair would preclude the possibility of any extensive motor trucking on a commercial basis. And discussion was held at length concerning the effect that the road conditions as are now existent would have on the success of such a venture. It was the universal opinion that every effort should be expended to not only maintain roads which were now in serviceable condition, but to improve other main market highways which were essential to the transportation of various commodities. There was great insistence that there would be little encouragement for the prospective rural motor express operator in engaging in such a business without a foundation for his business to start on, and in this view a resolution was passed by these representatives calling upon the Council of National Defense to promulgate a definite policy toward highway improvement. This resolution was also endorsed by the Highways Transport Committee of the National Council of Defense and assurance given that immediate action would be taken by the National Council itself.

In addition, some suggestions were made as regards necessary publicity, and in support of this feature I cannot speak too highly. I feel that at regular intervals certain stories should be given to the press for publication, at no cost to them, and if a campaign of this kind is carried on for some length of time we can come more nearly impressing upon the public such advantage, and more particularly upon the merchants and shippers of small commodities, the possibility of motor truck transportation. In addition to this the Highways Transport Committee of Washington has prepared a moving picture film which is valuable, and this, with such additional present work and bulletins from this office, I believe the desired result may be accomplished to an extent that at least our transportation facilities may be embarrassed to a minimum.

Respectfully submitted,

WALKER WINSLOW.

Plans Announced for Handling Wool Supply

War Industries Board and Representatives of American Red Cross to Co-operate.

Following the recent announcement by the War Industries Board that the Government had taken over the entire wool clip of the country for the ensuing year, plans were announced for the handling of all available wool in order that the immediate military needs of the Government be satisfied.

Stringent methods for the conservation of raw wool for military purposes had become so necessary that a conference was called between representatives of the Wool Commodities Section of the War Industries Board and the American Red Cross. At the close of the conference the following joint statement was authorized:

"It is obvious that the first allotment of this wool must go to the military requirements of the Government, and that any surplus remaining will first be used for filling the requirements of the American Red Cross, as next in importance to the prosecution of the war.

"In view of the uncertainty in ocean shipping, it cannot be definitely known at this time as to what amount of wool, if any, will be available for Red Cross purposes, after the original military needs of the government are satisfied. It is believed, however, that unless unforeseen conditions arise, a moderate quantity of wool will be available for the Red Cross.

"Furthermore, in view of the probable scarcity of wool, it is earnestly desired that the use of wool yarns for non-essential purposes be discouraged in every possible manner.

"The War Industries Board will hold the Department of Supplies at National headquarters of the Red Cross strictly responsible for the release of any wool required by manufacturers for Red Cross purposes. The Red Cross is required to adopt a standard that will go farthest in supplying a good quality of worsted yarn suitable for war purposes. All contracts for this yarn must be made by the Department of Supplies at National headquarters for which the necessary wool will be released, on order from the Department of Supplies, by the War Industries Board as fast as it is obtainable in excess of the necessary requirements of the Quartermaster's Department.

"The Red Cross will place these orders for yarn to be delivered to the Red Cross divisions as fast as the Bureau of Development at National headquarters advises the number of articles the chapters at each division will be required to make."

The new plan will do away with the practice of Red Cross chapters buying yarn independently in the open market. The purpose of the ruling is to conserve yarn and stabilize its price. The custom of independent buying has resulted in chapters bidding against each other and thereby raising the price of yarn in some instances to exorbitant figures.

Chapters can procure their yarn only upon specific requisition through their divisional headquarters. To preclude the keeping of yarn at home by individuals, all wool must be accounted for in finished garments after each issue. This move will take all yarn in the army and navy colors from the public market so that none can be purchased and made up by individuals into gifts. This will stop the overlapping of efforts so that a soldier or sailor receiving garments from the Red Cross will not also receive from one to a dozen duplicate garments as personal gifts.

The Duties We Face.

By President Wilson.

There are two duties with which we are face to face. The first duty is to win the war. And the second duty, that goes hand-in-hand with it, is to win it greatly and worthily, showing the real quality of our power not only, but the real quality of our purpose and of ourselves.

Of course, the first duty, the duty that we must keep in the foreground of our thought until it is accomplished, is to win the war. I have heard gentlemen recently say that we must get five million men ready. Why limit it to five million?

I have asked the Congress of the United States to name no limit because the Congress intends, I am sure, as we all intend, that every ship that can carry men or supplies shall go laden upon every voyage with every man and every supply she can carry.

Farmers Are Urged To Examine Fields

Frosts May Not Have Killed Vegetation, Says Open Letter of Warren T. McCray.

A killing frost occurred in Indiana June 23rd, damaging much of the vegetation. The damage is especially severe in the Wabash and Kankakee valleys. Investigations have revealed that the heart of the corn plant has not been killed and that the greater per cent of the corn will revive. The following letter, written by Warren T. McCray, chairman of the State Food Committee, has been addressed to the farmers in the State, urging that the frosted corn be given an opportunity to recover:

Indianapolis, Ind., June 25th, 1918.

To the Indiana Farmers:

The corn crop of the northern half of Indiana has received a serious setback from the recent frosts. Although considerable damage appears to have been done to corn and other crops, it is believed that much of the damaged vegetation will recover. In only a few sections has the damage been serious enough to warrant the conclusion that the corn has been killed. The weather conditions since the frost have been favorable to its rejuvenation.

After it has been definitely determined that the corn will not revive steps should be taken to plant other crops, as every acre in the State must be utilized for the growing of animal or human food. The use of "short crops" such as buckwheat, millet, or early maturing varieties of soy beans may be used. Ample time remains for the planting of corn to fill the silos. The State Food Committee strongly recommends that the farmers of Indiana give the corn an opportunity to overcome the frost before any other action is taken.

Very truly yours,

INDIANA COMMITTEE ON FOOD PRODUCTION AND CONSERVATION.

Chairman.

Hall Sets Forth His Conception of Reserve

Federal Director Makes Clear Its Relation with the United States Employment Service.

Addressing a recent conference of state directors of the United States Public Service Reserve, William E. Hall, of the department of labor, who is the federal director, said, in part:

"The employment offices are charged with the duty of distributing labor. The public service reserve, which is an integral part of the United States Employment Service, is charged with the duty of recruiting labor to be distributed by the employment offices. The functions of the reserve are, roughly, as follow:

1. To furnish directly to the Army, Navy, and other governmental departments, men of specified training.
2. To recruit generally skilled and unskilled labor for war industries. In the districts where there are no employment offices, to both recruit and distribute labor under direction of the employment service.
3. To register men in specified trades in which we know that there will be a demand in order that they may be readily furnished when needed by the industries engaged in manufacturing war materials.
4. To assist in transferring men who are working in non-essential occupations to those industries which are essential.
5. Through its county directors and enrollment agents, to prevent ruinous recruiting among the war industries by reporting to the federal director of the State any wrongful methods employed in that respect, such as activities of private labor 'scouts.'
6. Through its agents, to report on request the condition of the supply of labor in any given community and to furnish information as to wages, hours and housing conditions.
7. Through its agents, to act as the promoter in organizing community associations of employers, employment managers, and representatives of wage-earners, to bring about a reduction of turnover of labor and the cessation of indiscriminate labor recruiting."

Mr. Hall said that he was opposed to any future general registration for a particular industry far in advance of the time when the men would be actually needed for that industry.

"Although it may be explained to a worker at the time of his enrollment that he is enrolling in a reserve, and may never be needed," Mr. Hall continued, "yet it creates a certain amount of unrest in spite of such warning, and the uncertainty of whether or not he is to be called leads to a loss of efficiency in his work.

"In the case of enrollment in particular trades without any specified industry in mind, however, such enrollment serves a useful purpose by enabling the employment service to reach men of particular training when needed without interfering with the worker's present status. For instance, suppose we knew that war industries would continuously call for welders. There would be a tremendous advantage of having a record of practically all the welders in the country who were engaged on less essential work."

If the American farmer doesn't furnish the food to win the war, the German farmer will.

Patriotism in Indiana

Allen County.—Steps were taken immediately following the frosts of the first of the week to prevent the loss of the thousands of acres of liberty gardens. H. V. Knight, Ft. Wayne garden supervisor, called a meeting of those interested. A careful inspection was agreed upon before replanting should be undertaken. Where necessary the gardener will advise on what vegetables should be planted to replace those killed, in order that a crop may be realized before frost in the fall. Deputy Food Administrator G. Crouse issued a warning to all purchasers of sugar from out-of-town sources. Information of every pound of sugar reaching the city is brought to headquarters and all consignments of this nature will be seized. If repeated violations are found a severe punishment in the form of a prison sentence may be imposed. So hearty was the response of Allen County mothers that practically every baby in the county was registered in answer to the call of the government, during baby week. The few that by chance might have been missed will be the cause of additional effort on the part of those in charge of the work to attain as close as possible a 100 per cent record for the county.

Bartholomew County.—Under the direction of Miss Daisy Linson, appointed by the county council of defense, all material in Bartholomew County relating to the history of the world war will be preserved. Full directions for the work have been received by Judge Marshall Hacker, chairman of the defense council. The material will be gathered by Miss Linson and sent to the state library. Bartholomew County war mothers will see that their sons are remembered next Christmas. At a meeting of the war mothers at the chamber of commerce, plans were begun to buy and make Christmas gifts for every one of the sons of the members of the organization. The war mothers also planned at a recent meeting to see that their connection with the war history of the county is accurately kept. A committee of five was appointed, to be known as the historical committee, and this committee will act in unison with Miss Daisy Linson, who was recently appointed war historian for the county. The intention is to keep a record of all Bartholomew County men in the service, their transfers, their records in France, etc.

Cass County.—Marcus W. Collet, chairman of the Cass County Council of Defense, has received an appointment as governor of the national soldiers' home at Hampton, Va., and will take up his new duties as soon after July 1st as possible. The campaign for the registration of the babies of the county six years old and under has been extended and will continue to the end of the month, giving all the mothers plenty of time to have their babies registered. At the headquarters of the visiting nurse, Miss Hildegarde Crauel, in the Masonic temple, the following interesting record for the registration of babies has been made: For the first week there were registered 27 boys and 32 girls, a total for the week of 59. For the second week there were registered 91 boys and 83 girls, a total for the week of 174, and grand total since June 8 of 233. This record is for the nurse's headquarters only.

Clark County.—The Clark County Council of Defense has arranged that the following circular shall be placed in every home in the county: "How can I fight here at home? By conservation of clothing, food and fuel. Men, have that last summer's suit cleaned and pressed. Those partially worn shoes re-soled and heeled. That last year's hat cleaned and re-blocked. Wives and daughters, re-trim those cast-aside hats. Make over those last year's dresses. Re-foot those worn shoes. Place all winter garments in proper storage so that moths will not destroy them. Take care of every article of clothing so that you will not have to buy next winter. Everybody, lay in fuel for next winter; conserve in food and clothing; eat less sugar, flour and meat; use less fuel oil; cut out luxuries. With the money thus saved give to the Red Cross and Y. M. C. A., and buy Thrift Stamps and Liberty Bonds."

Deatur County.—Beefless harvest dinners and the use of chicken, mutton and spring lamb as substitute meats on dinner menus for men with wheat thrashing outfits will be the general rule in Deatur County, if the action of the Home Economics Club of Washington Township is generally adopted. Women of the organization, who have pledged themselves to abide by the wishes of the national food administration relative to food production and conservation, have adopted a resolution not to serve beef at thrashing dinners this season. The county council of defense has sent out the following notice: "There are some war funds solicited in various parts of the country through the chain-letter plan that have merit, but it is not advisable to encourage contributions to such funds. The motives that prompt enthusiasts to start the chain letters are not questioned, but it is difficult to credit our community in its liberality of giving, in the degree to which we are justly entitled, and besides this the mail service and transportation are being more or less unnecessarily burdened by such projects in these days when the government needs all the facilities." J. R. Crawley, director of the boys' working reserve, has an exceptional record for his organization, a recent canvass showing only 14 out of the 440 members enrolled not regularly employed in productive work.

Dekalb County.—The county and township councils of defense are aiding in the harvest labor situation by organizing volunteer workers to help on the farms of Dekalb County. Men from all walks of life are being enlisted, and a splendid spirit of co-operation is manifested.

Delaware County.—Every one of the forty-eight thrashing machines in Delaware County must be inspected and licensed before the thrashing season opens, according to an order from the U. S. agricultural department. The inspection committee for this county is composed of the following: D. T. Haines, federal food administrator for this county; J. F. Treasurer, county agent, and E. E. Elliott, grain expert. A uniform thrashing rate has been set, as follows: Wheat, 8 cents per bushel; oats, 4½ cents; barley, 6 cents, and rye, 10 cents.

Dubois County.—The County Council of Defense has decided that the county celebration of the Fourth of July should be held in Jasper, and the crowning event of the day will be the unfurling of the new county flag recently purchased by the board of county commissioners. The county council of defense is giving notice to the farmers that if they cannot harvest crops of clover and timothy growing along nearly all the highways in the county the defense body will make an effort to harvest them. When sold the proceeds will be given to the Red Cross.

Fayette County.—Dr. H. E. Barnard, federal food administrator for Indiana, has recently appointed W. D. Lewis to look after the part of the churches in whatever food measures are required, and O. M. Hempleman has also been appointed to serve in the same capacity for lodges. The county food administration, through Administrator Leiter, called all the meat dealers in Connersville together and informed them that after June 22d no beef whatever shall be sold, until further notice. Veal, mutton, pork, etc., are permitted. Hotels and boarding houses, if they get supplies of beef elsewhere, may be permitted to serve steaks and roasts once a week, not oftener, it is understood, but this must be done without waste. The intent is to stop, for the time, the slaughtering of beef. The Connersville chapter of the Red Cross has undertaken to see that all men who go from the Connersville factories into Fayette County harvest fields to make up for the shortage confronting farmers in Fayette County, shall ride to and from their work free and on time. Merle Broadbent is in charge of the transportation work.

Fulton County.—On the request of W. H. Deniston, chairman of the county council of defense, arrangements have been made respecting war aid in the conservation of food through the successful harvesting of the present crops of Fulton County. Edward E. Murphy, telephone No. 403, Rochester, Indiana, is chairman of the branch of the council of defense covering labor. To facilitate the furnishing of labor to the farmers of Fulton County in need thereof, during the period from June 25, 1918, to July 10, 1918, inclusive, the respective township chairmen of the county council of defense shall have the right to call phone 403, Mr. Murphy's law office, free of charge in aid of supplying farm help during the period above given. Mr. Murphy, or Bernice Ross, his office aid, shall also have free service with said respective chairman in aid of supplying farm help needed. This arrangement has been agreed to by the following exchange serving Fulton County: Rochester, Akron, Fulton, Kewanna, Macy, Leiters Ford, Talma and Whippoorwill. Township chairmen are as follows: Wayne, Harold Hendrickson; Union, George Calvin; Aubbeenaubee, A. J. Glnther; Liberty, George Black; Richland, Robert Shafer; Newcastle, Charles Jones; Henry, Ivan R. Godwin, and Rochester, Milton Smiley.

Harrison County.—A. G. Wicks of the county bureau of public information is sponsor for some extremely sensible publicity covering the food administration, State Council, Red Cross, and other activities connected with the war. It is concise, definite information covering pertinent matters on which every American citizen should be intelligently informed.

Lake County.—An exhaustive and complete survey is to be made of Lake County by the county council of defense for the purpose of ascertaining all churches and schools in which the German language is taught, and also, for the purpose of rounding up all slackers, idlers and persons engaged in non-essential work. This survey is to be made at once by a committee consisting of Capt. H. S. Norton of Gary, Frank Deming of Hammond, Fred Smith of Whiting and Fred Buse of East Chicago. The committee will be assisted in its work by the township councils for defense of Calumet Township and North Township and the members of these two councils for defense are expected to do much of the actual work and make reports of their findings, together with the names of schools where the German language is taught and also of the names of persons engaged in non-essential work, such as male employees of poolrooms and restaurants. The work is to be done as speedily as possible, and reports transmitted to the State Council of Defense within the next thirty days.

Laporte County.—Chairman Sutherland of the county council of defense called a meeting of the school community gardeners, home gardeners, market gardeners, representatives of different branches of war work, and the chamber of commerce, to discuss the present condition of the different gardens in the city, and to formulate plans to increase their productiveness. The meeting was largely attended, instructive talks were given, ideas exchanged, and plans made for additional meetings to further this good work.

Marion County.—In order that the State may do its share toward turning out physicians for the U. S. army and navy, the Indiana University medical school at Indianapolis has discontinued the vacation period. An unusually strong effort was made to encourage high school graduates to take up the study of medicine, as the supply of physicians is growing very low and additional calls are being made on the State by the war and navy departments. By discontinuing the vacation, the class which ordinarily would not be turned out until next June will be graduated in February. The fourteen men graduated from the department this week have entered the navy. The navy wanting the internship and they will be given special training to take the place of the work usually done while serving in hospitals.

Marshall County.—Mrs. S. S. Stevens, chairman of health and recreation department of the women's section, Marshall County Council of Defense, has secured over two hundred books which the librarian at Plymouth has shipped. Several townships have sent in collections and others are reported on the way. Another shipment will be made soon, when it is hoped all the townships will be represented.

Miami County.—The council of defense has issued warning to Miami County farmers to carefully examine all fields before cutting grain. A specific instance was reported where apparently pro-German efforts had been at work and scores of galvanized steel wires, some of them more than a foot long, methodically arranged and standing upright, were found on a farm just west of Peru.

Monroe County.—Warning has been issued by the Monroe County Council of Defense against the sensational stories that are being circulated through the county by women and itinerant preachers, affecting the men in service. Reports say such gossips are visiting churches and schools and preaching an insidious doctrine, designed to create a feeling of doubt and unrest. The money collection is a conspicuous feature of the programs and the fakirs have been well paid for their agitation. The county council of defense urges that all such mountebanks be reported to the federal authorities for prosecution under the sedition act.

Montgomery County.—Byron R. Russell, chairman of the council of defense, has appointed the following committee to co-operate with the committee from the State Council of Defense on the Americanization of all foreigners: L. N. Hines, Henry Meister, Mrs. Ella Ballard, C. W. Coons, James R. Thomas, James D. Wilson, New Richmond; K. K. Campbell, Darlington; S. M. Davis, Waynetown; K. K. Strangh, Waveland; Dr. C. T. Broadnough, New Ross; W. W. Mc Spadden, Alamo; John Harsharger, Ladoga; David N. Puckett, Linden; W. H. Bundy, Bowers; W. F. Surface, New Market. A total of 1,200 boys and girls in the eleven townships of Montgomery County have been enrolled in some sort of club work this year by the model organization for club supervision which has been perfected here. These boys and girls are in pig, calf, canning, garden, sewing, baking and poultry clubs. A county club leader, L. R. Romine, a Purdue graduate and former vocational teacher at Mooresville, has been named county club leader. Working with him are eleven township club supervisors, one in each township, to oversee the work being done by the boys and girls. These township supervisors are vocational teachers, domestic science teachers or some one with experience of a similar nature. If a boy isn't feeding his pig to obtain the best and cheapest gains, isn't feeding his calf exactly as it should be, or isn't giving his garden the proper care and attention, the supervisors see that he changes his methods. At a meeting here last Saturday of about 600 boys and girls from over the county, state club leader Z. M. Smith and his assistants from Purdue University held up this county as the model for the State in the matter of club work. National speaker Otis E. Hall, state club leader in Kansas, and Miss Gertrude Warren of the department of agriculture declared this was the only county in the country where such an organization had been perfected and that club workers and club members in every State would watch with interest the results obtained here this season in the way of producing and conserving foods. The expenses of the county club leader and his salary are paid by the government, and part of the salary of the supervisors also comes from government sources, while the townships pay their shares. The club organization agent is a part of the county agent system and fits in with the work of County Agent R. A. Chitty.

Ohio County.—Lucien Harris is the new chairman of the county council of defense, and Miss Ellen C. Stewart succeeds Mrs. Thomas A. Cooper as the woman member. The council has appointed a committee of three, consisting of O. H. Pate, Hugh Anderson and John Wesler, to inspect thrashing machines and advise whether they are in proper condition to thrash according to the National Council of Defense requirements and inform owners as to what is necessary to bring them up to standard. The order is "no green straw stacks in September."

Randolph County.—The county council of defense is causing a twenty-two acre field on the A. R. Butler farm on the Huntsville road to be put in buckwheat. The preparation of the ground was under direction of County Agent Hodgson, assisted by Jesse Haynes, captain of the registered men of West River Township, with a number of tractors. The proceeds above expenses will be donated to the Red Cross.

Rush County.—Rush County patriotism has taken an unusual outlet this year and in co-operation with the supreme effort which agricultural residents are making, a decision has been reached whereby there will be no patriotic demonstrations of a public nature on the Fourth of July. Some time ago when the rules concerning proposed patriotic demonstrations were received from the state defense council office, the matter of a public demonstration here was looked upon with a disapproving eye by the executive committee of the defense council as well as the major portion of the rural residents, who stated that at that time the harvesting of the wheat and hay will be in full sway, and in addition the plowing of corn will be in progress. Rush County thrashermen have presented their schedule for the harvesting of oats, wheat and rye this summer, while for the thrashing of oats was 6 cents per bush; wheat, 8 cents, and rye, 9 cents. Although the prices which were fixed by the thrashermen are approximate, Marion Detrick, county agent, expects them to hold through the season.

Steuben County.—County School Superintendent Lyle Shank, on behalf of the schools of Steuben County, recently presented to the Helmer schools a beautiful American flag in size 5 by 9 feet as a reward of merit for selling the greatest number of War Savings and Thrift Stamps of any school in the county. The Helmer students sold $6-130.50 worth.

St. Joseph County.—Announcement has been made by State Director J. D. Oliver that the St. Joseph County War Savings Stamp drive will be in charge of the home guards of South Bend and Mishawaka. They will take over the task of selling the War Savings Stamps during this campaign. In South Bend under the direction of Maj. Charles B. Calvert, in Mishawaka and the remaining parts of St. Joseph County under the direction of Postmaster Herzog of Mishawaka, who is the present county chairman of the committee. Mr. Herzog will be assisted in his work by the entire Mishawaka battalion. The drive proper will be to raise the quota which has been ascribed to St. Joseph County. In this work all citizens must help the government to raise the per capita assessment required, which is $20 for each person. Miss Catherine Oliver, who has been acting as chairman of the St. Joseph County motor corps, has been appointed to organize similar corps in a district to include one-third of the State, the exact locality not having been announced. She will be given the rank of an officer, and another officer will be appointed to take charge of the local corps. A captain, first lieutenant and second lieutenants, sergeant and corporal will be appointed for the St. Joseph County corps within the next few days. A large number of women from the Elder school district, South Bend, have pledged themselves to introduce a wheatless diet in their households for a period of two weeks, and at the expiration of this time reports will be furnished as to the number of pounds of wheat substitutes used in their cooking. Many women throughout the entire city have signified their intention of serving entirely wheatless meals. Fifteen women of the Elder school district have canvassed the homes in that district, securing the names of those women willing to forego the use of wheat. A canvass of the city in general will probably be carried on later.

Tippecanoe County.—Realizing the great bumper wheat crop in that county and the shortage of help available to harvest it, the members of the Tippecanoe County Bar Association will close their offices for a week and go into the fields and assist the farmers in the harvest. No wages will be charged and all that will be asked is that the tillers of the soil supply the meals for the workers. Six hundred common barberry plants in a cemetery at Hobart have been removed within the last day or two because they were found infected with the rust which causes the stem rust of wheat and other small grain, according to word received by Prof. H. S. Hackson of Purdue University. This is the worst case of rust infected barberry bushes reported in the State. Another infected patch of barberries was reported recently from Argos and they were removed as quickly as possible. The war mothers of Lafayette have perfected a good canteen organization, and are splendidly caring for the wants of soldiers on troop trains passing through the city. A committee consisting of County Agent Oles Crane, Deputy Food Administrator F. B. Parker, Evan Shelby and F. M. Buskirk was appointed to supervise the thrashing in Tippecanoe County and prevent waste. The following scale of prices was adopted for thrashing: Oats, 3 cents per bushel; wheat, 6 cents per bushel; rye, 7 cents per bushel. This scale will be submitted to the state food administrator for his approval.

Tipton County.—The Tipton County Council of Defense, upon recommendation of Michael E. Foley, chairman of the State Council of Defense, will submit to the thrashermen of Tipton County the following new schedule of prices for thrashing during the season: Wheat, 6 cents per bushel; rye, 7 cents; oats, 3½ cents. The schedule adopted by the thrashers at a recent meeting was: Wheat, 8 cents; rye, 10 cents; oats, 4 cents.

Vanderburgh County.—Chairman Geo. S. Clifford of the council of defense, is taking a hand in the Vanderburgh farm labor problem, and is enlisting the aid of merchants and professional men as volunteers; the Y. M. C. A. will send squads cash night to nearby farms and, temporarily at least, pitching hay and shocking wheat will take the place of exercise in the gymnasium. The "chronic loafer" problem is getting preferred attention, and Chairman Clifford emphatically states he will do everything in his power to have any loafer prosecuted who can not show that he is engaged in some form of productive work, unless, of course, he is physically unfit.

Vermillion County.—Chairman Miller of the council of defense is going vigorously after the "loafer" problem, and indications are these human parasites will in the future be scarce in Vermillion County. Clinton business houses are closing each day at 4 p. m., the men leaving immediately for the country to aid the farmers. Women, too, are helping, and these volunteer workers are doing splendid work in making up the shortage of labor.

Vigo County.—The Girls' Working Reserve, organized by Miss Ruth Briggs of the State Normal, with a view to aiding farmers, has twenty members enrolled, and these girls are willing to do any kind of work offered them in the country. Judge A. L. Miller of the county council of defense has put that organization on record as being against the sale of any newspapers of doubtful patriotism. In his statement Judge Miller says: "Our people are making too many sacrifices to have their work undermined by suspicious or seditious literature or newspapers. There is only room for genuine patriotism now. We can't spend our time watching disloyal newspapers. Newspapers, like citizens, can only stand in one place. We haven't any use for those who quibble or argue. The disloyal can soon be discovered."

Washington County.—The Washington County Council of Defense has organized township councils of defense, and these are now ready to respond promptly to demands that come from the State and federal government in winning the war. Following is the personnel of the various township councils: Gibson—W. L. Wilson, James Parker, George O. Gambler, Dr. T. W. Herron, Silas Gater, Aristides Gross, Mrs. Gertrude Zaring, Monroe—Charles Winslow, Winnie Payne, Clarence Flenor, Lonnie Winslow, James VanMeter, Talmage Lockwood, Mrs. James Pollock, Jefferson—Newton Booker, W. W. Coffey, Thomas Gordon, D. L. Thompson, F. S. Boggs, Z. W. Freeman, Mrs. Mary C. Freeman, Brown—Alvin Freed, George Weaver, F. W. Smith, James Wade, Prof. W. M. Goldsberry, M. Leroy Vellom, Mrs. Sallie Holiday, Vernon—M. L. Smedley, Thomas Batt, Frank Brewer, Frank Chamberlain, Ezra Collier, Clyde Chastain, Carrie Smith, Washington—A. L. Carney, B. F. Grimes, Thomas Lewellyn, J. W. Journell, Add Salles, Charles Rodman, Lula Reymann, Franklin—W. O. Huston, Robert L. Miller, John J. Weir, D. W. V. Elrod, Newton Lockenour, Samuel Asabraner, Polk—C. F. Schleicher, Samuel Newlow, L. E. Brim, Lee Mead, Dennis L. Williams, Mrs. Greely Elrod, Howard—Frank Beck, Bert Baker, Charles Shanks, B. R. Sherwood, Sylvester Newby, Mrs. E. D. Bush, Madison—Clyde Patton, William Doan, George Hayse, Dan Hancock, William Guthrie, Herschell Brown, Posey—Frank M. Crane, John R. Beard, Charley Wielbaker, John T. Jones, John W. McIntosh, Mrs. Anna C. Coombs, Jackson—Aug. Miller, John Wire, Lafe Brock, Albert Lane, Albert Smith, M. B. Myers, Mrs. Aug. Miller, Pierce—E. V. Bartlett, O. P. S. Martin, Ed. Short, R. R. Newlow, Claud Gray, Ed. Purlee, Mrs. Dr. Green, Miss Mattie White has about completed the registration of women, and the report is more than satisfactory. Much interest is manifested in the child welfare work under Mrs. F. P. Cuable. This work will open June 25th and be carried on as rapidly as possible.

Wayne County.—With every child in the grade schools of Richmond cultivating a home garden, City Gardener Murphy is helping dispose of the vegetables that the children have raised. The first city school garden market in Indiana was opened here.

Wells County.—More than a score of boys and girls have become members of the Wells County Boys' and Girls' Pig Club, under the jurisdiction of W. B. Jrucek of Purdue, and recently each of the following received a pig to be raised under the stipulated conditions: Hugh Harris, Bluffton; Ralph Lockwood, Keystone; Ernest Minnear, Liberty Center; Harmon Clary, Liberty Center; Howard Clark, Liberty Center; Robert Miller, Liberty Center; Russell Wallace, Bluffton; Russell Van Camp, Keystone; Ross J. Jackson, Liberty Center; Ray Jackson, Liberty Center; John Lancaster, Poneto; Philip Shadle, Keystone; William Smith, Poneto; Howard Smith, Poneto; Johnnie Wells, Keystone; Esther Wells, Keystone; Lawrence Byrd, Bluffton; J. A. Price, Jr., Ossian; Robert Price, Ossian; Donald VanEmon, Bluffton; Frances L. Smith, Bluffton; Hugh Stinson, Bluffton; Earl Warner, Bluffton; Marion McElhane, Markle; Ervin Beeler, Bluffton; Frederick Beeler, Bluffton.

Red Cross Activities

Junior members of the American Red Cross in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky have a busy summer ahead of them if Red Cross chapters in the Lake Division adopt many features of the program for Junior auxiliaries just sent out from Lake Division headquarters.

The "vacation activities" program, which has been formulated for national use, urges the organization of messenger, bicycle and salvage corps and suggests the value of pig, calf, war bread and garden clubs.

Some chapters are to have the children in their Junior auxiliaries continue the work of making garments for refugees. New sewing, knitting and wood-working classes are to be formed. The program suggests that schools be kept open, particularly in rural communities, for this purpose. Another suggestion is that schools in suburban communities be kept open several hours a day throughout the summer and that the regular teachers be supplanted by Red Cross instructors to be known as "captains" and "lieutenants."

Other features of the summer activities for children are first aid and life-saving classes and pageants featuring patriotic music and the folk dances, songs and stories of our Allies.

The Red Cross has about 400,000 Junior members in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

American women who speak Italian fluently and who are trained in social service work are being sent to Italy by the American Red Cross to help with the refugees and children, to conduct soup kitchens and nurseries, and to organize and carry on other forms of relief work, according to the statement of the American Red Cross.

For service with the American Red Cross Commission to Italy, a small number of women are being supplied as stenographers and warehouse clerks. Passport regulations which affect women sent to France apply also to workers going to Italy. A knowledge of Italian is desirable for all candidates, and in the social service work it is indispensable.

Committee on Construction

The Indiana State Council of Defense at its meeting June 26th adopted the following report, after which Chairman Foley announced the resignation of Evans Woolen as chairman of the committee and the appointment instead of A. W. Brady, which action the council approved:

Indiana State Council of Defense:

The Committee on Proposed Construction recommends:

1. That in the matter of the proposed reconstruction of a wooden building by W. G. McClain of Greenwood, Indiana, the committee advised that it does not feel justified in approving such construction at this time.

2. That in the matter of finishing a residence begun by D. J. Abolt of Boswell, Indiana, the committee recommends that the State Council shall not disapprove of the completion of the building.

3. That in the matter of the completion of certain improvements of Jackson street, Decatur, Indiana, whereas, the Adams County Council has voted for the completion of the improvements, we find no reason for refusing to concur in the action of the county council.

4. That in the matter of rebuilding five store buildings recently destroyed by fire in the town of Berne, whereas, Adams County Council represents that great loss and hardship would result if the merchants were not permitted to resume business, the committee recommends that the State Council of Defense concur in the action of the Adams County Council.

5. In regard to the completion of the Weldon-Alley gravel road in Howard County, committee reports that the facts now in its possession do not warrant a recommendation that the road should be completed.

6. That in regard to the proposed action by the Madison County Council to postpone completion of certain proposed road improvements in Monroe Township, your committee recommends that no objection be offered to the plan suggested by the county council.

7. That in the matter of a communication from the chairman of the Howard County Council of Defense regarding a sewer improvement in a suburban addition to Kokomo and also in regard to two contracts for highway improvements in Howard County, it is the sense of the committee that the State Council, acting on the facts now in its possession, cannot approve the proposed sewer construction or the building of the two highways.

8. That in regard to the proposed construction of an electric lighting plant at Darlington, Indiana, your committee reports that on the showing of facts it does not feel justified in approving the proposed construction.

9. That in regard to the building of a municipal sewerage tank at Jasonville, Indiana, your committee reports that the improvements seem immediately needed for sanitary reasons and it recommends that such construction shall not be opposed if the improvement is endorsed by the Greene County Council of Defense.

10. That the committee recommends that the action of the Putnam County Council of Defense relative to the postponement of the construction of a large drainage ditch through Hendricks, Morgan, Putnam and Owen counties be approved.

11. That in regard to certain protests against completion of a sewerage system at Cambridge City, the committee recommends that no discussion regarding the proposed improvement be resumed at this time.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Published by the

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and state governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Attention, County Councils

General Bulletin No. 161.

June 19, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

Again we ask your attention to the supreme importance of preventing new construction. It is not so much that the money should be saved as it is that transportation and labor and materials are desperately needed in doing the things and making the things necessary for the war.

Permit us to suggest that you be on the alert to discover and discourage projected undertakings that would violate the national policy as stated in the accompanying resolution of March 13, 1918.

We have a special committee composed of George Ade, Charles Fox, James L. Keach, E. M. Wilson and Evans Woollen that will be glad to be helpful to you in this matter.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

Resolution.

Resolved, That the attention of the public be called to the recent statement by the Secretary of the Treasury to the effect that building operations should be determined by reference to the national welfare rather than to the comfort and convenience of citizens, and

That it is the sense of this council that there is increasing need of the most rigid observance of the recommendation by the Council of National Defense that no construction or other enterprise be undertaken unless justified by the test: Will the men, money and material so applied best contribute in this way to the winning of the war?

Adopted March 13, 1918.

To the County Councils of Defense:

The Wheat Division of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation is waging a state-wide wheat campaign in answer to the call of the Government for "more and better wheat." Wheat is the food which is essential to our soldiers and we must at all times be prepared with a reserve supply.

The inspection of seed wheat fields has been completed for more than half the State at this time. Much, however, remains to be done in connection with the saving of wheat at thrashing time, and the various steps in the preparation for the fall sowing. It is urged that the County Councils of Defense co-operate in every way possible with the County Agricultural Agents, Emergency Demonstration Agents, and other county leaders which have been selected through the State Food Committee. The campaign is of vital importance and the assistance of each county council is needed to make it a success.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

General Bulletin No. 163.

June 25, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

Referring again to your preparations for Fourth of July celebrations, we wish to advise you that the Four-Minute Men of the country have secured from the President a special Fourth of July message. This message should be read for the first time at these Fourth of July celebrations in every community, but should not be published in any form before the 5th of July. The Four-Minute Men have been asked to co-operate with you in this matter and you should get in touch with them at once and arrange for this.

Americanization Means—

The use of a common language for the entire nation.

The desire of all peoples in America to unite in a common citizenship under one flag.

The combatting of anti-American propaganda, activities and schemes, and the stamping out of sedition and disloyalty wherever found.

The elimination of causes of disorder and unrest, which make fruitful soil for the propaganda of enemies of America.

The abolition of racial prejudices, barriers, and discriminations, and of immigrant colonies and sections, which keep peoples in America apart.

The maintenance of American standard of living through the proper use of American foods, care of children, and new world homes.

The discontinuance of discriminations in the housing, care, protection, and treatment of aliens.

The creation of an understanding of and love for America, and of the desire of immigrants to remain in America, to have a home here and to support American institutions and laws.—Ex.

Inspection of Wheat In Indiana Continues

Inspection work of seed wheat fields has been completed as far north as Indianapolis and in a few counties north of there, by representatives of the Purdue university who are working on the wheat campaign which is being waged under the auspices of the Committee on Food Production and Conservation of the Indiana State Council of Defense. This important phase of the wheat drive will be completed by July 1st, D. S. Myer, state leader, said. By that time, from four to a dozen fields of wheat will be located in each county so that every farmer in the state will be assured of good, disease-free seed wheat this fall.

Inspection work was done this week in Fayette, Union, Randolph, Jay, Henry, Sullivan, Putnam, Vigo, Greene, Marion, Shelby, Johnson, Tipton, Howard, Cass, Miami, Fulton, Tippecanoe, Warren, and Jasper counties. The counties in the rest of the state north of these will be inspected next week.

"The inspectors are finding a large percent of the fields are of mixed wheat and these are being rejected because it is desired to have pure-bred seed of heavy yielding varieties wherever possible," said Mr. Meyer. "They also are finding a large amount of scab and loose smut, and rye and cockle are causing the rejection of a number of fields."

After the seed selection work, the men on the campaign will co-operate with the food administration in saving all the wheat possible at thrashing time, and then will come the other phase of the production campaign, consisting of tillage and fertilization methods in preparation for the fall seeding. This part of the work will be carried to every county the same as the seed selection work.

To Help More Effectively in Winning the War

Indianapolis high school boys who left to enter the Purdue military agricultural training camp at Lafayette, Ind.: First row (left to right), Kenneth W. Moore, Charles W. Moores, Thomas F. McNutt, Edward Lafsen, Paul Feucht, Michael E. Foley, chairman council of defense; James Cartinhour, Louis Isensee, James Freeman, Lawrence P. Lang. Second row (left to right), Max Adler, William Terrill, Earl Babb, Emery W. Todd, Ralph Busch, Richard Goode, Robert G. McCready and Gerald L. Griffin.

One hundred boys from the State of Indiana, members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, are attending this camp for a two weeks' intensive training in agricultural work, under the supervision of Dr. Stanley Coulter and the professors and instructors of the agricultural experiment station of Purdue University. Regular military drill also is included in the course of instruction for the purpose of maintaining discipline and to develop the boys physically. After the completion of the course, the boys will be employed in the harvest fields in northern Indiana counties and will receive pay commensurate with the effort they put forth.

No boys are admitted to this camp who have been regularly engaged in agricultural work this summer, the purpose of the camp being to add to the supply of farm labor, rather than to detract from it.

Other camps will follow and it is the purpose of Isaac D. Straus, federal state director of the reserve, to secure representation of every county in Indiana. Every county enrolling agent has been urged to interest himself in this important preparatory work and to recommend a boy or boys for the training. Each agent has been given the detailed information as to qualifications, requirements, etc.

Indiana Is Going on Strict Sugar Ration

Dr. Barnard Announces Plan Whereby Less Essentials Must Reduce Consumption to Fifty Per Cent.

Beginning July 1, Indiana goes on a strict sugar ration. In addition to statements of quantities of sugar on hand, dealers and manufacturers using or handling this commodity, will be required to give detailed information concerning their requirements, and subject themselves to still further restrictions in the consumption of sugar for the months of July, August and September.

To expedite the distribution of sugar, all of which under the new regulations comes under the jurisdiction of the Federal Food Administrator, J. E. Langer, head of the Sugar Division, in the office of Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana, has prepared a classification supplementing that effective heretofore, and will require all distribution hereafter (except that for household consumption) to be on a certificate basis. The classification is as follows:

A. Candy makers, soft drinks, soda fountains, chewing gum, chocolate and cocoa manufacturers, tobacco manufacturers, flavoring extracts, invert sugar, syrups, sweet pickles, wines, etc.

These must show the amount of sugar used during the months of July, August and September, 1917, and certificates issued to them, if the statements are found correct, will be based upon 50 per cent of such average use. Ice cream makers will be entitled to 75 per cent. Certificates will be issued separately for each month's supply.

B. Commercial canners.

These will be given certificates for their necessary requirements, but any resale of sugar by them except under the express direction of the local food administrator, will constitute a violation of the regulations, and subject them to closing of business for the period of the war. Any sugar on hand at the end of the season must be placed at the disposal of the food administrator. A special appeal is made to this group to economize in every possible direction.

C. Hotels, restaurants, public eating places (serving 25 or more persons).

These will receive certificates on the basis of three pounds for each ninety meals served.

D. Bakers.

These will receive certificates for 70 per cent of the average amount used during July, August and September, 1917, or alternatively 70 per cent of that used in the month of June, 1918.

E. Retail stores.

These will receive for July purchases, certificates based upon the average of sugar sold during the combined three months of April, May and June, 1918. Retailers must not sell sugar to any of the other groups; that is, to none except householders, without taking up the certificates of such purchases. Sales to town customers are limited to two pounds, and country customers to five pounds. The retailer is admonished not to sell more than five pounds per person per month to householders, whose co-operation with the retailer is earnestly sought.

Retailers may, as at present, sell twenty-five pounds of sugar to any one household for home canning, upon the householder certifying that he has not bought elsewhere, and his agreement to return any balance not used for canning purposes. Householders on certificate may obtain more than twenty-five pounds for home canning where need is shown, but in no instance will a sale of more than 100 pounds for such purpose be permitted without the approval of the local food administrator.

No wholesaler or refiner will be permitted to sell any sugar whatsoever except on the certificate basis. Any person in any of the above five groups who does not file his statement promptly, will not be permitted to buy sugar for the period of the war, and action will at once be taken against any sugar he may have on hand in excess of thirty days' supply, and he will be charged with hoarding.

No firm will be permitted a stock in excess of a three months' supply on the basis outlined above. Any stock in excess of thirty days' supply, but less than ninety days' supply, must be held subject to the local food administrator, for distribution if necessary, depending on the remoteness from the sources of supply. The food administration will construe any attempts by dealers and manufacturers to lay up a supply, as hoarding, and upon conviction, this offense is punishable by fine and imprisonment.

"While in law the same rule might be applied to householders, the food administration proposes to rest upon the honor and co-operation of the householder not to hold more than a thirty days' supply, upon the basis of three pounds per person in the household," said Dr. Barnard.

In explanation of the more stringent regulations of the sugar supply and its distribution, Dr. Barnard said, "A number of causes have cumulated to make our sugar position more difficult than we could have anticipated at the beginning of the year. The increased shipping needed by our growing army in France has necessitated the curtailment of sugar transportation, particularly from the longer voyage, and has thus reduced supplies both to the allies and ourselves from remote markets. Some of the accessible sugar producing areas have proved a less yield than was anticipated, such as certain West Indian Islands. The domestic beet and Louisiana crops have fallen below anticipation. There has been some destruction of beet sugar factories in the battle area of France and Italy. We have lost considerable sugar by submarines.

"As close an estimate as we can make, indicates a reasonable expectation from all sources of about 1,600,000 tons of sugar for United States consumption during the last half of the present year. This is based upon the maintenance of the present meagre allied ration. An improvement in shipping conditions would of course relieve this situation, as quantities of sugar are in unavailable markets. We must, however, base the distribution of sugar during the next six months upon the above footing. After that period, the new West Indian crop will be available.

"This supply of 1,600,000 tons necessitates a considerable reduction in our consumption. To provide three pounds of sugar per month per person for household use, to take care of our army and navy, and to provide for the necessary preservation of fruit, milk, etc., will require about 1,500,000 tons of sugar for the six months. A household consumption of three pounds per month per person, together with the special allowance for home canning, means a reduction of some 25 per cent in these branches of consumption from normal, but it is still nearly double the ration in the allied countries and is ample for every economical use."

Food Club Presidents Gather.

More Liberal Policy On County Hospitals

Urged by Amos W. Butler, Dr. Alfred Henry and Dr. Chas. P. Emerson to State Council.

Amos W. Butler, secretary of the Board of Charities and Corrections, appeared at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, June 26th, in advocacy of a more liberal policy on the part of the council in reference to proposed construction of improvement of the hospital and infirmary facilities in the State. Mr. Butler pointed out the present needs that will increase with the return of stricken soldiers and sailors and added that the percentage of sickness and distress among the civilian population is certain to increase as the war goes on, as it has in France and England. He said he expected the Federal Government soon to make a request of each state for a survey of its hospital facilities and a statement of how fast it can speed up the necessary construction to care for those in need of hospital services. Mr. Butler said the diseased dependents of those who have gone to war; those who are being discovered by the Child Welfare work now in progress in Indiana, if they are to have normal health and opportunities, must have hospital care. The Civilian Relief and Home Welfare work of the American Red Cross Society and the State and county anti-tuberculosis societies are all active in work that necessitates hospital accommodations. Mr. Butler said that the council also should take cognizance of the need for replacement of infirmary buildings in case of fire or for sanitary reasons. He urged the adoption of a forward looking policy that "will work with existing agencies to meeting the needs as they arise."

Dr. Alfred Henry, president of the State Anti-Tuberculosis Society, said Indiana now has 379 beds for tubercular patients, with 30,000 cases prevalent in the State and several hundred waiting for beds, and "I am afraid they will wait in vain." He said 700 cases of tuberculosis had been turned out of the local draft boards among men between 21 and 30 years of age and 335 had just been discharged from training camps afflicted with the disease. Of these he said reports are being received of the medical treatment of 250. He said these figures must be added to the hundreds representing men below and above the draft age and among women. He said the men cannot recover if at work, and there are not sufficient hospital facilities available now to care for them.

Dr. Charles P. Emerson, chairman of the medical section, said the council should urge the counties of the State to exercise the authority granted them by the legislature, to issue bonds if necessary for the building of local hospitals. He said there are in Indiana now a proportion of one-half a bed for each one hundred thousand of population and that the State is far behind Illinois and Ohio. He quoted Dr. S. E. Smith as authority for the statement that an increase in nervous diseases of 7 to each 1,000 of population is to be expected as a result of the war. He said physicians should be encouraged to perfect hospital organizations in anticipation of the demands that will come. "It is not a question of bricks and mortar, but of caring for the civilians and those who will come back in need of care," said Dr. Emerson.

The council agreed that all pending hospital construction questions should be referred to the medical section for consideration jointly with the Board of Charities and Correction. The council will then act on their recommendation.

Pliny Wolford, deputy secretary of State, called the attention of the council to the increased number of incorporations in Indiana and the correspondingly enlarged offerings of stock. He said the state of Oklahoma had found it expedient to take steps to protect the vast number of Liberty bond owners, not familiar with stocks and bonds and that he felt the State council might well take a similar step. After a discus-

Woman's Section

Bulletin No. 78.

Indianapolis, Ind. June 22, 1918.

To the County Chairman of the Home Economics Committee:

The suggestion has come to use from Vevay, Switzerland County, that while every effort is being made to lend assistance to the farmer during the present summer, we are overlooking the farmer's wife; that this summer extra men will be sent to the farm, which means extra work for the farmer's wife, and she thus has so much work on her shoulders preparing meals for the farm workers that she simply cannot conserve food, which means that great quantities of vegetables and fruits will be wasted for lack of time to conserve them.

The suggested remedy for this is that patriotic women and girls in towns organize a club and volunteer their services to the farmer's wife to assist her during the busy seasons.

Will you not look into this matter and take steps to organize such clubs in your county? If the registration has been completed in your county it is very possible that the registration committee can furnish you the names of women and girls who will be willing to do this patriotic service. Very truly yours,

ANNE STUDEBAKER CARLISLE,
Chairman Woman's Section State Council of Defense.

Bulletin No. 77.

Indianapolis, June 21, 1918.

To the County Chairman of the Department of Education—Woman's Section.

Word has just reached me of the letter addressed to the President of the United States signed by the representatives of various nationalities in our (and their) country announcing their intended celebration of July 4. In their petition are these words: "We regard ourselves now not only as members of an American commonwealth, one and indivisible, but of a world commonwealth, equally indivisible. United for the principles of that democratic world-state which is fighting now for its being on the battlefields of Europe, we intend on July 4, 1918, to manifest by special celebrations, our loyalty to this country and to the cause for which we fight; and we respectfully request that you call the attention of your fellow citizens to this fact, in order that they may join with us in commemorating this, the anniversary not only of national freedom but of universal freedom."

This petition is signed by a representative of organizations of Armenians, Assyrians, Belgians, Chinese, Czech-Slavs, Danes, Dutch, Finns, French Canadians, Germans, Greeks, Hungarians, Italians, Japanese, Lithuanians, Norwegians, Poles, Portuguese, Russians, Roumanians, South Slavs, Swedes, Swiss.

The President in reply says, in part:

"I take pleasure in calling your petition, with my hearty commendation, to the attention of all my countrymen, and I ask that they unite with you in making the Independence Day of this, the year when all the principles to which we stand pledged are on trial, the most significant in our national history."

Therefore, in the light of this splendid expression of foreign born citizens, or the descendants of foreign born citizens, I ask that those counties containing such elements give especial heed to whatever request may come from them as to a united effort in celebrating July 4.

Kindly inform your township chairman. Keep close account of whatever you do.

Sincerely yours,
KATHARINE M. GRAYDON.

Chickens for France.

Miss Lucy Hewitt, an American girl, is engaged in a noble effort which she describes as a "to realize the American Committee for Devastated France reports.

Miss Hewitt sells chicken buttons for 10 cents a piece. The buttons say, "I have a chicken in France." Each button represents the price of an incubator egg and 1,000 eggs represents a full incubator.

During the evacuation of the department of the Aisne the refugees were sent by thousands to the south of France, but the incubators and the chickens provided through the efforts of Miss Hewitt were assembled on a farm, where 600 refugee children are caring for them, under the supervision of poultry men who were once soldiers and are now disabled.

"It costs $400 to establish a poultry farm," says a letter from the committee. "This includes the wooden barracks provided by the French government, four incubators of 1,000 eggs each, and the salary for one year of a former soldier, who will care for the installation.

"Miss Hewitt has established thirteen poultry farms since Easter and she intends to continue until France is once more 'rechickenized' and becomes the poultry-raising country it was before the war. Ten cents seems a small investment toward helping France to feed her civilians and her army, and incidentally our army. It is one way of helping France to help America."

The Chain Letter Again.

The American Red Cross,
Lake Division Headquarters.

Cleveland, June 24th, 1918.

Mr. E. F. Warfel, Chief, Bureau of Publicity
State Council of Defense, Indianapolis,
Indiana.

My Dear Mr. Warfel:

I hasten to reply to your letter of June 22nd, and to take the opportunity of requesting you to do all possible to wipe out this particular chain letter or any other chain letter which uses the name of the American Red Cross. For seven months now the American Red Cross and the French Council at Seattle have been doing everything possible to break every link of this chain, which appears to have for its purpose the founding of a special hospital for the treatment of wounds in the jaw.

At one time we thought this pest had been put out of the way, but only within the last month the thing has broken out again. This week's issue of the Lake Division News contains a little story, "Chain Letters," which distinctly outlines the Red Cross' position in this matter and which might be of some service to you in breaking some of the links in Indiana.

Believe me when I say anything that you may do to stop this letter will be thoroughly appreciated, not only by the division office, but by our national headquarters as well.

D. C. DOUGHERTY,
Director Bureau Publicity.

The story to which Mr. Dougherty refers follows:

The chain letter evil has again become epidemic.

The American Red Cross has never sanctioned the chain letter, and, according to a recent letter on this subject from National headquarters, it is apparent that the Red Cross never will sanction the chain letter. In fact, one chain letter which has again gotten into circulation at the request of the American Red Cross was at one time investigated and followed up by the Department of Justice.

It is the request of division headquarters that all Lake Division chapter publicity chairmen issue, through the medium of every newspaper in their respective jurisdictions, a statement that the Red Cross heartily disapproves of the chain letter and that persons receiving chain letters, which mention the name of the Red Cross, immediately destroy such letters and so break many links in the chain.

"Extravagance costs blood, the blood of heroes."
—Lloyd George.

Child Registration Notes

Eight hundred babies were registered in two days by Mrs. S. E. Cook, chairman of the Child Welfare Committee of Huntington County.

Reports from the county chairmen, council of defense, from Lake, Washington, Wells, Cass, Jasper, Wayne, Miami, and Dearborn counties show that the Child Welfare program is adequately arranged for, and that organization has been perfected. Martin County reports that the campaign is well begun.

Wabash County is using the same registration organization for children as that which served for the registration of women.

Randolph and Spencer Counties are among the first to forward reports of the results of registration and examination of children under school age.

Six townships in Randolph County report a registration of ninety-nine percent of the children. These children have been examined and the mothers have been advised in their care. Out of 779 children registered, there were found 291 normal boys and 308 normal girls; 94 defective boys and 105 defective girls.

As a result of 22 clinics held in Spencer County, a number of children are receiving treatments. Seventeen physicians and eight nurses conducted the examination of 1,077 children under school age.

The best babies of Spencer County are to be awarded prizes this year at the county fair and at the Chautauqua. When the supply of government registration cards ran low, a local press supplied the need to carry on the work of the Child Welfare Committee in order that the appointments might continue. The Fourteen-Minute Women have presented the importance of the work of the Children's Year throughout the county.

Jefferson County is planning to employ a visiting nurse to carry on the work of the Children's Year.

Blackford County held its tests in the school buildings on Saturday afternoons. An epidemic of smallpox delayed the registration, in the beginning, in one township.

Dearborn County workers have completed the registration of children under school age. Disease epidemics have prevented the clinic work in some localities.

Tipton County reports that most of its children have been registered. Miss Elizabeth Cowan addressed an enthusiastic meeting of mothers of the county at the public library in Tipton. In a recent parade, a number of small children marched under the banner "America's Last Reserves."

In Fulton County, where the work was begun and put through on time, as has all the war work in this county, the chairman wrote: "I had your letter saying that the cards were delayed at 9 o'clock on the morning of the eighth, but I flew down town and mimeographed myself nine hundred cards, and then got a machine and distributed those cards which could not be sent by mail in time; it took some tall hustling, but every doctor had his cards in time to begin, and so we were not delayed a moment by the card question."

Resorts May Assist.

Summer resorts of Indiana are asked to assist in carrying out the Americanization work of the Indiana State Council of Defense, in a bulletin just issued to patriotic workers. It is proposed that the managers of the resorts put up a bulletin board upon which to convey a patriotic message every day. A half hour for patriotic singing every evening is recommended, and short patriotic meetings, at least once a week, upon significant developments is pointed out as essential. The assignment of visitors who have seen active service at the front is deemed appropriate and pageants of historic significance are desirable. The woman's section of the State Council offers to assist where needed in furthering such a program.

To Intensify Efforts For Americanization

Mrs. Arthur S. Hurrell, chairman of the Americanization Committee of the Woman's Section of the State Council of Defense, plans to intensify the work already established in six essential units, Educational Extension, Social Service, Industrial Work, Health Standards, Naturalization and War Information.

This year many teachers are to be employed. Clothed with authority from the schools, they will be sent into the homes of foreigners, teaching the women not only the language but American ideas of home-making. Vocational classes in dress-making and millinery will be formed; a model kitchen on wheels (a motor car) will be sent into these sections; and movie films showing "Swat the fly" and "Clean milk bottles" will be used.

Parts of streets will be asked of the city as safe places for children. Mothers' clubs and community singing groups will be furthered by missions, settlements, Red Cross civilian relief, missionary societies and the Catholic Women's Association. High factory standards, where foreign women are employed, will be sponsored. Baby clinics and children's health stations are being established, and will be maintained by the Public Health Nursing Association, Children's Aid Society, Anti-Tuberculosis and Welfare Department of Indiana University and the charity organizations.

The process and benefits of naturalization will be explained to every woman, and municipal and community co-operation will be sought. The distribution of war literature, flags and posters will be undertaken at bureaus established for that purpose in foreign sections.

At a meeting of the Woman's Section of the State Council of Defense it was resolved to recommend to all Indiana communities the following:

That July fourth be observed by public patriotic rallies;

That in each community there be held a municipal reception;

That to this reception American citizens of foreign birth or parentage be especially invited;

That particular recognition be given those new Americans who have recently become naturalized;

That the reception committee consist of both native and naturalized citizens of the community.

Silo Campaigns Are Meeting With Success

Local silo campaigns are meeting with success. Allen County, with a quota of 195, the largest number assigned in the state, is confident that her quota will be erected. A booster meeting was held June 19th at the Commercial Club in Fort Wayne. Over 150 took part in the dinner which was served at that time, and more than ten counties in northeastern Indiana were represented. Maurice Douglass, state silo leader, was the principal speaker.

The Greene County Campaign, June 15th, was held on the Martindale farm near Switz City, under the direction of W. B. Maddock, county silo leader. The farm has three silos, two are empty and one is full. Results of cattle feeding demonstrations were discussed by Superintendent B. H. Walcher, of the Martindale farm. Meals were served to the crowd by the Red Cross Society.

The Cass County date for the large feature silo meeting has been set for July 4th. Aeroplane flights and the giving of a silo to the lucky farmer, will be some of the special features.

County Leader, C. B. Blosser, of Elkhart County, reports that their county will more than sell their quota.

The Decatur County silo committee have published an eight-page pamphlet similar to the one put out by the state organization. It contains valuable information gathered from a survey of twenty-five farmers. "Actual results from the 25 Decatur County farms in 1917 show that the 12 which had silos received $38.00 more for each $100.00 worth of feed fed than the 13 who did not have silos. The average of twenty-five farms show $1,926.00 worth of farm feed fed and $425.00 worth of feed bought. A total of $2,351.00 worth of feed was fed on each farm. Those having silos, therefore, realized $893.00 more for the feed fed during 1917. Enough to build several silos."

Grant County completed a successful three-day silo tour June 22nd. Maurice Douglas and C. A. Norman, who assisted in the meetings, report that Grant County will have little difficulty in securing her quota of 150 silos. Maurice Douglas will be the principal speaker in a county-wide silo meeting to be held in Huntington the 28th. Silo tours will be conducted in Martin County under the direction of O. A. Baker, county silo leader, on June 29th and 30th. This is the first county to report silo meetings to be held on Sunday.

The Hancock County silo committee published a small leaflet in connection with their campaign. It contains statements from prominent farmers in the county. Victor Harlan says that his silo paid for itself last season. He feeds silage to his cattle, sheep, horses and hogs. Albert Curry says, "I don't think a farmer can afford to be without a silo. It saves 100 per cent corn crop, and 30 per cent of the feeding value of the corn crop is in the stalks and leaves."

Every community is awakening to the possibilities of the silo as a means of conserving the food supply.

War Time Amusements

How are we to amuse ourselves in war times? This question of entertainment, always a difficult one, has become the more so because of the high cost of living and the patriotic necessity for conservation. "Yet," says Bernard Sobel in a Purdue University bulletin, "we were never in greater need of entertainment than we are now. While living through days of apprehension and anxiety, we are compelled to seek forgetfulness and comfort wherever they can be found. We must have amusements, but we must take care that they are of the worthy sort. Many neglected diversions may now be revived and the city community may be able to adapt characteristic entertainments of the small town and country. This is a good time to start a choral society. Many people like to sing, whether they have trained voices or not, and they find great pleasure in the sheltering volume of ensemble work. The choral society is really a great educator and is capable of exercising a permanent musical influence. The amateur orchestra, though not open to large numbers, offers equal attractions. Those people who have belonged, in their youth, to amateur orchestras can doubtless still recall, with great pleasure the zest they experienced in working out a difficult passage; the laughs they enjoyed at some unusually bad discord; and the self-congratulations that attended coming out together at the end. The possibilities of the victrola may likewise be utilized for a musical organization that undertakes the study of musical history and appreciation. Properly selected records would furnish a comprehensive and interesting foundation for a study of the folk song, orchestral music or even chamber music. In a similar manner, art clubs could utilize the art magazines and penny picture galleries for a history of art or a study of the different schools and periods. Literature offers, perhaps, the most accessible form of entertainment, either in a modernized reading circle or through the drama. Most people delight in amateur plays, enjoy taking part in them or seeing their friends act. The typical modern play, with its small cast, and limited number of settings is better adapted to the needs of the amateur than the more pretentious plays of old, while the one-act play, like those of Maeterlinck, Dunsany, Sygne and Gibson can be presented with astonishing ease and effect."

More Liberal Policy On County Hospitals

sion the question was referred to the Finance Committee.

Dr. Emerson reported that the medical section had followed the example of the lawyers of the State and had engaged professional lecturers for the education of conscripted men. Dr. Emerson's suggestion that a committee be appointed for the consideration of a broader policy and enlarged activities on the part of the council was referred to the chairman for consideration.

Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, was authorized to employ another assistant to take care of the increasing demands being made on the reserve. He reported the establishment of a training camp for boy farmers at Purdue University and of a tentative plan for its continuance.

W. V. Rooker was directed to present a resolution from Indianapolis business men relative to the future of Ft. Benjamin Harrison, at the next meeting of the council.

Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana, reported the changes in the sugar regulations effective July 1st, and of the plans to continue the fifty-fifty policy in handling wheat flour. Dr. Barnard said the beef situation is only temporarily acute. He also announced that the report that there are to be modifications of the substitute program were unauthorized.

The chairman announced the resignation of Evans Woollen as chairman of the Committee on Proposed Construction. The nomination of Arthur W. Brady in his place was approved by the council.

A report of Mr. Ade from the Films Section was received and referred to the Finance Committee. The report indicated that the council will not lose any of the $3,000 invested in moving pictures at the request of the Committee on Public Information, which films were found unsatisfactory and were withdrawn before being sent all over the State, as originally planned. Robert Lieber, of Indianapolis, who handled the enterprise, reported the receipt of a check from the federal organization making up the difference between what the council paid and the receipts from the limited showing of the pictures.

T. A. Coleman of the Food Production and Conservation Committee, informed the council that the committee has enough ninety-day corn to replant the areas in Indiana where corn has been killed by frost. He said truck crops and other vegetation suffered from the frost, but that the committee is advising farmers and growers to make certain of the condition of their crops before proceeding on the theory that the crops were killed. He said truck planters are handicapped by lack of plants and inability to secure a supply for replanting. Mr. Coleman reported active co-operation with county agricultural agents with a view to saving all crop vegetation possible and said the committee plans to send representatives into every county where there is not an accredited agent with a view to securing the greatest possible salvage.

Hotels Ask Co-operation.

In observing wheatless programs, on the tables of one of the large hotels in the National Capital appears the following card:

"We are not Slackers.

"The hotels, at the request of the United States Food Administration, are pledged to discontinue the use of wheat and wheat products until September 1.

"You are not Slackers and can assist us greatly by cheerfully accepting the bread and other substitutes that we may offer. This decision causes the bakers of the country to master an art foreign to their training and it will be some time before we can expect them to reach the perfect performance."

"Yours respectfully,

"The Management."

Boys in Training for Productive Farm Work

Purdue University Plant in Service Instructing Indiana Youth in Agriculture.

Eighty-four boys, members of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve of Indiana, representing thirty-three counties in the State, began a two-weeks intensive training in the rudiments of agricultural work at Purdue University on Wednesday, June 26th. These boys were nominated by the local directors of the reserve by and with the advice of the chairmen of county councils of defense, each county being entitled to send one boy. Fifty-nine counties reported that all boys of reserve age were either working on farms or in essential industries, and inasmuch as it was considered ill-advised to disturb any such boys these counties are not represented at the camp. This fact accounts for the large number of boys secured from Indianapolis.

Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Maine and Massachusetts are maintaining such camps at their own expense, but the camp in Indiana, through the co-operation of the United States Department of Labor, is being financed by the federal government, the only expense to the boys being their railroad fare.

It is likely that a second camp will be held immediately following the first camp if the boys are available and if the necessary additional funds can be secured.

Counties Represented.

Boys attending camp and counties represented are as follows:

Allen County—Wm. Whiteman, Cleo Thomas.
Benton County—Tilford Smith, Arthur Cyr.
Boone County—Walter T. Ludlow, Harold R. Miller.
Clay County—Joe Decker.
Daviess County—Brayton Smoot.
Decatur County—Charles Stout.
Dubois County—Cyril M. Wilson.
Elkhart County—Geo. M. Davis, J. W. Hawks.
Fountain County—C. E. Adkins, Elisha Metzger, Gilbert Jones.
Gibson County—Charles Taylor, Paul Daugherty.
Grant County—Wm. Neal, Howard Watson.
Hendricks County—Harold Thompson, Herman Pevler.
Jackson County—Lew W. Wallace.
Jennings County—Charles Weber.
Lawrence County—Barney Crowe.
Miami County—Francis Hedden.
Montgomery County—Florian Wisehart, Laverne Lindsay.
Marion County—Maurice L. Wright, Ralph Busch, Thos. F. McNutt, Paul Feucht, Edward Lafen, Max Adler, Earl Babb, Gaines Cartin-hour, Louis Isensee, Chas. W. Moores, Kenneth W. Moor, Lawrence P. Lang, Richard Goode, Robert G. McCready, Gerald L. Griffin, Wm. Terrill, James Freeman, Carl Rothert, George Pierce, Emery W. Todd, Henry J. Frenzel, Vincent Rush, Donald L. Dyne, Richard Coons, Ervin A. Broz, Marion Brown, Byron H. Woods, John W. Neff, Talbot Denny, Albert D. Leane, Valorous McLeay, Herman W. Schrader, Albert Patton.
Monroe County—Dwight Hafich, Albert Patton.
Newton County—Coburn McCain, Geo. D. Rider, Jr.
Noble County—Carlisle Latta.
Owen County—Frederick F. Weymouth, Rotha Sims.
Perry County—James M. Davis.
Pike County—Henry Griffin.
Spencer County—Fred Weymouth, Harlen Hall.
St. Joseph County—Everett Hardman.
Tippecanoe County—Leonard Dye.
Tipton County—Elmer Murphy, Dewey Lane.
Vanderburgh County—Lawrence Russell, Fred Newman, Jack Weil.
Vigo County—Wm. Spork, Aaron Broderick, Rutledge Johnson.
Warrick County—Foley Roberts.

Wayne County—Carl Bradey.
White County—Lindel Rothrock.

Praises Training Camp Idea.

Dean R. S. Watts of the Pennsylvania State College, where 1,200 Pennsylvania boys have been trained this summer for farm work along the same plan as adopted at Purdue, praises the training camp idea and declares that the fundamental principle behind the whole movement is that it will contribute toward winning the war. His experience as related in a letter to Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director of the Boys' Reserve for Indiana, is quoted in part as follows:

"The work of the first camp was undertaken by the college with a great deal of reluctance. Though I operated a large truck farm several years ago mainly with boys, I feared there would be difficulty in giving the boys the training in such a short time that would be of real service to them in actual farm work. I have taken pains to make careful inquiry among the instructors who have been in charge of the high school boys and without exception they speak highly of the progress made by the boys and of the value of the work.

"We have tried to make all of the work as practical as possible. All of the instructors have been cautioned not to lecture at any time but merely to make necessary explanations in connection with the work to be performed. They have adhered to this policy and, though simple directions have been given for mixing spray materials, use of implements, etc., there has been absolutely no lecturing in connection with the farm training work.

"Among the various kinds of work performed might be mentioned currying and harnessing horses, feeding and care of cattle, hogs, swine and poultry, the care and use of farm implements, such as mowers, cultivators, harrows, plows, etc., milking and care of milk, care of dairy animals, plowing, cultivating, hoeing, raking, loading hay, field work in curing alfalfa, digging out stumps, laying pipes, sharpening all sorts of farm tools, spraying and mixing spray materials, rope tying, shocking grain, and other kinds of work common to Pennsylvania farms. It is gratifying to note the interest which all of the boys take in their work; most of them undertake the various operations with real enthusiasm.

"We feel that the training of city boys for farm work will help to win the war and this is the fundamental principle behind the whole movement.

"May I further say that the farm camp movement is worth all that it costs and more in disciplining the boys through the military service and in bringing them into contact with the splendid work of the Y. M. C. A.? I feel personally, as do other members of the school faculty, that the movement is most commendable from every standpoint and that it should be continued as long as the war lasts and perhaps longer on a much larger scale than has been undertaken this year."

Training Camp Helps Farmers.

The following extracts from a letter addressed to Governor James P. Goodrich by Governor Carl E. Milliken of the State of Maine, where the training camp idea was originated, points out the value and urgent need for preparing boys for farm work:

"We feel that this organization in Maine last year was a very material help to the farmers and that it will be even more urgently needed this season. We are therefore planning to run it on an increased scale.

"It was our impression on beginning the work last year that two essential features must be incorporated in the plans if the work was to be successful. First: An organization camp at which the boys should be brought together and given a brief period of intensive training and also the inspiration in a patriotic enterprise. Second: The supervision of group leaders to be continued clear through the season, each leader looking after from fifteen to thirty or even thirty-five boys as circumstances might indicate.

"Our impression at the opening of the work last year has been confirmed by experience that we shall incorporate both of these features in the work this year."

Some German Indictments of Germany

These German accusations against Germany ring with a sincerity that is lacking in her defenders, even when that defender happens to be the German government itself. Any of these books may be borrowed from the Indiana State Library. Ask your local librarian to apply, or if there is no library in your town, write to the State Library for registration blanks. There is no charge except for transportation.

Fernau, H.—The Coming Democracy.

The question of the responsibility for the war and the establishment of a democracy in Germany are discussed by this German writer. The possession of a copy of his earlier book, "Because I Am a German," is punished by death in Germany.

A German.—I Accuse.

One of the strongest arraignment of the German government yet published. It was written, the author says, as "a book of enlightenment for the German people." Its sincerity and depth of feeling carry conviction.

—The Crime.

A new book by the author of "I Accuse." The present work has been written as a "detailed amplification of 'I Accuse'."

German Deserter's War Experience.

The writer was in service in the German army for about fourteen months from the beginning of the war. He was a common soldier but an intelligent one. The book shows that many violations of international law were committed, not as acts of individual soldiers, but under orders and often against the will of those who were forced to take part in them.

Lichnowsky, K. M. von.—Memorandum Regarding the Outbreak of the War.

This is the famous memorandum of the German ambassador to England at the beginning of the war. He throws the blame for the war entirely upon Germany. His testimony is so convincing that it led one of the leading German newspapers in this country to acknowledge frankly and explicitly that it could no longer doubt Germany's responsibility for bringing on the war. Lichnowsky says: "I had to support in London a policy the heresy of which I recognized. That brought down vengeance on me, for it was a sin against the Holy Ghost."

Stuerner, H.—Two War Years in Constantinople.

The author is a German who after a short military service went to Constantinople as correspondent of an important German paper. He became so indignant at German and Turkish methods that he was unable to continue in his position. This book, which records his observations, was written and first published in Switzerland.

Labor Is All There.

(Chicago Tribune.)

Every little while an opportunity is presented of calling attention to the steadfastness of organized labor on principles of democratic soundness and the prevailing social order. With public opinion frequently distorted as to the organic soundness of organized labor in this republic by the violence of strikes and the ferocity and venality of some labor men, it is important to emphasize from time to time that union labor is an energetic, patriotic, sound, and determined element in this republic.

In the emergency when democracy is hit by foes abroad and nibbled at by foes within, organized labor is pro-war, anti-German, pro-democracy, anti-Bolshevik—solid, substantial, hard headed, and hard at work.

The declaration of the St. Paul convention of the American Federation of Labor reaffirms the allegiance of organized labor to every principle of this republic.

Next Labor Day will be patriots' day, when labor testifies to its determination to win this war.

"I have stated before, and I say again, that the next great factor to enlist for the betterment of agriculture and rural life in this Nation is the business man of the town, and the city."—DAVID F. HOUSTON, Secretary of Agriculture.

Road Problems Again Before the Council

Marion and Jackson County Projects Occupy Time of Session of Defense Body.

Much of the time of the State Council meeting July 3 was occupied by the consideration of road problems. Informally, the council indicated a determination to adhere strictly to its established policy in reference to such construction, which is that all matters of this nature should be determined with reference to their contribution to the war program.

W. E. Bash, appearing for the Real Estate Board of Indianapolis, asked the council to approve a plan of re-establishing township lines in order that legal means may be available for financing roads between Indianapolis and Fort Benjamin Harrison. W. W. Spencer, an Indianapolis attorney, also discussed contemplated enlargements of Fort Harrison and the significance thereof to Indianapolis and the State, and urged the council to give its moral support to the proposed action by the Marion county commissioners in modifying the Marion county map. Other speakers were Linton A. Cox, who appeared for the Indianapolis Board of Trade; Martin M. Hugg, Joseph Morgan, W. V. Rooker of the interested attorneys and Luke W. Duffy, chairman of the roads committee of the Chamber of Commerce. All spoke on the Bash proposal. A. E. Reynolds of the council asserted: "This council should not be a clearing house for an Indianapolis quarrel," and further consideration of the matter was deferred for a week.

Edward E. Elsner of Seymour asked that the council approve the construction of cement roadways in Jackson county. He said the contract had been let more than a year ago after the legal processes had been tested in the courts.

Gilbert H. Hendren, State accountant, in explanation of his statement of a few days previous, authorizing the construction of crushed stone and gravel roads in all cases where bonds have been sold, said that he intended where funds are inactive and drawing one-half as much interest as is being paid bondholders, and materials and labor are available, the work ought to go on. It was pointed out by E. M. Wilson that approval of such procedure would involve a change of the council's policy; that the financial consideration involved in road matters had always been secondary; that it was in response to the government's plan to conserve men and materials as well as money, that the council had declared all such improvements should be deferred, except where they had a direct bearing upon the effectiveness of the war program.

D. J. Crittendenberger, representing the Chicago Bonding and Securities Company, declared his company had withheld financial support for the construction of the road out of deference to the declared policies of the State and National war boards.

Reports made by enrolling agents of the Public Service Reserve on the labor situation in Jackson county were read to the council. These indicate a lack of labor in some instances, and in no case a surplus such as might be available for road work.

The council referred the entire subject to the Committee on Proposed Construction, which was directed to hear the statements of the citizens of Jackson county who accompanied Mr. Elsner.

Rev. A. B. Philpott reported a plan to organize the ministers of the State by counties. He then proposed, he said, to inaugurate county-wide patriotic meetings. The council approved the idea.

Isaac D. Straus of the Finance Committee, to which was referred the question of the sale of "blue sky" stock, submitted the following report, which the council approved:

"Reports have reached the State Council of Defense from various sections of the State to the effect that promoters of 'wildcat' companies have become very active in the State of Indiana and are victimizing many people, inducing them by alluring promises to invest their surplus earnings in questionable stocks and bonds in 'wildcat' oil, mining or other companies of little or no value, and in some instances resorting to the pernicious practice of inducing by misrepresentation, an exchange of such worthless securities for Thrift Stamps and Liberty Bonds.

"Therefore, Be it resolved by the State Council of Defense that every National and State bank and trust company in the State of Indiana be requested to include in its regular newspaper advertising matter a reference to the unpatriotic practices of these promoters and offering to give advice and counsel, free of charge, to any individual who is approached by a stock salesman, offering him a higher return on his money than he received from investment in current government securities. It is also requested that suitable posters, which will be prepared and furnished free of charge by the publicity department of the State Council of Defense, be permanently posted in all of the windows of banks and trust companies in the State of Indiana.

"Be it also resolved, that every individual in the State be warned not to purchase any stocks and bonds, particularly those in oil and mining companies, without the advice of some local banker, or which have not been approved by the War Issue Committee of the United States Treasury Department.

"Signed: WILL IRWIN,
ISAAC D. STRAUS."

Dean Stanley Coulter of Purdue university reported the progress being made by the members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve who are taking an intensive course in agricultural work at Purdue. He invited the members of the council to be present at a review at the university in the afternoon of July 7. On motion of Isaac D. Straus, the council recorded a vote of appreciation and thanks to Dean Coulter, President Stone and the faculty of Purdue for the work they are doing in connection with the boys' camp.

Farm Bins for Wheat.

Farmers in sections where the acreage of wheat is unusually large are urged by the Department of Agriculture to provide enough bins on the farm to take care of their wheat when thrashed. This is said to be necessary to save the wheat that will probably pile up in certain localities, because the large crop is likely to put a heavy strain on storage elevators and transportation systems. The wheat should be stored in bins on the farm, according to the Bureau of Markets, which has issued a circular containing plans and drawings for a portable bin that can be quickly built. Copies of this circular have been distributed to county agents throughout the large wheat-producing sections.

Replanting of Frosted Area Tremendous Job

Farmers Are Arranging to Attempt Recoup of Losses Seed Demands Show.

Farmers throughout northern Indiana who suffered losses by the frost of June 22nd are arranging to replant their areas or have already done so, according to a report from Purdue University to the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation. The crop loss in corn alone was at least $8,000,000 and several million more to truck crops, reports of experts in the extension department show.

A large supply of 90-day corn is available at Purdue University. Hundreds of bushels have been shipped by express to the stricken area. Men purchasing this 90-day corn are replanting, hoping that it will mature, or at least make silage. Others are arranging to sow buckwheat in its stead, others soybeans, millet and other crops. Some, too, are planting late potatoes or cabbage.

Mint, which is grown exclusively in muck soils, was frozen to the ground. The roots, however, were not killed and the farmers are expecting these to send out another growth, which will make a lighter crop later in the season.

It has been estimated that 75 per cent of the cabbage in low ground was damaged or killed. Several million cabbage plants have been located and are being sent as ordered to men who wish to reset this crop.

Early potatoes were frozen to the ground in some localities, but new shoots will help produce a light crop. Loss to tomato growers as far south as Tipton was severe, perhaps 25 per cent of the plants being killed.

In muck regions, late potatoes, preferably early varieties, sweet corn, and late cabbage plants may be planted with good results. On sandy or black loam soils, navy beans and cucumbers also may be grown.

Every acre should be replanted in some crop, the State food committee urges, and asks every farmer or city dweller to see that no idle land remains in spite of the frost.

Silo Campaign Is Stimulated.

The unseasonable frost has served to remind the livestock farmer that a silo may be his salvation during the coming winter. Surely it is not necessary to have another fall like the last one to convince every livestock farmer in Indiana that a silo is indispensable.

The silo has proven its worth in Allen County. To-day Allen County has approximately 250 silos in use, and every one has given excellent satisfaction. The county silo committee has received brief statements from more than one hundred of the silo owners relative to the value of the silo. A few of these testimonials, which we quote, appeared in a silo pamphlet recently published by the Allen County silo committee:

Mr. Oscar Evard, of St. Joseph Township, says: "The feeding of ensilage for the past five years has been attended with uniformly good results; however, the silo's chief value lies in the fact that it practically doubles the livestock carrying capacity of the farm."

Mr. Christ Schwartz, of Cedar Creek Township, says: "Having had three years of practical experience in handling and feeding ensilage, we

Patriotism in Indiana

Allen County.—Deputy Food Administrator G. Crouse has compiled a second edition to the list of Allen County consumers who are purchasing sugar outside of their customary sources, and this list is published for the information of dealers in order to prevent them from selling sugar to those named on the list. . . . At a meeting of the county agents of the nine northeastern counties of Indiana at Fort Wayne it was decided to hold a live stock show and agricultural implement demonstration at Kendallville the third week in August. The movement is in charge of the county agents of Allen, Whitley, Huntington, Wells, Lagrange, Steuben, Wabash and Kosciusko counties.

Crawford County.—The matter of waste land in this county is under investigation by the county council of defense. Each owner of a field that is not planted in something will have an opportunity to state why it is unproductive. This is a time when every acre should be doing full duty.

Decatur County.—Butchers report that since the "beef-les" day request was promulgated, beef sales have dropped far short of what was formerly considered normal, and sales of pork have trebled in the same period, showing that patriotic citizens are helping in every way possible to win the war and are doing as requested without complaint. . . . Farm Agent P. D. Brown, after a careful investigation, says that thousands of acres of land in Decatur County which are practically worthless at the present time would make fine grazing land for flocks of sheep, and the hills and valleys of the broken land of this county would be greatly enhanced in value were it not for the menace of dogs. With wool at 68 cents a pound and mutton correspondingly high, sheep raising is a profitable business.

Elkhart County.—Miss Margaret Wilson of the English department of the Elkhart high school has been appointed by Mrs. J. A. S. Mitchell of Goshen, a member of the county council of defense, to be county chairman of the women's section of the State Defense Council's department of education. She has been asked to secure statistics concerning the effect of the war on education. Miss Wilson will list the schools of the county, the number of pupils in the various grades before the war and the number who have quit school because of the war; changes in the various courses caused by the war, such as the elimination of German, the increased interest in current history, and the war receipts used in home economic courses; the part the schools have taken in war activities, such as the purchase of Thrift Stamps, War Savings Stamps, and Liberty Bonds, war gardens, the collecting of waste materials, Red Cross and other relief, and the teaching of patriotism. . . . For serving roast beef sandwiches at a time restricted by the state food administration, Edward Dalka of Elkhart was forced to close his restaurant for a week. . . . In the recent child welfare campaign over 2,000 children were registered by the committee which canvassed the city under the direction of Mrs. R. L. LeFevre, and about one-half of these were examined in clinics conducted in the various school buildings. Of the children examined only one-sixth were found to possess any defect, and most of these suffered from diseased or enlarged tonsils. Not more than twelve children in 1,000 were found to possess serious defects or deformities. . . . On recommendation of the county food administration, A. A. Poorbaugh of Poorbaugh & Riley, and Ignatz Kunovitz of The Fair Store at Goshen have been appointed by the food administration at Washington as price reporters for Elkhart County. They are required to report in detail every week to Washington upon the average retail prices ruling in their respective districts covering about forty of the leading food commodities in the grocery and meat lines.

Floyd County.—A man named Sands, twenty-four years old, is the first man in New Albany to violate the "war loafer" ordinance recently passed by the city council. The mayor gave him the alternative of securing work within three days or going to the penal farm.

Fountain County.—On account of the peculiar conditions of land in this county, the thrashing committee deemed it inexpedient to name a flat rate for all portions of the county, considering it worth more to do the thrashing in some localities than in others. In an estimated average of the county, as a whole, the prices named will be about 4 cents for oats, 6 cents for wheat and 9 cents for rye. . . . A cleaning up in the library of the Attica schools has been made, and among the rubbish thrown in the furnace was all the German books on file. No more German books or teaching goes at this temple of education. This may be pronounced as Attica's latest successful drive. . . . Following is the report of the registration for war service of the women of Fountain County: Total number registered, 5,287; refused to register, 15; Trained in agriculture, 1,428; clerical, 204; domestic, 4,372; industrial, 350; professional, 316; public service, 192; social service, 77; Red Cross and allied relief, 414; miscellaneous, 82; more than one occupation, 1,705.

Fulton County.—William G. Deniston, chairman of the county council of defense, has made arrangements respecting war aid in the conservation of food through the successful harvesting of crops in Fulton County. Edward E. Murphy of Rochester has been appointed chairman of the committee covering labor, and to facilitate the furnishing of help to Fulton County farmers the respective township chairmen of the county council of defense have the right to call Mr. Murphy's phone at Rochester free of charge from June 25 to July 10. This gratis service pertains only to the supplying of farm help, and the arrangement has been agreed to by the telephone exchanges at Akron, Fulton, Kewanna, Macy, Leiters Ford, Talma and Whippoorwill. The township chairmen are: Wayne, Harold Hendrickson; Union, George Calvin; Aub., A. J. Ginther; Liberty, George Black; Richland, Robert Shafer; Newcastle, Charles Jones; Henry, Ivan R. Godwin; Rochester, Milton Smiley.

Gibson County.—Sheriff Phillips and Deputy Fettinger took three jail prisoners and went to the farm of William Fithian in Washington Township, where the five of them assisted in putting up hay. The blisters on the officers' hands testified that they did more than merely watch their prisoners.

Howard County.—Reports received from the thrashing committee of Howard County indicate that the owners of thrashing outfits are showing no disposition to charge exorbitant prices for their work; instead, the thrashers have taken the prices fixed by the State Council of Defense and many contracts have been made. The prevailing prices are as follows: 3 cents for oats, 6 cents for wheat, and 7 cents for rye.

Jasper County.—The Fourth of July celebration, which had been planned at Rensselaer, has been called off following a meeting of the Council of Defense. It was voted unanimously to cancel the proposed celebration that the farmers and their help might put in the day in the harvest fields where it would count for much more in a patriotic way than holding the patriotic demonstration.

Johnson County.—Thrashing prices prevailing in this county are 6 to 8 cents a bushel for wheat; oats, 4 to 5 cents a bushel; rye, 10 cents a bushel. Ample supply of coal for thrashing is assured all Johnson County thrashing crews.

Knox County.—With practically all of Knox County's wheat crop in the shock, grain growers and millers are centering interest in preparation for thrashing and dealing with the threatened shortage of storage bins. To take care of this contingency, the county council of defense has appointed a special committee of which J. H. Barr of Bruceville is chairman. In a public statement, Mr. Barr said: "Farmers all over the county who had intended to rush their wheat to the mills and elevators are making preparations to store the grain on their farms, now that they know the elevators cannot handle but one-third of the crop at thrashing time. Many farmers are repairing their bins and some are building new bins. I feel confident now that the crop will be stored under satisfactory conditions."

Lake County.—Owing to sudden and critical illness, Frank Deming will be unable to carry out the work recently assigned to him by the county council of defense, of making a survey of the churches and schools in Lake County in which German is taught. . . . A striking demonstration of practical patriotism was recently given at Indiana Harbor, when in the space of twelve hours a complete Red Cross chapter home, 30 x 100 feet, was erected. This provides work rooms, offices and store-rooms, and is fully equipped.

Marion County.—A survey of the foreign element employed in industries in Indianapolis is to be taken within the next few days as the first step in the campaign by the State Council of Defense for the Americanization of foreigners who live in Indiana. Indianapolis proper will be taken care of by the Americanization Committee of the Chamber of Commerce. This committee is composed of many of the city's largest employers of labor. The manufacturers will receive a pamphlet patterned after the questionnaire ideas, asking for the names of foreigners who do not speak English. After this census is completed steps will be taken to educate the men and their families at the expense of the industrial institutions by which they are employed. John H. Holliday is chairman of the Chamber of Commerce committee and also serves in the same capacity on the state council committee for the same purpose. R. G. Brush, of the Chamber of Commerce, is secretary. Other members of the committee are Jesse C. Moore, B. A. Worthington, L. M. Wainwright, Eli Lilly, Alfred Kauffman, Ed. Schildhauer, D. S. Brooks, Fred Hoke, John M. Shaw, Edgar H. Evans, H. C. Atkins, F. S. Robinson, Walter Marmion, Fred D. Ensminger, W. A. Hacker, . . . W. A. Artman, William Hume, Everett McGurty and Miss Bessie Power were appointed members of the Pike Township Council of Defense, which was formed at the meeting of the Marion County Council of Defense at the Chamber of Commerce. Other township defense councils are to be formed later. The erection of a new school building for Speedway City was approved. Russell B. Harrison, chairman of the council, made an investigation of the school there and recommended that a new building be erected, as the present one-room school is inadequate. The recommendation carries with it a provision that the Speedway City Company give two or more acres of land and Carl Fisher, James Allison and L. H. Trotter buy the bonds issued at par.

Noble County.—Chairman C. J. Munton of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve has applications for as many as twenty-five boys to help during harvest season. That the boys will be paid adequate wages for their work, and will find good homes while on the farm, is assured. He urges that Noble County boys who have registered with the reserve, or who want to do so, make application to him at once and get properly placed, so that their services may be used when needed.

Owen County.—Acting on the request of the State Council of Defense that everything possible be done to aid the farmers to save all the crops in prospect, Spencer business men have decided to organize for the purpose of offering help to the farmers to offset the shortage in farm labor. J. R. Greene has taken charge of the movement and has enrolled all Spencer men who are willing to devote time to helping the farmers and will attempt to see that each farmer secures the needed help.

Putnam County.—The prices to be charged for thrashing grain in Putnam County this season have been fixed by the State Council of Defense, and will be 4 cents for oats, 7 cents for wheat and 8 cents for rye. The thrashermen of this county organized recently and fixed the price at 5 cents for oats, 10 cents for wheat and 12 cents for rye. The farmers objected and County Agent Fouts took the matter up with the State Council of Defense.

Shelby County.—The war mothers of this county recently had the pleasure of hearing Mrs. McCan of California speak of conditions on the battle front. She has just returned from the French front, and her story has a personal interest for every mother of the organization.

St. Joseph County.—Charles Arthur Carlisle of South Bend has been appointed county food administrator, succeeding A. Frank Eby.

Sullivan County.—The county council of defense has requested G. W. Gambill, its chairman, to appoint a committee to investigate slackers, and report to the council.

Tippecanoe County.—Lafayette is to have a community drying plant to assist the housewives of the city in preserving fruit and vegetables for the winter in the most economical fashion. The garden committee of the Retail Merchants' association and the Rotary club have appropriated $300 for the plant. . . . Thomas Bauer, newly appointed chairman of the Tippecanoe County Council of Defense, is formulating plans for carrying on the work of the organization. The chief modification that Mr. Bauer will make immediately will be the bringing of all war activities of the county, such as Liberty Bonds, Thrift and War Savings Stamps, the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., the K. of C., and the Jewish soldier relief under the general head and direction of the county council of defense, the idea being to secure through this concentration greater efficiency in all the war organizations and work that is being done under various heads. In taking the first step toward this centralization Mr. Bauer has appointed D. M. Boyle, formerly county superintendent of highways, to assist him in preparing data for use in carrying on the work of the council. Mr. Boyle's first work will be to prepare a list of the taxpayers of the county, with an enumeration of their taxable property. This information will be entered upon cards, and when a drive is made for any war activity a glance at the cards will show what men are doing their part, and pressure brought to bear upon those who are not.

Vanderburgh County.—The organization of registered men in Vanderburgh County has been completed through the efforts of William E. Stilwell, Jos. Van Winkle, now president of the organization; James Enale, chairman of the county conscription board, and County Agricultural Agent Atkinson. Percy P. Carroll, chairman of the First Division Appeal Board, has been selected to lead the organization with the title of colonel, it being of a semi-military character, the officers and men drilling and preparing themselves for the future needs of the country. Through Carroll's efforts a patriotic questionnaire was filled out by each man in the organization telling what work the registrant was doing to help win the war and how much money he had loaned the government and how much he had given. This questionnaire plan was copied by other organizations. Carroll called the attention of Provost Marshal General Crowder to the organizations in Vanderburgh County and was asked to furnish detailed information. Carroll did this and has received word from one of General Crowder's aides that the matter has been laid before Crowder, on his personal desk. The approval of General Crowder to the registered organizations was expected to follow soon.

Vigo County.—Arthur Fromme of Terre Haute, before leaving for Camp Sherman recently, made arrangements for the sale of his mount one of the finest saddle horses in the country—at the fair grounds on July 4th the horse to go to the highest bidder, and the proceeds to be turned over to the Red Cross. This will prove an attractive feature for the day's program, and the Red Cross is expected to net quite a tidy little sum from the sale.

Wabash County.—Wabash County is to have a Liberty Guard battalion. Commissioned officers from all of the six organized companies are highly enthused and are turning in splendid reports from every chapter. There are now about 590 men on the muster roll, enough to perfect the battalion organization with ease. The companies from Wabash, North Manchester, Roann and Urbana will constitute the one battalion, while the companies from Lagro, Somerset and LaFontaine will report for duty with this battalion until the regimental organization is formed. The regiment will consist of three battalions from Wabash and Huntington counties and this organization will be formed as soon as the battalion is completed.

Warren County.—Thrashermen of Warren County met at the invitation of M. A. McDonald, food administrator, at Williamsport and agreed to charge 3 cents for oats, 6 cents for wheat and 7 cents for rye thrashing. They also planned to take such steps as have been recommended by the thrashing division of the food administration to save grain by repairing their machines where necessary and by making their wagons grain proof. Mr. McDonald will assist the farmers' wives in securing the necessary sugar for the harvest meals and for the canning and preserving of fruits and vegetables, of which there is a large crop this year.

Warrick County.—Mrs. Elizabeth Betteiger, age 74, is doing her conservation bit in an unusual way. Her plan is simple; she is saving the wheat that in ordinary years is permitted to stand on the field—the wheat the binder did not get. She expects to cover a thirty-acre field, walking every step of the way. . . . Reports from the county agent indicate the practical nature of the help rendered the farmers during this rush season. At least fifty business and professional men went out and drove binders and cut hay, giving their services for the entire day; another organization of practically 200 men from Boonville and Newburgh would go out each evening about five o'clock and work until dark. Approximately 400 acres of heavy wheat was put in the shock by these men.

Whitley County—A Woman's Motor corps has been organized in this county, with Miss Katherine McLallen at its head. One of their immediate duties will be to furnish transportation back and forth each day for the men who have volunteered to go into the country and aid the farmers.

Food Administration

Jeremiah Fitzgerald, a Terre Haute baker, was permitted to pay to a war charities fund \$1,371.02, which sum represents  $\frac{1}{2}$  cent per loaf for bread baked by him during the month of May without the required amount of wheat flour substitute. He was given the alternative of making this payment or of suspending business.

Indiana sugar retailers who have been charging 10 cents per pound straight, are in danger of being cut off from their source of supply, Dr. Barnard announces. The price should be not to exceed 9  $\frac{1}{2}$  cents except for a single pound, which sells for 10 cents. For larger quantities there must be a proportionate reduction consistent with the regulation that the maximum sugar profit be 1 cent per pound.

The Pearl Roller Mills, operated by Oscar V. Rouse of Indianapolis, under the firm name of William Rouse & Son, a $100,000 business, has been taken over by the United States Food Administration for five offenses against the wheat flour substitute and mill-feed price regulations. This is the most radical step the Indiana food administration has taken in its determination to enforce the regulations, and it is expected to prove a warning and an example to other millers who may be trying to "put one over."

The privilege heretofore accorded housewives to accumulate sugar without certificates, for canning and preserving purposes, has been withdrawn, and after July 1 (or receipt of notice) retailers are charged with the duty of securing from every housewife asking sugar for such purposes to sign a statement of the sugar on hand, if any, bought for the purpose, if any, its use, and purpose for which additional supplies are desired; whether any purchase has been made for the same purpose elsewhere, etc. The sugar distributor is furnishing blanks to retailers, who will forfeit their privilege of restocking by failure to secure the certificates.

As a step in the conservation of sugar the Indiana Manufacturers of Dairy Products have agreed to restrict their output of ice cream to three flavors, vanilla, chocolate and strawberry. Accordingly Dr. Barnard has directed county food administrators to order the same limitations to all ice cream makers in their jurisdictions. Failure to comply with the regulation will mean that the offender will be deprived of all sugar for the period of the war.

German Soldier's Diary Tells of an Ugly Task.

The diary of a German soldier of the Five Hundred and Eighty-eighth Landwehr Regiment, made prisoner in November, 1917, contained the following confession:

"Since the 10th of this month, 50 women and young girls from Aertryke have been working on the concrete shelters of Leke. As Leke is in the zone of fire and has been bombarded not later than yesterday, I do not understand once more the authorities. If that measure has not been taken as reprisals it constitutes for Germany a monument of shame so great that it is not possible to conceive a greater one. Three or four weeks ago they drove out the civil population of Leke, and now they oblige women and children to work on concrete shelters of the village. It is a shame that this measure has been taken, for it is I who, every morning, bring the group of 47 women to Leke and conduct them back to Aertryke."

Red Cross Activities

Indiana, during the June nurse enrolling campaign, secured 91 prospective enrollments against a quota of 85, Miss Anna Gladwin, acting director of nursing at Lake Division headquarters, announced today.

Ohio reports show 339 prospective enrollments on a quota of 360 and Kentucky 50 on a quota of 52.

The division lacks 17 fulfilling its June quota.

All local nursing enrolling committees are preparing to maintain their organizations for the period of the war.

Seed Wheat Is Located In Every Indiana County

More than 800 wheat fields of pure varieties, free from disease and weeds, have been located in every part and including every county in the State and will be used for seed purposes this fall. These fields were located and inspected by representatives of the Purdue University, U. S. Department of Agriculture, and county and emergency demonstration agents, and wheat committees co-operating. This is the first step in the 1919 wheat production campaign.

All these seed fields will be given local publicity and every farmer in the county where he lives will have an opportunity to get all the disease-free seed he needs for sowing this fall. The growers will hold the wheat for a reasonable time to be sold as seed. Grain dealers and millers are co-operating by buying some of this seed to be redistributed where the grower does not have storage facilities.

Every county is organized to eliminate waste at harvest time and to boost production for the coming year. The thrashing committee appointed by the food administration in co-operation with county agents, better farming associations and special wheat production committees are getting out placards to be placed on thrashing machines outlining the points to be remembered in the grain saving campaign. Local committees also are collecting information in co-operation with the thrashermen on the acreage for 1918 and 1919, yield, varieties sown and storage facilities.

The local organization, working with the State Committee on Food Production and Conservation, is planning on starting the drive for increased production next year at thrashing time and it will be continued until sowing time. The important points to be emphasized are:

That the acreage must be maintained; that yields can be increased by sowing seed of good varieties free from disease and weeds; by proper fertilization and that fertilizer must be ordered early; by good seed bed preparation and proper care in seeding.

The campaign will be led in each county by a county leader, in each township by a township leader and by a leader in each thrashing ring.

Chapter Builds and Equips a Red Cross Working Home in One Day's Time

Indiana Harbor (Ind.) Red Cross Home

(From Lake Division News.)

At sunrise on April 27, the site of the Indiana Harbor (Ind.) Red Cross chapter home was just a stretch of bare sand.

By sunset of the same day a fine, permanent building had been erected. In twelve hours a complete chapter home 30 by 100 feet, which provided work rooms, offices and store-rooms, was complete and fully equipped.

The Indiana Harbor folks demonstrated that co-operation of the brand made famous by the early settlers with their log house-raising is a good sort of 1918 win-the-war co-operation.

Labor unions helped recruit the labor, which was largely donated. Building supply establishments were instrumental in getting material either donated or obtained at low cost. Grocers and butchers supplied food which was prepared by women workers and served in turn by young women to the men who were engaged in the actual building task.

As stated above, the ground was broken early in the morning; mason work and carpenter work and roofing were finished in short order. A truck ran to Chicago and brought back the furnace, which was immediately installed. A steam heating system was put in. Fixtures, furniture and sewing machines were placed in the rooms.

Even that unsightliness which usually characterizes the exterior of new buildings was obliterated with grading, new turf and walks.

At 6 p. m. by the new clock on the mantel, electric lights were burning, the Stars and Stripes were floating from the flag staff on the roof, and the new chapter house supervisor was on duty.

As the accompanying photograph shows, the building is no cheap, tawdry shell, but a well constructed, attractive quarters, capable of serving the Indiana Harbor Chapter long after its war activities become memories.

The same energetic co-operation that marked the building of this chapter house has been characteristic of all the work of this chapter, according to reports which have reached the division headquarters. Soon after the chapter was organized on May 30, 1917, classes to train instructors were formed and by fall the need of larger quarters for workers became apparent.

The school assembly room then in use gave place to the large recreation room at fire station No. 2. But again in April it became evident to the directors that the ever-increasing work of the chapter required larger headquarters.

On Friday, April 19th, the building of a chapter house was suggested at an executive committee meeting, and just eight days later the new chapter house was ready for use.

Indiana Harbor is an industrial center of from 15,000 to 20,000 population, made up of representatives from forty foreign countries and provinces.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and state governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Selfmade Exiles.

Liberty Loan and Red Cross drives disclose in nearly every community certain obstinate slackers. They are so few nowadays that they at once become notorious and are pointed out—like the man with the rubber ear and the armless boy—dismal freaks standing in sharp contrast to normal humanity.

Very rarely are they pro-German. Pro-Germanism does not advertise itself now in that conspicuous way. Mostly they are grouches and sponges. Their simple psychology is that of a pig in a clover patch. While the feeding is good, nothing less than the impact of a rock against the ribs or of a scantling on the spinal column will inspire them to move on. So long as somebody else will keep the boat going they will neither bail nor row. They are the cross-grained, bilious sort which nurses all real or fancied grievances against the community in general.

Small as their number is, they raise an irritating problem. The community's feeling toward them is like the feeling of men who have been volunteering to put out a fire toward the able-bodied citizen who refused to lend a hand but perched on a horse block at a safe distance and watched their efforts with amused interest. The inclination to throw a brick in his direction is strong and natural. But it must be resisted.

There is nothing to be done with these obstinate slackers except to let them extensively alone. No man can thrive on the contempt of the community in which he lives. They must find that out. The man who is well able to lend a hand now and refuses to do it voluntarily exiles himself from the sympathy and respect of his neighbors. Let his own judgment upon himself as an exile stand in the future.—Saturday Evening Post.

Attention,
County Councils

General Bulletin No. 164.

June 25, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

The Federal Labor Director for Indiana desires to perfect an organization of the several counties for the purpose of carrying on more effectively the work of his department and has requested the State Council of Defense to ask each County Council of Defense to nominate a man and a woman to act as his County Representatives. The persons nominated should either be members of the County Council or should be made members ex-officio as soon as they are actually appointed by the Federal Director. Please do not recommend the County Director of the Public Service Reserve or the Boys' Working Reserve, as the duties of these Directors will conflict with the duties of the Labor Director.

Please take immediate action on this matter. We will appreciate having the nominations of every county before the last of the first week of July. STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

"Lafayette, we are here!"—Pershing.

Food wasted is food lost and no money can replace it.

COST TO THE CONSUMER OF A POUND LOAF OF BREAD

Since 1913 farmers have been receiving for their wheat a gradually increasing proportion of the price paid by the consumer for bread. The amount received by the wheat grower for his contribution to the average pound has increased from less than 1½ cents per loaf in 1913 to more than 3½ cents early this year. The proportion to the whole price is shown by the relative length of the black columns of the chart.

The middle portion of each column shows what the miller received for his milling costs and profit. This has been a somewhat variable factor, but is now at the minimum (6%). In this 6%, however, is included the cost of the containers (bags, sacks, etc.), shown as dotted area, which has increased very nearly in proportion to the price of bread itself. Bags now cost about 50% more than in 1913 and 1914.

The shaded portion of the column represents the expense of distributing the flour, making it into bread and getting the loaf to the consumer.

The chart shows that the farmer is now receiving a much larger share of the final price for his product than in the past, and that a considerable amount of "spread" has been taken out of other expenses.

War Gardeners Can Still Beat Jack Frost

Because of the frost damage, war gardeners should not be discouraged. This loss is going to make the growing of other food just that much more important, and anyone who has lost a crop or part of it should continue his work, because there is plenty of opportunity yet to raise good gardens.

The following crops, varieties and dates for sowing will be of value to war gardeners:

String beans—Every two weeks until July 30, Stringless Green Pod.

Beets—June 30 to July 15, Crosby Egyptian or Detroit Dark Red.

Late Cabbage—Set now for winter cabbage, Flat Dutch, Danish Ballhead.

Carrots—Until July 1, Danvers' Half Long.

Potatoes—Until July 1, preferably an early variety, although Rural New Yorkers may be planted.

Sweet corn—June 30 to July 15, Golden Bantam or other early varieties.

Turnips—July 25 to August 15, Purple Top Globe.

Large Wheat Acreage Urged by Warren T. McCray

June 28th, 1918.

TO THE FARMERS OF INDIANA:

The good people of Indiana have measured up to their responsibilities in all the various war activities most zealously and patriotically. They have endeavored to carry out all the governmental orders regarding increased production in a most efficient manner.

The present need is to maintain the splendid acreage of winter wheat crop of 1917 or to increase it where it can be done without too great risk. It is almost too much to anticipate another year of such magnificent prospects, and in order to equal the production this year, it would be wise to increase the acreage.

The farmers of Indiana are therefore urged to again sow a full crop of wheat. They should pay especial attention to their seed, and its treatment for the eradication of smut, the proper preparation of the seed bed, the matter of fertilization and all the necessary and important details that contribute toward a full crop.

Trusting this will receive your most careful attention and consideration, I am

Yours very truly,

Signed: WARREN T. McCRAY,
Chairman Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation.

Program at Purdue July 7th.

A special program will be conducted at Purdue University July 7th, when the 84 members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve will have completed the brief intensive course of training in agricultural work. Representatives of the State and National Councils of Defense will be present. Farmers and others have been invited to attend and make contracts with the boys, who are pledged to work on Indiana farms four weeks following the completion of the course.

Child Labor Law Is To Be Enforced Here

South Bend.—The St. Joseph County Council of Defense made inquiry of the State organization regarding the status of the child labor law, which was declared unconstitutional in Federal court some time ago. It seems that in this instance there was a boy under the required age before they can be employed in factories, made application here. In reply M. E. Foley, who is chairman of the State Council, in replying to the inquiry stated that he had taken the matter up with Judge Artman, who is the State chairman of the compensation board, and the Judge gave out the information that it was their intention to enforce the law everywhere. The Federal Child Labor Law, which was recently held unconstitutional, Judge Artman stated, was not looked upon favorably by the Federal authorities in general and that the President and Secretary Baker are insisting that the local State's laws on this subject be enforced, so that from the statement of Judge Artman it would simply result in prosecution if any attempt were made to employ this boy in a factory.

John L. On the Hun.

Shortly before his death John L. Sullivan had something to say about the Hun. "We're goin' to get that bird," he said, "we're goin' to get him sure. An' I'll tell you why I know. Because he got mad so quick. All that hate stuff, I mean. In the fightin' ring, when you see a man begin to boil up an' see red in the first round, you know that next thing he won't be able to see at all. What's my best words to the boys in camp? Just this. Tell 'em they can't go wrong if they keep their feet warm an' their heads cool, their eyes open an' their mouths shut."

German Ideals and Aspirations

Nearly all the items listed below give the German ideals in their own words. They have a very extraordinary sound to American ears. Any of the books mentioned may be borrowed from the Indiana State Library. Ask your local librarian to apply, or if there is no library where you live, write to the State Library for registration blanks. There is no charge except for transportation.

Archer, W., comp. Gems (?) of German Thought.

A careful compilation of extracts from well-known German writings on such subjects as war, England, German ambitions, etc. The introduction is worth reading.

Bang, J. P. Hurrah and Hallelujah.

"The teachings of Germany's poets, prophets, professors and preachers." A translation from the Danish.

Bernhardi, F. von. Germany and the Next War.

"Duty" to make war. Germany's "historical mission."

Chapman, J. J. Deutschland Uber Alles, or Germany Speaks.

These extracts are fewer and longer than the other collections noted, and there is more comment by the compiler.

Cheradame, A. The United States and Pan-Germania.

A brief account of the Pan-German plan, which the author has watched for twenty-two years. He warns against a premature peace, leaving Germany in possession of her goal.

Conquest and Kultur.

This pamphlet, issued by the Committee on Public Information, gives "the aims of the Germans in their own words." Copies can be obtained free by writing to Washington.

Out of Their Own Mouths.

"Utterances of German rulers, statesmen, savants, publicists, journalists, poets, business men, party leaders and soldiers."

Treitschke, H. von. Politics.

A translation of some of the lectures which have had such a wide influence in Germany. The introduction by Arthur J. Balfour is interesting and illuminating.

The Price

By Mary H. Krout.

Over the Nation War stretched forth his hand,
With its black shadow quenching all the light
From the white mountain peaks to where the land
Sees the first dawn that breaks upon the night.

"Long have I stood," the Nation said, "for Peace;
Vainly I sought to quell the threatening foe,
Ere with your blasting hate you shall release
Famine and slaughter with their train of woe."

Reason and gentleness had lost their power;
"I will not spare," he said, "I shall destroy;
Vain is all mercy in this fateful hour—
I spurn your grief, I mock your hope and joy."

Then spoke the Nation: "I will pay the price
To save the heritage I love so well,
Where 'mid their fruitful fields my children stray,
Where sleep the martyrs who for freedom fell."

"For Liberty? 'Tis that I loathe and hate,
'Tis that I would forever crush and kill;
For this I shall strive on till, soon or late,
My strong, relentless arm has wrought its will."

"Then I shall give," the Nation said, "this hour
That which to me is dearest, nearest, best,
My dauntless sons—of all the earth the flower—
Those I would gather to my sheltering breast."

"Proud spirits, noble heroes will I give—
Those who had glorious work to do in years to come;
Where one shall fall so shall ten thousand live,
And still shall speak when alien lips are dumb."

"Through your thick smoke and carnage shall they cry,
Invoking Freedom with their latest breath.
In such a triumph it is naught to die,
For they shall find supernal life in death."

One Year of Food Administration

THE AIMS

By willing service of a free people to do these things:

To feed the Allies that they may continue to fight.

To feed the hungry in Belgium and other lands that they may continue to live.

To feed our own soldiers overseas that they may want nothing.

To keep prices steady and the flow of distribution even that the poor at home may be satisfied nor feel the pinch of hunger.

THE METHOD

As a military necessity, Americans eat potatoes instead of wheat, dip carefully into the sugar bowl, make their clothes last longer, save their income above bare need for government funds, set their clocks an hour earlier, cultivate the home garden, preserve fruits against the winter, calculate their household provision, regulate their expenditures of money and food and energy.

Allied strategy shapes the food conservation campaign.

Military urgency gives force to every food regulation.

All needs bend to army requirements. Moving the army, equipping the army, supplying the army, sustaining the army—the army's needs always come first.

Food, iron, wool, leather—our labor, our strength, our hopes, our prayers—the army has first claim on all.

Vessel room limits the number of men we can send; cargo space limits the food and equipment we can put in their hands.

War dictates all exports and imports. War governs our shipments of wheat and meat, our consumption of sugar, our allowance of coffee.

War needs rule our eating and going without. War needs fix what we shall wear, what we shall spend, what we shall save. War needs direct our living to the last detail.

Carrying capacity sets the margins for using or giving up.

EUROPE'S NEEDS

In Belgium, 1,600,000 stand daily in line for a morsel of bread and a sup of soup.

In France, the bread ration, which is half their living, is cut down one-third.

England has cut down sugar one half; France and Italy allow one pound a month for each person.

All European countries are eating war bread mixed with all the substitutes it will stand.

Meat in all countries is strictly rationed—usually about one pound a week for each person.

Multitudes—some estimate 4,000,000—in Europe have died for want of food since war began.

All Allied Europe depends on food from America.

America is giving up wheat that war needs may be met—every grain the ships can carry is needed to hold intact the armies of France and England and Italy and to save Belgium from starving.

America is sending beef and pork to the limit of shipping capacity to sustain the armies and the allies.

America is denying herself coffee, doing without tropical fruits and oriental luxuries to release shipping for war.

Americans are shaping their traffic to supply the nation's needs, to maintain the strength of millions without waste, to provision the community at the least cost.

Nations at war have been learning and doing these things through three terrible years. America also is learning and doing.

THE RESULTS

Exports of pork products for March, 1918, were over 50 per cent. larger than for any previous month in the past seven years and almost three times as great as the highest amount exported in any month in the four years before 1914.

Exports of beef products for March, 1918, were over 20 per cent. larger than for any previous month in the past seven years and more than twice as great as the highest amount exported in any month in the four years before 1915.

Exports of rye and rye flour from the beginning of the fiscal year, July 1, 1917, through March, 1918, are 32 per cent. larger than last year; of barley 55 per cent. larger; of oats and oatmeal 34 per cent. larger.

The wholesale price of flour at Minneapolis on May 15, 1917, the date of the Food Administrator's appointment, was $16.75; on May 4, 1918, it was $8.80, a decrease of $6.95 or 41 per cent.

On May 15, 1917, the difference between what the farmer got for his wheat and the wholesale price of flour was equivalent to $5.68 per barrel while on May 4, 1918, this difference amounted to only 64 cents.

The index number of producers' prices for March, 1918, shows an increase of 27 per cent. over August, 1917, while the index number of consumers' prices decreased 13 per cent.

From July 1, 1917, to March 31, 1918, we have exported to our Allies 80,000,000 bushels of wheat and flour, or 124 per cent. of the amount available for export on July 1, while a year ago during the same period we exported to the Allies only 51 per cent. of the amount available for export on July 1.

The wholesale price of refined sugar at the end of April, 1917, was 7.3 cents per pound while a year ago it was 8.33 cents per pound, a decrease of 12 per cent. In the same period the margin between the price of raw and refined sugar has been reduced from 2.12 cents to 1.3 cents per pound.

Women Are Making Heroic Sacrifices

France Has Witnessed Great Spiritual Awakening, Which Must Likewise Influence American Households.

This letter from a French sister to her brother shows the extreme sacrifices being made by the women of France:

"My Dear Edward—The news has come that Charles and Lucien were killed on the 28th of August. Eugene is dangerously wounded. Louis and Jean both are dead. Rose cannot be found. Mother weeps, but she says that you are strong and she desires that you avenge the others. I hope your chief will not refuse to let you go. Jean had the Legion of Honor; you will win it. They have taken all. Of eleven who went to war, eight are dead. My dear brother, do your duty; we only ask that. God who gave you your dear life has the right to take it again, mama says. We wish to see you before you go. The Prussians are here. The Jawdon boy is dead. They have pillaged everywhere. The cowards! Go, my dear brother, make your sacrifice. We cherish the hope of seeing you again; something bids us hope. We embrace you with all our hearts. Adieu and au revoir, if God wills.

"Your Sister.
"It is for us and for France. Remember your brothers and our grandfather in '70."

The women of America, too, stand ready to bear their share of the present allied sacrifice for liberty and right.

They have neither time nor inclination for idleness and selfish living. They are ready to practice thrift. No longer are they living to eat but they are eating to live. And they have found they can live on much less than they thought necessary. This reduction in consumption is by no means endangering health, but is making for a better and sounder race.

Not only have the people of America learned that they can reduce the amount they have been accustomed to eat without any real inconvenience, but they can also give up the things they had thought vital in their diet and substitute little known foods which have the same food values, and do without things heretofore considered necessities, but which in war's emergencies must be described as luxuries.

For the next three months the women of America must lead in the giving up of wheat entirely. To those women who have already tasted the supreme sacrifice of sending their men into the battle zone, this sacrifice will seem as nothing. But there is a labor and leadership demanded of them to show others the way.

New wheatless bread recipes which are being devised by dietitians and by women who have experimented in their own kitchens can be had by applying to local food administrators. There is no need for any housewife to remain ignorant of the ways to make her patriotism count in the kitchen.

Indiana women shortly will be called upon to forego many of the indulgences that heretofore have taken men for their manufacture, their transportation, sale and delivery. They will be urged to do without the things that indirectly make for a competition with the war program of the government, and to get in step with the one big movement that has for its single object the defeat of Prussian militarism, and that at no matter what cost.

Woman's Section

A splendid report on registration comes from Tipton County, all of whose war work ranks high. The chairman, Mrs. Gifford, reports that each of the six townships had a chairman, who in turn had a precinct chairman. Altogether in the county were forty-eight chairmen, and over two hundred helpers. With the exception of two townships, there were polls established in each precinct, and those unable to go to the polls to register were visited in their homes. High school girls registered in the school buildings. Four thousand eight hundred and twelve women registered during the ten days time. Only twenty-six refused to register, but some were missed in the canvass. Of the thirty-seven hundred and eleven housewives who registered, ten hundred and twelve also registered for agriculture.

One hundred and eighty-three women trained in clerical work, nursing, teaching and factory work offered services anywhere in the United States, and a few were willing to go abroad if necessary. Ninety-four women asked for advanced clerical, business and nursing training, signifying willingness to leave their homes if needed for service. In almost every instance, when it was possible, the registrant signed to do Red Cross work.

The unusual vocations noted in Tipton County were three undertakers, five merchants, five trained nurses, five stenotype operators, one telegrapher, three mail carriers, three ministers. One hundred and ninety-one students were registered.

Eleven people in Tipton County offered their homes for convalescent hospitals, and six are willing to share their homes with war widows and children.

Reports of Red Cross work in Jasper County for last month show the shipment of 1875 surgical dressings, 291 hospital garments and knitted articles, and 50 comfort kits, all filled.

In Union County $227 was collected during the month for the Red Cross, and shipments amounted to 19,116 surgical dressings and 60 pairs of socks. The chairman in Union County reports that they hope to fill an order for 400 pairs more by September.

As a result of the registration of women in St. Joseph County twenty-six munitions workers and three government workers have been placed in factories, a home secured for a blind boy who is a dependent of a brother in the service, and many volunteer workers were secured for the War Chest office and registration headquarters. There is also on file a list of ten workers who will spend six hours a day in their homes on government work.

A splendid proof of the value of registration comes with a list from Hancock County of the women who wish to take nurses' training—thirty, all well recommended.

Hospitality served a high purpose when Mrs. C. J. Winterbotham, the woman member of the Henry County Council of Defense, entertained at a one o'clock luncheon the members of the executive board and the fourteen-minute women. Each chairman gave a report of her work, which served to inform the other chairmen of the various lines of work and strengthen enthusiasm for the work of each department.

The War Mothers recently had an auction of donated articles, including everything from a ton of coal to a pig, canned fruit, furniture, clothing, etc. The auction lasted from noon till midnight. Many articles were resold a number of times and netted $528.74. The fund will be used to buy yarn to be used in knitting for soldiers. One hundred and thirty-seven war mothers are paying dues in the county organization. The townships are soon to be organized, so that they may have separate meetings and report to the county chairman, Mrs. P. L. Beal. The war mothers were guests of honor at a patriotic meeting conducted by the Pythian Sisters, June 28, when fifteen stars were added to the service flag.

Registration of women for service has been completed and over 10,000 cards are being filed in a new cabinet furnished by the Council of Defense, where they will be under lock and key and in charge of Mrs. Frank Stanley, the efficient chairman of registration.

More Extended Use of Fish

Fish for Friday, Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday.

Pick out at least two or three days a week for fish days. These menus and recipes suggested by the United States Food Administration will help you to see some of the possibilities of cultivating your taste along these lines, thus serving to conserve food by substituting perishables for the beef that is wanted for export to France.

Halibut with Mexican Sauce.
Sweet Potato Cakes.
New String Beans.
Strawberries. Coffee.

Creamed Fish and Potatoes a la Cape Cod.
Green Peas.
Lettuce Salad.
Peaches. Wheatless Sponge Cake.

Jellied Salmon Loaf with Nippy Sauce.
Hominy.
Frozen Apricots. Wheatless Cookies.

Halibut with Mexican Sauce.
6 slices of halibut.
2 tablespoons corn flour.
2 teaspoons salt.
2 tablespoons fat.
1 teaspoon Worcestershire.
1½ cups water.

Dredge halibut with corn flour and salt. Melt fat in baking dish and brown slices of halibut on top of stove. Pour water and Worcestershire over fish and bake in a moderate oven 35 minutes. Then pour Mexican sauce over fish, bake 15 minutes and serve.

Mexican Sauce.
2 cups tomato.
1 tablespoon grated onion.
3 tablespoons corn flour.
2 teaspoons salt.
¼ cup cold water.
1 chopped green or red pepper.

Bring tomatoes and onion to boiling point. Mix corn flour and salt with cold water and add to tomatoes, stirring constantly; add pepper and pour over fish.

Creamed Fish and Potatoes a la Cape Cod.
3 tablespoons fat.
4 tablespoons corn flour.
2 cups milk.
1 cup cold diced potatoes.
1 cup flaked cooked codfish.

Melt fat in saucepan, add corn flour, salt and pepper, remove from the fire, add milk, return to the fire, and bring to the boiling point. Add potatoes and codfish, mix thoroughly, and serve at once.

Jellied Salmon Loaf with Nippy Sauce.
1 envelope or
2 tablespoons gelatin.
½ cup cold water.
2 cups boiling water.
1 teaspoon salt.
¼ teaspoon pepper.
Juice of 1 lemon.
1 can salmon.
1 cup cooked peas.

Add cold water to gelatin, and after allowing to stand five minutes to soften, add the boiling water and stir until gelatin has dissolved. Add salt, pepper and lemon. Pour into a loaf-pan or mold which has been wet in cold water. After mixture begins to thicken, add flaked salmon and peas. Put in a cold place for several hours until firm. Serve cold with nippy sauce.

Nippy Sauce.
½ cup whipping cream.
2 tablespoons horseradish.
½ teaspoon salt.
¼ teaspoon paprika.
1 tablespoon vinegar.

Beat the cream until stiff, add horseradish, salt, pepper and vinegar very slowly, so that mixture does not curdle. This sauce should be served immediately after making.

Mrs. Hurrell Outlines Americanization Work

The following bulletin has been addressed by the head of the Americanization committee of the Woman's Section of the Indiana State Council of Defense to her co-workers in the counties of the State:

Bulletin No. 80.

Indianapolis, July 1, 1918.

To the Chairman of Americanization,
Woman's Section, Council of Defense.
Dear Chairman of Americanization:

You have already received Bulletin 74, which outlines the units of the Americanization work as well as the State organizations of women pledged to help make Indiana a State of one language and one people.

For many years before the war, Americanization had been treated as an academic subject, discussed in lectures and essay. The war soon disclosed the need of a united people back of the firing line and revealed the menace of an un-Americanized population. It became immediately necessary to transform the academic and abstract into a concrete and tangible task to which all loyal Americans might address themselves. For many years groups of women in Indiana have had definitely in mind the interpretation of America to the foreign born and have organized committees on Americanization to that end. Much good has resulted. However, it has been a difficult problem to decide upon methods and division of work. Naturally, however, there has been duplication of effort and a certain amount of haphazard work. Recognizing Americanization as a war service, the Woman's Section of the State Council of Defense has undertaken to coordinate and centralize this work.

This, accordingly, becomes the task of the chairmen of Americanization in the Council of Defense to formulate constructive plans, whereby agencies already organized can work intensively for a basic unit of the entire task, the Council acting as a clearing house for the various lines of work.

Bulletin 74 shows the units of work to be five in number, namely: 1. Educational extension; 2. Social service; 3. Industrial; 4. Citizenship; 5. War information service. The county chairman of Americanization will endeavor to interest the woman's clubs and the parent-teacher association in her county in the extension of educational privileges to foreign women. This can best be done by means of the home-teacher vocational evening classes and other ways that will be suggested by local conditions.

In your county there are missionary societies, missions, Red Cross civilian relief associations, etc., already interested in the problem of the alien family. You will stimulate these agencies toward increasing recreational privileges and improving social conditions in their community.

If foreign women are employed in your community, delegate to civic clubs or to business women's clubs the task of making a survey of the conditions under which these women labor. Lend your influence toward establishing part time vocational classes in factories where foreign women are employed.

The Franchise League in your county will work intensively for the naturalization of the alien women in your community and will, no doubt, be able to secure municipal co-operation in fitting women for citizenship.

Few immigrant women can co-operate in helpful war service. Ask the Daughters of the American Revolution in your county to establish war information service, for the purpose of supplying to all immigrants accurate and sympathetic information on all war questions affecting them. See that each foreign woman in your community interprets understandingly the food regulations, the draft requirement, Red Cross work. Patriotic organizations will distribute flags and posters at your suggestions.

"We are all comrades in a great enterprise."—Woodrow Wilson.

We are heirs of great happenings. Shall we surrender our inheritance?

The Council of National Defense, acting jointly with the Federal Bureau of Education, has pledged itself to foster a movement to establish community centers in every foreign section of our country. The school house is specially fitted for this purpose. It is the one place in every community in which all have equal rights and all are equally at home. It is to be hoped that Indiana, always so alert in advancing movements for social betterment, will at once undertake to make every school house "a little democracy."

As an appendix to this bulletin I am enclosing a list of publications by means of which a preliminary knowledge of the subject of Americanization may be promptly secured. None of these pamphlets can be obtained in large quantities, so it would seem wise if the chairman retain them as the property of the County Council and loan them to the organization chairman interested.

Prompt and frequent reports on activities will be very encouraging and helpful.

Sincerely yours,

WINIFRED HURRELL.

Replanting of Frosted Area Tremendous Job

find it not only a convenience in feeding but an excellent and practically unexcelled feed for young stock as well as beef and dairy cattle."

Mr. Oren R. Yerks, of Milan Township, says: "As the owner of a silo, I wish to say I have had but one season's use and I am well pleased with the results. I filled my silo on sweet corn fodder after I marketed the best corn in Fort Wayne. I heard that silage wasn't good for horses, but I was forced to feed it. My hay was beneath the clover seed and couldn't get it hulled. I had three acres of fodder, which is all I fed (the rest was silage) to eight head of horses and five head of cattle till the first of April. I fed all they would eat and I never had my horses looking better and could do a good day's work. All run together in and out of the barn night and day at will. I consider I saved one-half the cost of my silo last winter."

Mr. E. A. Sordelet, superintendent of the new county farm, says: "The silo is equally as necessary as a barn: the barn is built to save the clover hay, the silo is built to save all the corn crop, including the corn stover, which after going through a stage of fermentation is soft and palatable, therefore easy to digest. Clover hay and cotton seed meal should be fed with ensilage for best results. Plenty of ensilage, clover hay and stock will pay off the old mortgage and make the land more productive."

The value of the silo has also been proven in demonstration work conducted in Decatur County: "Co-operative work carried on in Decatur County with the assistance of Purdue University on one farm in the years 1915-16 show in a lot of 51 head fed corn, cotton seed meal, clover hay the profit per head was $1.96 and in a lot of 59 head on the same farm fed corn, cotton seed meal, clover hay and silage showed a profit per head of $13.96. This is a difference of $9.00 per head in favor of silage fed cattle. Including the pork made, the difference is $7.08 per head. The grain feed necessary per pound of grain for the silage fed cattle was 3.53 pounds and for those fed no silage was 6.9 pounds."

No Apple Show in 1918.

Because of war conditions, the executive board of the Indiana Horticultural Society has decided not to hold an apple show this year, according to an announcement received by the State Food Committee. This show, which has been an annual event, has been a potent factor in the aggressive campaign of the society the past eight years for more and better Indiana apples.

As a result of the society's work many new orchards have been started and the production from these will continue to increase for many years, while the old orchards are coming to the front in the present food crisis. Although the show has been discontinued for this year the society will not relax its educational efforts.

Indiana's supply of apples can be increased materially if orchard owners will spray now to kill the second brood of codling moths, say advices from entomologists in the Purdue University Extension Department. This pest, the thing that causes the worms in fall and winter apples, has started his summer offensive and farmers south of Indianapolis are urged to have their spraying done by July 10. Those north of Indianapolis may spray a few days later, at least by the end of the second week in July, the date of the moth's hatching in the extreme northern part of the State.

The Farmer's Hazard.

"It is one thing to ask a man to save. It is one thing to ask a man to invest in Liberty Bonds. These things tremendously aid the nation; but they are also a certain benefit to the individual. It is another thing to ask a man to put his labor and capital into the production of food, facing the hazard of the weather, of distribution, and of the market."—David F. Houston.

Boys Have Learned Farming Business

Second Course Will Follow Successful Experiment at Purdue University, Next Week.

Eighty-two boys from Indiana, three from Chicago, Illinois, and four from Louisville, Kentucky, all members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, attending the Agricultural Training Camp at Purdue University, have learned during the past week that farm work is serious business, requiring much skill, labor, and an abundance of common sense.

Dean Stanley Coulter, who is in command of the camp, says that he doubts very seriously whether a more splendid group of young men has been gathered together in any part of the Union.

The first training camp will close Sunday afternoon with a review before members of the State Council of Defense, including Michael E. Foley, chairman; Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director of the Boys' Reserve, and members of the State Advisory Committee of the Reserve.

Farmers in all the counties contiguous to Tippecanoe have been invited to attend this review and make their selections from among the boys who have completed the course of instruction, taking them home to aid in the harvest fields. Michael E. Foley, chairman of the State Council of Defense, and G. I. Christie, now connected with the United States Department of Agriculture, will make addresses. It is planned to have H. W. Wells, Associate National Director of the Boys' Reserve, present also.

Plan of Instruction.

W. B. Krueck, who has charge of the instruction of boys attending this training camp, has divided them into nine groups, under the supervision of nine instructors, who successively initiate each group into the mysteries of the different phases of farm work.

G. A. Branaman has charge of instructions in feeding, harnessing and driving horses; W. O. Mills has charge of instruction in feeding, milking and caring for cows; C. W. Carrick has charge of the poultry; H. E. Allen has charge of instruction in hogs, sheep and cattle; R. C. Wallace has charge of instruction in harvest work; Mr. Bates has charge of garden work; F. W. Wesler has charge of the horticulture; F. E. Robbins has charge of the crops, and W. Aitkenhead has charge of the farm mechanics. Miss Jessie Stultz is acting as registrar of the camp.

The boys arise at 5 a. m., except on mornings when they have dairy work to do, when they are required to report for work at 4:30 a. m. Breakfast is served at 6 a. m.; farm work and instructions, 7 to 11 a. m.; gymnasium and swimming pool, 11 a. m. to 12 noon; 12 to 1:30 p. m., lunch and rest period; 1:30 to 3 p. m., military drill under H. C. Thuerk, major of Purdue University Cadet Corps; 3 to 5 p. m., work; 5 to 6 p. m., athletic games and exercises under O. F. Cutts, athletic director of the university; 6 p. m., swimming pool again; 6:30 p. m., supper and recreation; 9:30 p. m., taps.

Second Training Camp.

On Tuesday, July 9th, 100 boys, who have been nominated for the second training camp, will present themselves for a course of instruction similar to that which has been provided during the past two weeks. The courtesy of nominating ten boys for this second camp has been extended to the Federal State Directors of the Boys' Working Reserve in both Illinois and Kentucky.

This second camp will close July 21st, and will probably be the last camp conducted this season. From the short experience derived from the conduct of the first camp, Dean Coulter says that the plan has his unqualified endorsement and that he hopes it will be possible to open a series of training camps much earlier next year, housing the boys in barracks or tents under strict military discipline.

All boys who finish this course of training are pledged to engage in agricultural work for at least four weeks this summer and are presented with a certificate of fitness, signed by the Governor, detailing them to engage in food production next year as well. The development of this plan on a large scale presents many possibilities in aiding toward the solution of the farm labor problem.

The Fourth Liberty Loan

L. L. Campbell, district organizer for the Fourth Liberty Loan in Blackford, Jay, Delaware, Madison, Randolph, Henry, Wayne, Fayette and Union counties, has reported to state liberty loan headquarters here that a splendid enthusiasm for future government financing of the war is evident everywhere among the bankers of these counties.

Mr. Campbell declared that 100 per cent pure patriotism is being displayed daily in these counties by the bankers with whom he discusses the short term treasury certificate situation.

Each banker has been asked to invest approximately 2½ per cent of his banking resources, every two weeks in United States treasury certificates and the banks in this territory are responding splendidly, he said.

In Delaware County the bankers have committed themselves to subscribe for the full amount of each issue of the short term certificates of indebtedness brought out by the Treasury Department throughout the summer.

In many counties bankers are already distributing these certificates to persons with ready money who desire the short term investment now, pending the issuance of the bonds of the Fourth Liberty Loan by the government.

Jay county bankers have agreed to take the first issue and to make arrangements to finance the remaining issues as they are brought out.

In Fayette and Union counties Mr. Campbell reports subscriptions beyond the quota had already been made by bankers before the district organizer could visit the county directors of sales.

More Than Three Per Cent Of Wheat Lost in Harvest

It is estimated that from one to ten per cent of the wheat crop is lost to the country by hurried and careless operation and inefficiency of thrashing machines. In some sections, however, losses are materially greater than in others. Waste in thrashing depends largely upon the condition of the machine as it enters the harvest field and the care with which it is operated. While it is believed that the majority of machines operate satisfactorily, conservative estimates indicate that on an average:

One and one-half bushels in every hundred thrashed can be saved by having all machines go into harvest (1) in excellent repair; (2) with ample power; (3) by providing that during harvest they are efficiently adjusted to meet varying conditions.

One bushel in every hundred thrashed can be saved by having all machines in such repair that little or no grain leaks under and around them on the ground, and providing that what does leak out in this manner and otherwise scattered by the machine is cleaned up and thrashed before the machine leaves the field.

Three-quarters of a bushel in every hundred thrashed can be saved by careful handling of bundles from the shock to the machine or stack and by arranging the bundle wagons so that all grain which shatters in them is caught and saved.

Thus it is estimated that a total of three and one-quarter bushels in every hundred thrashed may be saved. In Kansas alone this would amount to nearly 3,000,000 bushels.

Thousands die every year from over-eating—don't dig your grave with your teeth.

War is scraping our sugar bins and our granaries. The less we waste the longer it will take to empty them.

Third Loan Shows Support of Farmers

Treasury Department Compiles Figures Showing Their Oversubscriptions—Rural Communities Prompt.

The Treasury Department authorizes the following:

Next to the aggregate number of subscribers, perhaps the most striking feature of the third Liberty loan was the support given it by the farming and rural populations of the country. Not only did the farmers purchase liberally of the bonds, but the rural communities as a rule were more prompt in completing their quotas of the loan than the larger cities. More than 20,000 communities in the United States subscribed or oversubscribed their quotas, many of them on the first day of the campaign. The majority of these were not cities, but country districts.

Farming States Subscribed Quotas First.

Iowa, a typical agricultural State, was the first to subscribe its quota, and was followed by Oregon, Arkansas, Kentucky, and other States in which agriculture is the leading industry.

It is impossible to give accurate figures, but it is estimated that while only 2 per cent of the farming population of the United States subscribed to the first and second loans, probably ten times as many subscribed to the third. The significance is increased by the facts that the heavy subscription was made at a season when the farmers are ordinarily on the borrowing and not on the lending and investing side of the market and when the farms of the country are speeded up to the limit.

Sense of Duty Permeates Whole People.

This wide distribution of the third loan among the whole people shows that the body of the nation has become aroused and gone into action—that the sense of duty and the necessity for individual support of the country has permeated the whole people. Secretary McAdoo may justly be enthused over the result and call it the soundest national financing in the world. Every Liberty bond holder is an active force backing the Government.

Our soldiers in France and our allies are heartened and strengthened by the knowledge that 17,000,000 American citizens are backing them with their money, and our enemies must learn with fear and dread of this great reserve force upon which their adversaries can rely.

Victory Through Scientific Saving.

To keep the good work up, the American people must adopt scientific saving methods; save money, save material, save labor, and save time. Thus we will bring the war to an earlier and victorious close and save the lives of American soldiers, and save our rights and our liberties, and save the world to democracy, justice, and civilization.

Unfair Competition.

"Anyone who, in these days of impending doom, buys anything which he does not need for his health, strength, or efficiency is hiring someone to do something which is unnecessary. He is hiring someone to stay out of the essential industries. He is competing with the government for materials and man power which it needs to win the war and preserve the liberties of mankind!"—Prof. T. N. Carver of Harvard.

First Duty to Win the War.

There are two duties with which we are face to face. The first duty is to win the war. And the second duty, that goes hand in hand with it, is to win it greatly and worthily, showing the real quality of our power not only, but the real quality of our purpose and of ourselves.—President Woodrow Wilson.

In all its old insolence, with its ancient cruelty and injustice, military dictatorship has armed itself against the pacific hopes of men.—President WOODROW WILSON.

Council Will Insist On Its Fixed Policy

No Modification of Attitude on Use of Men, Money and Materials in Public Work.

Chairman Michael E. Foley was authorized at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, on July 10th, to request from the county councils of defense and county officials of the State, statements of all road building and other public improvements now under way or in contemplation. This is in anticipation of further emphasizing the council's policy in reference to the expenditure of men, money and materials during the continuation of the war. It was the sense of the council that these officials, and all others interested, should be informed that there has been no modification of the council's established rule that all these matters should be considered in the light of their contribution to the support of the national war program.

Emsley W. Johnson, county attorney for Marion County, informed the council that the construction of Pendleton Pike, between Indianapolis and Fort Benjamin Harrison, which had been judged a "military necessity," is under way and about to be completed. He said the bonds covering the cost of the road had been sold and paid for, and that the authorities at Fort Benjamin Harrison had informed the Marion County commissioners that they had no interest in the construction of any other highway leading to the fort. W. P. Masters, of Seymour, Ind., who has the contract for the construction of Pendleton Pike, informed the council he probably would have the work done in sixty days. Russell B. Harrison of the Marion County Council of Defense, said his organization had given no consideration to the problem of abolishing Marion County township lines, and that legal questions and property rights are so involved in the matters, previously presented to the council, that the Marion County Council had no recommendation to make. A resolution by A. E. McReynolds, that all matters pertaining to the roads between Indianapolis and Fort Benjamin Harrison, be referred to the Marion County Council of Defense, was adopted.

Mr. Reynolds also presented a resolution in behalf of the Highways Transport Committee, relative to the repair and maintenance of roads. This resolution appears elsewhere in the Bulletin.

Messrs. Reynolds, Brady and Wilson were appointed by the chairman to formulate a letter on the subject of road maintenance to Indiana County officials.

Dr. Charles P. Emerson, chairman of the medical section of the State Council, in behalf of Dr. Alfred Henry, head of the Indiana and Mississippi Valley societies for the prevention of tuberculosis, presented a statement of the State's lack of preparedness for the demands for medical attention and treatment growing out of the war, particularly as relates to tuberculosis. Dr. Emerson said there are now 30,000 cases in the State of Indiana, representing a large proportionate increase for the first six months of the year. He said that 364 men afflicted with the disease have been sent back from the army before serving three months, and that the government denies responsibility for their care. At this time, Dr. Emerson said, there are only 397 hospital beds for tuberculosis patients in the state, and he recommended that the council go on record as encouraging the construction by counties and local units, of tuberculosis sanatoria. Dr. Emerson stated the medical section was also in need of an increased appropriation for the prosecution of its campaign for enlistments for doctors in the medical service. He stated that Indiana now ranks 42d, having advanced from 46th in the list of States, in pro rata of physicians now in service. The council authorized the employment of a full time stenographer by the medical section, at headquarters.

Judge Samuel R. Artman, chairman of the Industrial Board, asked the moral support of the council in sustaining the child and woman labor laws of the state. He said there are demands that these laws be abrogated because of the present labor crisis. He said the National Council of Defense had declared that it recognizes no reason for any letting down of the restrictions under which women and children may engage in industrial pursuits. He said that claims of a labor shortage and a demand for cheaper labor are not well founded.

J. J. Walsh, state factory inspector, asked the council to effect the appointment of responsible agencies in the industrial centers of the State, whose business will be to assist in the protection of thousands of women and children workers, by helping secure to them the safeguards for their moral and physical welfare, such as the Indiana laws contemplate.

Miss Morna Hickman, in charge of the employment of women in the United States employment service, informed the council that after August 1, all government contractors must secure such female labor as they may require, through her office, and that it is highly important that the council recognize the need and timeliness of such action as Messrs. Artman and Walsh advocated. The council then requested a conference of Judge Artman and Mr. Walsh with Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle of the woman's section of the State Council, and Miss Hickman, for the purpose of preparing a resolution for the further consideration of the council.

In order that the farmers of the State may have a maximum allowance for their wheat, and may be fully informed as to the laws and regulations of the grain dealers, elevators and mill operators, the council authorized the preparation of a letter setting forth the facts.

A. E. Reynolds announced that the firm of grain dealers with which he is associated, had agreed "to set an example by offering a price of $2.18 for No. 1 wheat and $2.15 for No. 2 wheat." He stated the prices might fluctuate, due to the grading and condition of the grain. He said dealers are allowed but thirty days in which to handle wheat, and that much of it comes to them wet, liable to shrinkage, and can not be dried within that period of time. He said he thought much of the irregularity that exists among Indiana grain dealers is due to a lack of definite information.

Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana, informed the council that the Food Administration has no authority to fix prices, but does have power to prevent profiteering. He said he considered 8 cents a wide margin for handling the grain, but "perhaps not too wide". Messrs. Barnard, Reynolds and Wilson will prepare a statement for the information of those concerned in the handling of the 1918 Indiana wheat crop.

"America is God's last chance to save the world."—Emerson.

Know your garden and make it produce a balanced ration.

Farmers Organizing to Sustain 1917 Records

Bacon and Lard Object of Renewed Campaign to Keep Indiana Producing Hogs.

Indiana farmers who increased their pork production 20 per cent last fall will be asked to maintain this mark and better it if possible and with this object in view representatives of the State Food Committee and Purdue University are busy now forming county organizations to maintain the bacon and lard supply. This is done so that the producers may work on a definite united program to obtain pork as cheaply and as rapidly as possible.

In Whitley, Allen, DeKalb, Randolph, Henry and Huntington counties swine committees have been organized. These committees, composed of practical hog men and farmers, will push the hog production work by working along the following lines:

'Co-operative effort to increase the use of pure-bred boars for market hogs.

Co-operation with the county agent to locate farms on which hog feeding and hog production demonstrations can be held.

Establishment and maintenance of a community clearing house committee for the exchange of feeder hogs.

Adopt a plan for community buying of hogs in co-operation with the local feed dealers whenever possible.

An effort will be made to get a permanent organization in all leading hog producing counties this summer and then a drive will be instituted for better housing conditions this winter and the more general practice of feeding pigs for the market. More than 250,000 feeder hogs were brought into Indiana from other states during the past winter and this many hogs in addition to those raised in the state were fed for market.

Wheat Campaign Is Successful.

Excellent yields of wheat are being reported from nearly all southern counties of the state, according to advices from Purdue University to the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation. One of the first fields thrashed in Vanderburgh County reported 41 bushels to the acre, and dozens of other sections have reported big yields in spite of the ravages of smut, scab and other plant diseases.

County agents and other extension workers are co-operating with the food administration on the saving of grain. Immediately after thrashing, they are prepared to start a campaign for better methods of seed bed preparation and proper use of fertilizers which are being ordered now by hundreds of farmers in the state.

More than 800 fields of wheat, ranging from four to ten in a county, have been located by special men sent out for this work and farmers in every county now have an opportunity to get disease-free seed of good yielding variety. Purchase of this sort of seed will help Indiana greatly in obtaining the increased production of 25 per cent next year without increasing the acreage.

In Shelby County the wheat committee have judged two hundred or more wheat fields and a medal will be given to every farmer who raises 35 bushels or more per acre on at least 5 acres.

Patriotism in Indiana

July 4th, 1918, marked a new birth of patriotism in Indiana. On the 142nd anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, there was manifest in practically every county in the commonwealth, a revival of the spirit that "brought forth on this continent, a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal." Nearly every county seat was the scene of a specially prepared program, consisting of patriotic exercises quite distinctive from the usual noisy demonstrations that had threatened to obscure the greater significance of the day. Through the efforts of the councils of defense, the educational and inspirational work of the Americanization forces showed themselves effective in the thousands of citizens of foreign birth or ancestry, who joined in paying homage to a common country, devotion to a common cause. The day will long stand in history as one on which an organized, united, determined America rose to declare that the brutal autocracy which imperils the freedom and civilization of humanity must be banished forever from the earth, and that this nation under God, is reconsecrated to the cause of humanity and freedom for all people.

In a few communities where crops were in need of attention, the Independence day celebration took a more practical form. The genuinely patriotic farmers, recognizing the serious need of the allied nations for food, and the significance of the American harvest in the great struggle, stood manfully by their work, and in works rather than words declared their loyalty, their patriotism, and their determination to defeat the Hun.

Altogether July 4th, 1918, may go down in history as an international birthday of freedom.

Allen County.—Chairman Frank Hilgeman of the committee on arrangements for the coming Liberty Garden Fair to be held in Ft. Wayne, reports unusual interest in this event. Prizes will be awarded for the best showing of garden produce of almost every kind, and every owner of a Liberty garden is urged to register with the captain of their precinct.

Cass County.—Frank Rice of Logansport, who succeeded Marcus Collett as chairman of the Cass County Council of Defense, announces the resignation of Messrs. Frank White and Edgar E. Phillips from the council. These men have been succeeded by Simon Shaw and John H. Miller, both of Logansport. The following women of Logansport have been appointed presidents to put the food club movement on a substantial basis: First Ward—First precinct, Mrs. W. L. Morris; second precinct, Mrs. J. H. Stevens; third precinct, Mrs. Chas. Etnire; fourth precinct, Mrs. Emma Magenbuck. Second Ward—First precinct, Mrs. Jennie E. Carr; second precinct, Mrs. J. H. Reed; third precinct, Mrs. Earl Ral. Third Ward—First precinct, Miss Marion Keiser; second precinct, Miss Arnette Perrone (Italian); third precinct, Mrs. Wm. Gremelbacher; fourth precinct, Mrs. Lizzie Hostettler; fifth precinct, Mrs. Harry Black. Fourth Ward—First precinct, Mrs. Edward Furey; second precinct, Mrs. Ben Porter; third precinct, Lillian Thomson. Fifth Ward—First precinct, Mrs. Chas. Brown; second precinct, Mrs. D. A. Middleton; third precinct, Mrs. J. F. McCarthy; fifth precinct, Sarah Costello; sixth precinct, Mrs. Wm. Whitehead. Colored—Mrs. Mary Allen. Under the presidency of Mrs. Marion Swadener fourteen township presidents and fifty-five club presidents have been appointed and commissioned in Cass County. This county claims the distinction of having the first Italian Food Club organized in the State; the president of this club being Miss Arnette Perrone.

Clinton County.—On the 17th of last April the War Fathers organized with a membership of seven; now the organization has more than a hundred members in the county. The organization is purely patriotic. It will aid the County Council of Defense, the registration board, the national, state, county and city governments, and will help in every way possible to the families of those who have sons in the service. It affiliates and co-operates with other charitable and patriotic institutions. The men correspond with their sons in the service and make detailed reports of the conditions at home, giving credit to all who help in any way to win the war. They also report the slackers. This was the first war father's organization in the United States and is rapidly spreading and growing. The officers of the Frankfort organization are: Commander, Frank Daywitt; Captain, James Snyder; First Lieutenant, James Allen; Second Lieutenant, J. J. Gallaher; First Sergeant, Wesley Skeen; Second Sergeant, Robt. Keene; Acting Sergeant, Harry Potts. The regular meetings are held the first and third Sundays of each month. The organization is growing rapidly and much enthusiasm is shown in the work. They expect to make permanent the organization after the war by forming a club for the boys on their return from the service, for War Fathers and Sons. Every war father in the county is invited to attend these meetings and is requested to become an active member.

Daviess County.—The County Council of Defense has issued the following notice: "Evidence in connection with some of the hog cholera outbreaks in the county shows that roving dogs and fox hounds are largely responsible for the spread of the disease, and if these dogs are allowed to continue to run at large it will be impossible to keep the disease in check. Therefore, until the outbreak is completely suppressed and notice given thereof, all hunting with dogs, dog training and fox chasing is strictly forbidden in Daviess county. Any person found hunting with a dog off his own premises or for chasing will be reported to the proper authorities. Furthermore, any and all dogs in the county must be kept up and any dog found off the owner's premises may be shot and the owner reported to the committee of the council of defense. This is a matter which involves food supply, and dogs and hunting will not be given first consideration above the efforts of the Government to make available a maximum amount of meat for our army and the Allies. This order becomes effective immediately."

Decatur County.—Recently while conducting a food demonstration at St. Paul, Miss Ida Wilhite, home economics demonstrator of Howard County, organized a Home Economics Club with a charter membership of 25. A series of instructive meetings is being planned, the dates to be decided upon later.

Delaware County.—The Delaware County Bankers' Association pledged itself to take its full 100 per cent of the entire nine issues of United States treasury certificates, to be issued by the Government until the floating of the fourth Liberty Loan. This means that Delaware County banks will take up $250,000 worth of certificates every two weeks, a record which L. L. Campbell, district organizer of Indianapolis, says is not equaled by any county in the United States.

Dekalb County.—Chairman J. Y. W. McClellan of the County Council of Defense, has again called attention to the vital importance of preventing new constructions. It is not so much a matter of saving money as it is of saving transportation, labor and materials which are so desperately needed for war work, he says. New construction will not be tolerated unless it is helpful to winning the war, and residents of the county are asked to make no further improvements except in case of direct necessity, and then before proceeding they must consult the council.

Dubois County.—At the July Fourth celebration at Jasper, a local woman's club dedicated a service flag containing over 600 stars, symbolizing the Dubois County boys with the colors. A single gold star in the flag tells the silent story of one boy who has made the supreme sacrifice. H. C. Thompson has been selected as county agent for the ensuing year, and will take up his new duties August 1.

Fayette County.—Fayette County farmers who produce thirty bushels or more of wheat on each of five or more acres, this harvest, are to receive medals donated by officers of the Fayette National Bank and the Farmers and Merchants Bank. The medals are oxidized silver, in the form of watch fobs, and on the back of each one will be inscribed the name of the man who receives it, the date of presentation, also the yield of his winning wheat.

Floyd County.—At the request of Governor Goodrich, Chairman C. D. Kelso will enlist the aid of the County Council of Defense in strictly enforcing the prohibition law in Floyd county. Mr. Kelso says the provisions of the law will be rigidly enforced and every assistance will be given the municipal and county authorities.

Gibson County.—Henry Tichenor, county food administrator, has received the following communication from the State Food Administration in regard to his plan put into effect in this county of checking the sugar used by consumers: "Mr. Henry Tichenor, Federal Food Administrator, Gibson County, Princeton, Ind. My Dear Mr. Tichenor: We desire that you express our thanks to the retail grocers of your county for the spirit they have shown towards the food administration in their resolutions asking for the adoption of consumers ration cards. While we believe this ration card to afford the most satisfactory means from checking the consumption of sugar, Mr. Hoover has not yet been willing to approve such card. Yours sincerely, U. S. Food Administration for Indiana. By I. L. Miller."

Greene County.—At a recent meeting the following committees were appointed by the County Council of Defense: Executive Committee, Mrs. Fannie Bain, Earl Talbott, John L. Cravens, Linton; Auditing, Orvin Cain, Judge T. E. Slinkard, Guy H. Humphreys, Bloomfield; Finance, Joe E. Shryer, Bloomfield; Joe Moss, Linton; Ed Scott, Newberry; Ben Miller, Worthington; Marion Thomas, Jasonville; M. G. Edington, Lyons. Some changes have been made in the council, and the present personnel consists of W. V. Moffett, Bloomfield, chairman; O. E. Cain, Bloomfield, secretary; W. G. Hall, Jasonville; Ovid Fields, Lyons; Dr. E. T. Sherwood, Linton; Jos. Housum, Worthington; Mrs. Fannie Bain, Linton.

Henry County.—About forty women recently met at Dunreith at the suggestion of Mrs. Virginia G. Cory, county chairman of Home Economics, and following the Red Cross hour forceful talks were given on various timely subjects. Mrs. Frank E. Edwards of Knightstown, spoke on food conservation; Mrs. Jesse French, Jr., of Newcastle, spoke on child welfare, and Miss Hinchaw of Dunreith, spoke on food values. Samples of food made without either wheat or sugar, which were furnished by some of the women present, were distributed for taste and inspection. The suggestion was made that a motor club would be of great assistance in taking chairmen of the various departments, as well as Fourteen-Minute women, to various parts of the county, or in sending supplies to country Red Cross stations. Mrs. C. J. Winterbotham has requested any volunteers in this direction to communicate with her.

Howard County.—At a recent meeting of the County Council of Defense, it was decided to have Chairman McClure write resolutions condemning the failure of many persons to contribute to any war funds, and have the council take whatever action is necessary to make those who are financially able, bear their proportionate part of contributions to the various war activities. Many cases have been reported to the council of men who are amply able to buy war stamps, bonds and subscribe to the Red Cross, but who have made no effort to do so. The resolution is for the purpose of getting after this particular class of citizen.

A feature of the July 4th celebration at Fairfield was a sale of twenty-five choice hogs donated by the farmers of the vicinity, the proceeds of the sale going to the Red Cross.

Huntington County.—A wealthy farmer in Clear Creek township openly refused to give to the Red Cross, the War Chest, buy Thrift Stamps or Liberty Bonds. Men of his neighborhood representing the Township Council of Defense went to Huntington where the farmer did his trading, advised the merchants of conditions and asked their co-operation in refusing to buy anything he might wish to sell, and also in turn to refuse to sell him anything he wished to buy. The following day the wealthy farmer brought his cream to the creamery, but was told they could not buy of an un-American citizen; when he went to purchase coal he was told they could not sell a man who refused to lend any assistance to the Government to win the war. Very quickly the farmer realized his position, and besides buying the limit of Thrift Stamps, gave liberally to other war activities.

Jasper County.—At the July 6th meeting of the County Council of Defense, the treasurer of the council was directed to turn over to the treasurer of the Jasper County Red Cross Chapter $7,500, which had been allowed to the council for the use of the Red Cross Chapter to meet its apportionment assigned in the last Red Cross drive. Ernest Morlan of the Thrashermen's committee, reported at this meeting that the prices fixed by the council would be observed throughout the county.

Knox County.—Much of the success of the splendid showing of Knox County in the recent War Saving Stamp campaign was due to the organized Drafted Men's Association. The organization well proved its mettle during the drive, and it is planned to keep the organization alive for future war work.

Kosciusko County.—The County Council of Defense will give prizes to the extent of $50.00 in Thrift Stamps to children making the best showing in garden work. This is done in compliance with a request from Superintendent Leffel, head of the Garden Movement in Warsaw. Those having gardens in Warsaw are eligible for the contest. Division of prizes will be as follows: Best kept garden up to July 20—First prize, one War Saving Stamp, (value $5.00); second prize, $2.00 in Thrift Stamps; third prize, a ribbon. Largest variety of vegetables in garden up to July 20—First prize, one War Saving Stamp (value $5.00); second prize, $2.00 in Thrift Stamps; third prize, a ribbon. Best potato patch up to July 20—First prize, $2.00 in Thrift Stamps; second prize, $1.00 in Thrift Stamps; third prize, a ribbon. The gardens of the city will be inspected in the near future by the inspecting and prize committees and the winners determined. The trophies will not be awarded, however, until the county fair. In addition, the committee has created a vegetable class in the premium list of the County Fair Association to which only Warsaw garden products are eligible. This does not limit, however, anyone from competing in this county exhibit. Premiums on all vegetables of this class are: First, $1.00 in Thrift Stamps; second, 50 cents in Thrift Stamps; third, a ribbon. The following vegetables will be shown in this class and the rules of the association will apply unless otherwise noted: Best five red beets; best five carrots; best head of cabbage (any variety); largest head of cabbage by weight; best half bushel of onions; best half bushel of potatoes; best three-quarters bushel turnips; best three-quarters bushel tomatoes; best five parsnips; best collection of peppers and mangoes; six cucumbers; best bunch of endive; best collection of all kinds vegetables.

Lake County.—A very good showing is being made by the women's section in this county. According to recent report by Mrs. O. C. Wicks, 5,556 women registered in Gary; every woman but one registered in Miller; Indiana Harbor, Crown Point and the south end of the county showed up with 100 per cent. Mrs. J. C. Gibbs advises that thirty-nine talks have been given by Fourteen-Minute women, resulting in splendid response from the public in the various war activities. An intensive Americanization drive is in prospect throughout the county. A comprehensive housing survey is being made in Gary under the auspices of the Calumet Township Council of Defense, assisted by the Housing Bureau of the Gary Commercial Club and the Gary Real Estate Exchange. More than twenty-five men will be engaged in doing this work, and the complete report will be forwarded to Washington. The survey will undoubtedly show the urgent need of more houses in Gary, and it is expected that Government recognition of such needs will result from the present movement.

Miami County.—Miami County celebrated Independence day at the county seat, Peru. The celebration was under the auspices of the County Council of Defense, and the splendid success of the day was a tribute to the careful work of the various committees. A chairman had been appointed in every factory, store, fraternity and church, and the various organizations contributed their part to the day's program. Following the parade, which disbanded at the City park, an address was given to the ten thousand persons present by Dr. Henry Coo Culbertson, of the United States Bureau of Information at Washington.

Montgomery County.—Thrashing rates in this county are four cents for oats, six cents for wheat and seven cents for rye. These are the maximum prices that will be permitted.

Noble County.—On Saturday, July 6, Wayne township registrants held a meeting at Kendallville, at which it was decided to divide the township into nine units, and elect one man in each unit to take a poll of his territory, securing the name, postoffice address and class of every registrant, make a personal visit to him and acquaint him with certain duties to perform in connection with helping win the war. H. H. Diggins acted as chairman, and made a stirring appeal to the young men present, calling upon each of them to take it upon himself individually to be a committee of one to see to it when thrashing time came that no grain would be wasted. The Wayne township committee of nine who will have this work in charge are: Cecil Hanke, Roy Shook, Ernest Leighty, Russell Hill, Verne Hill, Archie Hill, Roy Starmer, James Evers and H. H. Diggins.

Spencer County.—A United States Food Club has been organized in Rockport. The charter of the club is numbered 1,052, showing the number of clubs already organized in the State. Mrs. James Rinstidt, president of the food clubs of Spencer County, has appointed the following Rockport women to plan and promote interesting programs and do special work as heads of sub-committees: Misses Laura Wright and Bun Jones, together with Mrs. Helen Baumgartner and Mrs. Lucy Fuestler. Seventy members attended the organization meeting. Miss Mundy, the county agent, demonstrated war breads and gave interesting talks on canning and soap making.... Mrs. Bartim, chairman of baby clinics in Spencer County, reports the registration of 1,367 babies; all townships having reported except Huff.

Tippecanoe County.—Chairman Bauer, of the County Council of Defense, has begun the reorganization of that body, and announces a new executive committee as follows: Walter J. Ball, C. M. Murdock, William V. Stuart, R. B. Sample, Rev. C. H. Leeson, Henry W. Marshall, Mrs. Charles B. Stuart, James Rae, Oscar W. Campbell, James T. Westfall, John Wagner, T. J. Connelly, Henry Rosenthal, Henry Overesch, Ralph Mayerstein, W. C. Mitchell, Mrs. F. W. Greve, Jr., and J. O. Beck. This committee embraces the personnel of the entire executive committee as previously constituted, the labor member of the council, the chairman of Women's Activities, the county food and fuel administrators, representatives of each of the daily papers and the executive officers of each of the following organizations: Patriot League, the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., K. of C., Jewish War Relief Society, Liberty Loan and W. S. S. committee. The new executive committee will absorb the old co-ordination committee, both in function and in personnel, and an increased efficiency in both committees is believed will result. The officers of the committee will be Thomas Bauer, chairman; J. O. Beck, vice chairman; Dr. C. H. Leeson, secretary, and R. B. Sample, treasurer. A finance committee has been appointed consisting of Walter J. Ball, chairman, C. M. Murdock and R. B. Sample. Their principal present duty will be to secure, if possible, favorable action from the County Council and County Board of Commissioners, on the proposition of having a county appropriation to cover all future county war charities, in harmony with the plan approved by the Governor; the chairman of the Board of Public Accounts, the Attorney General and the State Council of Defense. This committee is also charged with finding new quarters for the council of defense, at which the food and fuel administrators and the chairmen of the various war organizations will make headquarters.

Vanderburgh County.—It was decided at a conference of Union township farmers and County Agent Ross N. Aikinson, to wage war on grasshoppers, which have become a plague in this section. By cutting around the fields the pests will be driven to the center of the fields, and will there be treated to a preparation of paris green.

Wayne County.—A novel plan for aiding farmers' wives has been suggested by Miss M. E. B. Culbertson, chairman of Woman's Work in the Wayne County Council of Defense. Her idea is that the women members of the counties and townships make themselves a bureau of information—both ways. Through the township women they can find out by telephoning the farmers' wives or otherwise, or the farmers' wives telephoning to them the sort of work required, and what the applicant can do on a farm to help; the council or the food administrator setting the price for this labor.... The Production chairman of Wayne county suggests having a brigade of women with sunbonnets and aprons to go out in machines, hoe one garden, then go on to the next, etc. The chairman says she is willing to head the brigade.

Red Cross Activities

Red Cross home service sections in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky are dealing with more than 7,000 families of soldiers and sailors a month, according to the monthly report of James L. Fieser, Lake Division, Red Cross, director of civilian relief.

This report shows that during the month 1,684 Indiana families received attention from the chapter home service sections. Altogether 1,996 families in Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky received financial aid, which amounted to $22,128.21.

Indiana is the first State to reach the 100% mark in the organization of Red Cross home service sections. Each of the 105 chapters in the Hoosier State has a home service section. Ohio is 98% and Kentucky 94% organized for this work.

Lake Division civilian relief field workers are overcoming many obstacles to perfect this branch of Red Cross work. During June Shelley D. Watts, one of Mr. Fieser's assistants, travelled ten days on horseback to reach a number of Kentucky chapters. Miss Harriet Anderson, another assistant, reports:

"I have been visiting small towns, including eight county seats, which were not on railroads. One of these was sixty miles from a railroad to the west and fifty miles to the east."

The importance of parents and other relatives of soldiers and sailors notifying the Statistical Division of the War Department regarding changes in address is emphasized in a statement by Alva Bradley, Director of Bureau of Communication, Lake Division, American Red Cross.

"Recently," said Mr. Bradley, "a boy was wounded and taken to a hospital somewhere in France. He feared his mother would worry about him and was anxious to put her mind at ease. Through the Red Cross Communication Service he sent a consoling message home.

"The message came to Washington in a hurry, and without delay was forwarded to the address given by the boy. In a few days the message was returned, marked 'Wrong Address.' She had moved without notifying the Statistical Division of the War Department, Adjutant General's Office, First and B streets, Washington, D. C."

Maintenance of Highways

On motion of A. E. Reynolds, the Indiana State Council of Defense, at its meeting July 10th, adopted the following resolution, as coming from the highway transport committee:

Whereas, the seriously congested condition of the railroads, upon which we are almost entirely dependent for the transportation of supplies in this Nation and State, has, during the past year, very thoroughly modified the war program, as planned by our National and State Administrations; and,

Whereas, Government, food and military authorities are seeking the co-operation of the various State Councils to encourage the use of the motor truck and highways of this country in an effort to relieve the situation; and,

Whereas, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America, at its conventions in Atlantic City and Chicago, has urged a very extensive campaign of this character; and,

Whereas, the Council of National Defense has adopted a resolution, requesting State Councils to take all necessary steps to facilitate such means of transportation and to remove any regulations that tend to restrict and discourage such use; and,

Whereas, the transportation requirements of the country, due to the war, can only be met by complete co-ordination of the carrying capacities of the railroads and highways; and,

Whereas, the highways of this State are in many instances in a very bad state of repair, and in such condition will preclude the possibility of any form of transportation in this connection during the fall and winter months if there is no extensive effort made to immediately remedy the situation; and,

Whereas, the grain supply will soon be harvested and a surplus of local labor will be available for such repairs; and,

Whereas, The development of the entire highway transport program is limited by existant road conditions; therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Council that, as a war measure, it is essential that immediate steps be taken to create a high standard of maintenance of the highways within the State; that it co-operate in every way with the military authorities, the Food Administration, the various Chambers of Commerce, the State Highway Commission and other bodies and organizations, as the occasion demands in this respect; and further, that a copy of this resolution, accompanied by a letter from Mr. M. E. Foley, Chairman, requesting all local authorities to take immediate action in this regard, be sent to County Councils of Defense, County Auditors, County Commissioners, County Road Superintendents and County Surveyors.

"If U fast U beat U boats,

If U feast U boats beat U."

—English Placard.

Some New War Books

(Any of the books mentioned below may be borrowed for a short time from the Indiana State Library by any citizen of the State. Persons living in towns where there is a public library should apply through the librarian. Those living on rural routes or in towns having no public library may obtain blanks for registration from the State Library on request. The only expense is that of transportation.)

Some Economic Phases of the War.

Laughlin, J. L. Credit of the Nations.

Study of credit operations during the war in France, Germany, Great Britain and the United States.

Pigore, A. C. The Economy and Finance of the War.

"A discussion of the real costs of the war and the way in which they should be met."

Marcosson, I. F. The War After the War.

The new war will be the war for trade. The author makes a plea for commercial preparedness.

Gray, H. L. War Time Control of Industry.

A study of governmental control of industry in Great Britain.

Cole, G. D. H. Labor in War Time.

An account of the manner in which the war has affected English labor and of the industrial problems to which it has given rise. Written in 1915.

Noyes, A. D. Financial Chapters of the War.

A simple treatment of the financial history of the war up to about the middle of 1916.

Schools of Bedford Hit High Mark in War Work

The schools of Bedford, Lawrence County, seem to have hit the high mark in organization and mobilization for war work during the school year just closed. Liberty Bonds owned by teachers and pupils total $16,800, and War Savings and Thrift Stamps, $14,489. More than 2,250 different articles have been made by the schools for the Red Cross, and in addition to this the advanced high school sewing class sewed regularly each week at the Red Cross shop. Money raised for war work in the City School Bazaar, the Liberty Garden Pageant and the Junior Red Cross amounts to $778. Part of this amount has been used to buy seeds for school gardens, contributions have been made to the Social Service Committee, the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A., and the remainder has been left for work for next year.

A garden army has been organized, with a regiment in each building, divided into companies, each company having its own officers. Many high school and department boys have gone to the farms to help in the work there.

During the last semester a night community school was held at the high school building. One hundred seventy women were enrolled in the cooking class, forty-five conscripted men in the radio class and thirty in the war service French class. A working girl's gymnasium class also met regularly.

Iceland, too far north to raise wheat, is preparing to make herself independent of grain ships by converting part of her potato crop into flour.

Length of the War.

Far-seeing men believe that we have just begun to fight, and wise men realize that the only safe policy is for us to assume that the struggle will be long and bitter.

It is vain to ask how long the war will last, for such questioning tempts us to guess, and when we go to guessing our self-interest causes us to guess the best and so to take some chance in effort or sacrifice. All that we know is that we must win.—Clarence Ousley, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and state governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Vol. I INDIANAPOLIS, IND. No. 48

Registration Notes

The unusual occupations noted on the registration returns from Huntington County are fifteen women employed in raising Belgian hares, one woman raising pigeons, and one bees. In this county are twenty-two glovemakers, one worker in a bindery, one weaver, one forewoman of a cedar chest factory, one ambulance driver, one optician, one florist, and one linotypist. Six people in this county offer their homes for convalescent hospitals, and thirty-two offer to share homes with war widows and children.

In Rush County, where forty-five hundred women were registered, the unusual occupations are ninety power operators, two women engaged in tobacco trades and four linotypists. One person in the county offered to give an ambulance, two women volunteered as motor car drivers, and fourteen people offered to share homes with war widows and children.

In Fayette County, where thirty-nine hundred and eighty-one women registered, the unusual occupations are bee raising, Belgian hare raising, plant raising, and timekeeping, at which three women are engaged. A tobacco factory engages the time of one woman, and one is a station agent.

The Wayne County plan for filing the registration cards is worthy of note. "The Commercial Club," writes the chairman of the Registration Committee, "fitted up two long tables in an empty room belonging to the club, and each afternoon one or two of the ladies belonging to my committee is in charge. * * * The cards from the county were separated into townships—those from Richmond into wards. All the Richmond cards have been arranged alphabetically in each ward and are in the file; the next step is to number the cards. In one drawer of the file will be the index cards. Under "Agriculture" there will be a card headed "No. 1, Dairying," and in it will be found the number of the card of every woman who is trained in that occupation, and behind that another card containing the number of the card of every woman registered as untrained. Card No. 2 will contain the number of the card of every woman registered as trained in farming, and so on. The trained and untrained will be on cards of different colors.

"There will be at least three hundred and thirty of these index cards, two (one for the trained and one for the untrained) for each occupation mentioned on the registration cards.

"It's a big undertaking, but I am consoling myself by thinking that the cards are of no use unless filed, and I am hoping that they will be appreciated and used when finally in the proper place."

In Wells County, twelve people have offered homes for convalescent hospitals, forty-seven offer to share their homes with war widows and children, one person gave a motor boat, one a motor car, and one hundred and five desire to take nurse's training.

Eight thousand women registered, of whom one hundred and forty-seven are trained agriculturists, sixty-seven trained dairy workers, twelve trained fruit raisers, two hundred and fourteen trained gardeners, three hundred and thirty-nine trained poultry raisers, twenty-two trained stock raisers, and five thousand two hundred and fifty-five trained housekeepers is Clinton County's record. Among the unusual occupations are one actress, eight artists, one author, two dentists, three dietitians, six journalists, two laboratory workers, five lecturers, five librarians, two pharmacists, two inspectors, two mail carriers, and five telegraphers. There is one woman florist in this county, two egg packers, one linotype operator, one medical social service worker, nine canteen workers.

In Newton County, one hundred and forty-five industrial workers are willing to take training in something else; thirty-six engaged in professional work are willing to take other training, ninety-eight engaged in public service are willing to take other training. Twenty-seven trained in social service are willing to take other training. All those working in the Red Cross or Allied Relief recorded their willingness to learn more along these lines. One hundred and eighty-four announce that they will do war work anywhere in the United States, and one hundred and thirty-four will go to the allied countries. Sixty-seven people in this county offer to share their homes with war widows and children.

Committee on Construction

The following report was adopted at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, July 10th:

July 8, 1918.

Indiana State Council of Defense, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Gentlemen—The Committee on Proposed Construction recommends:

First, In the matter of petition on building by the Camden Cement Tile Company, the Committee recommends that the Council not oppose the building of an addition to their plant.

Second: In regard to the Laura E. Edlin drain which is petitioned to go through part of Boone and Hendricks Counties, the Committee asks that this matter be called to the attention of both the Chairmen of Boone and Hendricks Counties to look into the matter and give us more information regarding said drain so that this Committee will have more information on which to base its recommendation.

Third: Regarding the completion of the gravel highway in Rush County. On the basis of information received this Committee sees no reason for either opposing or favoring the work on said gravel road.

Fourth: In the matter of highways in Huntington County, this Committee recommends to the Council that the Council ask the Huntington County Council of Defense to recommend that the proposed road improvements in Huntington County be postponed until after the conclusion of the war.

Fifth: Regarding the school building in Jennings Township, Scott County, Committee recommends that no action be taken in this matter without further information on the subject and asks that this matter be referred back to the County Council of Scott County.

Sixth: In the matter of a letter from Kendallville regarding improvement of streets in Kendallville, this Committee recommends to the Council that there is not enough information on which to base an opinion, therefore, would refer the letter of H. H. Shamberger back to their County Council for more information.

Seventh: In the matter of the three proposed roads in Jackson County known as the Seymour and Dudley, Seymour and Four Corners and Seymour and Brownstown roads, this Committee desires to recommend, after giving hearing to many citizens from Jackson County regarding the above-named improvements, that the action taken by the Council as a whole on May 22, 1918, regarding the Jackson County Road improvements be rescinded. Would also recommend that the building of the three cement roads known as the Seymour and Dudley, Seymour and Four Corners and Seymour and Brownstown roads in Jackson County be postponed until after the war.

Respectfully submitted,
Committee on Proposed Construction.
(Signed) E. M. Wilson.

Tipton, Ind., July 7, 1918.

Mr. Isaac D. Straus,

Ch. B. W. R. of Indiana:

Dear Sir—As I was a member of the Purdue agricultural training camp and completed the course with the exception of the last day, Saturday, I wish to inform you it was impossible for me to attend the farewell meeting on Sunday owing to a telegram received from Mr. John R. Nash stating, "come home immediately and be ready for work Monday morning."

Am now serving, as I pledged on some Indiana farm through the harvest and like it fine. My employer's name is Mr. Charles Michel of Tipton County. His steady employee leaves for the army next week so you see I am to assume a very patriotic duty, serving for one who is serving for us.

The course at Purdue was great. Will consider it a favor if you will send my diploma to the above address.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) DEWEY LANE.

Value of Speakers' Bureau Is Attested

Many Calls Received for Speakers for All Sorts of Meetings in Indiana on the Fourth of July.

The value and importance of the Speakers' Bureau of the Indiana State Council of Defense were attested in connection with the state-wide celebrations of Independence day, July 4th. Demands for speakers before all sorts of gatherings appropriate to the day were received by the bureau, and in practically every instance filled satisfactorily.

Following is a report prepared by the bureau, covering its Fourth of July efforts and assignments:

Place, Auburn; arranged by J. Y. W. McClellan; purpose, Organization of exempted men; speaker, Alvah J. Rucker.

Bedford—A. J. McDonald, General patriotic; Judge Chas. J. Orbison.

Bloomington—C. C. Hendren, General patriotic; Private Billy Howa, Herman F. Willkie, Sergeant T. E. T. Ataton.

Boonville—Roscoe Kiper; General patriotic; H. E. Negley and Governor Goodrich.

Brookville—Louis Federman, General patriotic; Arthur H. Jones.

Economy—Applied for Community Singing director; not secured.

Edgewood—W. A. Swails; General patriotic; John Robbins.

Elwood—Elmer Cox; Dedication of park and home coming; Judge J. E. Deery and Dr. C. B. Coleman.

Fowler—Lemuel Shipman; General patriotic; Jonathan Rigdon.

Whiting—F. M. Gavitt; General patriotic; E. C. Watkins.

Number of dates filled, 43.

Number of speakers used, 56.

The Speakers' Bureau was extremely busy during the latter part of June making ready for a record number of speaking engagements in different communities for the Fourth of July. The following report will show how widespread was the interest in the plans put forward by the Committee on Public Information for local meetings in celebration of this occasion. At least six communities beside those listed held meetings, supplying the speakers through their own efforts, and a few others, after planning for celebrations, were forced to give them up on account of the urgent need to promptly harvest their crops.

Food Administration

The Kuss Baking Company, of Mishawaka, paid into local war charities $1,225.66, a sum representing ½ cent per loaf for every loaf of bread baked by them during April and May. The company admitted failure to conform to the regulation relative to the use of wheat flour substitutes and chose to make this payment in lieu of forfeiture of license and suspension of business for the period of the war.

John M. Thompson, food administrator of Bartholomew county, confiscated 3,600 pounds of sugar from Albert Schumaker, proprietor of a bottling works. Schumaker was warned that further offense would involve him in proceedings for hoarding which is punishable by fine and imprisonment.

H. G. Sponsel, an Indianapolis baker at 1066 South East Street, failed to conform to the wheat flour regulations and exceeded his allotment of 32 barrels per month. Accordingly he will not be permitted to have any more flour for baking sweet goods until September 1.

The meat division has prepared the following list of beef by-products which may be served at any meal, without violation of the regulation restricting the consumption of beef: heads, tongues, tails, livers, hearts, tripe, feet, barreled beef, potted beef, beef loaf, chili con carne and beef trimmings. Beef trimmings made into bologna, sausage and frankfurters need not be conserved.

Grocers are urged not to wash eggs, as washing causes deterioration.

"Maximum canning with minimum of sugar" is the season's slogan of the food administration. The housewife is being urged to avail herself of the numerous publications issued by the United States Department of Agriculture giving instructions as to how best proceed with the preserving of fruits and vegetables with the least requirement of sugar.

"Barley and rye are cereals good for human consumption and should not be fed to animals where other grain is available, as indicated by numerous wires from Indiana to us," says a wire from Cecil Barnes, head of the United States Grain Corporation. This information answers numerous inquiries that have come in to the federal food administrator from all parts of the State, asking whether it is permissible to feed barley and rye to hogs. The Grain Corporation insists there is still a plentiful supply of corn in Indiana suitable only for feed. It has issued no positive orders on the subject, but will expect that in every instance the question be solved in the light of the facts indicated above.

Notice is given of the repeal of rules 27 and 28 relative to the distribution of wheat flour on the 70 percent basis. The effect of this repeal permits the sale and purchase by wholesalers and jobbers, of wheat flour without reference to the 70 percent restriction, based upon the volume of business during the three months periods from February 1 to April 30 and May 1 to July 31 in 1918. This limitation was in proportion to the purchases made in the corresponding three months of 1917. The effect of rule 28 was to regulate distribution by districts and prohibited the seeking of new markets or channels of distribution. It is now permissible that millers secure a wheat supply from any available sources.

Helps in Using Substitute Foods

(This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.)

"Sugar Is Scarce."

The Food Administration in a recent bulletin states that the supply of sugar for canning is limited and appeals to the housewife to be more economical in its use. A great deal of sugar has been lost at sea, which causes the shortage at this period. Our allies and our men "over there" must have the necessary supply, which means using less in this country.

There are several ways to meet the situation during the canning season:

1. Dry fruits when possible.
2. Can fruits and fruit juices without sugar.
3. Make less jelly and fewer preserves.
4. Cut down on the amount of sugar used in canning and preserving.
5. Use sugar substitutes entirely or in part.

The ordinarily used substitute at the present time is corn syrup. This may be used alone or in combination with sugar. When using the syrup alone or when using less than the usual amount of sugar, a small amount of salt may be added, which helps to bring out the flavor.

The following recipes have been tested in the Home Economics Laboratories, Purdue University, and for further information regarding them application may be made to Mary L. Matthews, Purdue University, West Lafayette, Indiana.

To can fruit of pronounced flavor:

Use a syrup made of one cup water and one and one-half cups light corn syrup boiled together to form a thin syrup.

Prepare fruit, following direction for cold pack canning. Pack jars, pour syrup over fruit and sterilize required length of time. One-eighth of a teaspoon of salt may be added to each pint.

To can fruits of rather insipid flavor:

Use a syrup made of one cup water, one-half cup corn syrup and one-half cup sugar (light brown sugar may be used).

Prepare fruit, pack jars and proceed as in any cold pack canning. Add salt if desired.

To make jelly with corn syrup:

Jelly made with corn syrup will not retain its shape so long as that made with sugar. The product is clear and tender, however, and does not have the consistency of a syrup. A firmer jelly may be made by using 50% sugar and 50% corn syrup.

Jelly should not be made without first performing the "pectin test." This test is done as follows: Add one tablespoonful of cold fruit juice to one tablespoonful of 95% grain alcohol. Let stand ten minutes. Pour carefully into another dish. If the mass is solid, it is safe to add one cup of corn syrup, or one-half cup corn syrup and one-half cup sugar to each cup of juice. If the mass breaks into pieces when being poured out, the amount of sugar or syrup should be reduced.

In using corn syrup in jelly the juice should be brought to the boiling point before the syrup is added. Boil until the proper consistency.

Warner Gear Plan Is Recommended

Speakers' Bureau Urges Commercial Clubs to Assist in Similar Efforts.

The plan and purpose of the Patriotic Club of the Warner Gear Company of Muncie, Indiana, has been commended to the county councils of defense by R. E. Cavanaugh, acting director of the Speakers' Bureau of the Indiana State Council.

Mr. Cavanaugh has also sought to enlist the services of Indiana chambers of commerce in promoting similar organizations in their communities.

A letter to the chairman of the county councils of defense offers the co-operation of the Speakers' Bureau in the formulation of a plan and program, and in the assignment of speakers. The co-operation of employers, also it is pointed out, will be an essential factor in the success of the movement.

The following data relative to the Muncie organization is offered for the information of the defense councils.

The PATRIOTIC CLUB of the Warner Gear Company, Muncie, Indiana, was organized during the fall of 1917.

The organization consists of chairman and special committees list with duties as follows:

The "Put Across" Committee consists of one man from each department in the entire plant chosen especially among men who have some relative in war work. The duties of this committee are covered by its name—to put across any drive or special patriotic work.

The Speakers Committee consists of chairman who makes all arrangements for speakers for regular weekly address, and any specials that may arise, these weekly addresses being held at noon and midnight lunch hour in all three plants.

The organization has a monthly paper which is handled by shop and office editors and a reporter from each department. This paper deals with patriotic work in general and local news of shop.

The finances of all the patriotic work are borne by the Company.

The object of the organization is to keep before the men in factory at all times the importance of each one doing not only his bit but his best, to win this war.

To see that all due respect is paid our own employees, who enlist for any war work, and also to keep in close touch with them after they are in the service through our shop paper as a medium.

To show to the men the importance of turning out good work and more of it, thereby doing something direct in helping win the war.

To conduct constructive educational meeting weekly addressed by best men available on subjects pertaining to all phases of present conditions of war.

To arrange and carry out all special work, such as:

- Y. M. C. A. drive.
- Red Cross drive.
- Liberty Loan drive.
- K. of C. drive.
- W. S. S. drive.

Special patriotic parades and any other work along same lines.

The results have been tangible and some might be listed:

$100,000.00 from 1,500 on second and third Liberty Loan.

$1,500.00 from 1,500 on second W. S. S.

Noticeable increase in production of war work.

Less adverse criticism of various war affairs, because of broader views gained by address weekly.

Voluntary organizing of drum corps, quartettes and such, for assisting at meetings.

Less knocking food conditions, since reasons and conditions of less fortunate, explained by one who knows.

While enlistment in war service was not an object yet several instances have been noted where men have felt called to enlist.

A deadening of desires and inclinations toward so-called Socialism.

An initiative to quicken action against German propaganda, some very decided action having already been taken. Several specific cases may be cited if wished. A greater desire to help has been manifested by a large increase of war gardens among men, about ten acres being under cultivation, divided among men who did not have garden plots at home.

This international food sharing is just looking after "my folks," "your folks" and "our folks."

Put the right food on the home table and the camp table will take care of itself.

Be a pioneer and store home-grown food as if no freight trains were running or grocery stores open.

Alien Enemies.

There be alien enemies
Sheltered 'neath our own roof-trees,—
Indolence and Apathy
And Extravagance, these three
Whom we entertain at ease.

Indolence that bids us shirk
Honest share of loyal work;
Apathy that bids us lie
While the red flames scorch the sky,
And Extravagance whose mirth
Sends black Famine upon earth.

Citizens, shall these endure?
These, the traitors in our door,—
These, the sellers of our sword,—
These, betrayers of our word
In the loyal oath we swore?

Men die for us over-seas
Shall we aid their enemies?
—By Theodosia Garrison of the Vigilantes.

Harnessing the Farm Horse

A part of the Intensive Agricultural Training course given members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, at Purdue University, was the handling of horses and teams. They were shown the knack of getting the harness on the draft animal's broad back, and off again when the animal was tired, without arousing the animal's spirit in protest. This and other instruction at the camp was designed to make the boys of greater usefulness to the farmer, especially in minor matters, such as take valuable time during the rush season on the farm.

Boy's Reserve in Action

The boys found plenty of opportunity for developing their physical bodies while enlarging their intellectual grasp of agricultural problems in the agricultural training camp at Purdue University. They are shown here under the direction of a Purdue instructor who is showing them how to handle a cultivator with increased effectiveness and lessened physical strain.

Call Issued for 25,000 Young Women for Student Nursing in American Hospitals

Those Between the Ages of 19 and 25 Are Wanted to Take Care of Increased Demands, for Replacement of Those Who Have Gone to the War Zone

The Council of National Defense authorizes the following:

With the Nation's reserve of trained nurses depleted through the calling of literally thousands of nurses for service in military and naval hospitals, both abroad and at bases in the United States, it has become necessary to call immediately for 25,000 student nurses for training in American hospitals.

This call for women between the ages of 19 and 35 is being issued jointly by W. C. Gorgas, Surgeon General of the United States Army; Rupert Blue, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service; H. P. Davison, chairman, War Council, American Red Cross; Dr. Franklin Martin, chairman, General Medical Board, Council of National Defense; Anna Howard Shaw, chairman, Woman's Committee, Council of National Defense.

The call is made necessary because only trained nurses can be used to advantage in military hospitals and to replace the graduates in this profession already called to service. The enrollment will begin July 29, and those who register will thereby be subject to call for training in the Army nursing school or in civilian hospitals until April 1, 1919.

Following is the formal appeal issued:

"To the Young Women of America:

"Across the sea, from France, with every closing day of the heroic struggle of our fighting men, there comes a more imperative call to the women of America to assume their full share of responsibility in winning this world war for the right of men, women, and nations to live their own lives and determine their own fortunes.

"There exists now an extreme need for at least 25,000 women of character, intelligence, and education to fill the gaps in our hospital staffs caused by the calling of many thousands of skilled nurses to the fighting front.

"There is only one way to fill these gaps: by keeping our hospital training schools supplied with students, who are not only preparing for service abroad and at home at the end of their course and at the same time are equipping themselves to earn their living in one of the noblest of professions, but from the very outset of their course are serving their country as well as learning.

"The Surgeon General of the United States Army, the Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, the American Red Cross, the General Medical Board, and the women's committee of the Council of National Defense therefore unite in an earnest appeal for 25,000 young women between the ages of 19 and 35 to enroll in what shall be called the United States Student Nurse Reserve. The enrollment will begin on July 29, 1918. Those who register in this volunteer body will engage to hold themselves in readiness until April 1, 1919, to be assigned to training schools in civilian hospitals or to Army Nursing School and begin their course of study and active student nursing.

"The service which we are asking calls for the best that the womanhood of America can offer in courage, devotion, and resourcefulness. We can not go forward to victory overseas if the wives and families of our fighters are not sustained in health and strength, if we can not protect our workers against the hazards of war industries, if we can not defeat accident and disease—our enemies at home. Upon the health of the American people will depend the spirit of their forces in the field.

"Acting on the urgency of the need, the undersigned have asked the State divisions of the Women's Committee of the Council of National Defense, through their local units, to enroll the 25,000 women needed. We ask the women of America to support us in our further effort not to lower American hospital standards, and to give us the practical assurance of their support by going to the nearest recruiting station established by the Women's Committee of the Council of National Defense on or after July 29 and enrolling in the United States Students Nurse Reserve."

ANNA HOWARD SHAW,
Chairman, Women's Committee,
Council of National Defense.

W. C. GORGAS,
Surgeon General,
United States Army.

RUPERT BLUE,
Surgeon General, United States
Public Health Service.

H. P. DAVIDSON,
Chairman, War Council,
American Red Cross.

DR. FRANKLIN MARTIN,
Chairman, General Medical Board,
Council of National Defense.

all required to obey, and is in furtherance of the most patriotic purpose that the people of a nation can conceive."

Emphasizing that it is manifestly unfair to appropriate any of the school funds, such as might serve to render impossible the full benefit of a normal year's work, or otherwise impair the efficiency of the school system, Superintendent Ellis's communication concludes:

"Such sums so appropriated (from the general fund) can be used to employ persons to advise or teach any or all of the inhabitants how to produce more food, how to conserve that which is produced, and also to carry out the plans and arrangements suggested by the local food administrators or other officers acting under said law (of August 10, 1917)."

This official authorization of the use of the general fund for the benefit of and promotion of war work is expected to result in many Indiana school teachers accepting employment for the vacation period in such tasks as will be of greatest possible usefulness to the nation in successfully carrying out the war program. Many teachers have offered to serve as garden supervisors, food instructors and demonstrators and in other capacities for a less remuneration than received for their regular school work, making the difference a patriotic contribution. The fact that the trustees are held by the State legal authorities to have legal sanction for the use of the general fund for such purposes is expected, also, to serve to stimulate patriotic activity in many communities, where it has slumped or never started because of the lack of financial encouragement and support, Superintendent Ellis believes.

The establishment of part time vocational schools and night schools for the training of such skilled workers as the government is asking for immediate duty, will be rendered more easily effective by this method, it is felt. With the federal government willing to pay one-half the cost of instructing the mechanics wanted for the army and navy, it is believed many townships in the State will manifest sufficient patriotic interest to direct their attention to such enterprise at once.

Special commendation will be given to other growers.

Methods used by the farmers who obtain the large wheat yields will be given wide local publicity and the better methods of growing wheat will be disseminated as widely as possible.

Corn Growing Contest Factor in Production

The federal government is depending on Indiana for a big corn crop next fall. It is estimated by the State Food Committee that the acreage planted this spring was nearly as great as that planted last year. In order to increase the total production of the state farmers are striving to secure greater yields per acre. The 330 five-acre corn growing contestants in 1917 testify to the practicability of intensive methods as a means of securing a greater production. Not only is it true, but the cost of producing an acre of corn in Indiana has been shown to be less as the yield per acre increased.

Under the direction of Purdue University the five-acre contest has already been organized in 56 counties. J. A. McCarty, in charge of this work, reports that over 500 contestants have been signed up in the ten leading counties. Wayne County, under the leadership of J. C. Kline, has 124 contestants enrolled. R. C. Arbuckle, Union County leader, reports 115; Tippecanoe, 47; Greene, 44; Fountain, 43; Dearborn, 34; Johnson, 31; Morgan, 27; and Franklin County, 24. The contest is being conducted through Purdue University by the Indiana Corn Growers' Association. The association now has over 1,500 members.

Trustees May Spend From General Funds

Under Decision of Attorney-General Money for Emergency War Work Is Available.

Township trustees of Indiana have authority to employ teachers or others qualified, to supervise the work of school children and others in agriculture, vocational training or other emergency war work and pay them out of the general township funds. This advice is being sent to county superintendents of public instruction by Horace Ellis, State superintendent, who bases the assertion upon a statement from the attorney-general.

Inquiries have come to his office, Superintendent Ellis states, asking whether the trustee might employ teachers, part time, for such war work, whether the minimum wage law must govern such employment, whether the teacher employed must have license, etc.

After an examination of the statutes bearing upon the points enumerated, Superintendent Ellis points out that while prior to January 12, 1918, there existed no apparent legal way in which public funds might be employed for such purpose, the attorney-general in answer to an inquiry "based upon the advisability of using public money to defray expenses in meeting the urgent demands of the government to increase the food production of the country for war purposes, under the Act of August 10, 1917, the attorney-general said in part:

"I do not think it would be proper for the township trustee or school officers to appropriate money from the school funds of their school corporations for such purpose, but I do believe it is the law that township trustees and other similar officers of political subdivisions should use a reasonable amount of money from the general fund of their townships or municipalities to comply completely with the object of the law and to do the full part of their people in this patriotic proceeding. There is no question in mind but what it is not only their right to so expend such sums, but it is their patriotic duty to do so. It is carrying out a law of the government, which we are

First Training Camp At Purdue Successful

Members of U. S. Boys' Working Reserve
Step Forward to Help Win the War.

Eighty-one boys from 16 to 20 years old, members of the Boys' Working Reserve, were graduated from the Purdue University training camp Sunday afternoon and were immediately assigned to work in counties in different sections of the State and will spend the remainder of the summer vacations on farms. These youths completed a ten days' short course in agriculture, learning enough about the rudiments of farm work to make of them dependable hands. The commencement exercises were held in Eliza Fowler hall at the university and a number of farmers and agricultural agents from the surrounding country attended for the purpose of employing the boys for work in their respective sections. Eleven were sent to Jasper county, ten were placed in Tippecanoe, five in Newton, five in Benton, four in White and others in various counties throughout the state. At the close of the exercises each boy was given a diploma or certificate of his work in the Purdue camp, pledging him to serve for the remainder of the war in food production during the summer.

Pledge to Work.

The certificate awarded reads as follows: "United States Boys' Working Reserve, Department of Labor, Washington, D. C. This is to certify that ..... graduate farm cadet of Purdue Agricultural Training Camp, has been appointed to the office of Agricultural Aid and is hereby detailed for the duration of the war, unless called for military service, to devote his summer vacations to food production or conservation, faithfully discharging his duties as a member enrolled in the United States Boys' Working Reserve."

The certificate bears the signature of William Edwin Hall, national director of the reserve; Governor James P. Goodrich of Indiana and Isaac D. Straus, State Director of the Boys' Reserve. It also bears an impression of the seal of the United States and of the State of Indiana.

Every Boy Volunteers.

The commencement exercises opened with a brief address by Dean J. H. Skinner of the Purdue College of Agriculture, under whose auspices the school was conducted. He introduced Isaac D. Straus of Ligonier, who pointed out to the boys their opportunity in wartime food production. When he called for volunteers who were willing to do their utmost in this work every hand went up.

Prof. G. I. Christie, representing Secretary of Agriculture Houston, brought a message from Washington to the boys urging them to do their utmost and reminding them that the nation expects every Hoosier boy to do his duty. He told of how Canada, with 500,000 men in military service, two out of every three of whom came from farms, last year increased her food production five per cent beyond the yield in any previous year. This was possible only because thousands of Canadian women and high school boys stepped forward and filled the gap. City boys from Canadian High Schools made good on farms. Surely American boys cannot do any less, he said.

Prof. Christie praised the manner in which the boys from the camp had shocked wheat in the fields near Lafayette, stating that their work would have done credit to any experienced farm hand. He closed by stating that he was glad to see the Federal Government recognize the tremendous energy available in boys and praised the training camp plan of converting it into a virile force effective for food production during the war.

Praises Purdue Faculty.

Dr. G. L. Mackintosh, president of Wabash College and a member of the state committee for the Boys' Working Reserve, expressed the appreciation of the Reserve to the university, Dean

J. H. Skinner and Dean Stanley Coulter, who has had charge of the camp, for the opportunity offered. He declared any boy who leaves his work when the farmer needs him badly is in the same class as a deserter of the army or navy.

W. B. Krueck, who has had charge of the instructional work, gave the boys a final word of encouragement, urging them to give their best to the work and be loyal to the farmers who employ them. Dean Stanley Coulter, commander of the camp, also spoke briefly, praising the boys for the splendid attitude toward their work.

Military Drill a Feature.

Major H. C. Thuerk deserves much praise for the splendid manner in which the boys acquitted themselves during the military review held on the campus just prior to the exercises in Fowler Hall. Marching like veterans, heads erect, eyes front, and shoulders back, with all that vigorous enthusiasm common to the youth of America, the boys revealed that they knew serious business, involving a man's responsibility, was ahead of them. John V. Wilson, Secretary of the State Council of Defense, and an officer of the Indiana State Militia, stated that this company of boys would compare favorably with any group of men with equal military training.

To Indianapolis goes the honor of furnishing the Captain of the Cadet Company. Donald Dynes, who was nominated for the camp by Russell B. Harrison, secretary of the Marion County Council of Defense, served in that capacity during the review and won much praise.

Boys Completing Course.

The following boys were awarded certificates as evidence of their having completed the prescribed course of instruction: William Whiteman, and Cleo Thomas, Allen County; Tilford Smith, and Arthur Cyr, Benton County; Joe Decker, Clay County; Cyril Wilson, Dubois County; George Davis, J. W. Hawks, and Earl Blough, Elkhart County; C. E. Adkins, Elisha A. Metzger, and Gilbert Jones, Fountain County; Charles Taylor, and Paul Daugherty, Gibson County; William Neal, and Howard Watson, Grant County; Harold Thompson, and Herman Pevler, Hendricks County; Lew D. Wallace, Jackson County; Donnelly Sullivan, Huntington County; Charles Weber, Jennings County; Barney Crowe, Lawrence County; Francis Hedden, Miami County; Laverne Lindsay, Montgomery County; Ralph Busch, Thomas McNutt, Paul Feucht, Edward Lafien, Max Alder, Earl Babb, Gaines Cartinhour, Louis Isensee, Charles Moores, Kenneth Moore, Lawrence Lang, Richard Goode, Robert McCready, Gerald Griffin, Carl Rothert, Emery Todd, Donald Dynes, Erwin Broz, Henry Frenzel, William Terrill, James Freeman, Vincent Rush, Aaron Potter, Vallorous McLeay, Marion Brown, Albert Leane, Talbott Denney, John Neff, Byron Woods, and Albert Patton, Marion County; Colbert McCain and George Rider, Newton County; Carlisle Latta, Noble County; Frederick Weymouth, Owen County; Henry Griffin, Pike County; Leonard Dye, Tippecanoe County; Elmer Murphy, and Dewey Lane, Tipton County; Lawrence Russell, Fred Newman, and Jack Weil, Vanderburgh County; William Spork, Aaron Broderick, and Rutledge Johnson, Vigo County; Foley Roberts, Warrick County; Carl Brady, Wayne County; Lindell Rothrock, White County; Walter Ludlow, and Harold R. Miller, Boone County; Everett Hardman, St. Joseph County; Paul Tobin, Robert Schlossman, and Harold Pollock, Chicago, Illinois; Proctor Hesse, C. Harris Mershon, Frank R. Thomas, and Henry M. Hill, Louisville, Ky.

Second Camp Opened July 9.

On Tuesday, July 9th, eighty-four boys from Indiana, and seven from Chicago, Illinois, reported at Purdue for the second training camp. With few exceptions, none of these boys have been engaged in productive employment essential to winning the war. Therefore they will add to the available farm labor supply for the remainder of this season and will be available as dependable farm hands early next spring. The Indiana boys nominated and accepted for the second camp are as follows: Frank Kurtz, Adams County; Frank Myers, Robert E. Richey, Francis Klopfenstein, Bernon Haifley, Fred Getty, Albert W. Summers, Robert Mercer, Paul Shive, Lawrence Emerick, Walker D. McCurdy, Don Hadley, and E. D. Auer, Allen County; Norman Mendenhall, Cyril W. Hicks, Marion Momen, and William E. Davies, Clay County; Everett T. Pruitt, Dubois County; Wyatt Mick, Joe Miller, and Warren McCumsey, Elkhart County; Harold S. Pickens, Floyd County; Carl Hektor, Chloe Toughman, and Joe Schaaf, Fulton County; Estes Hollingsworth, and Charles Ballard, Gibson County; Donald Innis, Grant County; Fred Osborn, Hendricks County; Ralph Amich, Jackson County; Louis Schofield, Jefferson County; Glen Hunt, Jennings County; Edwin Bey, and Dwight Berry, Knox County; Albert Steele, and Roland L. Edwards, Lawrence County; Robert Hyatt, and Eugene Clifford, Madison County; Alfred C. Mueller, J. E. Palmer, Harry E. Pierson, Isidore Greenburg, Roy Morrison, Charles Parsons, Jos. J. Klee, Jack Jones, Nyles Beville, and Kenneth Dynes, Marion County; Robert Hunter, Monroe County; Robert Reynolds, Theodore Schweitzer, Richard Stout, Ernest Dinwiddie, John Hose, John Zook, James Kennon, Guy Stahr, Ladley Martin, Gilbert McClelland, Clarence Bennett, and Clyde Parker, Montgomery County; Ansel A. Webber, and Leon Moore, Newton County; Gary Smith, Noble County; Joseph E. Brasier, Jewell McKee, and Paul L. Whittaker, Owen County; James B. Zeis, and Wm. Hester, Putnam County; Benj. A. Branch, and Robert Kellams, Spencer County; Robert Denman, Steuben County; Edward C. Wheeler, and Herbert Shaw, Tipton County; Charles W. Jefferies, Bennett Montgomery, and Carroll Halloway, Vanderburgh County; Eugene Evans, and Dewey Landers, Vermillion County; Frank G. West, D. Lyle Kingery, James E. Taylor, and George H. Coltrin, Vigo County; Paul Tweedy, and Earl Shofer, Warrick County; Everett C. Phillips, and Lynn Lowrey, Wayne County; Donald B. Spittler, and Arthur C. Berry, Whitley County.

Boys From Large Cities.

All of the large cities in the state nominated boys for the second camp except South Bend. John G. Yeagley, City Director of the Boys' Working Reserve for that city, explained that he had given full publicity to the splendid advantages of the camp and had communicated with many boys, but those who were not engaged in productive employment either did not care to leave the city or else their parents refused to give consent. He reported that the majority of the boys of South Bend are engaged in productive employment at this time and therefore are ineligible for the training camp.

Great Weapon of Victory.

M. de Cartier, representative of Belgium, sends this message: "You hold in your hands a great weapon of victory in our common cause—the woman power of the United States. To many of the women of Belgium the opportunity of helping their own men by active participation in the war is denied. All our women and girls in the military zone are subject to military labor forced on them by the invaders, even up to the firing line. They are laborers on war material destined for the destruction of their own people. We Belgians do not forget that even before America entered the war, American help and sympathy brought to us the material and the spiritual force that have helped Belgium through almost four weary years of war and kept their spirit firm and resolution strong. And our women, also, remember that it is to you, women of America, who are so admirably doing your part to sustain the great force of the United States, that they owe a full share of gratitude and of thanks as their deliverers."

The "Work or Fight" Order.

The "work or fight" regulations apply only to those who are registered under the selective service law. This means men who are between the ages of 21 and 31. It does not concern those above draft age.

Young men within the draft age should be cautious about giving up their present employment and should be guided by instructions from their local draft board.

The government expects every man to do some useful work in war time, but the "work or fight" regulations should not cause men to quit their present employment until they are sure this is required.

Disease-Free Wheat From Improved Seed

Hot Water Method of Controlling Smut
Will Be Applied in State-Wide Campaign.

First steps toward increasing Indiana's wheat production via the pure-bred, disease-free seed route will be taken as a feature of the campaign this year to increase the yield. D. S. Myer, State leader of the wheat drive, made this announcement to-day, when he told of seed treatment work which will start about August 1 in half the counties of the State. The hot-water method of controlling loose and stinking smut, and other diseases which come from the seed, will be used.

"This is not a plan which we wish to have taken up on every farm or very generally, because the hot-water treatment requires expert care and attention, so that the germination of the seed will not be spoiled in the treatment," said Mr. Myers. "Our work along this line will be to have seed treated by men from Purdue University or the Department of Agriculture, who are familiar with the methods that must be followed to make the plan successful. This work will be done under the auspices of the State Food Committee.

"We hope to have perhaps two to six farmers in thirty or forty counties have enough seed treated this year to sow two acres or any small amount this fall. From this tract, then, next year he will have seed enough for his entire crop, which may be used the following year to supply some of his neighbors. By having a few men in these counties take the pains to learn the hot-water treatment and how to do it thoroughly without damaging the seed, and by taking precautions at threshing time, within three or four years every farmer in the State can have seed free from smut, which has caused such a big loss in the State this year. The yield is going to be increased considerably when these diseases are wiped out."

Pursuance of such a plan this year will be a big step toward obtaining better seed, not only for wheat, but other crops in Indiana.

Big Saving on Seed Corn.

County agricultural agents saved Indiana farmers more than a million dollars on their seed corn alone this year, according to an estimate made by C. Henry, State leader in the seed corn work, and reported to the State Food Committee. This estimate, which he says is conservative, was based on the report of the average seed corn price in Indiana when compared with that of other States.

Indiana's average seed corn price was practically $5, reports from every county in the State show. While the prices ranged from $2.50 to considerable above $5, some of it being sold at auction for unheard of prices, the average was $4.90, Mr. Henry's figures show.

It takes more than a million bushels of seed to plant Indiana's corn acreage. Mr. Henry went on the assumption that half of the farmers had their own seed, thus making a half million bushels of seed corn which the county and emergency demonstration agents were instrumental in supplying. The average price in Indiana was nearly $3 below the average for neighboring States, as will be seen by their figures: Illinois, $9; Michigan, $8; Wisconsin, $7, and Ohio, $7.50.

If the agents supplied this much corn, and figures indicate they did, then they really saved farmers in this State a million and a half dollars. This corn was supplied by the agents through their seed stocks and labor survey, which located surplus supplies, the surplus being transferred from community to community and county to county. The agents also made possible the bringing into Indiana of many carloads of high testing seed corn and the keeping out of large amounts of purely southern corn.

This saving was brought about through agreement on the following seed corn prices by State Food Director G. I. Christie, a committee of the county agents and the indorsement of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation: Old corn, unsorted, $2.50; old corn, sorted, $4; old corn, sorted and tested, $5; new corn, properly dried and individual ear tested, $6.50 to $7. These prices were not set by law, but they were decided on as reasonable, and the moral effect in the State due to the work of the agents served to keep the prices down.

Many Farmers Now Keep Books.

More than 2,500 farmers in Indiana are keeping accounts of their farm receipts and expenses and taking annual inventories in a farm record book prepared by the Extension Department of Purdue University. Of this number, 2,100 are co-operating with the farm management division and will receive assistance at the end of the year in summarizing their business and in analyzing it to determine what changes can be made to increase the profits.

The experience of the 500 men who completed accounts last year in this kind of book, shows that it is well adapted to use by Indiana farmers. In addition to the help a man gets from it in studying his farm business, the book is well suited for making income tax returns. Last year a large proportion of the farmers who had to make returns for the income tax guessed at their receipts and expenses, and in practically all cases disregarded the inventories in figuring the income.

Last year, since the method of figuring the income in the book conforms almost exactly to income tax requirements, farmers who are using the book can take advantage of the ruling of the U. S. Treasury Department which provides as follows:

"Farmers who keep books according to some approved method which clearly shows the net income and take annual inventories, may if the same method is consistently followed from year to year, prepare their returns in accordance with the showing made by the books and inventories."

Plans are made to get these books next year in the hands of a much larger proportion of the farmers of the state through the banks and in various ways. The increased interest in keeping accounts, which the income tax has stimulated, has resulted in the distribution of a great many different kinds of farm record books. Many of these are so complicated that an expert book-keeper is almost needed for them and others lack some of the essentials. Farmers can obtain the Purdue book from the county agents or Purdue University.

Fruits and vegetables packed in Indiana for the War and Navy Departments will be inspected by representatives of the Federal food administrator for Indiana. This is at the request of the government officials.

Increased demands upon the Baking Division made it necessary that it find new quarters, and hereafter it will be found at 817 Merchants Bank Building, Indianapolis.

Council to Support All Relief Measures

That Are Intended to Provide for Soldiers
Who Are in Need of Hospital Service.

Assurances of support were given the Medical Section of the Indiana State Council of Defense in any activity directed to the proper care and treatment of tubercular and nerve-diseased soldiers, and of civilians similarly afflicted as a result of war-time conditions, at the regular meeting of the council July 17.

The council, at the request of Dr. C. P. Emerson, chairman of the Medical Section, heard Dr. S. E. Smith, superintendent of the Eastern Indiana Hospital for the Insane at Richmond and chairman of the committee of the section having responsibility for this work. Dr. Smith informed the council the Federal government will make provision for the care of such cases only as develop from causes manifest following the entry of men into the Federal service. He said that many of these, even, will be sent back with others who have been found suffering from causes antedating their induction into the service. Of these he estimated that 10 per cent will be in need of special treatment on account of shellshock and exposure incident to trench life.

"We will have a very decided increase also in the demands on our Indiana hospitals from among civilians," Dr. Smith said. "The colonization plants at Richmond and Madison, where segregation and occupation and the simple life obtain, will afford means for caring for many. We receive between 1,200 and 1,300 cases annually from among the civil population in peace times. We are now sending out that many. For some reason there is a decided falling off in applications for admissions lately. For this we have no satisfactory explanation. However there has been an increased demand for accommodations for women sufferers. This is attributed to the greater sensitiveness of the sex to conditions growing out of the war. We would like to have all cases of returned soldiers in need of special treatment of this kind reported to the State Board of Charities, who will in turn notify the heads of our institutions, so these men may be given preference. We must not have these soldiers tied up in jails as a result of diseases contracted in the Federal service."

Dr. Smith said the Medical Section would, later on, present definite plans for the increased facilities on colony farms. He said that a system of voluntary admissions into insane hospitals, whereby sixty to ninety days' treatment might be secured without the present red tape, publicity and notoriety, should be effected for the special benefit of war-time sufferers.

Dr. Smith said that at present Indiana institutions are overcrowded, except where some of the colonies have places for men. He expressed the opinion that county hospitals will not be sufficiently equipped nor adequately supervised for effective work. His estimate was that from 30 to 50 per cent of the cases might be brought under the observation and treatment of the State institutions on the certificate of two physicians and examination by the heads of the institution with satisfactory results.

On motion of Isaac D. Straus the Medical Section was authorized to take such steps as it might deem necessary "to obviate the incarceration of

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—Over 200 Adams County farmers are keeping accounts of their farm receipts and expenses, and taking annual inventories in a farm record book especially prepared by the agricultural extension department of Purdue University.

Benton County.—Fowler is organizing a "Home Guard," and as soon as the organization is completed instructors will be recruited from among men who have seen service, or who have had military training.

Clay County.—Chairman M. H. Johnson of the county council of defense has been receiving numerous anonymous complaints regarding supposed pro-Germanism, and advises no investigations will be made on such reports, but where names and addresses are signed the affair will be looked into immediately. In no case will the names of those signing such reports be published.

Delaware County.—Many newspapers that have been supporting the war and active in promoting various war activities are targets for a new and insidious German propaganda, and instances of this work are not lacking in Muncie. Paid German agents are busily engaged in stirring up dissensions by bringing charges of pro-Germanism against prominent firms and individuals, and the press has been their special target. The quickest way to stamp out this evil is to report such talk to the council of defense, and steps will be immediately taken to put an end to it, advises the Muncie Press.

Dekalb County.—H. L. Brown, federal food administrator for Dekalb County, has issued the following notice to combat one of the latest forms of German propaganda: "The story has gained considerable circulation that July 15th was the last day that people could purchase sugar for canning purposes. This is far from the truth, as there has been no such regulation, nor will there be. If everybody will buy just the amount of sugar they need for present use, everybody will have plenty. Under no circumstances should people buy their canning sugar at this time unless they have use for it, and then only what they need for the present time. A little later sugar will be more plentiful than it is now, and if people will buy according to present needs everybody will have enough."

Elkhart County.—Deputy Food Administrator G. A. Briggs has appointed a price-fixing committee for milk and cream sold in Elkhart, consisting of County Agricultural Agent G. F. Metzger, chairman; James L. Calkins, who is a member of the county council of defense; Wilbur Templein, representing the consumers, and Riley Page and A. F. Myers, representing the producers.

Fountain County.—"America's loyalty to food" is a happy way of speaking of food conservation, and the phrase was suggested by one of the lieutenants of a Logan Township food club. At a recent meeting of the food clubs of this township, Mrs. Herbert Anderson, a native of South Wales, spoke of food conditions obtaining in England, explaining that in her native town of Cardiff potatoes were selling at $33 a bushel; eggs at $1.50 per dozen; meat at 60 cents a pound; tea at $1.50 a pound. She stated that since the English government has taken over the food supply conditions are better. After living in wartime privations abroad, Mrs. Anderson said life in America is like living in a land of plenty.

Henry County.—Newcastle women are working on 100 scrap books, which are to be ready by August 1st. The books will be made up of clippings from papers, stories, jokes and pictures, and are intended to give a pleasant hour and bring a bit of home cheer to wounded soldier boys in the various convalescing hospitals.

Howard County.—The county council of defense is contemplating a new plan for the next Liberty Loan. "to get away from conditions which too commonly obtain in many communities, where practically the entire responsibility rests upon a few who give of their time, effort and purse." One plan is to hold a Liberty Loan rally for the whole county in Kokomo on a given day; to have headquarters for each township at some prominent point in the business district; previous notice by mail having gone to every resident of that particular township that he would be expected to report at his township headquarters on that day and subscribe in proportion to his means. The second plan contemplates, instead of a county rally in Kokomo, a rally in each individual township, with bands and speakers. This means the giving over of one day to each township, all subscriptions to be taken during that day. Either of these arrangements would conserve much of the time and effort put forth by Liberty Loan organizations under the old plans, it is claimed. Chairman Lloyd McClure of the council of defense will be aided in this work by W. H. Arnett, vice-chairman. The idea of the new plan originated with C. B. Tudor of Taylor Township.

Huntington County.—The report of Miss Dilla K. Stults, chairman of the women's registration under the women's section of the Huntington County Defense Council, shows 95 per cent of the women registered with child registrations of 5,917. Four thousand nine hundred and eighty have training in more than one occupation and only 108 are without occupations. Motion pictures taken here to illustrate the working of the farm labor reserve of city men, worked out by Z. T. Dungan and adopted in many other counties of Indiana, will be exhibited in Huntington, according to a letter received by Mr. Dungan. The film is to be exhibited in all parts of the nation. The twelve township trustees of Huntington County, at a meeting Saturday night with C. B. Williams, county fuel administrator, decided to order coal for their schools through the fuel administration.

Kosciusko County.—At a recent meeting of the women's section of the county council of defense, presided over by Miss Harriet Frazier, president of the Warsaw section, some interesting reports of work accomplished were given. Mrs. Clark Mumaw, chairman of the Red Cross and allied relief, reported 1,400 articles made and forwarded in nine months, and these consisted mostly of bath robes, socks and sweaters. Mrs. W. W. Reed, chairman of the liberty loan of the women's section, went "over the top" and raised more than the sum allotted to them.

Laporte County.—A practical charity has been undertaken by the War Mothers' Association of Laporte, and plans are well under way toward aiding the 250 orphan children in the Children's Aid Society of Mishawaka. These children are from the counties of Laporte, St. Joseph and Elkhart, and range in age from tiny infants to boys and girls of 16 years. Clothing will be collected, cleaned and made suitable for the children, and it is further suggested that good and permanent homes for these children might be found in the homes of some of the boys who have gone to France. Hoosier Slide Camp No. 3568, Modern Woodmen of America, of Michigan City, recently passed a resolution pledging themselves to live up to the rules of the food administration.

Madison County.—Southern Madison County grain elevators are being patrolled by liberty guards, and this war service is to be extended at once throughout the county. Two companies of the guards have their headquarters at Elwood, one in Anderson, one at Pendleton and one at Alexandria. The Pendleton company is the first one on duty and its members are stationed at elevators at Pendleton, Markleville and Emporia. Elevators in each of these towns are being filled with wheat and rye. The yield is the heaviest for many years and it was concluded that these elevators are too valuable and important not to be protected by patrol service. The details on watch include from two to four men at each elevator. Wheat in the fields also is being guarded at places and at night persons found in roads who can not explain their mission clearly are investigated. No vandalism has been reported, but it was thought best not to wait for such reports before action to prevent losses. Following an action of the State Council of Defense condemning grain profiteering in Indiana, H. S. Agster, Madison County agricultural agent; D. O. Tensley, county food administrator, and E. M. Wilson, member of the State Council of Defense, visited all grain dealers in Madison County and told them of the state order.

Marshall County.—The first county food demonstration was held in Laporte on July 13th. Permanent quarters have been secured and it is planned to make this a sort of club room for the exchange of ideas, and also commodities. Mrs. Julia Cole gave a demonstration on cottage cheese at the initial meeting, and further arrangements are in charge of Mrs. Arthur O'Keefe.

Miami County.—With a quota of 540 in the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, Miami County readily responded with an enrollment of more than 600 boys, who are demonstrating their loyalty and patriotism by working in factories or on farms, doing their bit to the utmost of their ability in helping win the war.

Ohio County.—One of the banner war gardens of Indiana is to be found in the back yard of a Rising Sun home, and was planted and cultivated by Curt Gary. Mr. Gary followed the idea of a succession of crops, and now has a second crop of bunch beans where a first crop grew; rows of sweet potatoes where onions and lettuce were produced, etc. One of the attractive features of the garden is a luxuriant growth of beans of a particular variety, which are now fully filled out. The beans hang thickly from the vines, and a snapshot of them would look well on the page of any seed catalog.

Owen County.—Community singing, talks by four-minute men, music and instructive motion pictures will be weekly events in Spencer hereafter. Managers of a local picture show will co-operate with the council of defense in securing war films.

Pike County.—Reports from Miss Edith B. Evans of the Publicity Committee of the Council of Defense indicate splendid response to the various war activities by the people of Pike County. Out of 4,570 women registered, more than half of this number were trained in more than one occupation; with a Red Cross quota for the county of $10,000, $24,000 was subscribed; with a Liberty Loan quota of 14,800, $265,000 was subscribed; and it is expected the War Savings Stamp record will fully measure up to this excellent record.

Rush County.—The Rushville Social Club, which has been in existence for a quarter of a century, has decided to quit on account of the war, and all its furnishings will be sold and the money contributed to some war cause.

Shelby County.—A detestable act of pro-Germanism was unearthed on a farm southeast of Shelbyville during thrashing last week. One of the men felt his pitchfork hit something hard in a sheaf of wheat, and on investigation it proved to be a brick-bat. It was carefully tucked away in the sheaf just where it is tied by the twine, being so securely held that it would go into the separator with the sheaf. The timely discovery prevented serious injury to the machine, and probable loss of life.

Spencer County.—Some of the boy scouts are doing their bit by photographing loafers who hold down store-front chairs. These photographs will be turned into the council of defense as evidence for prosecution under the "work or fight" order.

Tippecanoe County.—The council of defense has again issued notice that all new public improvements and buildings involving labor and material must have the approval of the council's committee consisting of William V. Stuart, Geo. P. Haywood and Thos. Duncan before such projects can be undertaken. Citizens are cautioned against contributing to new and unauthorized organizations who are instituting "drives" for money. Certain organizations have the official sanction of the state and county councils of defense and it is the part of wisdom to support these, the county council warns. The war mothers of Tippecanoe County are officially authorized to collect magazines, postal cards and do such other work in meeting troop trains as does not conflict with the canteen service rules of the Red Cross and the rules of the food administration, with the understanding that there is to be no public solicitation of funds.

Vanderburgh County.—A bureau of labor of the Food Administration has been organized in Evansville. At the organization meeting Charles A. Fitch, Jr., presided, and splendidly effective talks were given by Mrs. Edward Torrance and former State Senator William B. Carleton. Mrs. Torrance brought with her about 60 girls from the Haas cigar factory, who sang "Hooverized" songs which were much enjoyed. Mrs. Torrance spoke on food conservation, and Mr. Carleton's address was along patriotic lines. Permanent officers of the organization have been elected as follows: Chairman, Charles A. Fitch, Jr.; vice-chairman, Otto Behrens; treasurer, Gus Eltonhead; secretary, Mrs. Joseph Morris. Many of the local factories and firms sent representatives to the meeting. Mr. Fitch urged upon the delegates to make reports to him of any violation of the food regulations. He especially asked that any grocer who sold more than three-fourths of a pound of sugar to any one customer be reported. He said the new organization could accomplish a great deal of good and he believed that it would. George Schauer, state organizer of the Friends of German Democracy, working with the approval of the county council of defense, is bending every effort in this county to enlist Americans of German origin in active support of America's war, and to encourage the German people to overthrow autocracy. Personal calls were made at the homes of many prominent citizens of German descent, and encouraged by the interest and enthusiasm shown, Mr. Schauer is contemplating the formation of a branch of the organization in Evansville. Aggressive work has been undertaken by George S. Clifford, chairman of the county council of defense, and Mrs. F. M. Hostetter, vice-chairman and head of the women's division. One of the most important accomplishments of the council has been its child welfare work. Under this classification the weighing and measuring of babies was undertaken here in the spring and corrective methods outlined for those children which were found ailing. The child delinquency problem has been one of the questions before the council and teachers of the city schools have been enlisted in the fight to give Evansville and Vanderburgh County a better childhood. The council also has done much to foster food clubs throughout the county and to aid in the food conservation movement. Mrs. James Platt has been in charge of this work and her efforts have won the commendation of the state officers.

Vigo County.—When Captain Wayne Bigwood of the Terre Haute Liberty Guards called for volunteers to assist in running down German propaganda and securing evidence to convict the guilty parties, every man present at drill offered his services and expressed willingness to aid in every way possible in combating this insidious enemy. The guards are planning an all-day hike Sunday, the 21st.

Wabash County.—Wabash County is already busy working on the Fourth Liberty Loan, and volunteer workers at the court house are now making out the government records of every taxpayer in the county. The cards will be the property of the government, and will show just how much property each taxpayer has listed on the tax duplicates, and such other information as is requisite in making out the quota for each individual for the loan. The cards are for use only in Liberty Loan work and are not public property. When the records are all completed and classified, an appraisal board will be named in each township of the county; the cards for the various townships will be turned over to the respective township appraisal boards, and the boards will decide the quota for the individual donors. The government insists that this plan be carried out in a mandatory manner, and that in case of error the necessary adjustment can be made by the township appraisal board.

Warrior County.—The Warrior County Council of Defense has asked the ministers of the German churches of the county to discontinue the use of the German language in their services during the war.

Wayne County.—Reports of the committee having in charge the recent child welfare campaign in Richmond were made to the board of directors of the social service bureau. The report of the examining physicians showed that 329 cases are in need of medical attention, and it is the plan of the bureau to follow out the recommendations of the doctors. If the parents of the children are unable to have the work done a method will be provided by the social service bureau. Of the cases reported, 331 should have immediate action, the report states.

White County.—The county council of defense has recommended that the churches of Monticello hold their service in the schoolhouses during the winter months as a coal conservation measure, since the schoolhouses will have to be heated.

Working Reserve Has Made Good Says Hall

Faith of the Nation in the Patriotism of Its Boys Has Been Fully Vindicated.

The Federal Government believed that in the boys of the nation there was stored a tremendous untapped supply of man power. Through its labor mobilization arm, the Department of Labor, it organized the United States Boys' Working Reserve to harness and distribute this potential force to the points most needed for maximum production.

The United States put faith in the American boy. If that faith were not justified and the youth could not be induced in the war emergency to leave his usual casual vacation employment or entire idleness for hard, intensive labor during the summer months in the interest of his country, then the United States Boys' Working Reserve must needs be a total failure.

In this connection William E. Hall, National Director of the Boys' Reserve, has the following to say:

"We who are striving here in Washington and you loyal and unselfish volunteers in the field, who are closest to the boy worker, can now announce to the entire world that every bit of faith reposed by the United States in its youth has been justified. There are practically no idle school boys of Reserve age in the nation today. The American boy has made good. Overwhelming proof has been offered in the shape of hundreds of letters from farmers and leaders not only that the boy has made good but that he has made good beyond even our expectations.

"The United States Boys' Working Reserve enters its second year with possibilities so far-reaching that the extent of accomplishment is only limited by the amount of financial support which we may obtain from the Federal and State Governments and by the ability of the officials to throw themselves wholeheartedly into this most important of war tasks."

Farm Training Camps.

With the second and last Agricultural Training Camp to be conducted at Purdue University this season drawing to a close, abundant proof of the success of this plan comes from other States.

Frank B. McLain, Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania, in which State the Boys' Working Reserve organization received an appropriation of $125,000 this year, declares that "the farmers of his district are being rapidly converted to the fact that high school and college boys, imbued by the patriotic spirit and training provided them at the State College Training Camp, constitute the best form of emergency farm labor yet developed in this State."

Vermont, Maine, Massachusetts, Washington State, Colorado, Connecticut, Michigan and Rhode Island have all conducted splendid camps and are planning ahead on a large scale for next season. In Indiana it is hoped to conduct another series of training camps in 1918, beginning possibly May 1, with accommodations for at least 200 boys in each camp.

Cut, Saw, and Burn Wood.

America is saving and storing its fuel this summer to guard against coal famine this winter. To keep ships bunkered, the wheels of war industries turning, and to guard against children in cities freezing this winter, country and village homes are urged to use wood lots instead of depending on freight-hauled coal. The use of woodpile, saw and ax is a patriotic service at this time, when the United States Fuel Administration urges the use of wood for fuel. According to the United States Forest Service only 10 to 15 per cent of the fuel used in America to-day is wood, although enough wood is standing in wood lots of the States east of the Mississippi to supply fuel for the farms and villages of those States, and to save coal in freight congested districts.

Householders are asked to make this pledge voluntarily, so that the lives of thousands of babies and aged and infirm people may be saved this winter:

I Promise—

To clean my furnace, pipes and chimney at once.

To keep them clean all winter.

To run my own furnace this winter instead of putting an ignorant, careless, underpaid keeper in charge of it.

To visit one of the coal-savings stations that the local fuel administration is establishing in our town.

To learn from the heating experts at the savings station exactly how to run my furnace to avoid waste.

To use team-hauled wood as a coal substitute whenever I can get it, even if it costs as much as coal.

To guard every ton of coal and coke and every gallon of fuel oil.

To practice these economies that I may save our fuel, thus preventing bitter suffering and coal famine in American homes and thus supplying my government with the fuel power that is absolutely necessary to win in the giant struggle against satanic might and evil.

Beekeepers Are Organizing To Relieve Sugar Shortage

A drive to stimulate the production of honey in Indiana this year as one means of helping relieve the sugar shortage is well under way in the State with the organization of beekeepers' associations in seven counties: Daviess, Knox, Posey, Vanderburgh, Warrick, Jefferson and Dearborn. E. G. Baldwin, extension agent from the Department of Agriculture, has been placed in Indiana to co-operate with Purdue in extending this organization throughout the State.

"Every county could have 10,000 more bee colonies, I believe, and not have any too many," said Mr. Baldwin in reporting to the State Food Committee. "Production of honey is aiding now in relieving the sugar shortage; however there are tons of honey going to waste in the State each year, much of which could be saved if beekeeping was practiced more widely."

Sowing of buckwheat in frosted corn areas will provide many more pastures than those already existing for bees in Indiana, Mr. Baldwin pointed out.

"Fifty per cent of the bees in the State died last winter because of improper handling during the severe weather," the bee specialist said. "There are many townships having almost no bees and all counties are deficient in the number of colonies of bees needed to save the vast amount of honey annually going to waste in this State. It is safe to say that all over Indiana not five per cent of the available honey is saved for use of man. This is wasted sugar, all the more to be regretted when it is known that the nectar is secreted just the same, whether the bees are there to save it or not. It evaporates and is lost if bees do not gather and store it."

Mr. Baldwin urges beemen throughout the State to help meet this situation by stimulating interest in agriculture and the extension of the bee industry.

Red Cross Activities

Records compiled for Red Cross Home Service Sections in the Lake Division show that to July 1 248 Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky soldiers and sailors had lost their lives.

Two hundred and five were seriously wounded and twelve taken prisoner in the same period.

By States these casualties are:

	Ohio.	Indiana.	Ken- tucky.	Total.
Deaths .....	135	66	47	248
Seriously wounded..	86	63	56	205
Taken prisoner.....	4	4	4	12

These lists have been prepared from the official bulletin by R. J. Colbert, assistant in the Bureau of Civilian Relief at Lake Division Red Cross Headquarters. Chapter Home Service workers have been instructed what assistance to render to relatives of men affected and to the seriously wounded on their return.

To prevent the possibility of valuable information getting into Germany, the American Red Cross, in sending letters behind the enemy lines at the request of persons in this country, is following carefully a plan worked out by the State Department to do away with code.

Americans, Germans or others in the United States wishing to communicate with relatives in Germany must now write out their messages in Red Cross chapters throughout the country. These are sent through the division offices of the organization to National Headquarters. Here they are rewritten and the wording absolutely changed to prevent the sending of any diagram or secret code. The messages are then given to the Censorship Board and are passed or refused by them as the case may be. When they reach a neutral country, they are translated on other paper and in most cases delivered by the Red Cross of the place to which they go. The plan is considered as spy-proof as it is possible to devise.

During the last twenty-five years the practice has grown up that welfare inquiries and messages shall be permitted between civilians in countries which are at war with each other. The promiscuous sending of letters through organizations in neutral countries could not be permitted because of the large number of enemies in the country. To prohibit entirely the sending of messages would, for example, prevent a loyal American from finding out whether his sister, unfortunately married to a German, was alive or dead. Prohibition was in force for a time and pitiful appeals were received by the Red Cross from French, Belgians and Italians begging the society to get word for them as to whether their people in the occupied districts were still alive.

The State Department presented to the Red Cross the present plan in detail and asked that the Red Cross put it into effect. As it was a purely humanitarian work, the government could do no more than supervise the work.

Today the American Red Cross is sending an average of 1,300 letters a day to persons living behind the enemy lines. This work is done through Washington Headquarters of the American Red Cross by the Bureau of Communication, of which Edward M. Day is acting director.

The U-Boats are wasting some of our food; don't be a U-Boat.

The farm as well as the front needs men who see straight and shoot straight.

AMERICA'S PURPOSE.

I am sure, as we all intend, that every ship that can carry men and supplies, shall go laden upon every voyage with every man and every supply she can carry.—President Woodrow Wilson.

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and state governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Food Administration

Bulletin No. 139.

July 10, 1918.

Under the Food Control Act and the regulations, retail dealers in feeds are confined to not more than a reasonable profit, and the Federal Food Administrator for each State in his administration of the act is authorized to announce what he will consider to be reasonable retail profits. A general outline of retail profits is submitted herewith, which the United States Food Administration considers to be fair under the conditions. It should be pointed out that this schedule is maximum and does not justify charges in excess of those customarily charged in any particular case where lower charges will insure a reasonable profit.

Maximum Margins for Retailers.—A retail dealer shall in no case make more than a reasonable profit and in no case shall he charge more for wheat mill feeds in original packages than the margin prescribed below over the delivered cost to him of the particular wheat mill feed sold.

1. Where one or more farmers purchase in advance of delivery in full carloads, take delivery at car and pay cash when retail dealer is required to meet sight draft—$1.00 per ton, plus demurrage, if any.

2. Where one or more farmers purchase in advance of delivery in full carloads, take delivery at car and pay for it on delivery—$1.50 per ton, plus demurrage, if any.

3. Where farmer purchases and takes delivery at car and pays for it on delivery in ton lots or more, but less than car lots—$2.00 per ton.

4. Where farmer purchases and takes delivery at car and pays for it on delivery in lots less than one ton—$2.50 per ton.

5. Sale ex-warehouse in lots of one ton or more—$4.00 per ton.

6. Sale ex-warehouse in lots of less than one ton—$5.00 per ton.

7. $1.00 may be added to the foregoing margins when sale is made on credit, or at dealer's option the legal rate of interest may be charged.

This department will not at this time undertake to define what will be considered as reasonable margins on feeds other than mill feeds. Dealers should remember, however, that their profits will be scrutinized and profiteering severely dealt with. The published margins on mill feed should enable a dealer to arrive at a reasonable selling price for all feeds.

H. E. BARNARD,
Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

All Eggs Must Be Canded; Ship Only Good Eggs.

Bulletin No. 141.

July 15, 1918.

Persons engaged in the production, handling or selling of eggs are hereby notified of the following regulations:

1. The first buyer of eggs (the huckster, the local retail merchant or others) must candle carefully every lot of eggs that he buys. A candling certificate, properly filled out, must accompany each case or carton of eggs.

2. He shall discard all eggs known as "yolks stuck to the shell," "heavy blood rings," "partially hatched," "moldy eggs," "black spots," "black rots" and any other eggs of an unwholesome nature.

3. He shall pay only for good, edible eggs.

4. He shall return to the producers the "rejects" for the producers' own examination.

5. All "checks" and "cracks" shell eggs should be shipped in cases stenciled that they contain crack or check shell eggs.

The above regulations are made in an effort to stop traffic in bad eggs. Your hearty co-operation is requested in carrying out these rules. Warm weather is here and EGGS MUST BE PROTECTED AND SAVED.

Bulletin No. 142.

July 15, 1918.

SUGAR CARDS REDEEMABLE.

Many retail grocers did not receive any sugar allotment for canning purposes on Statement "E," since they did not include their need for this purpose in their requirements for the third quarter for 1918. In order temporarily to meet this situation, the sugar cards issued by county administrators may be redeemed in sugar by wholesale sugar dealers from retail dealers who have furnished sugar for canning purposes. The wholesale sugar dealer will return the sugar cards so received to the county administrator who issued the cards. These sugar cards for canning purposes will be handled in the same way as the regular sugar certificates. No sugar card will be redeemed which is not signed by the county administrator and in no case will the card be redeemed for more sugar than the amount sold for canning purposes.

Displays of cakes and pies at county fairs and the State fair will not be at the expense of a special allotment of sugar or flour. Individual exhibitors must take from their apportionment of both staples. Fair judges have been asked to make their awards upon the basis of conformity to the Federal food regulations.

The Food Administration has received inquiries from over the State as to whether the government would make any guarantees as to hog prices. Information received from one of the county agricultural agents indicates that some farmers have made preparations to hog off corn and soy beans, fattening the light pigs that usually go to market at this time of year, but that fear is now felt in some quarters that the market will not be sustained, and the prospect for an increased production of pork has served to discourage many farmers from proceeding with their purpose. Dr. H. E. Barnard, State food administrator, advises that the United States Food Administration will not undertake to establish the price of pork, but, as in 1917, will undertake to maintain a price of $15.50 per thousand pounds.

Radical increases in milk prices which threatened the citizens of Marion have been adjusted by a local committee composed of the judge of the Circuit Court, the largest milk producer in Grant County, and the superintendent of Marion's largest bottling works. The price agreement is effective at once on the basis of 10 cents a quart and 6 cents a pint for bottled, pasteurized milk; cream, bottled, 40 cents a quart, 15 cents a half pint, and an increase of 10 cents per hundred pounds was granted to producers for milk delivered at bottling stations, making the new price $2.75. As a conservation measure, consumers are requested to discontinue the use of whipping cream. The agreement is effective at once. Referring local price disputes to a representative citizen committee for adjustment is in line with the policy suggested by Dr. Barnard, State food administrator, and the prompt and satisfactory adjustment at Marion is typical of the success of the plan.

Liberty Guard Lights

The Military Section of the State Council of Defense has just completed the organization of the one hundred and forty-first separate company of Liberty Guards in the State, and it is felt that not more than one hundred and eighty companies should be organized, and it therefore behooves those who are slow in perfecting their organizations to complete the matter at once.

The one hundred and eighty companies will allow the organization of fifteen regiments of infantry, and it is the purpose of the Military Section to now begin the organization of these units. The twelve companies of Warrick County have perfected their regimental organization, Thomas Downs of Boonville being the colonel thereof. This regiment held a big military review in the afternoon of July 4 and acquitted themselves creditably before the reviewing officers. Governor James P. Goodrich, who was accompanied by his staff, visited the seat of Warrick for the purpose of looking over the first regimental unit of this big State asset.

If the present plans prevail, the Second Regiment of the Liberty Guard will be organized in Wabash and Huntington Counties, each of these counties having six companies. The Third Regiment will likely be composed of Newton, Jasper and Benton Counties, and the Fourth Regiment of Wells, Adams and Jay Counties, and other regiments will be organized as rapidly as companies are concentrated in definite territory.

For the reason that the Federal government evidently intends to arm four million men before it lets up on "soldier-making," it is apparent that the sedentary militia of the States cannot have guns until the boys in the trenches and camps are fully supplied. Such old rifles as are in possession of the government are being distributed to State militia in the proportion of guns for fifty per cent of the organization; but on account of the size of the Liberty Guard, such distribution cannot be made to it.

Patriotic Press Comment

International Friendship.

A French girl felt the beauty of the friendship of two great countries for each other. She wrote about it, and her words found their way into a Red Cross bulletin, and finally a translation of them was posted in a conspicuous place in a public library.

This is the translation: "There is a river in France so narrow that you can talk across it. Birds can fly over it with one sweep of their wings. Great armies are on either bank, but they are as far apart as the stars in the sky, as far as right and wrong.

"There is a great ocean. It is so wide that sea gulls cannot fly across it without rest. Upon either shore there are great nations. They are so close that their hearts touch."

The librarian, appreciating the words, put them up where all could read and then watched to see their effect upon library patrons.

A good many people paused to read idly. They went on with thoughtful faces. Teachers copied the words to take to their classrooms. A French woman translated them back into her own tongue. Pupils from the school read the lines and seemed to accept them as a personal message from a fellow-pupil.

Everyone who read the little quotation was touched. The warmth and glow of a more intimate international friendliness spread through the community from that little clipping on the library wall.

Friendliness is spreading through the world, too. Great oceans can no longer separate nations that love justice and honor. Only the nation that has turned her back on those things will find herself fearfully remote and alone on her side of the narrow stream.—South Bend News-Times.

Wheatless days in America make sleepless nights in Germany.

Highway Construction and Maintenance

A letter to be addressed by Chairman Michael E. Foley to county councils of defense, county commissioners, county auditors, county highway superintendents and township trustees setting forth the attitude of the State Council relative to the repair and maintenance of existing highways in Indiana, was approved at the meeting July 17th, on motion of A. E. Reynolds. Mr. Reynolds stated to the council that the Publicity Bureau had misunderstood the action taken on the resolution presented by him July 10th, read and then withdrawn, and which was printed in the INDIANA BULLETIN of July 12th under the caption "Maintenance of Highways" as having been adopted. Mr. Reynolds said he was "satisfied with the explanation" of the error. The letter, offered as a substitute for the resolution, follows:

My Dear Sir:—

This statement is made in order to remove any confusion that may exist with reference to the attitude of the State Council of Defense toward highway construction and maintenance.

There is no policy with regard to highway construction and maintenance peculiar to this State. The council is merely endeavoring to apply to conditions in Indiana the policy laid down by the National Government.

So far as new construction is concerned, the national policy is clearly defined. No new construction should be undertaken unless it conforms to the principle laid down by the Council of National Defense, in these words:

"During the period of the war any new enterprise or undertaking should be tried and justified by the test:—would the men, money and material so applied best contribute in this way to the winning of the war?"

By a later interpretation the National Council has declared that only those new roads should "be constructed and completed which are of vital importance because of their bearing upon the war situation."

With regard to the maintenance of highways already constructed, the same general principle should be followed. The National Council has recently declared that "all plans for road construction and maintenance should be viewed in the light of war conditions, and that expenditures of time, labor and materials be directed only to those roads which are of primary importance for economic and military purposes."

This does not mean that existing roads are not to be maintained. On the contrary, every existing improved highway in the State should be maintained at the proper standard. What that standard is depends on the nature of the original construction, the volume and kind of traffic done over the road, and the purposes for which the road is mainly used. Neither extravagance on the one hand nor parsimony on the other should be practiced.

Highways are classified by the National Council in the order of their importance as follows:

1. Those utilized or to be utilized by the military establishment of the United States.
2. Those carrying considerable volume of material and supplies essential to war industries.
3. Those having a bearing on the production and distribution of food supplies, connecting populations and shipping centers with surrounding agricultural areas.

To summarize:

1. New highway construction ought not to be undertaken where not vitally important because of its bearing on the war situation.
2. All existing improved highways should be properly and reasonably maintained.
3. Expenditures for road construction or maintenance should be made with due regard to the comparative importance from the war standpoint of the highways in question.
4. As far as reasonably possible local material should be used in all road work, even though, in case of repairs, the material is different from the original construction.

The movement of farm products and military supplies by motor truck or wagon may, because of railroad congestion, be of much greater consequence during the next twelve months than ever before. As the season for making road repairs is approaching, public officials having to do with highway maintenance, as well as the general public, should be promptly and fully apprised of the policies expressed in this letter. Township meetings for that purpose will in some cases be desirable.

The State Council asks the full co-operation of each County Council, and of all public officials and private citizens in seeing that the policies announced by the National Council be intelligently applied and carefully followed throughout the State.

Committee on Construction

The following report was approved at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, July 17th:

To the Indiana State Council of Defense:

Your Committee on Proposed Construction reports as follows:

1. In the matter of a sewer improvement in a suburban addition to the northeast part of Kokomo, action concerning which was provisionally taken by the council at its meeting June 26, 1918: In the light of new facts adduced by the chairman of the Howard County Council of Defense, the secretary of the Kokomo Chamber of Commerce and others, the committee recommends that the completion of such improvement be not disapproved.

2. In the matter of the Lew Fadely South Main street road improvement in Madison County: The contractors seeking information were told that their belief that the policy of the council with respect to the completion of highway improvements had been modified was erroneous, and that the improvement should be carried out only as previously arranged with the Madison County authorities and the Madison County Council of Defense.

3. In the matter of the Charles Harting, et al, road improvement in Franklin Township, Marion County: The committee is not warranted by the facts in its possession in recommending present construction of the road.

4. In the matter of the Ewing road leading from Vincennes towards Monroe City in Knox County: The committee is not warranted by the facts in its possession in recommending the completion of the improvement.

5. In the matter of the proposed erection of farm buildings by Purdue University on the Wilson and Edgewood farms in Tippecanoe County and of a horse barn at the university: Your committee recommends that such construction be not disapproved.

6. In the matter of proposed erection of a school building at Otwell in Pike County, the committee recommends that such construction be not disapproved.

Respectfully submitted,

E. M. WILSON,

CHAS. FOX,

J. L. KEACH,

ARTHUR M. BRADY,

Chairman.

Council to Support All Relief Measures

returned insane, demented soldiers in county jails," a condition which it was reported obtains in Shelby County. Dr. Smith informed the council that under existing statutes ten days are necessary to effect the admission of anyone into an insane hospital.

The report of the Committee on Proposed Construction (which appears elsewhere in this Bulletin) was adopted.

A resolution that the council request of John B. Densmore, of the United States Department of Labor, the placing of a woman in United States employment offices, to give her time, exclusively, to the placing of woman labor, was referred to the Labor Committee.

A. E. Reynolds asked that the Bulletin correct the statement appearing in its issue of July 12th, wherein it was declared that a resolution presented by him was adopted. This resolution was withdrawn by Mr. Reynolds after discussion. As a substitute he presented a letter, setting forth the council's attitude on highway construction and maintenance, to be addressed to the chairmen of the County Councils of Defense, county auditors, township trustees, county highway superintendents and county commissioners, the distribution of which the council approved.

A. W. Brady was authorized to direct a letter of inquiry to the attorney-general as to the legal right of counties to spend money on roads, where contracts for the improvement of such roads have been entered into and the actual work deferred.

A. E. Reynolds, discussing the shortage of cars at elevators where wheat is in storage, said that this condition accounts for the large quantities of wheat which cannot be moved and growing out of which there is a large demand for insurance. He said he did not expect the situation to improve materially soon. Mr. Reynolds made the further point that all wheat intended for interstate commerce or export must be graded according to the government's standards. He was authorized by the council to investigate the distribution of an anonymous card which purported to set wheat prices.

William G. Irwin reported the receipt of a 110-word telegram by him at Columbus, Ind., and also by Carl Fisher, formerly of Indianapolis, at Miami, Fla., soliciting help on behalf of the "Committee for Devastated France." Also for a trinket fund to be derived from trinkets donated and sold for the benefit of the men in the aviation service. He questioned the wisdom of indorsing any relief enterprises except the Red Cross.

Isaac D. Straus invited the council to be present at the United States Boys' Working Reserve training camp at Purdue University July 20, when the second group will finish a course of intensive instruction in agriculture.

Following the meeting Governor Goodrich announced the appointment of the following new members of the State Council: William H. Sparks, Rushville, to succeed the late Charles W. Fairbanks; Jos. G. Ibach, Hammond, to succeed Frank C. Dailey of Indianapolis, who resigned, and Dr. Frederick R. Henshaw of Indianapolis, a new member.

Mr. Sparks is judge of the Circuit Court at Rushville. He is a Republican. Mr. Ibach is at present a member of the Indiana Appellate Court. He is a Democrat. Dr. Henshaw is dean of the Indiana Dental College and is named in recognition of the voluntary war work being done by the members of his profession in the State. He is a Democrat.

Wheat or Barberry—Which?

Common barberry bushes, against which a campaign was waged during May and June under the auspices of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation because they caused wheat rust, have ruined a 20-acre field of wheat belonging to M. F. Gilbert, a Wabash County farmer, according to advices reaching the State Council of Defense.

A barberry hedge just across the road from the field caused the trouble. Mr. Gilbert sent a few sample stalks of wheat afflicted with black stem rust to Purdue University and said the whole field was in the same condition. A field man who has been at work on the barberry campaign for several weeks investigated and found the barberries badly infected with rust spores which had been carried by the wind to the Gilbert field, where they played havoc with the crop.

Every person in Indiana who has a common barberry bush in their yard, either as an ornamental shrub or any place on their property, are urged to remove them at once.

War Books Lately Added to the State Library

Any of these may be borrowed by any citizen of the State. Ask your local librarian to apply for them, or if there is no library in your town, write to the State Library for a registration blank. The only expense is that of transportation.

Fosdick, H. E. The Challenge of the Present Crisis. 99p. 1918.

An optimistic view of the present conflict. The author says that as our Civil War was a struggle between States on the upward road toward unity, the World War is a struggle between nations on the upward road toward internationalism.

Payments of War Insurance Cover a Period of 20 Years

The War Department authorizes the following: Numerous inquiries have been received by the finance division of the Quartermaster Corps from relatives of enlisted men as to the method of payment of insurance benefits to the beneficiaries of those men who have become insured under the provisions of the war-risk insurance act.

Under the provisions of the act the beneficiary named does not secure the amount of the policy in a lump sum on the death of the insured, but receives a monthly payment from the government as proceeds from the insurance. The payments cover a period of 20 years, or 240 months.

For an insurance of $1,000 the beneficiary would receive a monthly payment of $5.75 for 20 years. For the maximum insurance of $10,000 the beneficiary would receive a payment of $57.50 per month for 20 years. Insurance may be had in any amount from $1,000 to $10,000 in multiples of $500, and the policy is payable on the basis of $5.75 per month for each $1,000 of insurance for 240 monthly installments.

Proceeds from insurance of soldiers under the war-risk insurance act cannot be attached, assigned or otherwise taken by creditors.

Merchants' Economy

The War Industries Board, which took over the duties and responsibilities of the Commercial Economy Board, under which the Merchants' Economy Committee of the Indiana State Council of Defense has waged a campaign of education, along the lines of conservation, among Indiana retailers, authorized the following:

It has just been reported to the conservation division of the War Industries Board that practically all of the retail stores of New York City have decided to comply with the request of the Government for economies in delivery service. The request is that each store shall make only one delivery a day over each route, eliminate special deliveries, and refuse to accept the return of merchandise that has remained in the customers' possession more than three days.

Adopted in Other Cities.

Other cities in which the merchants have recently adopted the conservation program are St. Paul, Minneapolis, Detroit, Denver, Boston, Memphis, New Orleans, Montgomery, Baltimore, Newark, Los Angeles, Portland, and Oakland. There are in addition to those who have previously complied with the request made by the Government in time of war for the general welfare of the country.

The adoption of this program has made it possible to avoid replacing employees who have been drafted or who have entered essential war work. The large stores of thirty cities have been able to operate with 35 per cent less of a force, and the saving in automobile trucks has been 40 per cent. This is according to the reports made by these stores to the War Industries Board. Limiting the return of merchandise to not more than three days has made an average reduction of 36 per cent in the amount returned, because of greater forethought in the selection and ordering of goods.

Saving in Small Stores.

In smaller stores one delivery a day has enabled one delivery man to do the work that formerly required two. In thirty small stores in several towns in one Eastern State the number of delivery men employed has been reduced from 116 to 55, as their men have been called away for other service.

The experience in these cities shows that there is no hardship to the public through these restrictions.

Bryan Working Out Liberty Loan Drive

St. Joseph County Directors Arranging for Fourth Appeal of United States Treasury.

South Bend.—As the first step in preparation for the fourth Liberty Bond campaign in St. Joseph County next October, F. A. Bryan, county director, is beginning the formation of an organization to make a thorough survey of the county. The survey work is in charge of F. L. Dennis, who has been selected by Mr. Bryan to perform service for the federal government under the title of director of clearing house and statistics.

A plan has been worked out for the survey that is based on the block system, the block being the small unit. These blocks do not always conform to the block boundaries of a city but are dependent in size largely on the density of population so as to more evenly divide the work and to facilitate its accomplishment. In this city each ward except the Sixth has a chairman and the Sixth, owing to its cosmopolitan character, has three. These chairmen are women and most of them have been selected. Each chairman is expected to perfect her organization on the block system with a sub-chairman for each block. A similar system has been adopted for the rural part of the county using the smallest unit consistent with population density.

The women who will make the survey of the county will be provided with cards on which information will include name of person visited, ward, precinct, block number and street address in cities and township, district and section in the country, occupation, where employed and department, business, whether owner of residence and if tenant name of residence owner, whether married, single, widow or widower, number of children living at home, name of bank used, amount of each Liberty Bond issue owned, names of members of family in United States service and what branch and opinion or estimate of canvasser of the total net worth, annual income and amount of Fourth Liberty Loan issue person is willing to buy. It is believed this information will be of value in the canvass for subsequent loans and so this survey contemplates securing it for the benefit of the government in coming labor incident to the war.

Mr. Bryan states that work is progressing on the formation of the organization to sell the next Liberty Loan, but he is not prepared to give out details or to announce appointments excepting those of Mr. Dennis as director of clearing house and statistics; F. A. Miller as director of publicity, and M. W. Mix, of Mishawaka, as chairman of Penn Township. Other appointments, he said, would be announced at the proper time, but not until it was certain the right persons had been chosen for the work required.

"The Fourth Liberty Loan will probably be for around $6,000,000,000," said Mr. Bryan, who has just returned from Washington. "While not prepared to state positively St. Joseph County's quota, I think it will be close to $6,000,000. The bonds will probably bear 4½ per cent interest, payable semi-annually and will, of course, constitute an excellent investment."

"The Elks have offered us the use of the entire lower floor of the Elks temple on West Colfax avenue for Liberty Loan headquarters and the generous offer has been accepted. An office force will be installed there at the right time and all business pertaining to the fourth loan will be directed from that point. The rooms are conveniently arranged and there is a large auditorium which seats several hundred persons and which will make a splendid place for conferences and other gatherings."

County agricultural agents are distributing books in which are to be set down the acreage of wheat thrashed by thrashers, who will be held for the figures by the Department of Agriculture. The books also ask for comparative statement of yields, acreage and price for thrashing for 1917 and 1918. The government thus obtains valuable information as to the wheat in the country, its cost and the average yield per acre.

Fourteen-Minute Women Speakers

Have Delivered Thousands of Addresses on Patriotic Subjects, Mrs. Henderson Reports.

The following report of the Fourteen-Minute Women, the Speaking Division of the Woman's Section of the Indiana State Council of Defense, has been prepared by Mrs. Julia C. Henderson, chairman:

Almost simultaneously with the opening of the county war conferences of the State in January, 1918, the work of the "Fourteen-Minute Women Speakers' Bureau" was started. The need of the organization, its growth and results have easily given it a most important place in the work of the Woman's Section of the State Council of Defense, and the various county councils of which the state section is composed.

While but a few months old the organization has been established in 79 of the 92 counties of the State. Ten women in each county were called for, as authorized speakers for their county, the same to be appointed by the county woman member of their respective county councils.

In answer to such call there are now on the roll nearly 850 speakers. When all counties have responded to this call for service, 1,000 or more speakers can be mobilized for specific campaigns, and educational work in connection with the war.

Thus far the remotest part of every county has had its "Fourteen-Minute" speaker carrying the messages of the war activities direct to the people, and arousing them in no small way to a sense of the enormity of the work to be done, and instructing them as to the best methods of procedure.

The results as testified to by county leaders has been little short of marvelous.

So well and definitely has the work been accomplished that today scarcely a program is made that does not have its call for a woman speaker.

A state conference of the bureau was held in May with statement from Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle, state chairman of the woman's section, and from numerous county chairmen as to the beneficial effects of the bureau in forwarding their work.

Like testimony from Dr. H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator, under whose work the bureau was first started in Marion County, was freely given.

The women of Indiana thus unified and equipped for effective, concentrated war service have made a remarkable record, and the work so splendidly begun will go on and on until the war shall end, for they are enlisted for the period of the war.

The report of the work thus far is as follows:

Number of county war conferences covered..... 74
Number of speeches reported throughout the State, with less than half of the counties reporting..... 2,960

Total ..... 3,034

Some of the counties not yet reported have been the most active in the work, but time will not allow further delay in this semi-annual report. It is safe to say that the number of speeches actually made in the State are double the number reported.

The talks covered general patriotic appeals, liberty loan, registration, child-welfare, food, thrift stamps and educational instruction on war topics.

It is but fair to those who have done such splendid work to state that the cost to the State for this service has been less than one hundred dollars. No salaries have been paid, no clerical work allowed, aside from small assistance from the office of the woman's section. The work, for the most part, has been done by the state chairman, assisted by the able county chairmen or their appointees, all given as a part of their patriotic service to their State, as is the splendid service of the speakers.

In submitting this report your state chairman must express herself as highly gratified with the results of the first six months of our organization, although regretting that the splendid work of all the counties organized could not have been given in the report.

If the war is to continue there will be many new phases to be presented, many new problems to be solved. Should the war end, the public will need enlightenment on many questions in the reconstruction period which you should equip yourselves to present in the best possible way. Therefore, keep yourselves alert and alive to every change that comes, to every order that our superior officers may give, that there may be no rupture or disturbance in our organized efforts so well begun.

Bulletin on Child Care Of Assistance to Mothers

Things every mother must know if the nation is to meet the health needs of its children as indicated by the draft and still further revealed by the weighing and measuring test, are made available today by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor in its new bulletin on Child Care, prepared by Mrs. Max West.

A third of the men examined for military service in the first draft were found to have physical defects which rendered them unfit. Many of these defects might have been overcome if they had been recognized and dealt with in early childhood; the period between two and six is often the time when such defects make their first appearance. "Child Care" has been prepared in the hope that it would enable mothers to understand and recognize symptoms which indicate the need of special care, and also to give mothers the better understanding of the simple laws of hygiene through which it may be possible to prevent the development of such defects at all. It will be especially useful to thousands of mothers who have learned by the weighing and measuring test of defects and weaknesses in their children which need particular attention.

"Child Care" deals with children from two to six years old and is the third issue in the series which began with "Prenatal Care" and "Infant Care." It contains simple rules of health and hygiene, including carefully compiled directions about proper food, suitable clothing, suggestions for play and exercise, for discipline and training. It gives simple menus for young children. A list of books on child care and training is added.

Women Stop Profiteering.

The women of St. Louis, according to Mrs. George Gellhorn, chairman of the St. Louis Woman's Central Committee on Food Conservation, are determined that fair prices shall be charged by the grocers, and that there shall be no war profiteering. Each grocery store in the city is covered once a month by a circle of 50 women in each district. These women are given commodity sheets listing the articles upon which a "fair food" price for the city of St. Louis has been quoted by the United States Food Administration of St. Louis. They visit the grocery stores that week, obtaining prices the neighboring grocer is charging. A complete record of the results of these visits is kept in the central office. These are compared in the office and violators or profiteers are reported to the United States Food Committee of St. Louis, whose secret service department visits each offender and deals with him as the case merits.

Making Steel Helmets

Glen Laughlin, 17 years old, one of 150 Terre Haute high school boys, members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, who are doing their patriotic bit this summer making steel helmets for the United States Army at the Columbian Stamping and Enameling Company, Terre Haute. Benj. Blumberg, city director of the Boys' Reserve in that city, makes the splendid report that every one of the 853 boys enrolled are engaged in productive work, either on farms or in essential industries.

Helps in Using Substitute Foods

(This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.)

CANNING VEGETABLES.

The Food Administration asks that all vegetables be conserved by either storing, drying or canning. All vegetables that can be stored or dried should be cared for in this way. Others should be canned by the "Cold-pack Process," which has been found to be much more successful in the case of vegetables than the "Open Kettle Method."

If canning is to be successful several things are essential:

1. Vegetables must be fresh and perfect.
2. Cans must have perfectly fitting lids and should be tested with water before being used.
3. Rubbers must be good. A good rubber should be elastic and should not crack when doubled back and pressed together at the fold.
4. All utensils should be absolutely clean.
5. Canned vegetables should be stored in a dry, cool, dark place.
6. After sterilization a can should never be opened unless it is processed again after opening.
7. If the water shrinks in the can during processing, do not open the can to add water, as the vegetables will keep perfectly, if properly sealed, without being covered with liquid.

To Can Peas.

Shell the peas. Place them in a square of cheese cloth and tie the corners loosely together, so that the peas will be secure but loosely held together. Immerse in boiling water and allow to boil eight minutes. This is known as the "blanching process." Dip into cold water and remove immediately. Pack the peas into clean, warm, tested jars as rapidly as possible. Fill the jars with hot water to within one-half inch of the top. Add one level teaspoonful of salt to each quart of vegetables. Place rubber and lid. Partially seal the can by screwing the lid on half way, or by placing only the wire clamp over the top of the glass lid. Place in a bucket or wash-boiler or lard can or kettle which is high enough to allow one inch of water to come up above the top of the can and in which there is some sort of a perforated wooden bottom upon which the cans may be placed.

Cover the cans with hot water and boil for two hours. Begin counting the time when the water begins to boil. This is known as "processing." Remove the cans as soon as they have boiled the required length of time. Tighten the lids. Invert the cans and cover loosely with a cloth to protect from drafts.

To Can Beets.

Wash the beets and prepare as for boiling. Place in wire basket and blanch about ten minutes. Dip in cold water. Remove at once and peel the beets. Pack tightly in cans and proceed as for peas. Sterilize for ninety minutes.

To Can String Beans.

Prepare the beans as for table use. Place in cheese cloth and blanch for about ten minutes. Dip in cold water. Pack in jars and proceed as with peas. Sterilize for two hours.

Time Table for Other Vegetables.

		Sterilize in Home-made
	Blanch.	Outfit.
Lima Beans .....	5-10 minutes	2 hours
Cauliflower .....	5 minutes	45 minutes
Spinach .....	15-20 minutes	90 minutes
Tomatoes .....	1 minute	22 minutes
Corn .....	5-10 minutes	3 hours

These recipes have been tested in the Home Economics Laboratories, Purdue University, and for further information regarding their application may be made to Mary L. Matthews, Purdue University, West Lafayette, Ind.

Capable Speakers Assigned to State

Division of Committee on Public Information Gives Indiana Splendid Talent and Co-operation.

(By R. E. Cavanaugh.)

The Speaking Division of the Committee on Public Information, Washington, D. C., has recently been giving the Speakers Bureau of the Indiana State Council of Defense some very valuable co-operation.

The following excellent speakers with overseas experience have been sent to us: Privates S. C. Mowrer, Harry Novak and Louis P. Bonee, Dr. Henry Coe Culbertson, Mrs. Martha Nelson McCan, Madeline de Bryas, a French countess, and Lieutenant Robert Renard of the French army.

Privates Mowrer, Novak and Bonee were sent to Indiana primarily to help in the Red Cross drive, but the two first named were allowed to remain three full weeks. These three boys were among fifty soldiers sent back from the battle line by General Pershing to tell the American people about our participation in the great war, and they were in great demand throughout the State. They were often called upon to speak as many as four times per day in a single town. They reached a total of thirty places and made about seventy-five addresses. After their speaking itinerary closed, the boys were given a thirty days' furlough, after which they reported to Ft. Meyer, Virginia.

Dr. Henry Coe Culbertson, president of Ripon College, was sent to us for a Flag Day address at Crawfordsville and our speakers bureau secured an extension on his time for Indiana. Before leaving the State he made a total of twenty-four addresses before audiences of various types, including Chambers of Commerce, churches, fraternal orders, Liberty Guards, factory workers, normal schools, universities, Y. M. C. A.'s and business men's clubs. Dr. Culbertson has made good use of his experience in the war zone as a collector of important information and he has very exceptional ability in presenting it to his audiences in an interesting and impressive manner.

Mrs. Martha Nelson McCan was sent to Indiana by the Committee on Public Information to tell our people about the re-education of wounded men, and the importance of war work by women as she observed these conditions in the war-ridden countries of Europe. Her lecture is illustrated by some fifty slides taken for this particular work. Mrs. McCan's address, given in ten different towns and cities of Indiana, gave our people some interesting first-hand information that was very much appreciated wherever she appeared.

Countess de Bryas spoke before factory workers, business clubs, and other organizations in Indianapolis and Evansville. The subject of her addresses was, "The Reconstruction Work in Devastated France." The charming personality of the countess, together with her impressive manner of presentation of her subject from direct personal knowledge, made her appeal very helpful in stimulating the patriotic fervor of her audiences everywhere.

Lieutenant Renard of the French army, who is speaking in Indiana this week, was formerly professor of English in the University of Marseilles. He has had a long and arduous experience in the present world war, speaks excellent English, and is doing fine work in this country in enlisting the active support of the people in all forms of commendable war work.

J. J. Pettijohn, director of the Extension Division of Indiana University and director of the Speakers Bureau of the Council of Defense, is in active charge of the work of the Speaking Division of the Committee on Public Information in Washington this summer in the capacity of associate director. He will return to his work in Indiana about the middle of August.

Boys Form Squad for Farm Work.

EVANSVILLE.—A minute squad of Evansville high school boys has been organized by Eugene

P. Stocks, assistant director of the Boys' Working Reserve. Stocks states that these boys are ready for service on farms at any time, and that all the farmer has to do is to telephone the Boys' Working Reserve in the morning and the boys will be at his farm in the afternoon.

The minute squad went to the Hawkins farm Monday afternoon to "sucker" corn. The Hawkins farm is about four and a half miles out Stahlhefer avenue. John Edmonds has called on the Boys' Working Reserve for eight boys for work Tuesday afternoon.

W. E. Miller, of the Harding & Miller Music Company, took the boys out to the Hawkins farm Monday afternoon in his automobile. Among the members of the minute squad are: James Clifford, Carl Bromm, H. Joyce, Richard McGinnis, Grady McGlasson, Arthur Stockfleth and other older high school boys.

A Timely Warning.

The State Council of Defense utters a timely note of warning to the holders of war savings stamps and Liberty loan bonds in Indiana. Agents representing get-rich-quick schemes and worthless or questionable mining, oil and other stocks are canvassing the State, offering to trade these stocks for government securities. Many of these stocks are not worth the paper the certificates are written on, but they are represented as being sure earners of fabulous dividends. Unfortunately in Indiana we have no anti-blue sky law, and millions of dollars' worth of worthless stocks are sold annually to unsuspecting and unsophisticated people. If you have government securities keep them, although the rate of interest is only 4½ per cent. They are as good an investment as you will find, and when this war closes they will go to a premium. If some agent comes along offering to trade you stock in some concern about which you know nothing, guaranteeing big dividends, tell him NO.

Hoosier Boys and Girls Helping to Win War

Semi-Annual Report of State Leader Shows 66,000 Are Aiding in Food Production.

An army of 66,000 Hoosier boys and girls have been enlisted for Uncle Sam's food production and conservation work, according to the semi-annual report of Z. M. Smith, State club leader, made to Prof. G. I. Christie, State food director and assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture. These young people are engaged this year in club work of various kinds. The number enrolled this year is just three times that of last. A total of $12,000 in prizes has been offered.

Of the 66,000 this year, 54,000 city or rural boys and girls are in home garden clubs. Last year slightly more than 15,000 were in the same sort of work. This year 2,858 girls have joined the army of canners, against a canning corps of 1,456 last year, almost doubling the number.

Corn clubs drew 1,418 boys last year, and this year 1,946 youngsters are growing from one to twenty acres of corn. Pig club boys this year number 2,248 against 831 last season. In poultry clubs this year there are 1,659 against 555 last year.

Similar figures might be quoted for calf club members, girls' sewing and baking clubs and the lesser branches of endeavor for Young America, but it is sufficient to say that all have shown a big increase in enrollment.

The best part of the work is that all the boys and girls enrolled this year are under some sort of supervision, either that of the county agricultural agent, the woman home demonstration agent, the vocational teacher, township club supervisor, or volunteer workers. Previous reports show that 98 per cent of the profit earned and the effectiveness of the work was obtained by boys and girls under direction of paid supervisors.

Community Boards To Regulate Labor

Indiana Divided Into One Hundred and Six Districts in Accord with the New Program.

The Indiana Community War Labor Advisory Board, consisting of N. E. Squibb, State director of the United States Public Service Reserve; Hays H. Buskirk, assistant director; Charles Fox, of Terre Haute, and William Dobson, of Indianapolis, representing labor; William Taylor and Gus A. Efroymson, of Indianapolis, representing the manufacturing and commercial interests, have arranged to organize Community War Labor Boards in each of the 106 districts, into which the State has been divided, for this purpose.

This action, which is expected to have a far-reaching effect upon the industrial life of the Nation, was declared necessary to overcome a perilous shortage of unskilled labor in war industries. The almost universal practice of proselyting in war industries, the enormous waste from constantly shifting labor forces, and the unrest due to the continued travel and varying wages, serve to aggravate the situation in such manner that some supervision and administration of the common labor supply was deemed imperative at this time. Later, it is expected that skilled labor will be brought within the arrangement.

The United States Department of Labor has approved the Indiana form of organization of Community War Labor Boards, of the following personnel:

Chairman—A representative of the United States Employment Service of the Department of Labor, to be selected by N. E. Squibb, state director of the United States Service Reserve.

One member representing the manufacturing interests.

One member representing the working interests.

The State board adopted resolutions authorizing the following program for the organization of Community Boards:

1. Wherever possible, the board will co-operate with existing organizations of manufacturers and labor unions.
2. Where no manufacturers' association exists, the board will ask commercial organizations to select a representative of manufacturers, and where no labor organizations exist (which would be in agricultural communities generally) the county agricultural agent will be requested to call a meeting of workers for the nomination of a representative.
3. Where general meetings of either group are necessary, special care will be exercised to select genuinely representative members.
4. That both manufacturers and workers select men capable of close co-operation, with a view to the least possible friction that might interfere with the success of the plan.

On Community War Labor Boards, on August 1 and thereafter, war industries will depend largely for their supply of common labor, which will be recruited and distributed through the agency of the United States Employment Service by virtue of executive order. Manufacturers having a payroll of more than 100 men, will be required to restrict themselves to this employment service as the source of their common labor supply. Later, it is contemplated by the Department of Labor, that the supply of skilled men shall be subjected to the same regulations.

The State has been divided into five districts, each of which will be under an organizer responsible to the State director of the United States Public Service Reserve. These districts will be announced later.

Strengthen the "home front" with home grown food.

Indiana farmers are urged to sow a normal acreage in rye. Rye is no longer a wheat flour substitute, but there is a possibility of a wheat shortage next year.

We find ourselves fighting again for our national existence.—PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON.

Wheat Circulars Now Ready For Producers

Efforts to Eradicate Pests Continue, with 1918 Field Yielding Heavily.

The Wheat Production circular which was approved by the State Council of Defense and issued by Purdue University under the direction of D. S. Myer, State leader of the wheat campaign, came off the press this week. It contains indorsements of the wheat campaign program by Governor James P. Goodrich, M. E. Foley, chairman of the State Council, and Warren T. McCray, chairman of the State Food Committee. Dr. R. A. Pearson's letter, urging Indiana to maintain her acreage and increase her yields, is given prominence. Prof. G. I. Christie, assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture, also urges the maintenance of the present acreage and especially emphasizes the possibilities of a greater yield through the use of pure seed and improved methods of culture.

The technical part of the pamphlet is written by A. T. Wiancko of the Soils and Crops Department of Purdue University.

Further plans for the wheat campaign are being perfected at a regional meeting held in Chicago today, July 26.

Thrashing is on in full blast in central and northern Indiana. Excellent yields have been reported. County Agent G. E. Metzger of Elkhart County reported an eight-acre field of Red Rock wheat grown by Ephraim Emmert, which averaged 47½ bushels per acre. Mr. Emmert fertilized his wheat with acid phosphate. Several large fields yielded 35 to 45 bushels per acre. Lewis Taylor, emergency demonstration agent, reports loose smut in Jay and Dekalb Counties, running as high as 17 per cent. The county agents of this section are planning for smut treatment demonstrations to show the effectiveness of formaldehyde in controlling this disease. Ernest Thornburg reported for Clark, Dearborn, Johnson, Rush, Hancock, Shelby, Steuben, Noble and LaGrange Counties. The wheat in these nine counties, he says, will average 20 bushels per acre, of good milling quality. Wheat that is free from disease, and pure variety, clean of rye cockle and weeds, is hard to find. He reports stinking smut in all the counties. Formaldehyde does not control this disease. D. S. Myer states that the hot-water treatment for controlling stinking smut is being demonstrated in seed plot work in about forty counties. The work is being handled through the county agents. It is proposed to establish centers where pure strains of smut-free seed may be secured.

Silo Campaign Being Pushed.

C. E. Miser, county silo leader for Dekalb County, reports that one-third of the townships are already "over the top" in the silo campaign. The townships are Fairfield, Richland, Wilmington, Jackson and Concord.

Laporte and Sullivan Counties are planning to further push their local silo campaign by publishing silo pamphlets containing indorsements and testimonials of local users. Laporte County has already passed her quota of 93 silos by 10.

Geo. Ineichen, county leader of Adams County, shows in a report made to the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation that a silo increased his profits more than $228 in one year. He says that the 144 silos assigned to Adams

County, when erected, will easily add over $32,000 per year to the profits of livestock farmers. Mr. Ineichen advocates buying silos locally. He says: "The fewer silos you have transported from a distance, the more chances you will have in getting your carload of coal for next winter."

The State of Texas, through the A. and M. College, is planning a State-wide silo campaign similar to the Indiana campaign. The plan of the Indiana campaign, together with copies of all publications, posters and publicity published in the Indiana Bulletin, was sent to Texas for use in their organization meeting, which was held July 23 at Fort Worth.

Apple Crop Prospects Drop.

Six weeks ago Indiana's apple crop was estimated at a million bushels. The prospects now are for a crop much below this mark, according to a statement made by H. H. Swaim, secretary of the Indiana Horticultural Society. The cause for the failure of the prospective bumper crop of a few weeks ago is the unusually cold weather and the ravages of various pests.

The State Food Committee wishes to call special attention to the following statement made by Mr. Swaim: "It is worthy of note that the commercial orchards which have been given proper care report a high per cent of a crop, while those more or less neglected in many cases are an entire failure, due to the insects or adverse weather conditions."

Second Camp Proves Unqualified Success

Many Visitors Present for Exercises by U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, at Purdue.

On Saturday, July 20th, the closing exercises of the second and last agricultural training camp to be conducted this year were held at Purdue University, Lafayette. Many visitors were there from different parts of the country, including members of the Indiana State Council of Defense and national officers of the reserve.

In the morning the visitors were conducted around the Purdue experiment station and were given an opportunity to witness the method of instruction of the different classes of boys in the rudiments of farm work.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon a military review was held, following which the boys, numbering 748, gathered under the spreading shade trees of the university campus and were awarded certificates, as evidence of having completed the prescribed course of instruction.

Dean Stanley Coulter, commander-in-chief of the camp, presided at the meeting and introduced Dr. W. E. Stone, President of Purdue, who ad-

Township Councils' Work Can Never Be Completed

General Bulletin No. 169.

July 22, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

The Federal Government is relying more and more upon the State councils of defense system to conduct the war programs in the States and to maintain the morale of all citizens under the strain of the war. To a large extent this reliance is based upon the township councils of defense, and this reliance will prove justified exactly in proportion to the effectiveness of the township council organization. In this great international contest of resources, it is the reaction of individuals that determines the result and on which in the last analysis hangs the fate of the world. It is the township council only that reaches the individual and, by translating the messages of the Federal Government into prompt and thorough action, makes our national resources the determining factor for victory.

The various Federal departments and war administrations turn to the Council of National Defense to enlist the State councils in specific war tasks, and the State councils, in turn, must depend upon the efficiency of the county and township councils. In order that the Council of National Defense may consistently assure the various Federal departments of the efficiency of the service rendered by the county and township councils and ask them to utilize these instead of creating new organizations of their own, we must ourselves be assured that each county council is promoting an organization of township councils which will ultimately reach the most remote citizen and make him a part of the council of defense system.

Only the framework of the township councils can be created by appointment. The whole community must be aroused and molded into a war organization. In a sense, your work of township council organization can never be completed. You are dealing with a dynamic element which needs constant attention.

In order that the mobilization of the nation for the war can be rapidly and effectively accomplished, and in order that the State Council of Defense may become the backbone of a mobilized nation, you are urged to:

(1) Make your township council organization a 100 per cent organization, both in the number of townships organized and in the number of citizens enrolled. Do not stop in your efforts until you can honestly report that this has been accomplished.

(2) Remember that your task only begins with the creation of your township councils. You have the responsibility of keeping the councils interested, of preventing a relapse into inertia after the first excitement of organizing. Form the habit of making the county council of defense merely a clearing house for the war activities of the township councils that, in its nature, can be handled by the township councils. Pass everything on to the township councils that, in its nature, can be handled by the township councils. By telling them the results of efficient community work, by continually setting new tasks and by citing the achievements of other township councils, keep them on their mettle. Keep them constantly fit to put over every war activity you or the State Council may ask or that the nation may require; and by getting them fit, maintain the war morale of the country.

Red Cross Activities

Beginning September 1st, a "Home Service Plattsburg" will be instituted in Indianapolis under the auspices of the American Red Cross Society. The Lake Division of the Bureau of Civilian Relief has arranged to have expert workers lecture here at that time. In this connection the bureau of publicity authorizes the following:

"Chapters in all counties of Indiana are awake to the great need for Home Service. Committees have been appointed and delegates sent to take these important courses.

"There is so much work to be done! Untrained workers, however willing, cannot answer all the questions that rise, even in the small communities. Every chapter needs at least one trained executive to direct this patriotic work in the community.

"At the Home Service Institutes courses are given covering war risk insurance, re-education of wounded soldiers and sailors, the care of civil and business affairs of absent soldiers, health of soldiers' families and child welfare. Conferences and discussions are arranged to answer questions that may arise on points regarding delayed allotments and communications.

"Enthusiasm, earnestness and diligence have marked the work at the previous institutes. The Lake Division leads all other divisions in the number of students graduated from former Home Service Institutes. One hundred and twenty-seven students from seventy-six chapters have received instruction and returned to their home towns to carry on this important Red Cross work. The demand for similar courses has been so universal that future institutions have been arranged to take care of those who could not attend the present sessions."

War Experiences of Our Representatives Abroad

The United States has reason to be proud of the men who represented us in the countries at war. Plunged suddenly into conditions of exceptional confusion and difficulty, they and their assistants worked with unceasing devotion to our interests and those of the other countries whose affairs were taken over by the United States. Any of the following may be borrowed from the State Library by any citizen of Indiana, with the exception of the current number of "The World's Work." Ask your local librarian to apply or, if there is no library in your town, write to the State Library for a registration blank. The only expense is that of transportation.

A Training Camp Feature

A feature of the intensive training camp for members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, at Purdue University, was the military drill. In addition to the rudiments of agricultural training, the boys learned something of mass formations and discipline. In the brief period at Purdue, these untrained boys displayed an interest and enthusiasm in the drills that indicated a full appreciation of their position as "soldiers of the soil."

Boys May Remain in Fields.

It is expected that other Indiana high schools will follow the example of the Indianapolis schools, which have made provision for boys engaged in farm work to remain at work in the fields for a period of thirty days, if necessary, in essential productive work. Superintendent E. U. Graff has sent the following letter to the director of the Boys' Working Reserve on the subject:

"United States Boys' Working Reserve,
83 State House, Indianapolis.

Gentlemen:

I have received your letter inquiring as to the possibility of obtaining the assistance of high school boys for various forms of farm work, etc., this fall. I shall be glad to arrange for any boy or boys who desire to do work of this kind to defer taking up their work for thirty days or so. We request that any boy who wishes this privilege make application direct to his high school principal, and arrangements will be made accordingly.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) E. U. GRAFF."

Attention, County Councils

General Bulletin No. 168.

July 22, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

Provost Marshal General E. H. Crowder has recommended to each local draft board the appointment of a board of instruction. This board will be responsible for seeing that selectives enter the service willing, loyal, intelligent, clean and sober. It will be the duty of the board of instruction to take personal, active and direct measures to meet each Class 1 registrant and to see that he understands why we are at war, what we are fighting for, and how he can best prepare himself.

Because of the position of the State and County Councils of Defense, and because of the work which many of these have already done with selectives, the provost marshal general has recommended that the local draft boards work through the State and County Councils of Defense in securing the personnel for the boards of instruction.

Over 700,000 men have just registered under the amendment to the selective service act. A very large per cent of these registrants will be selected for service in the near future. It is therefore imperative that immediate action be taken to see that boards of instruction are created throughout this State, so that these men will enter the service ready in mind, heart and body for the work the nation has called them to perform.

Please get in touch at once with your local draft board and render to it every possible assistance in selecting able, unselfish and loyal citizens who can and will assume the duties of members of the board of instruction.

The military section of the State Council is requesting all officers of the Liberty Guards throughout the State to offer to these boards such facilities as they have to take charge of the furnishing of military drill and instruction.

We enclose herewith a direct appeal to you from the Council of National Defense, a copy of the provost marshal general's letter to the local draft boards and a leaflet outlining the functions of the boards of instruction.

Please do not fail to give this your immediate attention. The response of the County Councils to this request will be watched very carefully, for the purpose of determining future policies, not only by the State Council of Defense but by the Council of National Defense and the War Department. STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

General Bulletin No. 167.

July 19, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

The question of conservation of waste material is becoming daily of more importance. It is receiving a great deal of consideration in other States of the Union.

We believe it would be well worth while for the county councils of defense to make arrangements, which no doubt can be done without cost, for a place in the central part of the business district of every town of the State, to be used as a headquarters for receiving cast-off clothing, steel plates from automobile licenses, and everything that would otherwise go to the waste pile and which could be salvaged and turned into cash. This work could either be handled direct by the county councils or could be turned over to the township councils, which could establish headquarters in each township. The money received for the material would be used for meritorious purposes.

Please give this matter your consideration.

Helps in Using Substitute Foods

This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.

VEGETABLES LITTLE USED.

At this season of the year there is a plentiful supply of all kinds of vegetables available, and by using these in large amounts it is possible to reduce the amount of bread and meat necessary in a meal.

Many vegetables are prepared in combination with milk, cheese or eggs and are, therefore, of considerable food value, even though the vegetable itself may contain little food material besides mineral matter.

Some vegetables found in the home garden and the market are not used to any great extent—due probably to the fact that housekeepers have never acquired "the habit" of cooking them. This is a good year in which to change our prejudices in regard to food and to try new things.

Variety is needed in the diet and should be supplied by using all foods.

Sautéed Egg Plant.

Peel and slice crosswise the egg plant—making the slices one-half inch thick. Sprinkle with salt and let drain for forty-five minutes. Roll each slice in beaten egg and then in bread crumbs—repeating the process if desired. Sauté in fat in a frying pan until brown and tender.

Baked Egg Plant.

Peel, boil in salted water until tender, drain, mash fine. Add butter and salt to taste. Put in shallow baking dish, cover top with layer of bread crumbs and bake one-half hour.

Baked Green Sweet Peppers.

Remove the top and scoop out the seeds of the sweet peppers. Wash thoroughly. Fill the cavities with bread crumbs to which has been added melted butter or a substitute, salt and pepper. Place a small square of bacon on the top of each pepper. Place in an upright position in a baking dish, place about one-half inch of water in the bottom of the baking dish and bake forty-five minutes or an hour in a slow oven.

The filling for the peppers may be varied by using in place of the bread crumbs, bits of cold meat creamed, cold boiled rice or green corn.

Green sweet peppers are excellent chopped up with cabbage in slaw or with tomatoes in salad. They have many uses besides the old one of making them into "stuffed pickled mangoes."

Summer Squash.

If the squash is young and tender, which may be determined by pressing the nail through the skin, do not peel it. Cut into slices, removing the seeds if desired, boil in as little water as possible for one-half or three-quarters of an hour. Drain well, mash and allow to dry out in the oven or over a slow fire. Season with butter, salt and pepper and a little cream.

If the squash is old, peel and remove seeds before cooking.

Squash Patties.

Boil or steam until tender. Mash and season with butter, pepper and salt. Allow mixture to cool. Add beaten egg, sweet milk and enough flour to make stiff. Drop by spoonfuls into hot fat and fry until brown.

Creamed Cauliflower.

Remove the outer leaves from the head of cauliflower. Place head down in salted water and let stand several hours. Divide head into sections any size desired. Wash thoroughly. Place in boiling salted water and boil twenty or thirty minutes. Drain and add white sauce made of one cup milk, two tablespoons of butter or substitute, two tablespoons of flour, salt and pepper. Reheat and serve. Corn starch may be used in place of the flour and only one tablespoon used.

Buttered Carrots.

Peel the carrots and, if large in size, cut into dice about one inch square. Boil in salted water until tender. Drain. Over the carrots spread butter enough to season well. Add a little pepper and simmer a couple of minutes before serving.

Instead of using butter a white sauce may be put over the carrots. Directions for making the white sauce are given above under "Creamed Cauliflower."

Endive Salad.

Wash the endive thoroughly and let stand in ice water for an hour. Drain thoroughly—perhaps using a cloth. Place on salad plates and add French dressing seasoned with plenty of paprika.

Cooked Cabbage Salad.

- 1 small head of cabbage.
- $\frac{1}{2}$  cup vinegar.
- 1 teaspoonful butter or butter substitute.
- 1 teaspoonful sugar.
- 1 teaspoonful celery salt or celery seed.
- 2 teaspoons salt.
- $\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoonful pepper.
- 1 cup milk.
- 1 or 2 eggs.

Shred the cabbage by slicing it in the thinnest layers possible. Heat the vinegar and seasonings and scald the cabbage in it, removing it immediately from the fire. Make a custard of the eggs and milk and pour over the hot cabbage. Mix it by tossing lightly with a fork. Cover and let stand until cold. Serve very cold.

Liberty Guard Lights

On Sunday, July 21, Provisional Company No. 30 of the Liberty Guards of Indiana, located at Terre Haute, had as their guests at a big fish fry one hundred men of the Auto Mechanics' Battalion, U. S. A., now located at Rose Polytechnic Institute for Vocational Training. The fish fry was held on a beautiful farm site seven miles east of Terre Haute and hosts and guests hiked to the place in military formation.

Following the fish fry dinner a general program of military sports followed, including two or three fast boxing bouts, after which the two organizations returned to the city "a la" infantry.

Company No. 30 of Terre Haute is one of the big, active companies of the State. They have one platoon of forty men and these are called the engineers' platoon. They have a special section and a special lieutenant assigned to train the conscripted men, and this company, while variable in number, is one of the interesting sidelines of this patriotic bunch of live wires, who early realized that the State should be made safe and that they should contribute their share to the education of the conscripted boy in his new work.

The Third Regiment of the Liberty Guard of Indiana is now in process of organization and is composed of the companies in the counties of Benton, Jasper and Newton.

Col. Warren T. McCray of Kentland has been asked to head this regiment, and John M. Sausser of Rensselaer has been designated as lieutenant-colonel of the organization. Other regiments of the Liberty Guard will be organized as soon as sufficient companies are formed.

Where Evans Milling Company Employees Are Cultivating 17 Acres of City Land at West Tenth Street and White River, Indianapolis

Advance estimates indicate that now there are more than 750,000 war gardens in Indiana. At first, gardening was more or less a fad, but now the large number of war gardens testify to the stability of the enterprise as a real business. More than 500,000 gardens were planted in Indiana last year, which was an increase of 100 per cent over the previous season.

The people of the cities and towns have been organized effectively. At a meeting called by Governor Goodrich, in April, 1917, the mayors of the cities were advised that it would be legal for them to appropriate public funds to engage war garden supervisors. This aided much in accomplishing results and completing the State organization. W. L. Lommel, who was placed in charge of the war garden work in the State by the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, reports that one hundred and twenty-five garden supervisors are on the job this season and that six assistant county agents in the larger cities are giving their full time as supervisors.

In order to properly organize Indiana for garden work, the State was divided into five districts with a supervisor serving as district leader. District meetings are held when necessary. At these meetings plans have already been perfected for community canning and drying, as it is realized that the conservation of the surplus is as imperative as the production. Other important problems, such as storage, insect and pest control, or a consideration of special problems which arise through unfavorable conditions, are taken up at these meetings.

The people of Indianapolis have responded well to the call for more gardens this year. Harry Miesse, secretary of the Patriotic Gardeners' Association, asserts that Indianapolis has about 60,000 gardens this year. He said: "Although no figures are available as to the total value of these gardens, there will be enough food produced by these families to supply them for the entire winter and still have a large surplus. This is important, for the food formerly used by these families will be released for our army in France."

"A house-to-house survey has shown that the war gardener of 1918 is a decided improvement over 1917. The number of gardens has increased at least 15 per cent this year," said C. H. Libbert, city garden director. "Although many of last year's gardeners spent their time in producing a large amount of early perishable vegetables, we have not experienced this type of war gardener in 1918," he continued. "They are now producing staple vegetables which may be canned or stored for winter use. Fewer mistakes have been made this year."

"The knowledge gained through last year's experience has also made the problem of insect and disease control much easier. With such results from one year's experience the future for these gardeners looks promising, for by next year they will have had another year's experience."

"Indiana gardens at this time are in fine condition, showing excellent care, the predominating crops over the State being potatoes, beans and corn. The most serious pro-German blow the gardens have received since the war began was the frost of June 22nd, which absolutely killed 50 per cent of the vegetation in about ten counties in northeastern Indiana. Steps have been taken to replant these with sweet corn, late potatoes and beans. It is estimated that the total output from the war gardens will be sufficient to maintain two-thirds of the people of the State for a year."

"As a result of the garden movement, tons of produce have been added to the food supply. Thrift and economy have been fostered. Labor has been dignified. Thousands of people have become real conservationists, because they realize through their garden experience the difficulties of food production, the amount of work and intelligence needed to produce food, and the national crime of food waste."

Committee on Construction

At the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, July 24th, the following report was submitted and approved:

To the Indiana State Council of Defense:

Your Committee on Proposed Construction reports as follows:

1. In the matter of the construction of four roads in Hendricks County, three of which are in process of construction, namely: The Huron road, McCurdy road and the Howell road. The fourth, the Christy road, has been contracted for since 1912, but construction not begun. After hearing the representatives of Hendricks County, J. P. Johnson, county surveyor; Mr. Larkin, president of the Board of County Commissioners, your committee recommends that the chairman of the State Council of Defense address a letter to the chairman of the Hendricks County Council of Defense, asking for a full report in the matter as to immediate necessity of work, materials required and possible postponement of at least part of work.

2. In the matter of the Welden Alley, et al.,

free gravel road in Taylor Township, Howard County, Indiana: It being represented to your committee that a supply of stone is available within a short distance, with transportation by interurban line, in cars not required or suitable for crops; the labor and teams are also available in the immediate vicinity, the committee recommends that the completion of such improvement be not disapproved.

3. In the matter of the construction of a brick building for the use of the Farmers State Bank of Preble, Indiana: The Adams County Council of Defense has discouraged this proposed construction and has withheld its approval, and the committee is not warranted by the facts in its possession in recommending the erection of this building.

4. In the matter of the proposed construction of a library building in North Judson, the gift of the Carnegie Corporation: The committee is not warranted by the facts in its possession in recommending the erection of this building.

5. In the matter of the improvement of West Ohio street, Bluffton, Indiana, the committee recommends that the State Council of Defense do not oppose the recommendations made by the County Council of Bluffton, Indiana.

6. In the matter of paving in Kendallville, Indiana: The committee makes no recommendation, but advises co-operation between the mayor and other public officers and a more definite determination of their wishes.

7. In the matter of the completion of sewer in Cambridge City: The committee advises the State Council that no action is necessary in this matter, an investigation being in progress by the Board of accounts.

CHAS. FOX,
J. L. KEACH,
GEORGE ADE.

THE WAR COMES FIRST.

Our country needs our capital, our labor, our material, and NOTHING which involves their additional use should be undertaken unless strictly necessary in the prosecution of the war. Every proper means should be employed to discourage NEW enterprises which contemplate the building of manufacturing plants, the erection of factories, elevators and warehouses or anything in connection therewith, unless strictly for war purposes.—Illinois State Council News.

APPOINTMENT OF PRICE REPORTERS.

Bulletin No. 94, sent out from this office and calling for the appointment of a price reporting staff, should have your immediate attention. Mr. G. K. Johnson, representing the retail grocers of the State, has been placed in charge of this work for Indiana and desires to perfect an organization covering the entire State. Bulletin No. 94 calls for a report to be made to Dr. Raymond Pearl at Washington, and one to the county food administrator. We desire that you instruct the reporters in your county to mail a copy to this office also.

Satisfy yourself before making appointments that the persons appointed are capable and in a position to get the accurate information which is most essential to the success of the work. Send us the names of your appointees as soon as you have made them.

In counties where appointments have been made, check up your appointees to see if they are doing the work thoroughly. If not, get them to work or make new appointments.

Give this your immediate attention, as we want to bring Indiana to the front in this branch of the food administration work.

Very truly yours,

H. E. BARNARD,

Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

SHORTENING FOR CRACKER BAKERS.

Until further notice the restriction in regard to the use of animal fat in Class 3a (Rule 2) and Class 3b (Rule 2) is withdrawn.

Cracker bakers may use either animal or vegetable shortening, or both, to suit their requirements. It is expected, however, that the conservation of both kinds of shortening will be maintained and that no more than the amount necessary will be used.

This applies only to the manufacture of crackers and biscuits falling in Classes 3a and 3b.

BAKERS' WEEKLY REPORTS.

There seems to still exist a misunderstanding in the minds of a few bakers as to what is meant by twenty-five and thirty-three and one-third per cent substitutes in the manufacture of their products.

Bread and bread rolls must contain one pound of substitutes for every three pounds of wheat flour used.

Sweet yeast doughs and other products must contain one pound of substitutes for every two pounds of wheat flour used.

You should check over each week the weekly reports of the bakers in your county before sending them in to this office. When reports are not made out completely or correctly you should immediately summons the baker before you to explain why he is not conforming to the rules in making out these reports.

We are mailing to all bakers of Indiana, instructions regarding the "Prevention of Rope in Bread."

Very truly yours,

H. E. BARNARD,

Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

As a temporary arrangement, the Federal Food Administration has announced a new wheat flour regulation. When the farmer brings to the mill wheat grown by himself, the miller is privileged to deliver to him, on a toll or exchange basis, without any substitutes, 8 pounds per month per capita allowance of wheat flour, upon his certifying that the wheat was grown by himself, and that the amount of flour to be delivered to him at that time, with the amount on hand, will not give him a supply more than sufficient to meet the requirements of his household, or establishment, to October 1st, the number thereof being stated, and pledging that he will not sell, loan or deliver any of the flour to any one else, nor permit its use except for such human consumption as indicated. This exchange basis is extended to elevators and mills.

For selling sugar at 11 cents a pound, which the Federal Food Administration regards as profiteering, Henry Shultz, a grocer of Cooley, Indiana, which is near Gary, has been deprived of the privilege of selling sugar until the end of the war.

A. R. Powell, who operates two groceries at Linton, was found guilty to having misrepresented the amount of sugar on hand July 1st, and was deprived of the privilege of selling sugar until October 1st. Powell made an affidavit that he had 1,000 pounds of sugar on hand, and an investigation disclosed 5,560 pounds.

Any grocer found violating the regulations for Sunday closing will have his supplies cut off. Grocers can not violate the food regulations and expect to get any of the licensed commodities from the Food Administration. Manifestly, it is unfair to those obeying the regulations to have a certain few disregarding them, and henceforth we mean to see that this rule is strictly complied with.

No sugar will be permitted for use in the making of vinegar. Throughout the rural districts particularly various kinds of vinegar are made by householders in which sugar has been one of the ingredients, but from this time no such use of sugar will be permitted.

Thrashing and buying of damp wheat is absolutely contrary to the desires and purposes of the Food Administration, and is contrary to the principles of food conservation. Wheat should not be thrashed or purchased containing over 14 per cent moisture. Dealers who purchase damp wheat and permit it to get out of condition will be considered guilty of contributing to the destruction of foodstuffs.

It will be considered an unfair practice for buyers of wheat to place, intentionally, a lower grade on wheat than that to which it is entitled under the federal standard. Protests had been received by the Food Administration and by the State Council of Defense that buyers in some instances were endeavoring to buy wheat below its real value through an inferior grading. The U. S. Grain Corporation says it will not be an unfair practice to pay the basic No. 1 price on wheat even if the wheat grades lower. Conviction for unfair practice carries a penalty of forfeiture of license, which means elimination from business, and all such attempts to deprive the wheat grower of the price to which he is honestly entitled under the regulations should be reported at once.

Except that victory bread may contain 75 pounds of wheat flour, 20 pounds of substitutes and 5 pounds of rye flour, which latter permission is intended to take care of stocks of rye carried over from last year's harvest and where new rye is coming in, the substitute regulations as applied to the baking industry remain unchanged.

Restrictions as to the use of animal fats by bakers have been eliminated, except that they are to be used economically.

Butter held by any food licensee must be sold without regard to existing market or replacement value at not more than a reasonable advance over cost. The Food Administration prohibits speculation in butter.

CURTAILMENT OF SUGAR SERVED IN PUBLIC EATING PLACES IN INDIANA.

A telegram from Washington states that sugar requirements for the next sixty days will have to be curtailed 33½ per cent, owing to the fact that the supply reaching this country will be short that amount.

Please see that all public eating houses in your county are notified through your hotel and restaurant chairman of this fact. All sugar certificates issued during the next two months will be reduced one-third and it will be necessary for all proprietors immediately to reduce the amount of sugar served to each guest.

In order that all public eating houses be placed on an equal footing it will be advisable to notify all proprietors to limit the patrons to one teaspoonful of sugar in all drinks and two teaspoonfuls on cereals and fresh fruits.

Please give this your immediate attention, as this office wishes to give notice to proprietors at the earliest possible moment.

Your county chairman will receive a copy of this bulletin and will be expected to act immediately.

Sincerely yours,

H. E. BARNARD,

Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

Bulletin No. 147.

FEEDING RYE AND BARLEY.

Many farmers sowed rye and barley with the expectation of "hogging it down" or cutting it for stock food. In some cases the corn supply is about exhausted and feed for growing stock is scarce. These facts have resulted in many requests for permits to feed rye and barley.

We have not felt it advisable to give a blanket permit, in view of the request from Washington that the practice be discouraged until the amount of the wheat crop is determined, but the demand for relief is so pressing that you are now advised to give special permits whenever the facts warrant the feeding of rye. You will insist upon the farmer first using his stocks of 1917 corn and buying from other growers if possible, and you will further restrict the feeding to cases of absolute need.

Please advise your county agricultural agent that rye may not be fed except with your consent, but that you will gladly give such consent whenever the facts warrant the action.

All applications for permission to feed rye must be made to you. If you believe such permission should be granted, you will make your recommendations to this office.

No formal permit is necessary for the feeding of barley.

Sincerely yours,

H. E. BARNARD,

Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

10,000 Have Joined the Shock Troops in Indiana

Sixty-five counties in Indiana have taken up the plan of the United States Department of Agriculture and the United States Public Service Reserve to have city men work in harvest fields during the rush season to assist the farmers in harvesting their crops. In the remainder, registered men's organization methods or similar plans have been adopted and it is believed that every county now is fortified on the farm help problem. Practically 10,000 city men have been enrolled for this farm work and hundreds of others have joined the "Shock Troops" to work a few hours in the evening after closing their stores or leaving their places in shops and factories.

Another labor saving device coming into use on Indiana farms this summer is the bundle racks commonly used in the west for a number of years. These racks which are sides for hay racks fitting on much the same as sides for a wagon bed, will hold as much or more than an ordinary hay rack and may be loaded by one man without anyone on the wagon, thus saving the services of at least one man.

These racks have been used successfully in Huntington, Allen and several other counties the last few years. W. B. Brumfiel, farm help specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture, said in an interview at the office of the State Food Committee.

Woman's Section

One hundred and twenty-five different families in St. Joseph County have been given aid by the Home Service Department of the Home and Allied Relief Committee, according to a recent report of the Woman's Section, State Council of Defense. From these families, one hundred and thirty-five men have been enlisted for the war, and there are three hundred and four dependents. Five hundred and thirty visits are reported to have been made into the homes by volunteer visitors, these visits being for the purpose of giving advice with regard to health, school attendance, readjustment of family budget and dietary, supervision of unruly children, allotments, allowances, compensation and insurance. Financial help has been given fifty-three families, and co-operating with the St. Joseph County Dental Society, the St. Joseph County Medical Association and the Legal Advisory Committee of the State Council of Defense, the department has been able to provide free dental, medical and legal aid for fifty different cases. Other helpful influences enlisted in securing aid were hospitals, visiting nurses, relatives, employers, pastors and teachers.

At the request of military authorities, ten investigations relative to the discharge of enlisted men were made, and in only one case did the investigation show that the discharge asked for was justifiable.

That the families of soldiers who have enlisted from Wayne County are receiving every needed attention, is shown by a report from the Committee on Home and Allied Relief to the Woman's Section, Indiana Council of Defense. Two hundred and seventy calls have been made and as many interviews at the office. Letters are written for the families and $91.17 has been used for financial aid.

The Home and Allied Relief Committee of Lake County reports that it is caring for fifty families of soldiers.

Mrs. Albion Fellows Bacon, chairman of the Child Welfare Committee, Woman's Section, is asking to have the first week in September set aside as "Play Week." "We want to make Indiana a singing State from the river to the lake," says Mrs. Bacon. "No community will be too small to organize a choral club or a community chorus, if it has only a single choir as a nucleus. They will sing all the war songs, old and new, lively and solemn. We want to start bands in every community. Children's whistle bands are not to be scorned. There are some boys who are not in the Boys' Working Reserve or the Boy Scouts. We want to organize these into simple military clubs, to drill and have other activities. For the girls we plan folk dancing. Our slogan is 'A stronger America.'"

Mrs. Bacon's suggestions as to recreation are so fully approved by the national authorities on child welfare that they are planning to introduce them into other States.

Registration is completed in Henry County and over ten thousand cards are being filed. A new filing cabinet has been provided by the County Council of Defense.

Rush County is probably the leader of the State in child welfare work. Several years ago the leaders started a baby clinic, giving a prize to the baby that made the greatest gain from one clinic to another. The work in this county this year, therefore, has been perfecting the work of previous years.

A three-year-old girl, deaf, dumb and blind, who came under the observation of the child welfare workers in Franklin County, is believed to be in such a condition that her sight may be possible under proper treatment.

"There is health work to be done in our county," is the opinion of the chairman of the Woman's Section, Council of Defense, of Jasper County, at the conclusion of the examination of children under six years of age. In Rensselaer alone, physicians' records show 63½ per cent normal children. The most common defects found in their clinics, as in other clinics throughout the State, are enlarged glands, adenoids, diseased tonsils and bad results from over-feeding.

The Woman's Section of Miami County voted that women and girls should organize and go to the country to help the women in farm work.

Peru has a company of Liberty Guards, membership of one hundred and three; age limit sixteen to twenty-eight; meetings held once a week; object, to respond to all calls for any kind of war work.

The Fourteen-Minute Women of Fulton County have taken a fresh start and are about to inaugurate a new series of talks to boost the Food Clubs.

Support Pledged to Enforcement of Laws

On the recommendation of Samuel R. Artman, chairman of the Industrial Board, the Indiana State Council of Defense, at its meeting July 24, adopted the following resolution as indicative of its attitude toward the enforcement of the laws intended for the moral and physical safeguarding of women and children in industry:

Whereas, The extraordinary industrial conditions created by the World War have attracted women and children in constantly increasing numbers to enter factory life.

Whereas, There is a persistent tendency on the part of some employers to violate the laws governing the employment of both women and children on the plea of labor shortage.

Whereas, The President of the United States, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of Labor and the Council of National Defense all insist that there shall be no let-down in our labor standards or relaxation in the enforcement of women and child labor laws.

And whereas, The Industrial Board of Indiana has advised the Indiana State Council of Defense that it desires the moral support and co-operation of said Council of Defense in securing by the employers of the State a faithful observance of the women and child labor laws of Indiana.

Therefore, Be it resolved by the Indiana State Council of Defense that it hereby pledges to the proper authorities its moral support and co-operation in the enforcement of the child and women labor laws of the State, and, to the end that such support and co-operation may be effective, the matter is hereby referred to the chairman of the Woman's Section of the State Council of Defense, and that she be and is hereby empowered to appoint, upon the specific request of the Industrial Board of Indiana, a committee of three, in each industrial center of the State designated in such request, to co-operate with said board in the enforcement of such laws in such industrial center.

Second Camp Proves Unqualified Success

monished the boys to be faithful to the trust which the Federal Government had reposed in them. Short addresses also were made by M. E. Foley, Chairman State Council of Defense; M. A. Coykendall, Chief of the Bureau of Farm Labor, and H. W. Wells, Associate National Director of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, from Washington; Isaac D. Straus, Burrigle D. Butler and Charles C. Parcells, Federal State Directors of the Reserve in Indiana, Illinois and Michigan, respectively.

W. B. Krueck, who had charge of the instruction of the boys, pronounced the second camp a bigger success than the first and praised the conduct of the boys.

Military Drill Emphasized.

Under the direction of Major H. C. Thureck of the Purdue Cadet Battalion, the boys made much progress in the School of the Squad and the School of the Soldier, during the ten days they were in camp.

Kenneth Dynes was chosen as captain of the company for the second camp, serving in the same capacity in which his brother Donald served at the first camp.

Many favorable comments were heard from the visitors, expressing their appreciation of the admirable manner in which the boys conducted themselves during the military review. Members of the State Council of Defense who were present were of the opinion the military feature alone justified the camp, aside from the splendid training the boys received in how to do elementary farm work.

The following boys were graduated from the second camp:

Frank Kurtz, Adams County; Frank Myers, Frances Klopfenstein, Robert Richey, Bernon Haifley, Robert Mercer, Paul Shive, Lawrence Emerick, Don Hadley, Edward Auer, Fred Getty, Walker D. McCurdy, Albert Summers, Allen County; Norman Mendenhall, Cyril Hicks, Marion Money, Clay County; William E. Davies, Clinton County; Everett T. Pruitt, Dubois County; Wyatt Mick, Gordon Sheline, Warren McCumsey, Elkhart County; Harold Scott Pickens, Floyd County; Carl Hektor, Chloe Toughman, Joe Schaaf, Clyde Neff, Fulton County; Estes Hollingsworth, Charles Ballard, Gibson County; Donald Innis, Grant County; Fred Osborne, Hendricks County; Ralph Amick, Jackson County; Edwin Bey, Dwight Berry, Knox County; Albert Steele, Roland Edwards, Lawrence County; Robert Hyatt, Eugene Clifford, Madison County; Alfred Mueller, Isidore Greenberg, Roy Morrison, Charles Parsons, Joseph Klee, Kenneth Dynes, Jack Jones, Marion County; Ted Rhodes, Herbert Shadinger, Miami County; Robert Hunter, Monroe County; Robert Reynolds, Theodore Schweitzer, Richard Stout, Ernest Dinwiddie, John Zook, Clyde Parker, James Kennon, Guy Stahr, Ladley Martin, Gilbert McClelland, Clarence Bennett, Montgomery County; Ansel Webber, Leon Moore, Dewey Sanders, Eugene Evans, Newton County; Joseph Brasier, Paul Whitaker, Owen County; James B. Zeis, William Hester, Putnam County; Benjamin Branch, Robert Kellams, Spencer County; Edward Whesler, Herbert Shaw, Tipton County; Charles Jeffries, Bennett Montgomery, Carroll Holloway, Vanderburgh County; Frank West, Lyle Kingery, James Taylor, Vigo County; Hartley Stitz, Robert Hale, Wabash County; Everett Clark Phillips, Lynn Lowrey, Wayne County; Donald Spitzer, Arthur Berry, Whitely County; Melvin Dodge, Fred Dahlberg, Oscar Harris, Carl Krueger, Virgil Weinberg, Frank Jonas, John O'Brien, Robert Hale, Vernon Barker, John Farrar, Harold Neil, Chicago, Ill.; and Donald G. Sullivan, Louisville, Ky.

Boys Are Making Good.

Reports received by the Federal State Director indicate that boys who graduated from the first Purdue training camp are making good without exception. William Spork of Terre Haute, working on the farm of Mrs. Ray Jenks in Vigo County, earned $25.00 the first five days he worked in the harvest field, being paid a man's wages, forty cents an hour. Henry Frenzel, Charles W. Moores and James Freeman of Indianapolis are working on the 15,000-acre ranch of Straus Bros. Company in Jasper County. Chas. Enz, superintendent of the ranch, reports that in addition to milking ten cows and feeding 450 hogs twice a day, they are making splendid hands in the hay fields. Every boy from the first camp is employed at good wages with good farmers. Their training and experience this season will make very dependable hands of them early next spring when the farm labor shortage will be felt much more than this year.

Problems Affecting Harvesting of Wheat

Before Indiana State Council of Defense Which Takes Steps for Relief.

Problems affecting the harvest, sale and transportation of Indiana's enormous wheat crop occupied a large portion of the time of the Indiana State Council of Defense at its meeting July 24.

A. E. Reynolds reported that he had made an investigation of the distribution of anonymous cards throughout eastern Indiana, and found they were being published by a Muncie firm to make public their daily price offerings. He said there was no indication of the existence of a combination having for its object the establishment or regulation of grain prices. He said, however, that the firm had agreed to discontinue the practice, which action, Mr. Reynolds added, has been followed by considerable complaint from farmers, dealers and others who had enjoyed the convenience of this service.

Mr. Reynolds said that no one had spoken as having any authority on the subject of what constitutes a fair margin for handling wheat. He said no effort had been made anywhere to fix prices, but he personally had made the observation that, owing to varying conditions in Indiana, a range from 6½ to 8 cents per bushel is enough. He said some dealers in Indiana are losing money because they buy on their own judgment, and have been forced to sell wheat on the government grades. He said also that the shortage of cars has made it necessary to hold much of the wheat in country elevators, where the margin of profit in $2.08 wheat is quickly consumed by overhead costs. At Mr. Reynolds' suggestion, Mr. Ade moved the adoption of the following resolution, which the council supported unanimously:

Resolved, That the Governor of Indiana be requested to appoint a committee of two, consisting of a member of the Public Service Commission and a member of the State Council of Defense, to proceed to Washington at once and appeal to the government to relieve the present car shortage and provide means for moving the grain crops.

Pursuant to the recommendation, Governor James P. Goodrich, following the meeting, announced the appointment of John W. McCardle of the Public Service Commission and A. E. Reynolds of the State Council of Defense, as a committee to proceed to Washington for the purpose outlined, "and to stay there until they got results."

Dr. Harry E. Barnard, federal food administrator for Indiana, reiterated his statement that the Food Administration has no power to fix prices; that its only authority is the regulation of profits. He said also that the Food Administration has no power to furnish cars generally, but that in some specific cases it has been of service.

Carl Sims, chairman of the Milling Division of the Federal Food Administration for Indiana, explained the difficulties many grain dealers have had, for the reason that they have not secured the means for applying the government grades, have a limited storage capacity and have been unable to move their purchases to seaboard terminals.

James W. Sales of Bluffton, a grain dealer, referring to the car shortage, said it will necessitate the closing of elevators unless relief comes promptly. He said, within a week 75 per cent of the Indiana elevators will be closed with a congestion of wheat, and the oats harvest will be entirely unprovided for. D. H. Jenkins of Noblesville, whose storage capacity, he said, was 750,000 bushels, asserted that unless relief comes within 48 hours "we must shut up or risk the government penalty for receiving more than a thirty days' supply." Dr. Barnard assured Mr. Jenkins that the Food Administration would waive the penalty clause, but the latter said the problem of taking in another 500,000 bushels of wheat involves a million dollars in money and some assurance of a margin sufficient to cover the additional overhead.

It was the sense of the council that the question of prices under the food control act might be left to the Federal Food Administration and the grain dealers, who have consistently co-operated. Mr. McCardle stated he had been to Washington in an effort to secure additional cars, but that they are not coming to Indiana as had been promised. He said they are going to Illinois and western States and that the situation in Indiana promises to get worse.

Samuel R. Artman, chairman of the Indiana Industrial Board, presented a resolution pledging the moral support of the council to the continued enforcement of laws intended to safeguard the moral and physical welfare of women and children in industry, and said it was the sense of the National Council and other interested organizations that "this is not the time for any let-down in the strict enforcement of these laws." Judge Artman said an investigation in Indiana disclosed an absence of justification for violating any of the existing laws, which were made to provide against just such emergency as has developed in connection with the war. The resolution appears elsewhere in this bulletin.

Charles Fox, chairman of the Labor Committee, presented the following resolution, which the council on his motion adopted:

Inasmuch as it has come to the knowledge of the State Council of Defense of the State of Indiana, through a report from the chairman of the Woman's Section thereof, that the only woman employed in the branch offices of the United States Employment Service in the State of Indiana is a stenographer whose duties include the clerical work of the office, and inasmuch as it is made to appear to the satisfaction of said Indiana State Council of Defense that there is a real necessity that a competent woman be placed in each of said branch employment offices, to give her time exclusively to the placement of woman labor, therefore be it resolved by the Indiana State Council of Defense that said State Council of Defense does hereby recommend to the Hon. John B. Densmore, director-general of the United States Employment Service, that a competent woman, in addition to the stenographer, be placed in each of the branch offices of said service in Indiana, to give her time exclusively to the placement of woman labor.

A communication from Charles Kelso, chairman of the Floyd County Council of Defense, calling attention to the wide discrepancy between fertilizer prices that were general before the declaration of war and prices now asked for the same grade, was read by the chairman. O. S. Roberts, chief inspector of fertilizer at Purdue University, said that prices and ingredients of fertilizer sold in Indiana are practically uniform, but that wide discrepancies had been discovered in retail quotations. He said one instance had come to his attention wherein the retailer was taking a margin of profit of $14.00 per ton. The chairman requested that he prepare a statement of fact in all such cases, and said that the council would undertake to prevent "such flagrant profiteering." T. A. Coleman of the Food Production and Conservation Committee was authorized to secure from county agents in Indiana a statement of retail prices and ingredients of fertilizers, for consideration at a later meeting. A. E. Kalter, representing an Indianapolis fertilizer manufacturer, stated that the business was practically under the control of the federal government as a war measure, and "98 per cent of the cases are on a very small margin of profit and a cash basis."

The report of the Committee on Proposed Construction, which appears elsewhere in the Bulletin, was approved. Upon motion of Mr. Fox, it was the sense of the council that further consideration of all matters pertaining to building, public improvements and other large expenditures of men, money and material comprehended by the policies of the State and National Councils of Defense, be referred first to County Councils of Defense in the communities affected.

E. W. Wickey of the Lake County Council of Defense, a visitor at the meeting, concurred in the action of the State Council, pointing out the multiplicity of matters referred to the County Council of Defense upon which the members have more direct information and which they are in better position to adjudicate.

On the recommendation of W. G. Irwin of the Solicitations Committee, the council held the Women's Christian Temperance Union a proper organization to collect funds for war purposes in Indiana.

Jos. G. Ibach stated to the council that West Hammond "is a rendezvous for all who desire to quench their thirst," and he asked whether the council had ever considered steps to curb the evil growing out of persistent violations of the law. He inquired as to the propriety of asking an order from the federal government to declare and enforce a zone ruling for the protection of soldiers and sailors in that vicinity. The council will consider the matter further on formal presentation of facts at a later meeting.

The matter of regulating the hours of business for Gary firms was directed to the attention of the Lake County Council of Defense.

G. I. Christie, director of the Committee on Food Production and Conservation, told the council that the work of his organization is progressing in a very fair way. He said he had just returned from Birmingham, Ala., where he found a marked change in the attitude of the people, and that now, everywhere, all classes of people are going to the fields to help harvest the food crops. He said further that at the suggestion of Herbert C. Hoover, federal food administrator, a meeting had been called for Chicago on July 25, at which time a program for an increased wheat acreage in Indiana and adjacent States would be formulated. It was originally intended, Mr. Christie said, to adhere to the 1918 acreage with special emphasis on increased production, but that the revised food program calls also for an increased acreage, to accomplish which, he said, the support and co-operation of the council would be asked.

Grace at Table, 1918.

Here we gather, dear All-Father,
'Round Thy table to be fed.
'Tis Thy gift—our daily bread.

As we gather to be fed
Nations plead for daily bread—
Fighting son and anguished mother,
Orphaned children, all together,
Pray to Thee for daily bread.
At Thy common table, Father,
Ask we all for daily bread.

God, All-Father, hear our prayer!
Move our hearts and minds to share
With Thy children at Thy table
This Thy gift of daily bread,
Sacred gift of daily bread!

Least they perish, swift and eager
Share we now our daily bread.
Give through us, O great All-Father,
To Thy children, daily bread!

—Sarah Louise Arnold.

Car Relief Promised.

Relief from the congestion of wheat in elevators and on farms, which has served to interrupt the free movement of the 1918 crop to a very serious extent, is promised in a wire received by M. E. Foley, chairman of the Indiana State Council of Defense.

The car service section of the Council of National Defense has taken interest in the situation and informs Mr. Foley by wire that "we are moving cars into your State to better protect grain loading."

The critical nature of the situation has been conveyed to other government agencies, and particularly the director general of railroads, in the hope that the thrashing of Indiana's enormous crop may not be delayed any further because of the fact that there is no outlet for wheat.

Measure your wheat savings by the Golden Rule.

The nations must never again endure such black days of agony as those in which we are living.—ROBERT LANSING, Secretary of State.

Fertilizer Prices in Indiana Are Uniform

Thirty-three Counties Report Absence of Profitsteering—Repair of Highways Legal.

An expression of its attitude in reference to the continuation of chautauquas in Indiana was asked of the Indiana State Council of Defense at its meeting July 31st, by Harry G. Hill, of Indianapolis, president and general manager of the National Welfare Chautauqua Association. Mr. Hill said that in Tippecanoe County the Council of Defense had ruled against the holding of chautauquas at Clark's Hill and Dayton during the month of August. He said he knew of no reason for this action beyond the newspaper reports that "the chautauqua was an unnecessary entertainment. The council requested that Mr. Hill take the matter up personally with the Tippecanoe County Council of Defense, and report back at a later meeting. Members of the council expressed themselves as favorable to the chautauqua idea so long as it adhered to patriotic propaganda.

T. A. Coleman of the Committee on Food Production and Conservation informed the Council that reports on the sale of fertilizer had been received from 33 counties, and the prices ranged from 15 to 30 per cent higher than last year. He said that a sub-committee of the Council of National Defense is in charge of questions pertaining to the manufacture and distribution of fertilizer and, in a sense, regulating prices "by not disapproving" retail quotations. Mr. Coleman said there seemed to be an even price level among the counties reporting, and in no case had the retailer's margin exceeded $3.00 per ton, and in most cases ranged from $1.00 to $1.50 per ton. He said the farmers had not been educated to looking at the analysis tag in buying fertilizer, and consequently are perhaps buying a superior grade of fertilizer at a higher price than formerly obtained.

In connection with the report of the Committee on Proposed Construction, which appears elsewhere in this Bulletin, Mr. Fox suggested that the statement go forward from the council that the state committee is acting on these matters "on the theory that the county councils have honestly and conscientiously applied the process prescribed," which is, he said, that all such enterprises be weighed by the test: Will the men money and material, when so applied, best contribute in this manner to the winning of the war? The suggestion was approved by the council.

Mr. Brady, who was appointed a committee to inquire of the Attorney-General as to the authority of the county officials to maintain an improved condition of highways, wherein contracts for improvements have been let and the work deferred in consideration of the state and national war policies, reported as follows:

The question has frequently been asked in matters of proposed highway construction coming before the State Council of Defense, whether the road authorities had jurisdiction to make repairs to highways under contract for improvement. In order to secure an authoritative answer to this question, it was submitted to the Attorney-General, who gives it as his opinion that where the improvement has been deferred or suspended because of the war or other reason, the road authorities have power to keep the highway in repair, the repair work to be done in such manner as not to affect needlessly the rights of the contractor. It is suggested that the contractor's consent be obtained, where possible, before any considerable repairs are made. The opinion of the Attorney-General follows:

"I am in receipt of your letter of recent date, asking for my opinion as to the right and power of county and township road authorities to keep highways in repair after contracts have been let for their improvement but improvements have been put off on account of the war. Specifically, you ask whether the letting of a contract ousts the local authorities of power to keep a road in repair.

"Under our highway laws it is the duty of local authorities to keep them in repair so as to make them reasonably passable, and they are in pursuit of the discharge of this duty when they let contracts either to improve or repair highways.

"Bids and contracts are made by contractors based on conditions found to exist on the highway to be improved and, of course, the road authorities can not be allowed to materially change such conditions so as to require contractors to do more work or furnish more supplies, but such contractors, in my opinion, would have no cause of complaint where only additional gravel or stone was placed on the highway which they might use in making the contracted improvement." And draining the road-bed or making fills or excavations which would aid the contractors in performing their contracts rather than injure them would not injure the contractors. They have no cause of complaint where they are not injured.

"It is quite clear that contractors have no right to control a public highway during times when the improvement is not going forward and officers charged with maintaining and keeping highways in repair do not become trespassers by discharging their duties during such times when on account of war, or for any other reason, improvements are deferred or suspended.

"In my opinion, during such suspension it is the duty of officers to keep highways, upon which contracts to improve have been let, in a reasonably safe condition for travel in any case where, during the improvement, it is not closed to public travel. The power to close public highways not abandoned or vacated, exists only because of necessity and can be exercised only temporarily in cases of emergency, and the road authorities are required to keep highways, not closed, in a reasonably safe condition for public travel.

"Sec. 2435 Burns Statutes 1914 provides that 'If any person who has the official supervision of roads in any road district, fails to keep the ways and bridges * * * in as good repair as the available labor or other means of such district will enable him to do * * * he shall, on conviction, be fined not less than five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars.'

"Under proper conditions, road supervisors, by which term I mean any road authorities, charged with the duty of keeping highways in repair, may be mandated to keep roads in repair.

Plans For Increasing Indiana Wheat Acreage

Yield Also Must Be Greater If Needs of Uncle Sam Are Met Next Year.

The United States Department of Agriculture is calling on the farmers in the winter wheat areas to increase their wheat acreage to a total of 47,500,000 acres. A 10 to 17 per cent increase over last year is expected of Indiana farmers.

Following a conference at Chicago, between representatives of the Federal Government, G. I. Christie, director of the State committee on food and conservation, and assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture; T. A. Coleman, acting superintendent of agricultural extension, Purdue university; D. S. Myer, State leader of the wheat campaign, and similar authorities from the ten other leading wheat states of the Mississippi Valley, a meeting of the State Food Committee was called, for August 2nd, State House, Indianapolis. Members of the State Food Committee and the Wheat Committee will attend the meeting with the view of taking immediate action to meet the requirements of the government. At the Chicago meeting, representatives of the Department of Agriculture said the food situation makes it imperative that the acreage this year be increased by every state, as well as a continued effort to increase the yield, for which latter result the Indiana workers already were striving.

The 1917 acreage, being thrashed now, is 25 per cent above normal. The yield also is above normal this year.

Early plowing, better preparation of seed bed, selection of disease-free seed of well known varieties, and more general use of fertilizers are being urged now throughout Indiana as a means of increasing the yield. More than 800 fields of disease-free seed have been located, and farmers any place in the state have access to these fields. The fields have been located in practically every county.

Early Plowing Increases Wheat Yields.

Early plowing will produce from two to ten bushels more wheat per acre than late plowing, besides helping get rid of the joint worm which has cut Indiana's wheat production this year, according to D. S. Myer, state leader in the campaign for a larger acreage and greater yield of wheat in Indiana next year.

Breaking of the ground as soon as possible after the crop has been removed, puts the soil in shape to absorb every shower, makes a firm, moist seed bed and keeps the weeds down so that moisture and available plant food can accumulate in sufficient quantity to give the wheat a quick, vigorous start as soon as planted, says Mr. Myer. "Dragging or harrowing of the ground within a half day or day after it is plowed saves labor and time and helps put the soil in better condition. Discing after showers will keep down the weeds, help wipe out the joint worm and Hessian flies, two noted wheat enemies, kill volunteer wheat on which these pests feed, and help retain the moisture in the field.

"With these points firmly established by results from hundreds of Indiana farms, it may be seen that every farmer who plows early for wheat not only is filling his own pocketbook, but is fulfilling a patriotic duty. The State Food Committee asks that wheat ground be broken before the middle of August wherever possible."

Patriotism in Indiana

Allen County.—Robert Richey, a member of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, who is at Purdue University taking the special intensive agricultural course furnished by the reserve, in a letter to his parents at Fort Wayne throws some interesting light on the daily life of the boys at the camp. "This is some place, and I am getting along pretty well," he writes. "I am captain of a bunch of twelve boys and I have to keep them in order in the boarding house and on the street, and see that they follow the rules. I also have to wake them in the morning—some job. Then I keep them together after meals and form them in a column to march to the place where we meet our instructor and also see that they work properly. I am also a corporal in the military drilling company, and for the past three days I have been drilling a 'green' squad for one and one-half hours each day. There are some classic methods for working here, and everything is done scientifically and has to be done just so and as clean as the Dickens. So far I have learned all the kinds of grain, how to test them, when to plant them and reap them, the best to use for different feeds, etc. I have also learned about chickens, how to feed them, how to mix the feed, and all the different kinds of feed. Tomorrow we have farm mechanics, which is driving tractors. Our schedule is as follows: 5:30, get up and dress; 6 o'clock, breakfast; 7 o'clock we are in front of the agricultural hall and then we work until 11:45. We eat at 12 o'clock and meet on the campus for drill at 1. We drill until 2:30 and then we meet our instructor again and work till 4:45. Then we have gym from 5 till 6 and then we eat again. Our squad has the following order for program: Harvest, poultry crops, farm mechanics, garden, horticulture, horses, dairy, hogs, cattle and sheep. Today we had crops and studied part of the time in the laboratory and hooed weeds the rest of the time. Tell the council of defense that all the fellows from Fort Wayne are doing well and about half of them hold offices." The food administration has arranged for weekly meetings of the retail grocers of Allen County. These meetings will be held on Monday nights at 209 East Main street, Fort Wayne. The new rules and regulations will be explained, and where there is any misunderstanding regarding any regulations, the food administrator will make them clear. It is also requested that each grocer bring his sugar and flour reports to the meetings.

Bartholomew County.—M. O. Reeves, Rev. Geo. H. Murphy, Mayor Frank S. Jones and County Superintendent Samuel Sharp are members of the newly appointed instruction board, whose purpose is to instruct registrants before they enter the service. In addition to plain talks on our reasons for entering the war, the necessity for winning the struggle, and various information concerning camp life and the duties of a soldier, preliminary drills will be given in order to acquaint the registrants with the initial principles of military training. Self-reliance and lack of a feeling of "newness" when actually entering service is one of the best fruits of this training. Not alone individuals, but communities are profiting these days by lessons in conservation. In years past the collection of garbage in Columbus has been a source of much expense, but with the government daily preaching the need of conservation in garbage, etc., this item in the future is to be handled on a new basis, and instead of costing the city anything an income will be derived from the sale of garbage. A proposition to pay the city $20 a month, the purchaser to stand the expense of collection and removal, was introduced at a recent meeting of the city council.

Benton County.—The first company of Liberty Guards in Benton County was organized at Fowler on July 19. Following stirring patriotic addresses by Major Graves and Rev. Chas. Dhe, chairman of the county council of defense, seventy-five men stepped forward, signed the muster roll and took the oath of service. It is hoped to organize additional companies at Boswell, Oxford and Otterbein.

Clay County.—Unpatriotic citizens who persistently refuse to contribute to the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A. and other war activities, and who refuse to give of their services in any way toward the winning of the war, will hereafter be handled by a special investigating committee appointed by M. H. Johnson, chairman of the county council of defense, to look after just such cases. The members of the investigation board are M. H. Johnson, Judge Rawley, A. C. Miller, B. M. Robinson and Prof. E. M. Muncie. Miss Elizabeth Summers will act as secretary. A donation of $20 has been made to the Clay County Red Cross by Food Club No. 483 of Brazil. This amount represents the proceeds from an ice cream social.

Dearborn County.—District No. 1, Red Cross Girls' Society of Jackson Township, has turned in a check for $100 to the Lawrenceburg chapter. This district has been a generous contributor to the Red Cross, and the girls are doing much of the work.

Decatur County.—Damage by grasshoppers is being reported from various sections of this county, one farmer advising the pests are eating the binder twine in addition to damaging crops. County Agent Brown states that grasshoppers can be successfully destroyed by scattering poisoned bait over the fields. He suggests that wherever the pests are noticed, the fields should be checked up at once and action taken.

Delaware County.—Full co-operation with the "work or fight" order recently promulgated by Provost Marshal General Crowder is to be given by the Delaware County Council of Defense, assisted by the police department and local conscription boards. A citizens' committee, the names of the members to be kept secret, has been organized to make reports on men within the draft age and also those over draft age. The ordinance under which idlers are required to go to work has an age limit of 20 to 60 years. Every man in the county within the draft age, regardless of his classification, will be required to engage in some essential occupation or enter military service. The following occupations are listed as non-essential: (a) Persons engaged in the serving of food and drink, or either, in public places, including hotels and social clubs; (b) passenger elevator operators and attendants in clubs, hotels, stores, apartment houses, office buildings and bathhouses; (c) persons, including ushers and other attendants, engaged and occupied in and in connection with games, sports and amusements, excepting actual performers in legitimate concerts, operas or theatrical performances; (d) persons employed in domestic service; (e) sales clerks and other clerks employed in stores and other mercantile establishments.

Elkhart County.—Posters on display in various factories throughout the county bear the following pledge, typical of the spirit and sterling patriotism of the American workman today: "For ourselves, our corporation and our departments, we the undersigned officers, directors, superintendents, heads of departments and assistants, foremen and employees, pledge the prompt production and delivery of the largest possible quantity of material that is or shall be required by the United States government for the necessities of itself and its allies, and agree that all other lines of our business shall be subordinated to this pledge, and all this in accordance with the request of the War Industries Board."

Fayette County.—The recreation committee of the county council of defense, under the supervision of Mrs. W. J. Porter, sees to it that every Fayette County boy leaving for camp is provided with a good, substantial lunch, while the war mothers provide each of the departing boys with either a pair of knitted socks or comfort kit.

Henry County.—E. J. Llewellyn, superintendent of Newcastle schools, succeeds F. A. Bolser, who recently resigned as chairman of the county council of defense. G. F. Mowrer, also a new member, has been appointed vice-chairman. Prof. Llewellyn has been actively identified with various war activities, doing good work in connection with the speakers' bureau of the State council.

Knox County.—Through the efforts of T. H. Adams, chairman of the county council of defense, a readjustment of the allotment of coal cars for Knox County was brought about, and now practically every mine in Knox County is going full time, and in some sections previous output records are being shattered.

Lake County.—County Agent V. A. Place has been made chairman of a committee of mine, who will have charge of food production and conservation in Lake County. Mr. Place will organize the whole farming country into districts, naming men and women in each district to carry out the orders of the larger committee, which will be under the supervision of the council of defense. To start the work the defense council appropriated $200 for immediate organization work, and Mr. Place is now proceeding to place the farmers of the county on a war footing such as will insure a larger crop production.

Miami County.—The Miami County Vigilance Committee staged a big rally and get-together meeting at Peru on July 22, when its membership of 2,300 was increased by at least 200 additional men and women, who gladly obligated themselves to co-operate in the work of this organization. M. E. Foley, chairman of the State council of defense, was the leading speaker, and short talks were given by Frank D. Butler and Capt. George VanMatre of Fort Benjamin Harrison. Mr. Foley gave unusual praise to the organization, explaining in detail how it was possible for them to be an instrument of power for good in any community.

Parke County.—The Parke County Motor Corps is now an established organization, with Mrs. J. H. Burton, captain; Clara Rohm, first lieutenant; Margaret Stevenson, second lieutenant, and Ellen Sherrill, sergeant. The present membership consists of twenty-five, and one of the immediate aims of the organization is to convey speakers to the various meetings held throughout the county in connection with war work. The corps is arranging for regular drills also, and the personnel of the various squads is as follows: Evaline Brockway, corporal; Clotilde Cummings, Marcella Bradford, Lucile Roys, Margaret Maxwell, corporal; Flora Sherrill; Louise Fryberger, Mabel Adams, Louise Davis, corporal; Esther Roach, Mary Rohm, Sylvia Collins, Louise Bradford, corporal; Louise Rose, Louise Brockway, Eleanor Burks, Katharine Johns, corporal; Alice Brown, Dorothy Heller, Alice Fryberger.

Vigo County.—Indiana Liberty Guards will please take notice! Emmett J. Cody and Billie Doyle of the Terre Haute Liberty Guards hiked twenty-five miles in nine hours and twenty-five minutes, and are so elated over their stunt that they are challenging any Liberty Guard company in the State for a match.

Whitley County.—Worthy the attention of the citizens of every county in the State is the following list of pertinent inquiries and suggestions sent out by the county council of defense to the citizens of Whitley County: 1. Do you put out all unnecessary electric lights and gas lights? Most of the electricity and gas which we use at home is made by burning coal. Save by beginning the day with the sun. 2. Do you keep the temperature in your house down to 68 degrees and see that there is sufficient humidity in the air? This saves heat and improves health. 3. Do you avoid unnecessary travel? The government has already called upon citizens to take no unnecessary trips on railroads. The railroads are needed for war service, both passenger and freight. Think before you go. 4. Do you save gasoline, rubber and skilled labor by cutting out all unnecessary use of motor cars? Gasoline is one of the most important war supplies. Every gallon counts. Rubber is also in demand. Chauffeurs are needed on government work. 5. Do you save the time of your friends and labor of the telephone company by cutting out unnecessary telephone conversation? Later we may be asked to avoid all but business and emergency calls between hours. The government needs the telephone in its war work. Let us keep off the lines. 6. Do you buy only clothing that is necessary and which will wear well? Are you wearing out your old things? The simpler your choice the greater your saving in making and laundering. To dress extravagantly in war times is not only unpatriotic, it is bad form. 7. Are you cutting down on amusements? Recreation is necessary, but many amusements nowadays cost money, and we should lend our spare money to the government to be used in practical ways for winning the war. So far as you can, get your amusement out of doors and out of your brains, and not out of your pocket-books. Read more, use the public libraries and the museums. 8. Are you foregoing personal luxuries? This applies to any expenditure not essential to your health or efficiency, or to the health or efficiency of your friends. 9. Have you more sweaters and woolen clothes than you actually need? The war demand for woolen sweaters and socks has only just begun. If you have any you can spare, pass them on to those who need them, and so save drawing on the limited supply of wool. Do not knit articles not needed by you or by those to whom they are sent as gifts. 10. Have you closed off rooms not in constant use? This is an effective way of saving labor, coal and light. 11. Do you produce anything? If not, you can, by your economies, or by doing without personal service, be just as useful by releasing some one else who can produce. 12. Do you refrain from unnecessary repairs and improvements? Do only what is necessary to keep things from going to pieces. Don't worry about shabbiness in war time. 13. Do you carefully save tin foil, bottle tops and tubes, old rubber articles, newspapers, wrapping paper and twine? All these are of value if there is a practical way of disposing of them in your locality. 14. Do you shop when you don't need to? Every separate transaction involves the labor of several different people—salesmen, packers and bookkeepers—in addition to that of the manufacturer. Remember that having in supplies for the future may be good housekeeping in peace times—in war times it is unpatriotic, hoarding, and hinders the government. Don't question whether you can afford it, but whether the country can afford to let have it. 15. When you go shopping do you carry home as much as possible? This saves labor. Tell the salesman you want no extra wrappings. 16. Have you put away all your unnecessary silver and bric-a-brac or anything which requires labor in cleaning? This saves time which can be used for war knitting or Red Cross work. 17. If you are so placed that you have several servants, have you carefully considered whether you can in any way cut down the number or substitute women's work for men's indoors or out? The government is in great need of men for shipbuilding, transportation, farming, etc., and of women to take their places and in the finer grades of war work. 18. Are you buying War Savings Stamps? Can you start each child and member of your household filling a War Savings Certificate? You can buy these at every bank or postoffice. Remember that $4.12 or $4.23 invested in 1918 means $5.00 returned to you in 1925. England has been saving between fifteen and twenty million dollars a week in labor and material by such economies as are suggested here. We must begin these economies now. We must not prolong the war through stupid inability to profit by the experience of others. If you are unwilling to do your share in these or equally effective ways, you put yourself in the same class with the healthy young man who refuses to serve his country. Do you let the war and war economies make you gloomy? The world has no use nowadays for anyone who cannot serve at home with the same high courage, cheerfulness and gallantry that we expect of our men in the trenches.

"The Proof of the Pudding"

Every day letters are received by the State Council of Defense commending the service rendered by members of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, as farm hands. The following letter from Dr. C. L. Chamberlain, who has 240 acres under cultivation in Noble County, is typical:

"Ligonier, Indiana, July 14, 1918.

"I. D. Straus, Federal State Director, Indianapolis, Indiana:

"Dear Sir—I have had two boys, members of the Boys' Working Reserve, employed on my farm this summer—one Hoosier boy, George Badger, of Technical High School, Indianapolis, and one Illinois boy, Harry Howerstein, of Lane Technical High School, Chicago. So far they have given such good service that we have the farm work better in hand than last summer, when I had two young men, of the regular farmhand type, employed. We have also gotten along with less friction and more good will all around. I consider the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve a success and endorse the service it has rendered this summer to Indiana farmers.

"Very truly yours.

Red Cross Activities

Since Samuel S. Dale's article, "Why Not to Knit," appeared in the July 6th issue of The Literary Digest, woman's work chairmen throughout the Lake Division, and throughout the entire country, have been clamoring for a statement relative to the Red Cross' feeling in this matter.

Frank E. Abbott, division director of development, asks attention to these facts:

1. That the government is releasing wool to the American Red Cross for the continuation of its hand knitting of articles for soldiers and sailors.

2. That Red Cross headquarters everywhere have in their possession many letters, from soldiers and sailors, testifying to their appreciation of Red Cross knitted goods and to the superiority of these handknit articles over those made by machine.

3. That much of the success of Red Cross woman's work may be attributed to the sentiment attached to the handknitting of sweaters, Sox and wristlets for our men in service; the personal equation entirely disappearing in the machine-knit process.

4. That the filling of quotas of hand knitted goods by chapters is to continue as rapidly as the delivery of yarn permits.

Home Gardening Reports

Bulletin No. 84, addressed to the County Chairmen of the Food Production Committees of the Women's Section, Indiana State Council of Defense, follows:

The reports from the County Chairmen, Food Production Among Women, are coming in slowly. Almost without exception they are good ones and show not only a big increase in the number of gardens over last year, but more gardens planted and cultivated by the women themselves. One or two have reported a labor shortage, but in the main the situation is far from discouraging.

Elkhart County reports a fine spirit of co-operation. The women and girls have gone into the stores and places of business and released men to help on the farms.

The reports are sent on to Washington as soon as received, and it will be greatly appreciated if you will let us have them as soon and as often as possible.

In answer to inquiries regarding the record cards—the Council of Defense has no funds to furnish these cards. Through the Council of Defense you may have them printed at the very reasonable charge of $2.75 for 1,000. However, it is supposed the county appropriations will cover that as well as other county work.

Will the county chairmen send the names of all township chairmen to the Agricultural Experimental Station, Purdue University, Lafayette, and to the Agricultural Department, Washington, D. C., as soon as possible, if not already sent? Send with the request that all bulletins and information available be mailed out to these women, to assist them in their work.

"Marketing Butter and Cheese by Parcel Post," Bulletin No. 930, should be widely distributed and read.

Mrs. Florence W. Comatsey, Morgantown, Morgan County, Indiana, will send to anyone forwarding a stamped, addressed envelope a formula for home-made cheese.

Any helps from the Conservation Department may be had by sending in a request to Prof. Mary Mathews, Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind. A mailing list to Dr. H. E. Barnard, Food Administrator, Indianapolis, will get you a fund of information.

A few more garden posters can be had, if needed for special occasions, by addressing your request to the Woman's Section, Council of Defense, Indianapolis.

One important thing must not be overlooked—the saving of seed for next year's gardens. If you have specially good vegetables it would be wise to keep enough seed from the varieties to insure a planting next year. If you save more than enough, establish an exchange with the women of another community.

Begin to agitate the cold frame method of starting plants next spring. Purdue sends out a bulletin on this and shows the possibility of having a cold frame for every garden. The cost of early plants from the greenhouses would pay for our own cold frame to start lettuce, cabbage, tomatoes, onions, cucumbers, melons, as well as the garden flowers we love to have around us.

Ask for the bulletin (Purdue) on storing vegetables by the ground pit method. We all know that cabbage buried in the ground is far more delicious than stored in any other way, and yet many people in towns do not quite understand how it is done.

At your convenience will you report the most important garden crop in your county? Perhaps it is onions, tomatoes, celery or beans; whatever it is, let us have it with the names and addresses of the growers.

We wish information regarding the actual experiences, successes and difficulties pertaining to all vegetables by the men and women over the State, with a view of helping to solve our own problems.

Hoping you will have a splendid showing in the report for the State, I remain

Yours sincerely,

HORTENSE TAPP MOORE,

Chairman Food Production, Woman's Section, State Council of Defense.

In the presence of a common enemy we sit at a common table with all people defenders.

Ten Commandments of the French Consumer During the War.

The economic and social section of the League of Patriots, with headquarters in Paris, 4 Rue Ste. Anne, has distributed a leaflet urging the French to endure without complaint the restrictions imposed upon them in the interest of their country. The following is a copy:

"(1) Do not forget that we are at war. In your smallest expenditures never lose sight of the interests of the native land.

"(2) Economize on the products necessary for the life of the country: Coal, bread, meat, milk, sugar, wine, butter, beans, cloths, leather, oil. Accept rations. Ration yourself as to food, clothing, amusements.

"(3) Save the products of French soil, lest some day you deprive your father, your son, your husband, who are shedding their blood to defend you.

"(4) Save the products that France must buy from foreign countries. Do not drain reserves of gold which are indispensable to victory.

"(5) Waste nothing. All waste is a crime which imperils the national defense—prolongs the war.

"(6) Buy only according to your needs. Do not hoard provisions; your selfishness raises prices and deprives those of smaller means of things indispensable to existence.

"(7) Do not travel unnecessarily. Reflect that our trains are, before all, destined for the transportation of the troops, the feeding of the population, the needs of our national production.

"(8) Do not remain idle. According to your age and your ability, work for your country. Do not consume without producing. Idleness is desertion.

"(9) Accept without murmuring the privations which are imposed upon you. Reflect upon the sufferings of those who are fighting for you, upon the martyrdom of the population whose hearths have been devastated by the enemy.

"(10) Remember that victory belongs to those who can hold out a quarter of an hour the longest.

"That France may live, she must be victorious."

The Silo and the Sheep Breeder

A Purdue University bulletin says:

"If you are already in the sheep business without using a silo, you are not making the maximum profits possible. If you are planning to try a bunch of sheep, get a silo as a part of the equipment. The silo will enable you to stay in the business much more profitably.

"The farmer who is maintaining a flock of breeding ewes upon his farm is interested in the cost of carrying his ewes through the winter. The silo offers an opportunity to such a man in cutting the cost without injuring the lambing percentage and the vigor of the lambs or milk flow of the ewes.

"The Purdue Experiment Station during the three winters from 1906 to 1909 fed breeding ewes on rations containing corn silage and check rations with no corn silage. The ewes were fed during the winter of 1906-07, mixed hay, corn stover and corn silage as roughages and oats as grain. During the other two winters clover hay was used as the hay and the grain mixture was shelled corn, oats and bran. The following table gives interesting data upon the value of corn silage for a breeding flock:

	Average per Ewe.	Without Silage.	With Silage.
Feed eaten daily—
Grain .....	.9 lbs.	.86 lbs.
Hay .....	4.19 lbs.	2.84 lbs.
Silage .....			3.33 lbs.
Total gain.....	13.75 lbs.	6.0 lbs.
Per cent of lambs.....	105%	114%
Birth weight of lambs....	8.9 lbs.	9.09 lbs.

"The measure of good rations for breeding stock must be made from a consideration of loss or gain in weight, effect upon the percentage of offspring, the vigor of the offspring, the milking qualities of ewes and the economy of the ration fed. The addition of silage is a benefit. The succulence furnished by corn silage is especially valuable in a flock of breeding ewes. Silage is probably the best substitute for roots. Corn silage can be had anywhere in Indiana for the trouble of erecting a silo and filling it.

"The farmer who now has sheep or is planning to get into the sheep business, either feeding sheep in the fall and winter months or maintaining a breeding flock for its four-fold profit—wool, lambs, weed eradication and manure—will find the silo a very necessary part of his sheep equipment. Couple a silo with the Golden Hoof and the farm will grow richer and the pocketbook fatter."

If You Have Walnut Trees.

The War Department authorizes the following statement from the Bureau of Aircraft Production:

More American walnut is needed for airplane propellers and gunstocks. During the four years' test in the present war this wood has proven to be the best material for the manufacture of the above articles.

The government needs all the walnut that can be secured during the continuance of the war, but it does not buy the wood direct, as not all of it can be used for the above purposes. Mills holding government contracts for gunstocks or propellers are anxious to purchase walnut trees and logs, and the government urges the owners of trees or logs to sell them to the sawmills. Owing to their inability to purchase sufficient walnut logs, the sawmill proprietors have not been able to supply the present requirements of this government and the allies.

"Fight with your walnut trees," is the new slogan of the hardwood section, Bureau of Aircraft Production, and the small arms section, Ordnance Department. Half a dozen trees will provide lumber for a propeller and supply gunstocks for a platoon of infantry. The lack of one plane in the air or a platoon in the front line might lose a battle. Every tree counts.

If you have walnut trees 12 inches or more in diameter, write to Capt. R. L. Oakley, production division, small arms section, Ordnance Department, Sixth and B streets, Washington, D. C. He will advise you where you can sell your walnut at a fair price.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and state governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Vol. I INDIANAPOLIS, IND. No. 51

Indiana's Roll of Honor

The Bulletin will endeavor hereafter to publish each week a list of the names of those Indiana boys who have made the supreme sacrifice for their country and civilization. The following list is from the War Department reports for the week ending July 27:

July 22:

Private Ralph D. Boone, Greencastle.
Private Daniel Hibbard, Laporte.
Private Myrel Mullis, Owensburg.
Private Charles Brough, Ellettsville.
Private John Vaughan, Mongo.

July 23:

Private Leslie D. Chapin, Ridgeville.

July 24:

Private Carl J. Teuones, East Chicago.
Private William Budzynski, South Bend.
Private Charles S. Moon, South Bend.

July 25:

Bugler Orra L. Snyder, Mishawaka.

Attention,
County Councils

General Bulletin No. 170.

July 27, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

Calling your attention to General Bulletin No. 164, of June 25, requesting you to nominate county representatives of the Federal Labor Director for Indiana, we beg to advise that the United States Employment Service of Indiana has recently been reorganized and such reorganization has resulted in the appointment of a new director and associate director of labor. The policy of the new organization will be to create a Community Labor Board in every county, the members of which will be appointed by the central office at Indianapolis.

The representatives you were requested to nominate in Bulletin No. 164, will, therefore, not be required.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

* * * *

Bulletin No. 171.

July 30, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

The Military Morale Section of the Office of the Chief of Staff of the Army has suggested, through the Council of National Defense, that the State Councils call on the County and Township Councils to make provisions in their communities for the generous recognition of all acts of heroism on the part of our men in service.

This matter has already been given attention by some of the local councils, but, in order to do the work most effectively, we recommend:

1. That each County Council maintain an Honor Roll, recording the names of all men in service with their achievements and dates of entry and discharge. In compiling such a list, no mention should be made of the organization to which the men belong.

2. That each Township Council of Defense appoint a committee or an individual to read all official and unofficial military news and to watch for any mention of men from the community.

3. That this committee or individual send on behalf of the community a letter to each man cited for special bravery, expressing the pride his fellow citizens feel in him, and their appreciation of the honor he has brought to his community.

This letter of recognition should not be over a page in length and should be in such form as to merit permanent preservation. It should be signed in the name of the local Council of Defense and should recite the specific deed of heroism commended. A copy of the letter should be given to the local newspapers, and clippings of the papers should be mailed to the man in service.

4. That the committee also address an appropriate communication to the next of kin of all men of the community whose names appear upon the list of casualties, and arrange for some individual of standing in the community to deliver the letter in person.

Letters from men in service, shorn of all reference to their organization, accounts of special deeds of valor or heroism and the names of men added to the Honor Roll should be read at patriotic community gatherings.

Helps in Using Substitute Foods

This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.

PICKLES AND PICKLING.

Pickles are used in the diet to stimulate the appetite and to lend variety to the menu. Many vegetables and fruits may be preserved in this way and if used in small amounts in the diet are not objectionable.

General rules for pickling are:

1. Choose sound, not over-ripe products.
2. Use good vinegar and the best spices that can be obtained.
3. Do not use metal vessels or utensils in either the making or the storing.
4. Use earthen-ware or glass jars for storage.
5. Do not cover jars or other containers with tin lids unless the inside is coated with paraffin.
6. Small quantities of alum are sometimes used for the purpose of keeping cucumber pickles firm and crisp. Pickles with which alum has been used cannot be sold without so labelling.
7. When using brine it should be strong enough "to bear up an egg," about one cup salt to four cups water.
8. If cucumbers shrink or shrivel in brine it is probably due to too rapid bacterial action while in the brine. If the pickles get in this condition the brine should be poured off, all shriveled or softened pickles removed and the brine boiled before pouring it back on the pickles. The boiling will stop bacterial action. A cold temperature also reduces bacterial action, therefore pickles should be kept in a cool place.
9. Store all pickles canned in glass in a dark place and those in glass or in earthenware in a dry cool place.
10. Saccharine is sometimes used in place of sugar in pickles. This, however, is not to be recommended.

A few good recipes:

Cucumbers in Brine.

Make a brine in the proportion of one cup salt to four cups of water. Boil for five minutes. Place in clean stone jars and let cool for 24 hours. Wash the small or medium sized cucumbers, wipe dry and drop into the brine. Weigh down so that they stay under brine. Add pickles as desired until jar is full. Cover and set away. These pickles may be removed at any time during the winter, soaked in fresh water for 24 hours and pickled in vinegar in numerous ways.

Cucumber Pickles.

Put small cucumbers to soak in brine (directions above) for twenty-four hours. Rinse in cold water and drain thoroughly. Place two kettles of vinegar on stove. In one put the pickles to heat. In the other put the vinegar, allowing two cups of vinegar to each quart of pickles, to which the spices and sugar are added, (quantity determined by taste) and allow this to boil five minutes. Remove the cucumbers from the vinegar, pack in glass jars and pour over them the spiced vinegar. Seal. The vinegar in which the cucumbers are heated may be used for two or three lots.

Mustard Pickles.

- 1 gallon good cider vinegar.
- 1 pound ground mustard.
- 1 pint salt.
- 1 cup sliced horseradish.
- 1 cup sugar.

Stir together cold and as small cucumbers are gathered drop into prepared pickle. This will make 4 gallon jar full. They keep indefinitely without canning.

Dill Pickles.

Use cucumbers from six to eight inches long. Wash and wipe carefully and arrange in layers in a large earthenware jar, placing between each layer a small red pepper cut in pieces, dill seeds and a layer of grape leaves. Continue until jar is full. Add 2 pounds of salt to 3 gallons water, boil and skim, replacing the water that evaporates, so as to retain the same quantity. Pour over the cucumbers in the jar. Spread over the top of the cucumbers more dill seed and a layer of cabbage leaves. Cover with a plate and heavy stone and leave for three weeks.

Olive Oil Pickles.

- 1 quart large gherkins.
- 1 quart onions.
- 1 ounce celery seed.
- 1 ounce mustard seed.
- 1 ounce white pepper.
- Cider vinegar.
- Olive oil.

Wash and slice the cucumbers and onions and allow to stand in brine for twelve hours. Drain well and pack down in clean, air-tight jars. For each two cupfuls of cider vinegar add one-half cupful of olive oil. Mix the vinegar and spices together and boil for five minutes. Allow to cool and add olive oil, mixing well. Pour over the cucumbers, being careful to have spices evenly mixed. If there is not sufficient vinegar to cover the pickles, add sufficient cold vinegar.

Watermelon Rind Pickles.

Pare and cut the rind into desired size. Cook in boiling water in a granite or enamel sauce pan, using one-half level tablespoon salt to each quart water, until translucent. Drain off the water. Boil one hour in sweet pickle prepared as follows: To each quart of vinegar add 3 pints brown sugar and 1 cup mixed spices. When pickles are ready for storage place in earthenware jar. Place plate or saucer over them to keep under vinegar and tie a cheesecloth over jar.

Stuffed Mangoes.

Soak sweet green peppers for 24 hours in brine. Remove, cut off top and remove all seeds. Save top to use again. Chop enough firm crisp cabbage to fill the cavities and use with it one-fourth part of chopped celery, green cucumbers or green tomatoes. Sprinkle with salt and let stand for four hours then drain, pressing out all the water possible. Add to the cabbage chopped onion, mustard seeds and celery to taste. Fill peppers, packing firmly. Replace top of pepper, tie on with string and pack carefully in jars. Heat enough vinegar to cover peppers and while still warm pour over them. Let stand over night and the next day pour off the vinegar, reheat and return to jar. Cover with plate and set in cool, dry place. Sugar may be added to the vinegar if desired.

Whitley County reports a high proportion of normal children. Out of 1,357 babies examined, 1,262 were considered normal.

The Power of County Councils of Defense

[Idaho Official Press Bulletin.]

The power to do great good, to stimulate interest in war work, to strengthen the morale of the second line of defense, that the boys who have gone to the front may know the last man, woman and child are behind them as one, to stamp out disloyalty, to right those who have failed to comprehend their duties as true, loyal American citizens, and to punish those who persist in insidious attacks upon their country by allowing their sympathy to be drawn by the enemy rather than the land of their adoption, is unlimited.

Ever since the Council of National Defense was organized and in turn proceeded with the organization of State units in State Councils of Defense, which created and shaped into effective fighting machinery county and community Councils of Defense, there has been an inclination on the part of some people to deride the efforts of these war bodies—for they are such—and to depreciate their work, claiming they are without power, without the backing of law and without police assistance to put into force and effect their mandates.

It has been very properly, and we believe very wisely, pointed out in numerous addresses by E. A. Bryan, chairman of the State Council of Defense, that the very fact the councils are without statutory power given them by law makes them all the more powerful. This is a significant statement. It is worthy of the closest analysis. It is a basic truth which cannot be denied.

County Councils have behind them the greatest of all power—THE MORAL BACKING OF THE PEOPLE WHO GO TO MAKE UP THE GOVERNMENT. They are a creation of the times when emergency action is necessary to deal with difficult and trying problems. Backed by this, no County Council of Defense in Idaho need fear to strike at sedition and treason, at disloyalty or traitors. Backed by this, no County Council need hesitate to proceed with the carrying out of the mandates of the government; nor need it be backward in calling to the strictest account those who are pulling back in the harness and not doing their full duty, either military or financial. They have behind them the arm of the military rather than the civic authority—a weapon for right that should administer stern justice, tempered always with mercy.

U. S. Public Service Reserve

Five district organizers and zone directors for the United States Public Service Reserve, in Indiana, are as follows:

District No. 1—Northwestern Indiana, Clarence A. Fry, Gary.

District No. 2—Northeastern and part of central Indiana, Harry W. Muller, Fort Wayne.

District No. 3—Eastern and southeastern Indiana, Richard E. Hoover, Richmond.

District No. 4—Central Indiana, Hubert Bock, Bloomington.

District No. 5—Southwestern Indiana, K. G. Buskirk, Bloomington.

Mr. Muller has been commissioned in the United States army, and it will be necessary to name his successor.

These appointments are the initial step in the inauguration of the new labor program, by which after August 1st the federal government will control the recruiting and distribution of common labor, in war industries.

The organizers will complete the county organizations under the Public Service Reserve, and arrange for their co-operation with the Community War Labor Boards, to be established in each of the 106 districts in the State.

The following shows the number and boundaries of the Community Labor Boards in Indiana. Look for your district:

The cities of East Chicago, Gary, Whiting, Indiana Harbor, Hammond, Crown Point, Michigan

City (including the four northern townships of Laporte County), Laporte (including all but four northern townships), South Bend and Mishawaka, and the counties of Porter, Kosciusko, Marshall, Fulton, Starke, Pulaski, Jasper, Newton, Benton, and White.

The counties of Lagrange, Steuben, Allen, Whitley, Noble, Wells, Huntington, Wabash, Miami, Howard, Carroll, Adams, Tippecanoe, Blackford, Cass and Jay; and the cities of Auburn, Garrett, Elkhart (including the six northern townships of Elkhart County), Goshen (including the six southern townships of Elkhart County), Marion (including the northern half of Grant County), and Gas City (including the southern half of Grant County).

Union City (with jurisdiction over Ridgeville), Winchester, Richmond, Cambridge City, Anderson, Alexandria, and Elwood; and the counties of Fayette, Union, Franklin, Delaware, Rush, Shelby, Bartholomew, Decatur, Jennings, Ripley, Dearborn, Ohio, Switzerland, Jefferson, Scott, Clark and Henry.

The counties of Hancock, Hamilton, Tipton, Hendricks, Clinton, Boone, Montgomery, Fountain, Warren, Vermillion, Parke, Vigo, Clay, Owen, Putnam, Morgan, Brown, Johnson, and Marion.

Vincennes, Bicknell; and the counties of Monroe, Lawrence, Jackson, Washington, Orange, Floyd, Harrison, Crawford, Perry, Spencer, Warrick, Vanderburgh, Posey, Gibson, Pike, Dubois, Martin, Daviess, Sullivan, East Greene County and West Greene County.

They will list available labor with the offices of the United States Employment Service. War contractors employing 100 or more men will be restricted to this source of supply of common labor. Losses through proselyting and constant shifting of workers because of varying wages and conditions of employment will be regulated and stabilized in this manner, it is hoped.

The Sugar Slacker.

County councils of defense will be asked to investigate the loyalty of those who protest against the new sugar regulations, particularly as applied to public eating houses.

The new regulation, effective August 1, provides sugar on a ration of two pounds per person per month, and public eating houses must make one pound serve for forty-five meals. Only through the most sincere and patriotic co-operation will it be possible to make the supply available in Indiana sufficient to prevent an absolute famine.

Retailers have been placed upon their honor and are assisting in an equitable distribution of sugar.

Those unwilling to assist in the effort being made to supply our soldiers and sailors and allies with enough sugar for bare necessities will be reported to the county food administrators and in turn to the county councils for an explanation.

Patriotic Press Comment

STAND BY THE FOOD LAWS.

The food administration during the past year and a half has displayed unusual executive ability and rare judgment. It was a big job to furnish supplies for our soldiers, our allies and the people at home, but Mr. Hoover has done it in a most acceptable manner.

There are dodgers in this, as there are in other war measures. There are those whose selfishness does not permit them to see the patriotic side, those who try to find defense in their opposition by telling how people in the country and small town districts are making their food sacrifice while those in the larger cities pay no attention to the food regulations and are living as high as they ever did. This is a poor excuse for one who wants to do his duty. The citizen who does his individual part in food conservation is performing his patriotic duty as fully as though he were on the battle line, and the one who does not do this is as much a slacker as though he were running away from conscription service. Conscience is a nemesis that does its duty, and conscience is ever present.—Attica Tribune.

"Liberty Choruses" Planned To Maintain Civilian Morale

The Council of National Defense authorizes the following:

The organization of "Liberty choruses" all over the country for the purpose of building up and maintaining civilian morale through community singing is forecasted by a bulletin which has just been sent to every State Council of Defense by the State Councils Section of the Council of National Defense.

The program calls for the appointment of a state musical director in every State, to be chosen by the State Council of Defense and state division of the Woman's Committee. Through the county and community councils of defense the state musical director will bring about the creation of local Liberty choruses throughout the State. Existing choirs, choruses, glee clubs, and musical associations will be utilized wherever possible.

The Liberty choruses will sing at all patriotic mass meetings and public gatherings of every sort, and no effort will be spared to use them as a means of making the people of every community learn the songs of our Nation and its allies, and learn to get together and sing them.

A singing army can not be defeated. A singing nation can not be defeated. The object of the Council of National Defense is to make the United States, throughout this war and afterwards, what it has never been before—a singing nation. The feeling of the council is that the widest extension of organized singing will not only be of great service in assisting the organized speaking campaigns of the State Councils of Defense—a result which it has already had in States which have experimented with it—but will unite the people of every community for the expression of their will to win, and for a more complete unity in the prosecution of war work.

Committee on Construction

The following report of the Committee on Proposed Construction was adopted by the Indiana State Council of Defense at its meeting July 31st:

Your Committee on Proposed Construction begs to report as follows:

1. In the matter of the Riley Caley road in Union Township, Wells County, the committee recommends that the decision of the Wells County Council of Defense, that such road may be built, be not disapproved.

2. In the case of the proposed erection of a building at Union Christian College, at Merom, Indiana, the committee recommends that the decision of the Sullivan County Council of Defense, that such building may be erected, be not disapproved.

3. In the matter of the Huron, McCurdy, Howell & Christie roads in Hendricks County, the committee recommends that the decision of the Hendricks County Council of Defense, that such highways may be constructed, be not disapproved.

4. In the matter of the improvement of North Main street in Mt. Vernon the committee recommends that the decision of the Posey County Council of Defense, that such improvement may proceed, be not disapproved.

5. In the case of the proposed construction of a Y. W. C. A. building at Elkhart, the committee recommends that the decision of the Elkhart County Council of Defense, that such construction may proceed, be not disapproved.

6. In the case of the proposed erection of a new consolidated high school building in Salt Creek Township, Jackson County, the committee recommends that the Jackson County Council of Defense be requested to investigate and consider the proposed building in the light of the policy laid down by the Council of National Defense and that the township trustee be requested to delay further proceedings until the County Council of Defense has investigated and acted in the matter.

Respectfully submitted,
ARTHUR W. BRADY,
CHARLES FOX,
JAMES L. KEACH,
Committee.

Food Administration

Bulletin No. 149.

July 27, 1918.

SUGAR DISTRIBUTION IS FURTHER RESTRICTED.

The allotment of sugar for Indiana for August is 8,883,000 pounds, and from this amount we must deduct any certificates issued in excess of our July allotment. This means a cut of 33 1/3% in our sugar distribution and consumption. Our sugar certificates for August will be based on a two pound per capita per month consumption. Sugar for hotels and restaurants is cut to two pounds per ninety meals. A, B and C certificates will be filled with the sugar remaining after D and E certificates are allotted.

Mr. Larger's excellent grasp of the sugar situation leaves us in satisfactory shape to go through next month. You will recall that we have already cut our sugar supply to hotels and restaurants; that we have already restricted allotments to the less essential industries and that our regulation of the distribution of sugar for canning purposes has been so strict that hoarding has been impossible and in most cases canning requirements are greatly below that of other years. It is advisable, however, to impress upon our people the necessity for revising their plans for preserving fruit. The Food Administration suggests that the fruit crop should be preserved without sugar and sweetened later when the fall sugar crop is available.

Please advise your retail grocers and all users of sugars in the industries that we hold them to a strict accounting for every pound of sugar distributed or used by them. Any violation of the sugar rules will be met by a cancellation of all sugar certificates and a seizure of all sugar stock on hand. The sugar and flour report blanks show a weekly sugar allotment of 12 ounces. After August 1 this will be 8 ounces per capita per week. Let this be clearly understood.

I have wired Washington that Indiana will loyally and faithfully observe every sugar ruling essential to the equitable distribution of sugar at home and the supplying of the demands of our soldiers and allies abroad.

Sincerely yours,

H. E. BARNARD.

Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

Bulletin No. 148, dated July 25, signed by Dr. Barnard, announced that owing to the seriousness of the situation all distribution of certificates to manufacturers and others under Class A will be eliminated.

Indiana's allotment of sugar totals 8,883,000 pounds for the month of August. This is a reduction of practically one-third. Certificates issued by the Federal Food Administration in July reached a total of 14,021,855 pounds, upon which the distribution totaled 13,012,750 pounds.

Certificates to retailers for August will be based on two pounds per capita per month. Hotels, restaurants and public eating houses must make similar retrenchment by making two pounds of sugar sufficient for ninety meals. Heretofore the per capita allowance has been three pounds per month, and the same quantity has been permitted for each ninety meals served in public eating houses.

Certificates for canning purposes will be issued subject to the same restriction that has obtained heretofore—that each purchaser be required to present a certificate upon which appears the O. K. of the local food administrator or his authorized deputy.

For the present, the issuing of certificates to manufacturers in Class A, which includes soda fountains, soft drink manufacturers, candy manufacturers, bottlers, and various other less essentials, will be eliminated.

Reports on the nation's egg supplies, lately received by the United States Food Administration, show that the number of eggs in storage in the United States on July 1 was practically the same as on July 1, 1917. With this condition, it is interesting to note that consumption had increased about 17 per cent, indicating that production must also have increased in about the same degree. Imports and exports are a negligible factor compared with the enormous size of the egg trade within the United States. Prices received by producers for eggs have been gratifying, according to reports from the country egg markets, and poultry markets are still short of birds, due, it is believed, to the high level of egg prices.

Exports of beef products from the United States aggregated 96,982,000 pounds during May, 1918, which is the highest figure ever reached in one month in the history of the country. More than 96 per cent of the total went to the four European allies. Their diminished livestock production largely accounts for the increased demand and explains the need for beef conservation in the United States.

S. Moskowitz of Evansville, a poultry shipper, was permitted to make a contribution of $500 to war charities in lieu of suspending business for a week. He admitted a charge of improperly feeding poultry enroute from Evansville to New York, the chicken feed having included sand and gravel.

Owing to the large amount of soft corn last fall there was a general heavy feeding, with a consequent large increase in the weight of hogs when they arrived at market. Export orders were filled with fatter and heavier hogs than the European populations had been accustomed to, and foreign buying agencies now request a return to the customary weights.

The increasing difficulties in securing sugar are said to have impelled many manufacturers, bottlers, soda fountain operators, and others normally using sugar, to resort to the use of saccharin. The use of saccharin is deleterious to health and in violation of the laws of Indiana.

The Gary Baking Company of Gary, Ind., on its confession of using an insufficient amount of substitutes with wheat flour, was permitted to pay to local war charities a contribution of $500.

Charles G. Vahl, a baker of Brownstown, Ind., who had been warned repeatedly, admitted that he had failed to use the required amount of substitutes, and, as a result, C. H. Weithoff, federal food administrator for Jackson County, closed Vahl's business for ninety days.

J. J. Wilkerson, a baker of Clinton, Indiana, proved that his May report erred in the matter of substitutes reported used, and was released on warning. J. G. Tibma of Laporte admitted he had failed to use substitutes as required, and as a penalty will not be permitted to bake during August. Forrest J. Croop of Warsaw confessed violating the substitute order and was given the alternative of paying J. R. Frazer, county food administrator, $200 as a voluntary war contribution or closing up shop. M. E. Lawrence of Warsaw admitted a similar delinquency and was given the same alternative with the warning that further offense means permanent suspension of his license. The Unger Baking Company of Indianapolis, on a further hearing of charges filed in May, convinced the baking division that they are conforming to the regulations and were warned to continue to do so. Henry Lee of Crawfordsville failed to file complete reports and was given another opportunity to conform to the requirements.

Fertilizer Prices in Indiana Are Uniform

"In my opinion, the letting of a contract does not oust local authorities of power to keep a road in repair during the time the improvement is suspended, the repair work being done in such manner as not to affect, needlessly, the rights of contractors. I suggest, however, that the contractor's consent be obtained, where possible, before any considerable repairs are made."

Mr. Fox asked the co-operation of the council in effecting a more satisfactory representation of labor on county councils of defense. He called attention to the fact that in Lake County, an important industrial center, an attorney sits on the council as the representative of labor. This, he said, is not conducive to the best interests of the situation. He also called attention to the fact that the labor member of the Vigo County Council of Defense is not in position to devote the necessary time to the work to co-operate effectively. He said the Allen County situation is likewise unsatisfactory. He agreed to report specifically in all instances wherein the labor representative is not acceptable to the working people, upon receipt of which report the council will take steps to secure relief.

Mr. Fox reported a strike of 100 workmen at the plant of the Standard Wheel Works at Terre Haute. He said proposals had been made for conciliation but had been rejected, and that the company had refused to join in an appeal for federal mediation. He asserted the company's output is 90 per cent war contracts. Mr. Fox, with Frank Wampler, chairman of the Committee on Employers' Co-operation, were appointed to investigate the controversy and report back at the next meeting of the council.

Judge S. Harrison White of the Colorado state supreme court was a visitor at the meeting and when called upon he complimented the council on its effective work. He said in his year of experience as a patriotic speaker he had come to the conclusion that the American people have awakened to a greater appreciation of each other, and to a recognition of what co-operation will do. He said there should be further effort made to emphasize the importance of production, supply and conservation of food and munitions, which, he said, are just as essential to victory as armed forces in the field. Judge White said: "We must recognize that the war is not over, that there is no basis for a conclusion that the war is near an end. We must be prepared for sacrifices that may test our patience and our strength. We must convince the American people that we must go through this war to a complete military victory."

Mexican Labor Available.

Notice has been received by N. E. Squibb, federal director of the United States Public Service Reserve, that arrangements have been completed by the Department of Labor whereby in emergencies employers may import Mexican laborers for agricultural pursuits, railroad section maintenance and lignite mining. Information relative to the arrangement may be secured by interested employers by addressing Mr. Squibb at Room 83, State House, Indianapolis.

Knuckle Down Or Go Under!

What do you do when you read the war news in the newspapers? If it tells of a German advance do you groan and spend the rest of the day criticising your government, Pershing, Foch and those under them?

If YOU were at the head of things? .....

If YOU were a soldier? .....

If YOU were Pershing or Foch? .....

It costs the country dear, whenever we waste time in this useless "Ifing." We all have something very definite to do to help win this war. When discouragement and set-backs come in the way of news of another German advance at the front, the thing for us to do is to dig into our particular war task with fresh vigor and a new determination to put the best that is in us into our work.

Woman's Section

At a recent meeting in Laporte County, the county demonstrator suggested that there be a central place appointed for farmers' use, where canning may be conducted and the products sold the same as is done in the city.

Laporte announces a display held in that city for the United States Food Administration, given in the Balcony Building, which was donated by its owner to be used until rented. Demonstrations were provided for every day, two days, demonstrating sugarless cakes and wheatless breads. A tea room and bureau of information were features of the display.

In Wayne County, which stands high in gardening activities, an effort is being made to have vegetables grown later for fall use and for storage, in order that they may be in the best possible condition at the end of the growing season.

Huntington County's Home and Allied Relief Section sends in a wonderful report, including the work of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society, which supplies milk to undernourished children, and a June shipment from the surgical dressings department of 51,508 pieces. The Fourteen-Minute Women in this county made fifty speeches in June.

A report of the Committee on Maintenance of Existing Social Service Agencies, Woman's Section, State Council of Defense, July 10, 1918, follows:

The number of county chairmen of this committee to date is 74. The number of reports received from chairmen in reply to the questionnaire forwarded some time ago, to be sent to the various social service agencies in their counties, to find out how these organizations and institutions have been affected by the war, 86.

Of these reports, the majority are to the effect that the social service activities have shown no appreciable decline on account of the war. However, several chairmen have reported that the work of certain organizations in their counties has been greatly affected, financially and otherwise, as a result of the war. The needs most often mentioned in these reports have been for funds, and also for the necessary clerical assistance in carrying on the work of the organizations, although many specific needs have been listed in answer to the questionnaire. One urgent call has come for a district nurse, another for playground literature and information as to how to establish a playground, the expense of such an institution, etc. The literature was supplied at once, also the information needed in regard to opening a playground in any community in this state. The chairman inquiring about the district nurse was referred to the chairman of the Registration Committee as requested by the Council of National Defense, in the hope that the much needed service could be supplied through her records.

One of the most important phases of this committee work is to present the purpose of the committee, as to conserving in every way these agencies for safeguarding the public welfare, to as many gatherings of people as possible, in order that we may be reminded again and again of these home duties which we are so apt to forget when our thoughts and our hearts are ever with the boys at the front who are fighting and dying that we may enjoy freedom, liberty and life. To this end, in addition to the talks given at the war conferences earlier in the year, the subject of the committee was presented, during the months of April and May, at seven conventions of the District Federation of Clubs and one County Federation convention, by the chairman of this committee in the county in which the convention was held.

The state chairman of the Committee on the Maintenance of Existing Social Service Agencies gave a seven-minute talk on the purposes, plans and accomplishments of this committee at Washington, Ind., on June 27 at the meeting of the Municipal League of Indiana. This plea for the co-operation of the mayors and other city officials of the state in this phase of war work was made at an evening session, which was well attended, and we trust that some good resulted from the effort.

The chairman is arranging for a meeting of this state committee at the State Conference of Charities and Correction, to be held at Evansville October 5 to 8. This meeting will probably be in the form of a luncheon, to be followed by a few short talks by experts and a conference or round table, allowing opportunity for suggestions and questions by the committee members and others in attendance at the meeting. When Hon. Amos W. Butler, secretary of the Board of State Charities, learned of this plan, he expressed the desire of recognizing the Committee on the Maintenance of Existing Social Service Agencies in the announcement and program of the state conference, which we were delighted to have him do. In view of this decision, Mr. Butler, in conference with the committee chairman, selected a few members of the committee to be listed, with the regular state conference committees, in the conference announcement, with names having been chosen with a view to avoiding duplication with other conference committees and also to distributing them to the different congressional districts of the state.

A special invitation to attend this meeting will be sent by the state chairman, a little later, to the members of the entire committee. In this letter we shall emphasize the importance of the Committee on Maintenance of Existing Social Service Agencies, as we believe that some of the members, who have not replied to the request that a survey of local conditions be made, are not convinced of the real value of this war activity. We shall hope to impress upon the women of this committee that the State Conference of Charities and Correction is the place to get information and inspiration for their work, to get acquainted with the state leaders in social service and to learn how they may be of greatest assistance in their respective communities.

The secretary of the Board of State Charities has also expressed the intention of forwarding to each member of our committee a copy of the new directory of charitable and correctional institutions and social agencies, compiled by the Board of State Charities, which will be a great help to the county members and to the state chairman in our committee work. A copy of the prison pamphlet, now in the course of preparation at the office of this body, also will be forwarded to each member of our State Council of Defense committee, with the hope that the members of this committee will lend their co-operation in carrying out the desired plans.

Mrs. Mary Breckenridge Thompson, a national child welfare leader, has been secured for a speaking tour throughout several Indiana cities and towns from August 10 to 17. Mrs. Thompson, wife of the president of Crescent College, Eureka Springs, Ark., is a trained nurse by profession and has developed courses in child welfare work in connection with the college.

Her message to Indiana gatherings will be to make known the needs of children in wartime. The Children's Bureau of the United States regards Mrs. Thompson as a splendid speaker and this visit as a great opportunity for Indiana.

Mrs. Thompson's tentative schedule is as follows: August 10, Lagrange, afternoon; Albion, evening; August 11, Fort Wayne, afternoon; Portland, evening; August 12, Connersville; August 13, Greencastle, afternoon; Terre Haute, evening; August 14, Terre Haute, morning; August 15, New Albany, afternoon; Columbus, evening; August 16, Kokomo, evening; August 17, Lafayette, afternoon; Williamsport, evening.

New Mexico is Moved.

The State of New Mexico, aroused by the activities of the Kaiser's agents in Mexico, has voted to her State Defense Council a fund of $750,000. New Mexico has a population less than 350,000.

Athletic Badge Tests

Boys, can you chin yourself four times without stopping? Can you jump 5 feet 9 inches in a standing broad jump and then finish the stunt by running 60 yards in 8½ seconds? If you can, you are qualified for a bronze medal and a certificate from the Playground and Recreation Association of America.

These athletic badge tests of physical efficiency will be used in many play-week celebrations throughout Indiana in September. There is no age limit for contestants, and girls, too, may enter.

This is what a girl must do to receive a badge and a certificate: Run a potato race in 42 seconds, throw a basket ball into its goal two out of six times from a distance of 15 feet, and walk 24 feet balancing herself with a book on her head, on the narrow edge of a 2x4 scantling.

These tests compose the first of a series of three national, standardized tests prepared by the Playground and Recreation Association of America. A contestant can receive only one badge a year, but in the event of a failure he may try again.

Evansville has a flourishing organization of drilling boys between the ages of 9 and 18 years. Simple military commands—"left face," "left about face"—are taught and executed in good form. A short parade led by a drum corps finished the two hours' work of the first evening. Interested onlookers were impressed by the seriousness of the boys and the manner in which they kept their regular formation. The drills are held weekly and are in charge of registered men of the city.

Ten Golden Rules of Health.

The Ten Golden Rules of Health, as prescribed by the Minnesota Division, Woman's Committee, Council of National Defense, and Minnesota Commission of Public Safety, are as follows:

- I. Play hard and fair. Be loyal to your team mates and generous to your opponents.
- II. Eat slowly. Do not eat between meals. Chew food thoroughly. Never drink water when there is food in the mouth. Drink water several times during the day.
- III. Brush your teeth at least twice a day. Rinse your mouth out well with water after each meal.
- IV. Be sure to cultivate regular daily habits.
- V. Keep clean body, clothes, and mind. Wash your hands always before eating. Take a warm bath with soap once or twice a week; a cool sponge (or shower) bath each morning before breakfast and rub your body to a glow with a rough towel.
- VI. Try to keep your companions, especially young children, away from those who have contagious diseases.
- VII. Use your handkerchief to cover a sneeze or cough and try to avoid coughing, sneezing, or blowing your nose in front of others.
- VIII. Study hard, and in study, work, or play do your best.
- IX. Sleep: Get as many hours in bed each night as this table indicates for your age. Keep windows in bedroom well open.

Hours of Sleep for Different Ages.

Age.	Hours of sleep.
5 to 6 .....	13
6 to 8 .....	12
8 to 10 .....	11½
10 to 12 .....	11
12 to 14 .....	10½
14 to 16 .....	10
16 to 18 .....	9½

X. Be cheerful, and do your best to keep your school and your home clean and attractive, and to make the world a better place to live in.

Hit hard and quickly for all we have and are and hope to be!

There is no deferred classification in food conservation. We are all in Class 1; all in camp, and ready to go "over the top" when we must further conserve.

Ambitious Program For Working Reserve

Reduction in Age Limit With Other Attractive Features in Contemplation.

At the national conference of directors of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, held in Philadelphia at the City Club July 26 and 27, plans were discussed seeking the extension next year of farm training and farm supply camps for high-school boys. It was decided to lower the age limit from sixteen to fifteen years, with a minimum weight requirement of 115 pounds, effective at the option of the national director, William E. Hall.

Members of the reserve are also to have a national uniform with a bronze insignia on the collar, consisting of five letters—"U. S. B. W. R.," and are to be organized into companies for military drill throughout the winter. The plan calls for one unit for each high school where the enrollment justifies.

Co-operation of War Department.

In extending the opportunity for military training to high-school boys enrolled in the United States Boys' Working Reserve, the War Department will lend full co-operation if present plans are consummated.

Dr. C. R. Mann, chairman of the Committee on Education and Special Training of the War Department, who is responsible for the development of the Student Army Training Corps plan, whereby college students are uniformed, sworn into military service and detailed back to their respective schools to pursue their studies and undergo certain prescribed technical training which increases their value to the army, addressed the conference Friday night. He gave unqualified endorsement to the Boys' Working Reserve and, in pledging the support of the War Department to the movement, said that he hoped to be able to announce very shortly a plan whereby members of the Student Army Training Corps would be detailed to the various high schools to give military training to companies of boys enrolled in the Boys' Working Reserve. He declared that every boy in America over fifteen years old is an integral part of the great war machine and that those in authority in Washington are very much interested in such a combination of plans as will give the boy military training in connection with his school work, coupled with such rudimentary training in agricultural work as will not only make him valuable on the farm, but enable him immediately to apply the disciplinary lessons, the "will to do," the self-control and the "Yankee grit" inculcated through military drill. He praised farm work as a means of improving and building up the physique of Young America and said that any boy who has "the nerve and grit to stick it out on a farm all summer will make a good soldier."

Urges Financial Support.

Lieutenant Governor Frank B. McClain of Pennsylvania said that no State legislature or State council of defense can be too liberal in its financial support of the Boys' Working Reserve. "It is a sane, practical, economically sound proposition and has proven its worth in Pennsylvania. The $125,000 spent in our State on the boys this summer will yield more in dollars and cents than any appropriation of equal amount spent for any other part of the war program."

Lieutenant Governor McClain is a farmer and has the reputation of feeding more cattle each year than any other farmer in his State. He emphasized the fact that this is no time for a niggardly policy in the expenditure of public funds, particularly as they aid in the projection of any war program. "Just as success in industrial enterprise today is measured by production, not profits, just so is the expenditure of public funds measured by results, not cost."

This is the message he charged each delegate to carry home to his own State in seeking funds for the greatly enlarged program which is being planned for the Boys' Working Reserve.

Advocates Large Camps.

In relating how Pennsylvania State College at first looked askance at the plans for the military agricultural training camp conducted for 1,200 boys last spring and later became converted to the idea, Dr. E. C. Sparks, president of the institution, stated that "we will do it again next year, whether the war lasts or not, and my one wish is that we have 12,000 boys instead of 1,200. Those people who were in favor of the camp in the beginning were right, and those who were against it were wrong and gladly admit it."

The boys who attended the Pennsylvania camp were housed in tents belonging to the State militia and were uniformed at the expense of the State. At the conclusion of their twelve days' training they were detailed to central supply camps, where in groups of twenty to thirty they were housed together under trained supervision, working on farms within a radius of five or ten miles of the camp. Automobiles carried them to and from the camp.

Educators Co-operate.

Dr. J. George Becht, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania State board of education, stated in emphatic terms that educators everywhere must get behind the Boys' Working Reserve and the men at the head of it, because it carries with it its own educational activity and is in position very largely to reduce the alarming mortality in high-school enrollment resulting from the war. He pointed out that the boy who engages in industrial employment during vacation is loath to give up the high wages he is earning in order to return to school in the fall. On the other hand, the boy who through the influence of the reserve engages in farm work finds himself out of employment just about the time school begins, and fortunately for him the line of least resistance leads directly to the school door, which is exactly where he belongs.

He urged that boys who are members of the reserve be permitted to enroll in special classes organized for speeded-up school work, a curtailed Christmas vacation, and the adoption of any other reasonable plan which will enable boys, without loss of scholarship, to be released early next spring for farm work. "This is a war necessity which calls for the immediate and undivided co-operation of every school man. The Boys' Working Reserve is the best friend the schools have."

Indiana Represented.

The State council of defense of Indiana was represented by C. B. Fritsche, assistant State director, who addressed the conference on the practical side of the military agricultural training camp idea. He emphasized the need for planning ahead on a large scale for next year, when, if the plans for the mobilization of an army of 5,000,000 men materialize, the Boys' Working Reserve will have a burden of most significant and tremendous proportions to shoulder.

Associate National Director H. W. Wells told the delegates that Indiana had probably contributed more toward putting the Boys' Working Reserve on the map than any other organization, and that every once in awhile he felt like saying, "Thank God for Indiana." He praised the State council of defense, Governor Goodrich, Dr. Horace Ellis and other school men throughout the State for the unreserved support given to the Boys' Working Reserve, which he termed as "one of the most significant movements growing out of the war."

Beware, Profiteer!

Dr. Harry E. Barnard, who in addition to being Federal food administrator for Indiana, is food and drug commissioner, and as such in charge of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, announces that dealers who seek to profiteer through the giving of short weight or measure, will be punished by an immediate revocation of the license under which they are permitted to do business by the food administration, or if not licensed by having the licensed source of their supply instructed to discontinue further business relations, which amounts to putting them out of business.

No man is rich enough to eat what this country needs.

U. S. Food Club Song.

(Tune: "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp.")

Every woman, child and man
Should be helping all they can
In this war that every nation shall be free.
They are saying, "If we save,
We are keeping from the grave
Many lads who're fighting now for liberty."

First Chorus.

"Save, save, save the wheat," says Hoover,
"Save the meat and sugar, too."
You can do it if you try,
Cutting out white bread and pie,
And our Dr. Barnard says, "It's up to you."

If to save will help to win,
We are eager to begin
And are very glad and proud to have the chance,
Just to send the kinds of food
That will do the allies good
When our ships have taken them across to France.

Just the giving food is small,
Where so many give their all
And so many mothers' hearts are full of woe
For the son already gone,
For the one who's carrying on
And the one who very soon may need to go.

Second Chorus.

Save, oh, save the lives of laddies,
Save a mother's broken heart;
And when Freedom's flag's unfurled
Once again o'er all the world,
You're a loser if you haven't done your part.

Christie at Kendallville.

G. I. Christie will address the Productive Congress of Northeastern Indiana Farmers, to be held at Kendallville, August 22nd. The meeting is under the auspices of the Northeastern Indiana Agricultural Conference of County Agents, and farm leaders which includes representatives from nine counties, namely: Adams, Wells, Huntington, Whitley, Allen, Dekalb, Noble, Steuben, and Lagrange. The day's program will include livestock judging demonstrations, the treatment of wheat for smuts, educational exhibits by county agents and home demonstration agents, and speeches by the representatives of the Department of Agriculture, Food Administration and members of Congress.

County Agent H. R. Smalley will be chairman of the conference. B. V. Widney of Albion, is chairman of the program committee, Miss Genevieve Barton, Fort Wayne, on Home Economics, and County Agent A. Z. Arehart, Auburn, on arrangements.

Caton 100 Per Cent Patriotic.

Between patriotic addresses Charles H. Caton, one of the list of dependable speakers enrolled for service under the Speakers' Bureau of the Indiana State Council of Defense, is occupying his time at Clay City in helping in the harvest fields and fishing. By the latter means he states that he is assisting in carrying out the food regulations, which urge the use of fish instead of beef and pork. He is seeking an opportunity to enter the service of the nation, either in the army or the Y. M. C. A.

The cost of the United States Food Administration for its first year's work was less than two cents for every person in the United States.

May God Forgive Him! America Never Will

The man who comes out of this war with one dollar more than he had when it began has taken it from the blood of the men who died for him. May God forgive him. The American people never will.—R. Lyman Wilbur.

Increase in Acreage of Indiana 1919 Wheat

Food Committee Also Plans to Stimulate Pork Production Ten Per Cent.

At a regional wheat conference held at Chicago, July 25th and 26th, attended by eleven of the winter wheat producing States, Indiana was requested to increase her wheat acreage seventeen per cent. This was announced at a joint meeting of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation and the wheat committee held at Indianapolis, August 2d. A seventeen per cent increase over last year's acreage would mean 456,816 acres for the State.

D. S. Myer, state leader of the wheat campaign, has made plans to meet this requirement through the county wheat committees, better farming associations, and thrashing rings which he has already organized. He proposes to assign a definite acreage increase for each county.

The Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation went on record as commending the campaign for a seventeen per cent increase, and urged a vigorous prosecution of the campaign to meet this requirement. The Food committee will also ask the co-operation of the State Council of Defense and the county councils of defense in carrying out their program.

Mr. Myer reported on the progress of the wheat campaign to date, which has been conducted along the line of maintaining the acreage and increasing the yield per acre. Through the present organization, the field inspectors have located between four and five hundred fields of wheat suitable for seed. The principal varieties located are Rudy, Michigan Amber, Farmer's Friend, Harvest King, and the better strains of Fultz and Poole.

It was also reported at this meeting that the campaign to order fertilizers early has resulted in a larger per cent of farmers buying their fertilizer during July than ever before. The demand for acid phosphate is so great that there is some question whether the fertilizer manufacturers will be able to supply Indiana needs. No shortage exists at the present time.

Ten Per Cent Increase in Pork.

The government has asked for a 10 per cent increase in pork production in Indiana. This increase is expected of Indiana in addition to the 25 per cent increase which was effected last fall. The Food committee will launch a campaign to meet this requirement. It is proposed to form county swine production committees to see that each county makes their proper increase. This will be accomplished largely through the animal husbandry men of Purdue. Detail plans for carrying out this program will be announced by the Food committee in the near future.

Seed Corn Campaign Proposed.

It was announced at the Food committee meeting that the need for selecting seed corn will be more urgent this fall than ever before in the history of the State. As a result of the poor seed corn conditions last spring, thousands of bushels of seed were shipped into Indiana from Missouri, New Jersey, and other States, introducing many foreign varieties. It is imperative that the tried and true varieties of seed corn be re-established in the State. It is proposed to conduct the campaign for field selection of seed corn through the members of the Indiana Corn Growers' association and the Extension department of Purdue University. C. B. Riley, W. W. Bonner, and Sam George were appointed on a committee to perfect plans for this seed corn selection campaign, to be presented at the next meeting of the Food committee, which will be held at the farm of George Ade, Brook, Indiana, August 14th or 21st.

Silo Campaign Progress.

Maurice Douglas, state leader of the Silo campaign, reported at the Food committee meeting, that approximately 50 per cent of the 10,000 silos had already been sold in Indiana. He also reported that the securing of cars for the shipment of steel and silos had assisted greatly in stimulating the campaign. Mr. Douglas complimented the state and local papers and the creamery manufacturers for their excellent co-operation in the publicity campaign. In order to finish the campaign, each man who has already purchased a silo will be asked to interest one other farmer. "The success of the campaign is assured," said Mr. Douglas.

Dairy Products Dinner.

A special dairy products dinner, financed by the Indiana State Dairy Association and the dairy manufacturers, will be held August 9th at the Claypool Hotel, under the auspices of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation. Dr. E. V. McCollum, of the Johns Hopkins University, will be one of the principal speakers. Warren T. McCray, chairman of the Food committee, will likely preside.

Agents Urged to Remain at Posts.

It was learned at the state Food committee meeting that many of the county agricultural agents are enlisting in the various branches of the military service. The program for increased production and the various campaigns resulting therefrom demand the services of a trained leader in the various counties of the State in order that the production program can be met. In view of these facts, the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation endorsed the work of the county agricultural agents employed through Purdue university, as a vital means of carrying out the demands of the government for a greater food production and conservation, and urged the county agents to continue at their posts as a patriotic duty. The Food committee is also asking the State Council of Defense to take such action as will encourage the county agents to remain in their present important work.

No Liquor to Soldiers.

No alcoholic beverages are to be sold or given, publicly or privately, to any man in uniform in any place in the United States. This is a regulation promulgated by the President under Section 12 of the Selective Service Law for the protection of men in service against intoxicating liquors.

The enforcement of this law involves the co-operation, not merely of all local law enforcement bodies in the country, but also of the public at large.

Every person must be made to understand that they are not to sell, or give liquor to men in uniform because it detracts from military efficiency.

Zones in which the sale of liquor is illegal are established around every military camp in which 250 men or more are stationed for more than thirty days.

The portions of incorporated municipalities lying within the five mile areas around camps are no longer excluded from the zones in which the sale of liquor is preventable by Federal officials, providing the municipalities in question are already dry by state or local law.

Boys Reserve Will Save Tomato Crop

Indiana Canners Sending in Requests for Help on 1918 Pack—Minute Squad Organized.

Indiana canners are sending in many requests for boys to help during the tomato harvest, which begins about August 20th and continues until frost. Pay offered for picking tomatoes this season ranges from six to nine cents per bushel. An average boy can pick 40 to 50 bushels a day. This is an opportunity for Hoosier boys to earn enough money before October to buy a Liberty Bond for cash and at the same time help save a crop, 75% of which will be commandeered by the Federal Government for the army and navy. Canned tomatoes often take the place of drinking water in the front line trenches and form a principal part of the diet on shipboard during heavy seas.

Reserve Pledges Help.

Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director of the Boys' Reserve, has sent out a call to all Reserve Directors, urging them to report promptly how many boys they will have available for the tomato harvest. The need is urgent, says Mr. Straus, for Indiana farmers have increased their tomato acreage from 36,000 acres last year to 52,000 acres this season, and are relying very largely on members of the Reserve for harvest labor. Many school superintendents have issued a ruling whereby high school boys who are needed for this work may remain out of school during the first two or three weeks of the session and be given every opportunity to make up their lost school work without loss of standing in their classes following their return.

Minute Squad Organized.

Under the leadership of Eugene P. Stocks, Assistant City Director of the Boys' Working Reserve, twenty Evansville boys, organized in a "Minute Squad," ready to respond to any emergency calls for farm help, saved 42 acres of corn in July in Vanderburgh County, when, following wet weather, German weeds were about to take the crop, which will now yield a value of no less than $2,000. These boys answered many calls for help on farms when labor was at a premium. They have received much praise from Vanderburgh County farmers, who were among the first to realize that, given proper instruction, the city boy will soon make himself valuable.

On to Berlin.

The following letter from a member of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve displays a spirit of which the Hoosier State may well be proud:

"Cloverdale, Ind., August 18, 1918.

"Isaac D. Straus,
Indianapolis, Ind.

"Dear Sir:

"My school begins soon so I will make a report of my summer work toward helping win the war. I have worked every day since May 1, except Sunday, and looked after the stock of the farm Sunday morning. I have worked harder this summer than in any previous summer. I have been on the job early and late.

"Last week I helped thrash. It was nothing to see me coming in between 10 and 12 o'clock at night. I stayed till the last—for bread is what we need to win the war and we must thrash it

Patriotism in Indiana

Allen County.—At a meeting between the Fort Wayne Service Boards and the Allen County Council of Defense, the defense body worked out the following program: A meeting of all Class A-1 service men will be called for the night of August 8 at a local theatre, with a similar meeting on each of the next two Thursday nights following. Four subjects will be covered at the first meeting, as follows: (1) explaining the purpose of the call, giving an outline of the complete program, and explaining the justice and efficiency produced by the selective service law; (2) Red Cross work, elaborating on home service work and civilian relief; (3) military courtesy and discipline; (4) legal rights of soldiers. The four subjects for the second meeting will be: (1) Y. M. C. A.; (2) Jewish welfare; (3) soldiers' insurance; (4) why we are at war. And the four for the final meeting will be: (1) K. of C. war work; (2) clean in body and clean in mind; (3) why we must win the war; (4) opportunity for any Class 1 man to ask any questions. In addition, during the second week a women's meeting has been arranged for the mothers, wives, etc., of Class A-1 men. This will be conducted entirely by the ladies, with a view of putting at ease any uncertainty of those remaining behind; any questions may be asked and they will be carefully answered. Musical programs have been arranged for each of the meetings, and a military drill will be given one night each week for all Class A men. Reports from Garden Supervisor H. V. Knight indicate that the 7,000 war gardens in Fort Wayne will yield a crop conservatively valued at $165,000. The record for 1917 showed 5,000 gardens in operation with an area of about 150 acres, while this year's record shows fully 250 acres and an increase of 2,000 gardens. Much of the credit for this showing is due to the Liberty Garden Committee, whose gospel of "more food" has fallen on fertile soil in this community. Mrs. B. Paul Mosaman has been appointed chairman of the Americanization Committee, Dr. Carrie Hanning chairman of the nurses' registration campaign, and Mrs. Ben Levi chairman of the Women's Motor Corps. William H. Scheiman, chairman of the County Council of Defense, is responsible for the little booklet "Why Is America in the War?", 6,000 copies of which have been prepared for distribution throughout the county. The points are well selected, carefully and intelligently brought out, and give the reader a clear insight into some of the vital questions of the hour. In accordance with the proclamation issued by Mayor W. Sherman Cutshall, Monday, August 12, at high noon, every church bell in the city of Fort Wayne will ring, and absolute silence will prevail throughout the city on the part of industrial activities for a period of two minutes, during which time the public will silently unite in prayer for the welfare of our troops at the front. This will occur daily throughout the period of the war.

Blackford County.—After a thorough investigation, covering three days, W. E. Leer, special representative of the United States Department of Agriculture, reports very little black stem rust in the wheat in Blackford County, and says he found few barberry bushes of the dangerous kind in the county. He made a record in each case where the barberry was found, and reported the names to the Department of Agriculture, and every effort will be made to see that the plants are removed.

Boone County.—With 82 food clubs organized with a membership of 4,000, food conservation and strict adherence to all food rules are being worked out in Boone County. So well has the work progressed under County Food Administrator Morris Ritchie, assisted by Mrs. George M. Comley, that the county now proudly boasts of being 100 per cent efficient. Township food organizations are under the following chairman: Sugar Creek, Mrs. Frank Coleman; Perry, Mrs. Chas. Herr; Worth, Mrs. J. T. Frank; Lighthouse, Marion; Mrs. Martha E. Stoops; Eagle, Mrs. F. M. Gregory; Harrison, Mrs. Lela Crostreet; Center, Mrs. W. O. Darnall; Jackson, Mrs. Linnie Billingsley; Washington, Mrs. Lizzie Ryan; Union, Mrs. Anna Routh; Clinton, Mrs. Jennie D. Casady; Jefferson, Mrs. Carl Riner.

Carroll County.—The Julien Pig Club, which was established by Dr. Ren Julien in December, 1916, has proven successful beyond the expectations of the founder. Not alone are the boys interested, but the fathers as well, and the profits made by the boys have in many instances induced the fathers to sell their grade and scrub hogs and purchase pure bred hogs. Charles Wood of Delphi received a pig from the first lot given out. His sow farrowed eight pigs and saved all of them. He returned the two best gilts to the club, sold two gilts and two boars for $225, has one gilt and one boar, and the sow has another litter of seven pigs. He was offered $800 for the sow and litter. Charles has always been able to keep his hogs by themselves and knows exactly the amount of feed consumed. From December 15, 1916, to date the feed has cost $147.07.

Cass County.—Cass County reports one of the largest wheat yields in the state. From 21½ acres on the farm of Jesse Tabor, 954.6 bushels have been harvested and thrashed. This is an average of 44.4 bushels to the acre, and at an estimated price of $2.05 this yield netted $91.02 per acre.

Decatur County.—An honor roll, containing the names of 99 young men of the community who have entered the service of their country, was dedicated at St. Paul July 28.

Delaware County.—An Indianapolis concern, which owns a large canning factory at Eaton, has appealed to the Delaware County Council of Defense, the local Boys' Working Reserve and the public to assist it in harvesting 600 acres of tomatoes and in canning the fruit, beginning August 15 and continuing until frost arrives.

Elkhart County.—Elkhart's first application of the "work or fight" order resulted in the arrest of two colored men. Reports of other violators of the law are under investigation.

Fayette County.—A Fayette County youth, within draft age, but exempted for farm work, recently became angry because thrashing was continued late at the place he was working. He struck his pitchfork into the ground and said he would work no longer. Within forty-eight hours the local board of registration and exemption had abrogated his deferred classification and sent him toward an army camp. The board declines to give the youth's name, but the fact has been made known. Company B of the Liberty Guard has taken the contract of patrolling Roberts Park during the four days and four nights of the free fair. Most of the money received by the company for this duty will be spent for the permanent record of the names of nearly 1,000 Fayette County young men in active service.

Floyd County.—To stimulate interest in the student nurses' campaign, the Golden Star Company of the Girls' Military Corps, in command of Lieutenant G. G. Quillen of the Quartermaster's Department, Jeffersonville, made its first public appearance in a parade July 25. Heading the parade was Mrs. S. E. Stout, chairman of the parade committee, and Mrs. J. F. Kurfess, woman member of the County Council of Defense. The company, 200 strong, dressed uniformly in white, made a splendid appearance. Practically three-fourths of Floyd County's quota of nurses has been secured to date.

Fulton County.—A. E. Babcock is the new appointee for fuel administrator for Fulton County.

Greene County.—An average yield of 40 bushels per acre from 14 acres of wheat is the record of L. E. Stalcup, a Washington township farmer. Mrs. Anna G. Beasley, chairman of the women's registration committee of Greene County, reports that out of 9,834 women canvassed, 9,219 registered for war emergency work, 35 of this number having signified their willingness to become Red Cross nurses.

Howard County.—Fifty pounds of sugar, found in the home of Fred Adler on Lindsey street, was confiscated by the county food administrator and will be placed, temporarily, in the front window of his office as a warning to those unpatriotic citizens who do not obey the food laws. Postmaster Havens has not filed request for exemption for any employee of the Kokomo postoffice and will not do so unless he can in conscience attest that such employee is necessary to the adequate operation of the service. The county council has appropriated $5,800 for the use of the Howard County Council of Defense, with promise of further appropriation later to make the aggregate amount $9,000, which figure the defense body estimated would be required for their year's work. Starting out with a membership of 25, the Kokomo Citizens' Vigilance Committee now numbers 100 members. The personnel comprises only citizens of unquestioned loyalty, who have banded together to supplement the work of the various war work committees and in a measure serve in the capacity of federal secret agents. Similar organizations elsewhere have proven very successful. County Food Administrator Morgan has petitioned authorities at Washington, through the State Food Administration, to permit the feeding of rye to hogs in Howard County, owing to the scarcity of corn in this section.

Huntington County.—The following resolution, passed by the County Council of Defense, indicates that any parties considered disloyal to the government will not get preferred service from either the fuel or food administrations: "Be it resolved, That the various agents of the government in this war are instructed by the County Council of Defense and requested by it to afford immediate protection to those supporting the government of the United States, by such preference as is proper in the discharge of their various duties." The Council of Defense of Huntington County has caused to be published the names of eight citizens of that county who have persistently refused to make contributions to war work funds or perform any service in behalf of war activities. C. B. Williams, Huntington County fuel administrator, was in the southern Indiana coal fields to buy coal for a reserve for next winter. Nine dealers in Huntington have pledged themselves to store five carloads each for such a purpose. City officials, at a meeting with Mr. Williams, told him the city was not in a position to maintain a municipal coal yard. By unanimous vote of the County Council of Defense, J. Q. Cline has been removed as a member of the public morals committee of the defense body. Charges of obstructing the work of the council and republishing malicious statements against persons engaged in war work were preferred against him.

Jay County.—Pennville is to do her bit toward war fund raising by having a four-day chautauqua from August 18 to 22. The program includes only Jay County talent. The last week in July marked the end of the child welfare examinations in the county. In every township hundreds of children were taken to the school houses, where physicians and volunteer workers held physical examinations. Surgical aid and hospital treatment is promised to all who need it.

Jackson County.—Bids which were submitted for the construction of a consolidated high school building in Salt Creek township were returned to the contractors by Buell Brown, township trustee, following the ruling of the Jackson County Council of Defense that the labor, money and material involved could be used to a better advantage for essential war work. The investigation of the proposed work was made by the County Council of Defense at the request of the State Defense Council. The building was estimated to cost $15,000.

Johnson County.—Sixty-four members of the Whiteland Liberty Guards are now fully equipped with new uniforms.

Knox County.—The Knox County chapter of the Red Cross has issued a very interesting statement, covering the period from November, 1917, to June, 1918. Some of the articles turned out by the chapter are given herewith: 2,224 pajamas, 1,571 bed shirts, 433 bath robes, 772 bed jackets, 1,816 bed socks, 601 suits underwear, 1,560 pillow cases, 693 sheets, 1,478 pillows, 76 quilts and comforters, 2,545 towels, 217 rugs, 100 spreads, 3 surgeons' gowns, 2,078 pairs knitted socks, 847 sweaters, 262 helmets, 458 pairs wristlets, 12 scarfs, 6 trench caps, 2 kneelets, 102 soldier kits, 1,150 wash cloths, handkerchiefs, etc., 53,300 surgical dressings. The value of the articles listed above, as appraised by a committee consisting of Esco Walk, Wm. Burchfield, Louis Lannan and M. C. Grosseup, amounts to $42,961.44. The material used cost $12,923.23; expense, $707.12, which leaves a net profit of $29,231.09. Under the auspices of the Knox County chapter of the Red Cross, a canteen service organization is being established in Vincennes, and although the local women have much of their time already taken up with war work, they are enthusiastic about this new service.

Lake County.—Judge McMahon has just appointed George Sheehan, secretary of the Lake County Central Labor Union, the labor member of the Lake County Council of Defense. The labor organizations some time ago endorsed Mr. Sheehan and urged the County Council of Defense to make the appointment, but the members of the council, themselves appointed by the Circuit Court judge, felt the appointive power rested with Judge McMahon, and on referring the matter to him the appointment was promptly made. Mrs. Jennie Ward Wheeler, in charge of the student nurses' recruiting in Lake County, has enrolled 46 applicants against the required quota of 20, but as the prescribed quota does not limit the number of applicants from the various counties, Mrs. Wheeler is anxious to have just as many additional applicants as possible.

LaGrange County.—Red Cross work in LaGrange County continues with unabated zeal, as indicated by the following enlistment of the July output to the Indianapolis warehouse: 175 winter pajamas; 55 summer pajamas; 25 bed shirts; 225 undershirts; 30 knitted coverlets, made by schools; 125 refuse garments; 2 layettes, complete; box of drinking cups, gun wipes, candles and checker boards.

Laporte County.—The employees of the Wallace & Smith Linnet Mills have organized a Red Cross club with the following officers: President, Lyndy Schults; vice-president, Mrs. Richard Wallace; treasurer, Judith Gildersleeve; secretary, Mrs. A. Thomas. Sixty-four girls joined the club. The weekly dues are to be donated to the American Red Cross, and in very needy cases financial assistance will be given to Laporte war mothers. The management of the Laporte County Fair introduced an innovation this year in the way of a chautauqua. This feature is being strongly supported, and promises have been received from the Department of Agriculture at Washington and the National Council of Defense that each will send one of their very best speakers. These headlines will be supplemented by talent furnished by the State Council, State Agricultural College at Purdue, the national Red Cross society, and the national organizations of the Y. M. C. A., the K. of C. and the League to Enforce Peace, of which former President Wm. H. Taft is at the head. Springfield township claims credit for a plan by which thrashermen can operate with less men than are usually employed. "Basket rack clubs" have been organized, and farmers who are members of these clubs build their bundle racks with large sides, so that the rack is much like a huge basket. The drivers load their own grain and no men are required to pitch bundles in the field. One or two more teams are needed to thrash under this plan, and as there seems to be plenty of teams and a scarcity of men, the plan is working out in a most practical way.

Madison County.—About 50 young women recently attended a meeting at the home of Mrs. E. B. Kehrer in Anderson in response to the call which has gone out over the state for nurses. Of this number seven definitely declared their intention of taking the training, and others will report at a later meeting, which has been called by Mrs. Kehrer and Mrs. Sansberry of the County Council of Defense. The committee having charge of soliciting money with which to buy uniforms for the company of Liberty Guards of Alexandria reports $675 has been subscribed. Selected men in Class I will drill with the guards once each week. Edgar McKown will be drillmaster.

Montgomery County.—Miss Mary O'Neal and Miss Elsie Walkup, of Crawfordville, have joined the farmerette school at Vassar College, to take the special emergency war work farming course which has been established by this college, as well as many other colleges throughout the country.

Posey County.—A movement has been inaugurated to establish a Liberty Guard organization in Posey County.

Rush County.—Mrs. A. L. Stewart, who is the recruiting agent for the nurses' drive in Rush County, is enthusiastic over the results of the first few days of the campaign. Eight of the county's quota of twenty were secured in the first three days. In one afternoon fifteen inquiries were received, and every one, Mrs. Stewart states, came from bright, intelligent young women, the majority of whom have high school educations and are anxious to get in training as quickly as possible.

St. Joseph County.—27,366 women from St. Joseph County registered for war work in the recent registration campaign. The completed record shows the townships rank from 80 to 100 per cent in their registration. Clay Township, which was organized under the direction of Mrs. Geo. Hepler, registered every woman in that community, while Harris Township lacked only two. Mishawaka showed a total registration of 3,485 women.

Sullivan County.—The initial meeting of the Sullivan County Adjustment Appeal Board of the County Council of Defense was held on August 2 at the courthouse. This board was established for the purpose of investigating and adjusting all cases concerning war duty; whether it is a case of anyone thinking they have too much or too little to do, the case will be carefully investigated and justice administered. ... H. S. Benson, county agent, has been made president of a new association formed by the military registrants of Sullivan County. The vice-presidents named are: Cecil Jennings, Carlisle; Claude Laman, Sullivan, and Jess Bollinger, Shelby. Hinkle C. Hays of this city was elected secretary, and Bayard T. Lang, treasurer.

Tippecanoe County.—The "work or fight" order issued to all the hens in Indiana by the poultrymen of Purdue University is now in full working force, and the culling campaign will continue for the next five or six weeks. The schedule calls for four farm culling demonstrations in each county. ... The County Council of Defense is established in its new and permanent quarters in the Sharp Block, Lafayette. The suite of five rooms will also house the fuel and food administrators, and the new arrangements will centralize the handling of these several activities. ... The time for enrolling in the state-wide five-acre corn contest has been extended from June 15 to August 15 by G. I. Christie, secretary of the Indiana Corn Growers' Association. Requests have come from all over the state that additional time for enrollment be given.

Wells County.—After the Woman's Section of the Wells County Council of Defense had raised the necessary $100 to employ a woman county agent, Purdue University advised them they were too late to get a woman demonstrator for their county this year. A meeting has been called to decide whether the fund will be held intact to provide for a demonstrator next year, or whether the money will be refunded to the donors. ... From a contribution box placed at one of the local theatres, the sum of $7.00 was received and turned over to the Red Cross.

Red Cross Activities

Only forty-eight Indiana nurses were enrolled during July for active Red Cross service, it is announced by Miss Anna Gladwin, acting director of nursing at Lake Division, Red Cross headquarters.

The July recruits brought Indiana's Red Cross enrollments in 1918 to 136. As Indiana's 1918 quota of nurses is 508, there must be 372 more enrolled in the remaining five months of the year.

Ohio and Kentucky, the other two Lake Division Red Cross states, furnished in July respectively 245 and 8 enrollments. Ohio must furnish 1,287 and Kentucky 372 more, graduate nurses before the year is out.

"All enrollments made by the Red Cross are for active service," said Miss Gladwin, "and we can accept only those women who are graduates of accredited nursing schools. Nurses enrolled for military service must be over 21 years old."

Indiana Red Cross Home Service Sections last month dealt with 1,937 families or relatives of men in the military and naval service. This is shown in the monthly report of James L. Fieser, Lake Division, Red Cross director of civilian relief.

The report points out that 752 of these families received information only. Financial assistance totaling $3,960.29 was provided for families of other Indians in the service.

At Lake Division headquarters 2,243 cases for home service work were cleared to Red Cross chapter sections. Most of these cases came to the division from American camps and cantonments.

Pay of nurses enrolled by the American Red Cross for military service has been raised to $75 a month for overseas duty and to $60 a month for duty at hospitals at American camps and cantonments.

Announcement of the increase has just been received at Lake Division Red Cross headquarters. Heretofore $60 a month was paid to nurses sent overseas and $50 a month to those kept at military work this side the Atlantic.

Miss Anna Gladwin, acting director of nursing at division headquarters, said today that the increase in pay should result in the enrollment of many more nurses.

"There are many nurses who have wanted to enroll with the Red Cross and could not because of the low pay and family obligations," Miss Gladwin said.

"This new scale provides salaries which are about on the same level with those paid in hospitals.

"In addition, the government provides the nurses with the same war risk insurance as is provided soldiers and sailors."

Telegrams calling attention to Surgeon General Gorgas' new request for 1,000 nurses a week for overseas duty have gone out from the Lake Division Bureau of Nursing to all Indiana Red Cross nursing committees.

So far this year Indiana has furnished only 136 graduate nurses for active Red Cross service and is far below its 1918 quota.

"The 'thousand-a-week' order gives the Red Cross nursing service the biggest task and opportunity it has had since the war began," Miss Anna Gladwin, acting director of nursing in the Lake Division, said today.

"We have asked our local nursing committees throughout Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky to strengthen their personnel where necessary and prepare for the hardest work of the year.

"We expect to get a large number of nurses who have brothers in the military or naval service. Until last week we were not permitted to enroll for foreign service nurses who are sisters of soldiers and sailors."

The Red Cross can only enroll graduate nurses over 21 years old.

James L. Fieser, who is in charge of home service work of the Lake Division, American Red Cross, was a resident of Indiana for twenty-one years and is very proud of the war activities of his old State and especially of its Red Cross record. At a meeting of co-workers here he commented on the work being done to assist the families of soldiers and sailors.

"Indiana," he said, "has responded to each of the calls in this world's war for democracy, and new pages are being added almost daily to her record of achievement. One of the latest, but by no means the least, of her achievements is the fact that she was the first State in the Lake Division of the American Red Cross to organize for home service in every county.

"Soon after America entered the war, President Wilson said that we must not only mobilize an army, but must mobilize the nation. The experience of our allies had demonstrated that to win the war, and to win it greatly and worthily, homes must be maintained during the absence of fathers, husbands and brothers. Much credit for the morale of the French troops today is attributed to the work of the Red Cross in the homes of the soldiers.

"And Indiana is thoroughly awakened to this need. Offices are being established in every chapter, where the relatives of soldiers may obtain information and assistance regarding allotments, allowances, insurance compensation and all sorts of military information.

"The medical forces of the communities are being organized, that soldiers' wives and children may be given every opportunity for health and aid for maintaining standards for public health.

"Legal talent is mobilized to render every assistance to prevent inexperienced wives from suffering at the hands of loan sharks and unscrupulous agents of all kinds.

"Committees of big-hearted women have assumed the duty of bringing cheer and comfort to the worried and disheartened, consolation to the bereft, relief to those in need, and tactful guidance to those feeling the need for someone on whom to lean.

"The government feels that this war will be won 'greatly and worthily' only if at its close this nation is better off than before. One of the greatest hopes is that our soldiers, crippled in fighting for us, will not find it necessary to become vendors of shoe strings and lead pencils, inmates of almshouses or ordinary street beggars.

It is being demonstrated that physical disability need not entirely cut off earning ability. Through re-education and vocational training the crippled soldiers of France and Belgium have had removed from their vision pictures of pauperism and each may now know that he still may be busy, useful and happy.

"The government, through the surgeon general's office and that of the United States Vocational Guidance Bureau, will offer to our soldiers opportunities for happy, useful lives. Through education and re-education of disabled men, home service sections will have a great share in this work as chief co-operators and interpreters of the government's program; and their opportunities already are being outlined.

"Home service, therefore, contemplates the mobilization of the entire community and all communities for rendering every possible service both to the families of soldiers and to the returned soldier. The future history of Indiana will be measured largely by the quality of this service, as will also be the future history of the nation. Indiana, as usual, will be in the front ranks."

No Relaxation in Food Conservation

"Resolved, That while the increased production of the United States renders it possible to relax some of the restrictions which have been borne with peculiar hardship upon all our peoples, yet it is absolutely necessary that rigid economy and elimination of waste in the consumption and handling of all food stuffs, as well as increased production should be maintained throughout the European Allied countries and in North America. It is only by such economy and elimination of waste that the transportation of the necessary men and supplies from North America as an insurance against the ever present danger of harvest failures and the possible necessity for large and emergency drafts to Europe. We cannot administer the food problem on the basis of a one year's war. We must prepare for its long continuance if we are to insure absolute victory."

The above cablegram from Herbert C. Hoover, United States food administrator, has been received by Dr. Harry E. Barnard, federal food administrator for Indiana. Dr. Barnard announced in that connection that there is no necessity for a modification of plans in Indiana, that there has been no purpose to relax in any particular in the strict observance of the food regulations.

U. S. Employment Service

A large number of manufacturers in Indiana engaged in war work have neglected to mail in to L. C. Huesmann, federal labor director, reports covering their common labor requirements. A renewed appeal has been made that they file reports promptly with Mr. Huesmann, as otherwise the State "may be called upon for labor which should be retained at home."

In reference to the prohibition against the private recruiting of unskilled labor except under the direction of the U. S. Employment Service, the following resolution of the war industries board is made public by the employment service: "Be it resolved by the war industries board, that the practice of manufacturers using competitive peace-time methods in the procurement of labor, resulting in the withdrawal of labor from war industries, is strongly disapproved, and hereafter this board, through its priority division, will in proper cases withhold priority assistance from employers who persist in pursuing such methods."

It is announced by the employment service that in order that the service may be as effective as possible, it is highly important that each employer engaged in war work keep the local office of the U. S. Employment Service informed from day to day of his actual needs for unskilled labor. Special rules have been promulgated governing private labor recruiting to which all employers must conform if they desire the protection of the service and the Department of Labor.

A special regulation in reference to employers in non-war work follows: "Non-war industries should not offer superior inducements or in any other way undertake to compete for labor with the government or with employers engaged in war work. Observance of the letter and spirit of this provision is necessary for the efficient prosecution of the war. Methods of recruiting and of advertising which do not offend against it are permitted."

Helps in Using Substitute Foods

This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.

USING HONEY IN PLACE OF SUGAR.

Since sugar is so scarce, every housewife is wondering what she can use in its place. Honey is one of the substitutes that can and should be employed and especially should this be done by the woman who is fortunate enough to have the honey produced at home.

Last year, in this country, 250,000,000 pounds of honey were produced and probably a very small per cent of this was used in place of sugar in cookery. This year try using honey in other ways than as a substitute for jams or preserves in the menu.

The following recipes may prove helpful:

Bran Brown Bread.

- 1 cup graham flour.
- 1 teaspoon soda.
- ¼ teaspoon salt.
- 1 cup bran.
- ½ cup honey.
- 1 cup sour milk.
- ½ cup raisins floured.

Sift together the flour, soda and salt, and add the other ingredients. Steam 3 hours or bake 40 minutes in a slow oven.

Steamed Brown Bread.

- 1 cup yellow corn meal.
- 2 cups graham flour.

- 2/3 cup honey.
- 2 cups sour milk.
- 1 teaspoon salt.
- 1½ teaspoon soda.
- 1 tablespoon boiling water.
- 1 cup seeded raisins.

Mix together the meal, flour and salt; add the sour milk and the honey and then the soda dissolved in the boiling water; and the raisins. Steam 3 hours in covered receptacles which should not be more than two-thirds full at the beginning of the cooking.

Honey Drop Cakes.

- ¾ cup honey.
- ¼ cup fat.
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon.
- ½ teaspoon cloves.
- 1 egg.
- ½ teaspoon soda.
- 2 tablespoons water.
- 1½ to 2 cups flour.
- 1 cup raisins.

Heat the honey and fat until fat melts. While mixture is warm add the spices. When cold add part of flour, the egg well beaten, the soda dissolved in the water and the raisins. Add enough more flour to make a dough that will hold its shape. Drop by spoonfuls on a buttered tin and bake in a moderate oven.

Honey Drops.

- ¾ cup honey.
- ¼ cup fat.
- 1 egg.
- 1½ cups white flour.
- 1 cup substitute flour.
- ½ teaspoon soda.
- 2 tablespoons water.
- 1 cup raisins.
- Few grains salt.

Proceed as in above recipe.

Soft Honey Cake.

- 1/3 cup fat.
- 1 cup honey.
- 1 egg.
- ½ cup sour milk.
- 1 teaspoon soda.
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon.
- ½ teaspoon ginger.
- 4 cups substitute flours.

Cream fat and honey. Add well beaten egg, sour milk and flour sifted with soda and spices. Bake in shallow pan.

Honey Devils Food.

- ¼ cup fat.
- 1 cup honey.
- 2 squares chocolate.
- 1 egg.
- ½ teaspoon salt.
- ½ cup milk.
- 1½ cups barley or other flour.
- ½ teaspoon soda.
- 1 teaspoon baking powder.

Heat the fat, honey and chocolate until blended. Add yolk of egg, and when cool, the milk and sifted dry ingredients, alternately. Fold in the beaten whites of eggs. Bake in a moderate oven 40 minutes.

Cornstarch Pudding With Honey.

- 1 cup milk.
- 1 tablespoon corn starch.
- ¼ teaspoon salt.
- 3 tablespoons strained honey.

Proceed as for ordinary cornstarch pudding adding the honey just before removing from the fire. Place in molds to cool.

Baked Honey Custard.

- 2 eggs.
- ¼ teaspoon salt.
- 1/3 cup honey.
- 2 cups milk.

Beat eggs, add salt and honey, then hot milk. Bake in cups in pan of water until firm. Serve cold. Maple syrup may be used in place of honey.

The past can never be undone. The food you should have conserved will never reach a hungry mouth.

Radical Changes in Handling Allotments

Every Enlisted Man Must Make Same Compulsory Grant to His Wife and Children.

Washington.—The radical change in the method of handling allotments and family allowances, which was intended to speed up the delivery of Government checks to the dependents of soldiers and sailors, has been in satisfactory operation now for more than thirty days.

Under the modified arrangement every enlisted man in the military or naval service, regardless of rank or pay, must make the same compulsory allotment to his wife and children, $15 a month. To this allotment the Government will add a monthly allowance ranging from $5 a month for a motherless child, and $15 for a wife without children, up to a maximum of $50.

In addition, if the enlisted man desires Government allowances for his dependent parents, grandparents, grandchildren, brothers and sisters, he may make voluntary allotments to them—fixed by the new amendments at $5 a month, where allotments is made to a wife and children, and $15 where no such allotment is made.

Under the new amendments a father through adoption and mother through adoption will be considered the same as a natural father and mother and will have the same rights to allotments and allowances.

Formerly, allotments were on a sliding scale and varied accordingly to the soldiers' pay or the numbers and personnel of his family.

The new system will simplify the administration of allotments and allowances. Henceforth the Bureau of War-Risk Insurance will handle allotments of only two amounts, $15 or $20.

The amounts of family allowances paid by the Government to supplement these allotments are not changed by the amended law.

Beginning with July pay, the Bureau of War-Risk Insurance handle allotments only to support family allowances—and then only in the amounts required by law to support such allowances. The excess allotments, and allotments to persons not entitled to allowances, will be handled by the War Department, Navy Department, Marine Corps or Coast Guard.

Approximately 5,000,000 checks have been issued to date by the Bureau of War-Risk Insurance. Checks are being mailed at the rate of more than 40,000 a day.

Committee on Construction

The following report of the Committee on Proposed Construction was adopted by the Indiana State Council of Defense at its meeting August 7th:

To the Indiana State Council of Defense:

Your Committee on Proposed Construction reports as follows:

1. We recommend to the Knox County Council of Defense, co-operation between the county officials and the contractor in the repair of the so-called Ewing road rather than immediately attempting to complete the contract, our recommendation being in line with the policy dictated to us by the National Council of Defense.

2. In the matter of a proposed reconstruction of a garage building at Greenwood, Indiana, it is the sense of the committee that the action of the Johnson County Council of Defense, in permitting such construction, be not disapproved.

3. The action of the Johnson County Council of Defense in postponing the construction of a school building in Salt Creek Township, is approved, and the patriotic attitude of the council in complying with the suggestions of the national council is heartily commended.

Respectfully submitted,

Every Hoosier Wanted in a United States Food Club

(By C. V. Stainsby, Assistant to Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.)

One of the unique features of Indiana's war activities is the organization of United States food clubs by the Indiana division of the U. S. Food Administration. Through these clubs the food administration will be able to emphasize more clearly the vital relationship between food and the war. Every home in the state will be enrolled when the work is finished. Nothing less than a determination to render the greatest possible contribution to the nation's war needs would have prompted such a gigantic task. The food administration for Indiana, however, shares the true Hoosier belief in thoroughness and knows that Indiana will point with pride to the loyalty with which her citizens fought the great food battle.

The work of organizing the U. S. food clubs began last spring and so far has resulted in the formation of about fifteen hundred clubs. This means that the work is about one-third done. The beginning of such a movement is naturally slow, as it means the development of an entirely new idea. The food clubs have secured a footing of some sort in all but four counties. The way has been prepared. From now on the food administration expects more rapid progress in finishing up the actual work of organization. When the clubs are formed their usefulness will continue for some time after the war is over.

Plans are under way now for a great food club drive to complete the organization of the clubs by the end of September. It is advisable that this work be done before the next Liberty Loan drive commences. The county and township presidents of U. S. food clubs are endeavoring to complete the organizations in their respective territories by the prescribed date. When the work is finished Indiana will have a gigantic machine, which will guarantee the highest degree of co-operation between the Hoosier citizens and Uncle Sam, in safeguarding our food supplies for the sake of those who are endeavoring to stamp out forever the Prussian menace.

Every resident of Indiana should be interested in the U. S. food clubs and ready to help. They can contribute to the success of the war program by getting in touch with their county or township president and preparing the way for a new club. All information regarding the clubs and the names of the leaders in the various communities may be secured by writing to the Food Club Division, U. S. Food Administration, for Indiana, Indianapolis.

Food Administration

Bulletin No. 159.

August 7, 1918.

LIMIT OF PURCHASES OF SUGAR FOR CANNING PURPOSES.

On and after Monday, August 12, 1918, no sugar permit for the purchase of sugar for canning purposes will be issued for more than ten pounds. The total allotment of sugar to each family for this purpose for the remainder of the season shall not exceed 12½ pounds per member.

If you have conclusive evidence that any person or family has obtained excessive amounts of sugar, or has obtained sugar illegally, you will give such person or family no further permission to purchase sugar for canning purposes.

These limitations are made necessary by the gross abuse of the liberal privileges granted under previous regulations.

RETURN OF SUGAR CERTIFICATES EXPIRING JULY 15, 1918.

All sugar certificates expiring July 15, 1918, and not used prior to that date, are null and void, and must be returned to the sugar division of this office. These certificates will not be accepted by wholesalers or jobbers for the purchase of sugar.

ALL APPLICATIONS FOR SUGAR MUST BEAR THE PROPER FIRM NAME.

The work of the sugar division of this office is increased and much confusion created because many small candy stores and ice cream parlors operate under more than one firm name. For instance, sugar statements have been received signed by the "Greek Candy Company," the "Greek Candy Kitchen," and by an individual, which upon investigation were found to be from one and the same firm.

That we may facilitate the work of the sugar division and obtain an equitable distribution of our limited sugar supply, we desire that you give us a list of all businesses in your county of the type mentioned above, indicating the firm name under which the business is conducted. Notify the proprietors of all such places that they must make all applications to this office under the proper firm name, and that all attempts to secure more than a fair allotment of sugar by evasion or otherwise will be punished by the permanent withdrawal of supplies.

Sincerely yours,

H. E. BARNARD.

Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

The ban on the use of macaroni, spaghetti, noodles, vermicelli and wheat alphabet has been raised, effective August 7. A bulletin states that the use of these wheat products will be permitted "until further notice" and bases the concession upon the fact that "the situation in regard to wheat has eased up." All public eating places are affected by the notice.

For having served three teaspoonfuls of sugar and five ounces of bread to a customer at one meal, the M. & R. restaurant of Fort Wayne has been closed for one week. A regulation limits sugar service in restaurants to one teaspoonful and the United States food regulations fix the amount of bread to a customer at one meal to two ounces.

J. R. Morgan, county food administrator for Howard county, discovered proof of hoarding in the residence of Fred Adler, 724 South Lindsay street, Kokomo. He confiscated two 10-pound bags of sugar, three 5-pound bags and seven 2-pound bags and a 25-pound bag of flour, in excess of a thirty day supply. He sold the surplus and permitted Adler to pay $25 to the Red Cross, in lieu of more serious consequences for violating the food control law which provides for a fine up to $5,000 and prison sentence up to two years for hoarding.

Releases of hotels, restaurants and homes from their pledge to do without wheat until after the 1918 harvest, announced during the past week by the federal food administration, should not be misconstrued to mean that they are privileged to use wheat flour entirely without substitutes. Hotels and restaurants are required to use thirty-three and one-third per cent of wheat flour substitutes in all sweet goods baked and served, and twenty-five per cent of wheat flour substitutes in all bread and rolls. Householders are still held to the 50-50 rule in the purchase and use of wheat flour, and are asked to ration themselves and their establishments to a maximum consumption of 1½ pounds of wheat flour per person per week.

Fred A. Stewart, county food administrator for Daviess county, Indiana, has given the separator men for all threshing outfits within his jurisdiction the power of deputy food administrator. It will be the separator man's duty—and he has the authority—to give orders in regard to pitching grain into the feeder, or any other orders that would save more grain. Persons disobeying his orders will be reported to the Government for willful waste. The willful waste of any food product fit for human consumption is punishable by law under the Food Control Act.

Let's remember in this sugar fight that the motto of Foch is "Attack," and the method of our boys, "Fight as long as the fighting is good—and then some more." So "Up and at 'em!"

Appeals to Councils To Save Tomato Crop

Food Administration Says it is a Patriotic Duty to Prevent Loss of Food.

County Councils of Defense have been requested by Dr. Harry E. Barnard, federal food administrator for Indiana, to co-operate with the Indiana canners in saving the unprecedented tomato crop. The importance of saving all food-stuffs is emphasized as a patriotic duty and councils are urged to take the same attitude toward the tomato pack they manifested in the shock troops which saved the wheat. To the canners of the State Dr. Barnard has addressed the following:

"The U. S. Food Administration is very much interested in preventing any loss of the record-breaking tomato crop this year. The food situation is such that we can not afford to lose a single ounce for any preventable reason. I am addressing you with the idea of calling your attention to the continued vital significance of food in reference to the war, and urge that you exert every possible effort to contribute a maximum pack to the world's food supply.

"I appreciate the difficulties you will have to overcome in order to take care of the heavy yield over a tremendous acreage, but I feel you are equal to the task and that the Food Administration may be assured that you will rise above all obstacles and permit nothing to discourage your efforts.

"You should approach this task with a consciousness that you are doing a patriotic work, and that considerations of personal convenience have no place in the present emergency. The world is crying for food, and it is incumbent upon us to see to it that our soldiers and sailors and the armies and civilians of the allied nations have everything necessary to sustain them, that lies within our power to provide. There is no more substantial contribution possible toward the support of the war than the conservation of our 1918 food crops, a fact I urge you to keep always foremost in your minds, to the end that we waste nothing of that which nature has so bountifully supplied. You are justified in setting aside all precedents that your tomato crop be saved. Let it not be said that any Indiana canner, because of any influences over which he had control permitted the loss of a single ounce of the valuable 1918 harvest. I urge that you call upon councils of defense and other patriotic agencies for such physical and moral support as you may need, to accomplish this purpose. I am addressing a letter to county councils in your behalf and for the sake of the food supply, which continues our most important responsibility, here at home."

Sedition Must Be Stamped Out By Lawful Means

OHIO WAR BOARD.

Mob violence and lawless treatment of persons suspected of disloyalty is strongly denounced by President Wilson, speaking for the United States Government.

The Council of National Defense, in a bulletin just issued, in line with the President's statement points out that such actions "are blots upon the war record of a nation which has declared itself to be fighting for universal reign of law; they furnish munitions to those makers of enemy propaganda who are trying to make the world believe that the enemies of Germany too are capable of atrocities."

However patriotic may have been the motives which prompted outbursts of lawlessness, their only effect is to embarrass the Government and weaken the fighting power of the country.

Sedition must be stamped out by lawful means and by lawful means only; and differences and disputes adjusted, not by voluntary or self constituted committees, but by official authority.

Every Citizen of Indiana Must Become a Part of the Machinery

Special Bulletin Calls for the Further Development of the Work of the Township and Community Councils of Defense

"The extension of the organization to include every citizen in the State must be ultimately accomplished. Washington insists upon it, and Indiana has never yet failed to respond fully to even the slightest suggestion from that source," says Bulletin No. 172 addressed to the chairman and members of county councils of defense in Indiana. The bulletin conveys the following suggestions regarding the purpose, organization and operation of the smaller defense units, which are commended for the careful attention and consideration of the county councils:

TOWNSHIP COUNCILS OF DEFENSE

Township Councils of Defense constitute the final and immediate connecting link between the individual citizen and the chain of organizations which extends up to the United States Government. The Township Council of Defense is directly under the control of the County Council of Defense, which is organized under the direction of the State Council of Defense. The State Council of Defense, in turn, is directly under the Council of National Defense.

The prime object of the Township Councils of Defense is to provide a channel through which every patriotic resident may be enlisted in war work. The simplest and surest way to transform a man or woman whose patriotism is weak or inactive is to secure his actual participation, no matter to what small extent, in some definite line of civilian war work.

There are many features of civilian war work which can be handled to advantage only through local councils, specially built and equipped for the task.

Publicity When properly organized, the Township Council affords the Government a channel through which every patriotic resident in the community may be reached with a message in the shortest possible time. Such a message carries with it a personal appeal of far greater strength than any message could possibly be transmitted through the newspapers, by mail, billboards or otherwise.

The securing of adequate newspaper publicity to the Government's messages to the people is a problem of increasing difficulty. In the smaller towns and in the rural districts, it is next to impossible to secure publicity which will effectively and quickly reach every householder without an organization of a wide, popular membership. The smaller newspapers can not afford to print long explanations and appeals, and the great majority are published but once a week. From a consideration of publicity alone, the Township Council of Defense is well-nigh indispensable.

Vigilance Next in importance is the handling of disloyalty—that sort of disloyalty which violates no law but which strikes deeply and furtively when allowed to spread unchecked. The township council, composed naturally of the highest type of our citizens, becomes the center of patriotic thought and work within the community and disloyal or unloyal persons soon learn to respect public opinion as directed and clearly and openly expressed through the township council. All over the Nation half-hearted men and women are being brought to take a stand firmly and sincerely with the Government through the intelligent, fearless use of the unified strength of our local citizens. While persons actually pro-German in their sympathy, either because of foreign birth or other personal environment, can rarely be brought to FEEL right, they may be made to ACT right and thus be prevented from influencing others.

Make for Responsibility Another great advantage to be found in the wide-spread organization of township councils is that it enables the Federal or State government, or the National, State or County Council of Defense to quickly secure the right man or woman to take charge locally of any specific task—whether of a permanent nature or whether for some temporary purpose. The old saying that "Everybody's business is nobody's business" has a particularly apt significance in times of stress.

Co-ordination and Centralization of Activities

The ideal arrangement would bring to the Township Councils of Defense the control and responsibility for the success of every branch of civic war work, including sales of Liberty Bonds, all the details of food conservation and production, sales of War Savings Stamps, commercial and individual economy programs, raising funds for the Red Cross and other war charities, under the direction of the local manager or representative of the official department at Washington (if the work falls within the scope of such department), who will work through the County Council of Defense. There are several counties in Indiana where such an arrangement is completed. In the last Red Cross fund campaign, the county manager of the Red Cross drive in several counties simply notified the chairmen of the Township Councils of Defense, through the County Councils of Defense, the amount which was expected of their townships, and the township councils using the machinery already in existence, reached out to every citizen and raised their quota, sometimes within three hours after commencing work. There were no parades, no brass bands and no foot-sore committeemen patiently wondering why the other fellows didn't help. In communities such as these, if the Government should ask the nation for all surplus supplies of some material, or should ask that all citizens cease using some certain article for a specified period of time, the same machinery would be brought into use, without the loss of a single hour in organization.

Active Township Councils of Defense must and will be of the utmost value to the fuel and food administrators as long as the war lasts.

There are many other ends—just as important—which may be gained through well organized township councils, but too much emphasis can not be laid upon the necessity of there being a definite, extensive, active group of citizens in the community which may be turned to for help in any kind of war work with the assurance that the work will be done promptly and carefully, without lost motion, conflict of authority or duplication of effort.

ORGANIZATION

The County Council of Defense should designate some one member as its director of township councils to supervise the extension of machinery into every section of the county. It is impossible to lay down the procedure which will fit every part of the State, but it is believed that the following suggestions will have a more or less distinct bearing on the success in every county:

1. ENABLE EVERY LOYAL CITIZEN TO BECOME A MEMBER. Bear in mind constantly that the primary aim is to build a network broad enough to touch every corner in the county and bring to every citizen the realization that he can demonstrate his loyalty in no better way than by joining the Township Council of Defense. A pledge card or some other definite manifestation of loyalty should be required, but care should be taken not to discourage men and women from joining because they are not able to undertake an unusual amount of work for the township. The ultimate aim should be to secure so wide a membership, either active or associate, that for one to refuse to be a member would be universally regarded as an indication that he is not in sympathy with our nation's participation in the war.

2. AVOID CONFLICT WITH EXISTING ORGANIZATIONS. While the National and State Councils of Defense discourage the organization of new movements for patriotic co-operation, believing that the field is already too well filled, no coercion should be attempted on existing societies or organizations of volunteers. Those whose purposes are similar to or identical with the aims of the township council should be approached at the earliest possible date and urged to join in the work of organizing the community as a whole, under the direction of the county council. It may be possible, in some instances, to simply take over the membership of some organization and use it as the nucleus of a committee of the township council. Care should be taken to have the broad scope of the movement well understood throughout the township, in order that criticism may be avoided that rightly attaches to an effort to form a useless or duplicate machinery.

3. SEE ALL OFFICIALS PROMPTLY AND ASK THEIR CO-OPERATION. Local representatives of the State and Federal departments doing war work; local food administrators, local fuel administrators, War Savings Stamp committeemen, Liberty Loan committeemen, representatives of the labor department, mayors and other municipal officers, heads of patriotic leagues already formed, Red Cross, fourteen minute women and four minute men, are in a position to be of great assistance to the township councils, not only in their organization but in their operation, and they should be made to feel that their assistance is desired and that they in turn will receive the full co-operation of the council.

4. EMPHASIZE THE ULTIMATE AIM OF THE ORGANIZATION. Show that the effort is to reduce the present duplication, rather than to add to it. Explain at every opportunity that where the township council is well organized it is rapidly becoming the single recognized agency for all patriotic work.

5. MAKE "CO-ORDINATION" A PRACTICAL REALITY. The organization of the township councils may be delayed more or less by the numerous inefficient attempts which have been made to co-ordinate the civilian war work and it is necessary that we emphasize again and again the importance of building an organization of such strength in personnel and representation that it will become the vehicle for all local patriotic work. This must include the supervision of the volunteer work in the township, as well as the responsibility for seeing that the official work is carried out promptly and successfully. Efforts must not be relaxed because the work is already being well done by a group of disconnected organizations. Work to get them connected. A strong organization may not be absolutely necessary to carry out some specific task, such as selling a certain amount of bonds or distributing a number of pledge cards, but for many of the tasks ahead of us, an organization of the best men and women in the township will be an absolute essential and such an organization can not be built unless all the existing agencies are merged in one. This need not affect the authority of the local director or manager of each movement or campaign in the slightest degree. He merely has to request from the county council the services of the township councils and, in doing this, assumes the direction of an existing, efficient and representative organization.

6. FORM AN ACTIVE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE. In order that interest in the township council may not be allowed to lapse in the intervals between the specific tasks called for by the Federal or State authorities a strong and compact executive committee should be selected by each township council. The State Council of Defense will endeavor from time to time to furnish suggestions which will prevent this lapse of interest, but the success of the township council will rest absolutely on the thought and effort of the executive committee. This committee should promptly adopt a program for the purpose of keeping interest alive. The following suggestions may be helpful to it:

Secure copies of publications of the Committee on Public Information and plan a program for reaching the membership with all classes of propaganda; carry on a constant campaign to off-set the danger of or the desire for a premature peace; keep in touch with the State Council's Committee on Americanization and the work being done by it (chairman, John H. Holliday, Union Trust Co., Indianapolis); exchange ideas to assist in food conservation and production program, fire protection, sales of Thrift Stamps and Liberty Bonds, approved methods of personal and business economy, releasing man-power from non-essential work, welfare or local men in the army and navy, assistance to local Red Cross chapter, particularly in civilian relief (the active members of the township councils should make themselves familiar with the wide duties of the home service or civilian relief section of the Red Cross and be on guard against duplication by other organization. Strengthen the Red Cross if it needs help but do not allow other persons or organizations to enter the Red Cross field.

PROCEDURE IN ORGANIZING TOWNSHIP COUNCILS.

After the above suggestions have been carefully considered by the county council in the light of local needs, a director of township councils should be appointed and a meeting should be arranged in each township to which all patriotic citizens should be invited. A careful canvas should be made and it should be arranged that every man or woman who would be a valuable member is personally urged to be present. At the meeting, read to the audience all of the above suggestions regarding the purpose and the organization of the township councils. A chairman and a secretary and an executive committee should then be elected with the understanding that any of these officers may be vacated by the county council upon a showing of inefficiency, lack of interest, or for any reason which may be for the good of the organization. A publicity director should also be selected and he should be a man who is willing to work hard.

If possible, the county councils should prepare cards bearing a pledge of patriotic service. These should be signed at the meeting by all present and should be filed with the secretary. It is suggested that the members sign either as "active" or "associate," the only difference being that the active members volunteer to participate in the carrying out of the actual routine work incidental to the tasks arising from time to time.

INDIANA STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

To Catalogue Wild Birds Indiana Children's Task

Under the title "WHAT ONE FAMILY IS DOING FOR PLAY WEEK," Mrs. Max West, writing for the Children's Bureau, of the United States Department of Labor, says:

The mother of five lively young children who wants them to have part in the Patriotic Play Week for which the Children's Year workers are now making ready, has devised a new way of helping children to get ready for Play Week an exhibit that will show how much they know about their own home town and the fields and woods about it. She believes that now when everyone is alert to the needs of the country there is an unusual opportunity to foster in young children the love of the place in which they live and to persuade them to assume some responsibility for making and keeping their home towns desirable places in which to live. It is this spirit of pride in the neighborhood that will grow into the sense of civic and national responsibility which is the foundation of good citizenship.

The Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor wishes other mothers to have the benefit of this mother's suggestion. Her plan is to interest children in learning about the town, competing with one another in seeing who can learn the most interesting facts about its history. Possibly some of its present day civic undertakings can be described. What the children learn can be shown in ways they should be urged themselves to devise—the facts they have learned can be written in stories, or listed and illustrated to make one of the Play Week exhibits. Study of the flowers and trees, shrubs and birds can result in the same sort of exhibit. This is the way she describes her idea:

In a certain place in Indiana there are said to be more wild birds than in any other one place in this country, because there the birds from north, south, east and west meet. To catalog all the birds that come there would be not only a delightful piece of work for boys and girls but a task of real value to the State. Doubtless this listing has already been well done, but it illustrates the kind of things that older children and young people may undertake in their various communities. To learn to know the trees that grow in one's own yard, on the street near the house, or in the entire town well enough to be able to list them all is a summer's outdoor task that is worth while now and will always be a source of enjoyment. In addition to the making of lists a collection of leaves from each tree can be gathered, pressed, and labeled, and will add to the value of the collection. The same things may be done with shrubs and to some extent with flowers, although they present greater difficulties. Stones, soils, minerals, weeds, grasses, and fruits may all be catalogued in the same way.

Photographs would of course add much to this sort of collection, but usually will be beyond the reach of the younger children. However, a supply of blueprint paper and a photograph printing frame will afford a great amount of pleasure to a boy or girl old enough to use them properly. Leaves, insects, grasses and other things may be printed in this way, and the prints may be used for scrap books or to adorn homemade Christmas presents.

Another fascinating field of pleasurable occupation for somewhat older boys and girls would be the classification of historic monuments in the place, such as very old residences, trees, streets, mountains, and other landmarks, interesting either historically, or because of their conspicuous beauty. In addition to the list, each name should be accompanied by a brief explanation and, if possible, by a photograph. Such a piece of work may very well lead to the preservation of trees, houses or streets from despoilation in future years. If a section of the Lincoln Highway or other National road passes through the town, that stretch might be chosen for the work, and appropriate tablets put up to point out the objects of interest. In all such work a certain amount of judicious advice and suggestion from fathers and mothers is needed, but in every community there can be found some man or woman glad to interest himself in it and give an occasional hour to meet the boys and girls to talk over their plans. Some fortunate young people will have among them a nature lover who will accompany them on their walks and excursions. In a few rare communities the whole wonderful scheme of Nature is opened up to the young people by the fact that a bird sanctuary has been established there, and that men and women who love birds and flowers live there and are glad to help the young people of the place to acquire the same sort of appreciation of the out of doors.

Poultry Culling Campaign.

A new move in food production and conservation has been inaugurated in Indiana with the start of a poultry culling campaign by Purdue University.

Poultry men from the university started this week on a series of culling demonstrations, four of which will be given in each county, to show how to pick out the layers from the loafers. This work is being done as a step to save feed which would be wasted when fed to a chicken that isn't even earning its board by its egg production.

In one poultry yard in White County where a flock of 66 chickens was kept, 22 were discarded as unprofitable. The poultry men discarded them because they were loafing. The 66 hens averaged 16 eggs a day for the week preceding the demonstration. In the four days after, the 44 remaining in the flock laid 20 eggs a day, while the 22 produced only an average of two and a half eggs. The owner figured that the feed which the non-layers would consume until late fall, when he had intended to market them, would cost him 25 cents per chicken. As a result of this work he knows how to build up his poultry flock with layers instead of loafers, and the feed he buys will be manufactured into eggs.

Fight to conserve; conserve to fight.

Answers to Questions on Student Nurse Drive

Bulletin No. 91.

Indianapolis, Ind., August 5, 1918.

To the Woman Member of the County Council of Defense:

In connection with the recruiting of students for the student nurse reserve, we have been asked the following additional questions, and take this means of answering those who have asked the questions, and at the same time getting the information to others of our chairmen:

1. Married women are eligible for the student nurse reserve, but they will be placed in the civilian hospitals only. However, a student nurse serving in a civilian hospital is rendering as great a service to her country as she would be in the military hospital, as regardless of where she serves she releases a trained nurse for the Red Cross.

2. Many schools accept student nurses who are common school graduates, if their experience after leaving school has been favorable. This does not mean experience in nursing, but in business, for instance.

Above information has been received from Washington today.

3. We have no way of knowing when a candidate will be called into service. All those who enroll in the student nurse reserve put themselves at the disposal of the government, and as soon as needed the government will call them. However, there would be no objection to stating on the application blank that a candidate wishes to enter service at as early date as possible.

4. Entrance into the army nursing school does not compel service overseas. The student nurse is at liberty to leave the training school when she chooses, and the training school is at liberty to dismiss the student when they see fit. Of course it is the intention that all those who enroll do so with the idea of completing the course.

5. After completing her training and successfully passing an examination, a married woman is permitted to go overseas if she desires.

Washington has not received a full supply of enrollment cards and asks that we use the enrollment blank on the last page of the pamphlet "Enrollment of United States Student Nurse Reserve." If you need more of these pamphlets we can send them to you from this office.

Please do not send application blanks or enrollment cards alone to this office. The enrollment cards should be attached to application blanks, certificates of study, etc.

Very truly yours,

MRS. ARTHUR B. GROVER,
Committee for Recruiting Student Nurses.

Hearing the Food Cry.

A woman living in the Kentucky mountains told a social worker recently: "I hear there is an awful feud going on somewhere. Is it true?"

The fact that there is a war is only just beginning to penetrate those mountain fastnesses.

A woman in one of the rich agricultural districts of an eastern State is still serving meat every day in the week and white bread every meal. Since the "fifty-fifty" order in buying flour was issued, she was heard to remark: "My pantry shelf is getting loaded down with that breakfast foodstuff that I have to buy nowadays and the only way I can get rid of it is to feed it to the chickens."

The fact of war has not yet penetrated her fastness.

There are still too many fastnesses where the seriousness of the food problem has not yet seemed to penetrate. They are found in our big cities and in our richest agricultural valleys just as often as in the mountains of Kentucky.

The ignorance of the poor Kentucky woman is pitiful and forgivable, but the indifference of the other woman is lamentable and unpardonable. Unless the conservation cry is heard and heeded by all women, the food problem of America will not be solved.

Council Approves An Increase in Acreage

More Wheat and Larger Pork Production the Object of Drive by Food Committee.

J. O. Beck, secretary of the Tippecanoe County Council of Defense, appeared before the Indiana State Council of Defense at its meeting August 7, and explained the attitude and policy of that body toward chautauquas proposed for Tippecanoe County. Mr. Beck read a letter written to a certain chautauqua management in behalf of the council, pointing out the existing labor shortage, particularly in agricultural work, and recommended that out of such consideration there be no chautauqua held in Lafayette. Where contracts had been made, Mr. Beck said, the council was not disposed to interfere. The State Council approved the action of the council in so far as it relates to Tippecanoe County.

Charles Fox of the Labor committee reported that the management of the Standard Wheel Works at Terre Haute, where 100 war workers are on strike, had agreed to abide by the finding of a representative of the Federal War Industries Board. On Mr. Fox's motion, the council approved a request for mediation on the part of the board, with the recommendation that such action be taken promptly.

T. A. Coleman, in behalf of the Committee on Food Production and Conservation, reported that further inquiry into alleged profiteering in the retailing of fertilizer had failed to disclose any evidence of such practice. Mr. Coleman agreed to continue his investigations, however, and report further to the council if the facts warranted.

In behalf of the Committee on Food Production and Conservation, plans for a 17 per cent wheat acreage increase in Indiana were stated by Mr. Coleman. He related further the efforts of the committee to eradicate rust and stinking smut in wheat. The council indorsed the program, and will co-operate with the committee in putting it into effect. Mr. Coleman further informed the council that plans are on foot for a campaign to increase pork production in Indiana.

The Food committee was requested to make a survey of uncultivated land in the state through the county agricultural agents. Efforts will be made to secure the cultivation of all land offering a prospective yield sufficient to justify the effort.

In reply to inquiries Carl Sims, chairman of the milling division of the federal food administration in Indiana, stated "an estimated fair price for Indiana number one wheat is $2.11 per bushel, based upon an export price of $23.05."

Mr. Coleman presented to the council the increasing difficulties of keeping county agricultural agents "on the job." He said that many are leaving to join the army, and there are now six vacancies in the state. The council heard a resolution from the Food committee approving the work of the agents.

Frank Wampler, Samuel T. Murdock and H. R. Kurrie were named to investigate alleged discrimination against men in uniform taking vocational training at Purdue university. It was reported to the council that privileges accorded students at the university are being denied to the soldiers.

The council accepted an invitation to meet jointly with the Committee on Food Production and Conservation as the guests of George Ade and Warren T. McCray, at Mr. Ade's home, Hazelden Farm, Brook, Ind., August 14. Mr. McCray is chairman of the Food committee.

Mr. Murdock was presented to the council as the successor in its membership to Thomas Taggart, who resigned. Mr. Murdock is a resident of Indianapolis.

Patrioteering

By BOOTH TARKINGTON.

"When the German-Americans, as we call them, found that our country was in the war, they erased the hyphen. The hyphen is gone forever. * * * In our country there are only American citizens." I quote the above from a recent article issued by the "Vigilantes," and I believe the facts to be virtually as stated. But if they were not, and if the hyphen did actually here and there remain alive, would not the most sensible policy treat it as dead, and at least assume it to be dead, wherever it showed no virulent signs of life? In other words, men cannot be goaded into loyalty; they only accumulate a sense of injury under the goad. And it was never more important than at this present time that we should avoid injustice to any citizen. Suspicion, rumor, and coincidence of circumstance should influence neither our judgments nor our actions; much less should we vent our passions against Germany upon the person of him whom we called the German-American.

I speak from the standpoint of one who bitterly opposed the German-American position on the war prior to the American entrance, April, 1917. But the sympathy of the German-American with the German cause, prior to that date, if rightly comprehended, does not imply a sympathy continuing beyond that date, though to many minds this is either an impossible paradox or a symptom of credulity imposed upon by almost barefaced hypocrisy. It is neither. The German-American, beholding a war between Germany and the allies, sided with Germany. He had not been alienated from Germany as the rest of us had been alienated (by the Revolutionary War) from England. He saw merely a contest between foreign powers and sided with that from which he sprang. But when his own country came to actual war with Germany the German-American found himself to be an American. Nevertheless, it is hard for him to show his patriotism when we say to him: "Now, you dirty German-American, drop your tricks and speak up! Repeat these words in a loud shout: 'I am an American and I love the flag,' and if you don't shout loud enough we'll kick you, and maybe we'll kick you anyhow!" Such instruction does not seem quite statesmanlike, or over-Christianlike, either.

Margaret Deland, lately returned from France, says that over there, not long ago, a company of German prisoners, just captured, were being sent back from the front, when they encountered an American regiment, largely from Wisconsin, moving up to the trenches. Many of the Wisconsin troops were of German origin; some among them, indeed, could hardly speak English, and the prisoners were astonished to be greeted noisily and garrulously in their own tongue. They were even more astonished at the nature of the comments which these strange Germans from America made upon them. In fact, the episode was unnamable. Oaths in the German tongue were frequent and intensive. The German-speaking men of the Wisconsin regiment cursed the captured German soldiers with an inhospitable frankness very shocking to the prisoners, who had been passed in silence by other American regiments, and had received cigarettes from a battalion of English. Words like "Dummkopf" and "Schweinhund" were employed with prophetic expletives; and the general sense of what the Wisconsin men said to their German cousins was as follows: "You dashed-blinded jackasses and idiots, we and our fathers left your old Fatherland and went four thousand miles to live in a better place. Now we have to come all the way back, four thousand miles again yet, to slaughter you, because you haven't got any more sense than to believe and obey that old pig-dog of a Kaiser! We'll send your Kaiser and princess to sheol, where they can't do any more harm; and as for you, dunderheads, you ought to be handgled for making us all this trouble of coming over here to teach you some sense with our bayonets!"

The citizens once called German-Americans will work out their own salvation if we do not make it too hard for them. What man can show enthusiasm for anything, when he is threatened with punishment if he is not enthusiastic? Loyalty is a feeling; it is not a spoken word. You cannot possibly produce a beautiful feeling in any man by threatening him or prosecuting him. Let us not threaten at all, and let us prosecute only when we have evidence. Is it certain evidence that a man is loyal if he have a son in the American army? No. There were rebels in '63 who had sons in the Northern armies. Is it certain evidence that a man is disloyal if he have a son in the German army? No. There were loyal Union men in '64 who had sons fighting for the South. So it may be now. There are American citizens who have relatives in the German army and other relatives in the American army. Here and there is an American citizen who has one son in the American army and another son in the German army. Let us go gently with a fellow-citizen who finds himself in such a position. It is a hard enough one, without the additional burden of his neighbors' suspicions. If his conduct be loyal, then in heaven's name let us believe him loyal.

The finest answer Germany has had from any source is the loyalty of the "German-Americans" to America; and that was the answer of all most galling to Germany. Let us not punish them—now, when their boys are dying in the American cause—let us not punish them for sins that are not theirs. Let us not patrioteer at their expense. Let us not patrioteer at all. The war is too serious for patrioteering.

before it gets wet and damaged. My employer says he is satisfied with my work. I have invested all my savings in War Savings Stamps and Liberty Bonds and now am ready to climb aboard a battle plane and drop bombs on Berlin. I have tried my best to oppose two German boys instead of one this summer and have not stopped and will not stop till America wins.

Treating Seed Wheat for Smut.

In a recent number of the Bulletin an incorrect statement was made relative to the treatment of seed wheat for loose and stinking smut. A. T. Wiancko of the Soils and Crop Department of Purdue, says:

"Two kinds of smut are troublesome on wheat, the loose smut and the stinking smut. The stinking smut is especially troublesome because of its injury to the quality of the flour made from the wheat. Loose smut completely destroys the heads and may greatly lessen the yield. In many sections loose smut is especially troublesome this year and must receive attention. The stinking smut is easily prevented by using disinfectants, such as formaldehyde, on the seed because the spores are carried on the surface of the kernel. The loose smut being carried within the kernel is harder to kill and requires the hot water treatment. This hot water treatment is difficult to apply under farm conditions, and the best thing to do is to get seed free from this disease.

"The Formaldehyde Treatment for Stinking Smut: Make a solution of one pint of formaldehyde to 50 gallons of water and thoroughly moisten the seed with this by means of a sprinkling can and repeated shoveling over and turning. The wheat should be thoroughly moistened but not wet enough to pack in the hand. A gallon of the solution will treat about two bushels. After thoroughly shoveling over, make up into a pile and cover with a tarpaulin, blankets or bags for at least two hours. Then spread out to dry. It may be sown at once or, if properly dried, may be stored for later use. Bags and bins should be disinfected to avoid reinfection. Any drug store can supply the formaldehyde."

Boys' Reserve Basis of National Strength

Plans Under Consideration Would Provide Against Serious Shortage of Labor.

Organization of 1,000,000 youths to do industrial work, take military training in preparation for later army service, and at the same time attend specially arranged vocational or technical schools, is planned by the Government as a means of dealing with the growing shortage of labor, without drawing boys away from their schooling. The plan comprehends also encouraging boys who are not in day school to attend free night vocational classes, where they will be given instruction in gunsmithing, motor mechanics and other technical branches, as well as military drill. The boys will be uniformed and by taking advantage of this pre-vocational work will not only be in line for warrants as non-commissioned officers upon reaching military age, but will have the opportunity for developing such skill as will later enable them to qualify for admission to commissioned officers' training camps.

If plans now under consideration by the General Staff of the War Department are consummated, the corps will be developed through extension of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, which already has enrolled 250,000 boys between the ages of 16 and 21, engaged mainly this summer in farm work. Many of the boys will go back to school in the fall, but a large proportion, together with others to be enrolled, will be directed into part-time industrial work to fill vacancies left by men now being called to the colors.

Defer Opening Schools.

Another feature of the program for drawing on the great reservoir of young labor involves the postponing of the opening of the schools to about October 15th for the boys now at work on farms throughout the country. This will apply only to those boys and not to all pupils. Definite plans are now being worked out through the Federal Bureau of Education. Local school authorities will be asked to provide special speeded up classes for those boys engaged in farm work who remain out of school for several weeks at the beginning of the term. This plan was worked successfully in many localities last year and soon enabled such boys to catch up with their classes.

Education of Youth Emphasized.

Without this plan for an industrial army of youths, hundreds of thousands of boys would quit school, according to W. E. Hall, Director of the Boys' Working Reserve, to take big paying jobs as helpers in industrial plants, and their education would be curtailed. Not only will this plan serve to train boys for service in technical branches of the army upon reaching military age, but it will help reduce the alarming mortality in high school enrollment. In this connection, Mr. Hall calls attention to the fact that when this war is over the world will call for its educated young men to step forward and take the places of their older brothers who have died gloriously on the battle field. Tremendous problems of reconstruction and replacing the destruction wrought by war will confront us. It is on the shoulders of the educated young men of America that this burden will fall. Surely, by applying himself faithfully to his work in school this winter the American boy is training for the service of his country just as much as is the soldier who is training for the trenches.

Age May Be Lowered.

If the draft age minimum is reduced to 18, as is proposed, youths above that age would cease to be eligible to membership in the Working Reserve. Consequently, officials contemplate lowering the ages for accepting boys for the work corps from 16, the present minimum, to 15, with a minimum weight requirement.

Boys who serve in the Working Reserve Corps are to receive medals and service records representing official recognition by the United States Government of their value in the war emergency. Development of the project is assigned mainly to the Department of Labor, under which the Boys' Working Reserve now operates, and enlistment in the corps will be entirely voluntary.

Boys Are Helping to Save Tomato Yield

Many Members of the Reserve Secured Valuable Experience in the Work
Last Year.

Efforts of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve are now being directed to the saving of the tremendous tomato crop. The Indiana canners are making requisitions on the county directors of the reserve for boys to pick the tomatoes, which this year are an unprecedentedly large yield, over an acreage larger than ever before in Indiana.

Many boys secured valuable experience in the 1917 tomato harvest. These boys are being placed in charge of inexperienced squads. They are co-operating with the patriotic groups of business and professional men and women who are volunteering to work in the tomato fields, in order that none of the crop be permitted to rot. Many Indiana canners are operating their plants 24 hours per day and on Sunday, in a patriotic effort to save the foodstuffs, much of which has been contracted for by the U. S. Government for the use of the army and navy.

Reports from sugar beet growing sections of the State to the office of Isaac D. Straus, federal state director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, show that the efforts of the young men of the reserve in the beet sugar fields were sufficient to save from total loss enough beets to make sugar sufficient to meet the requirements of a city the size of Indianapolis for a period of one year. This is including the efforts Indiana boys made in Michigan, from which State Mr. Straus has received letters praising highly the work done by patriotic Hoosier boys.

To Oppose Surcharge.

Legal steps will be taken to oppose the proposed 10 per cent surcharge on fire insurance in Indiana, it is announced in a circular letter asking detailed information sent forward from the office of the Indiana State Council of Defense by M. E. Foley, chairman, to state insurance departments and agencies over the country.

Mr. Foley, in reply to general inquiries relative to the right of companies to arbitrarily assess this surcharge, says: "My present purpose is to collect affidavits showing that in States where no supervisory power exists the surcharge is being collected, and that it is done by organized and concerted action of the companies."

Every County Given New Wheat Acreage

Indiana Farmers Shown How to Meet Government Need of More Food.

Every county in Indiana has been assigned a definite wheat acreage to be sown this fall, an increase which is hoped will make a total of 17 per cent in the entire State this year. The quotas range from 534 in Ohio county to 13,000 in Fountain county. Spencer, Union, Vanderburgh, Warrick, and Washington counties are being asked to maintain their present large acreage, which aggregates 197,150 acres.

The increase which each county should sow was determined by D. S. Myer, state leader of the campaign, and George C. Bryant, Indiana field agent of the Bureau of Crop Estimates.

"Indiana farmers showed their patriotism last year by increasing their wheat acreage 25 per cent, at the government's request. Incidentally, practically every man has found his work to his own benefit as well as that of the entire world," said Mr. Myer. "This year reports from throughout the State indicate that the acreage will be increased considerably in practically every county, especially in those counties growing a large acreage of spring crops. This will be done to get a better distribution of their labor and meet the shortage next year. Every farm owner and tenant in Indiana, I believe, will back up the boys in the trenches with the food that is so necessary."

Wherever it is possible, farmers are plowing early, and Mr. Myer estimated that a fourth of the acreage for wheat in Indiana had been broken. Thorough seed bed preparation also is being given unusual attention, and fertilizers are being more widely used than ever to increase the yield per acre.

The following gives the acreage, the proposed increase, and the acreage required for 1919:

County	1918 Acreage	Proposed Increase	1919 Acreage Required

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—The Washington Township County Council of Defense, by Fred W. Busche, chairman, has issued the following notice to the citizens of the township: "The Washington Township Council of Defense has decided to meet every two weeks at some centrally located schoolhouse. All members of the county council are especially invited to help us in these meetings. It is of especial importance that each captain of each district be present, as much of the work will depend on you, and bring many with you. These meetings are for men, women and children, black or white, native or foreigner. If you are an American and are interested in doing your best for your country, be present and take some active part. The council is ready at any time to consider advice from anybody, but it is especially anxious to see to it that the will of our county council as well as State and Nation shall be carried out to the letter."

Clay County.—A new record for thrashing wheat was established on the farm of Samuel M. Stigler, south of Brazil, on Friday, August 9th. The thrashers did not get started until 1 o'clock in the afternoon and when they finished the field before dark that evening they had thrashed a total of 1,115 bushels. Some outfits have thrashed over 1,600 bushels a day in this harvest, but this is believed to be the best record for a half day's work. The wheat averaged over 22 bushels to the acre and the oats on the same farm averaged 36½ bushels to the acre. Mr. Stigler says these averages are based on the entire field and not on just the choice part of it.

Clinton County.—Miss Carline Sims, chairman of the nurses' drive in Clinton county, announces the following young women have joined the Reserve corps: Miss Lucile Stair, Frankfort; Miss Goldie Durbin, Frankfort; Miss Jennie Huffer, Hillsburg; Miss Mabel Parry, Frankfort; Miss Hazel Beard, Frankfort; Mrs. Sylvia Howe, Frankfort; Miss Ida Maish, Frankfort; Miss Retta Glaze, Frankfort; Miss Ethel Sherman, Frankfort; Miss Hazel Bailey, Mulberry; Mrs. Ruth Shuel, Mulberry; Miss Inez Yeager, Mulberry; Miss Mary P. Kelley; Miss Mary Clear, Frankfort; Miss Eva Reed, Michigantown. This still leaves the county five short of its quota....Clinton county has exceeded its quota of 20 volunteers for the nurses' reserve corps. Twenty-seven young women have offered their services. This is the second county in Indiana to fill its quota.

Delaware County.—Forty boys and 100 young women will be supplied through the medium of the Delaware County Boys' Working Reserve, to assist in canning the crops raised about Eaton, beginning August 15th. They will be taken to and from work daily in a special traction car.

Dekalb County. Auburn is after the "war loafer." The city council has passed an ordinance defining the "war loafer" and providing heavy fines for any male person between the ages of 16 and 50 found guilty of loafing.

Dubois County.—A number of Huntingburg girls earned $135 for the Red Cross at the Dubois county fair. The girls wore Red Cross costumes and entertained crowds at the fair grounds with instrumental music and patriotic songs.

Floyd County.—Twenty-four recruits for the Student Nurses' Reserve have been enrolled in Floyd county, four more than the quota called for. The campaign was under the auspices of the Tri Kappa sorority.

Grant County.—Fred Edward, a manufacturer of Marion, who donated his services to the State Council of Defense for several months last winter, has been appointed local director in the public service reserve corps....John L. Thompson, county commissioner, has been appointed by Judge Frank Charles to succeed Zach C. Sanderson on the county council of defense.

Huntington County.—Recently a woman whose four sons are in France and a man who has sent two boys to the service were called by telephone and told that their sons had been either killed or wounded in France. When the woman asked who was speaking the unknown person at the other end of the line hung up the receiver without answering. The Huntington County Council of Defense is investigating the action of the person guilty of this action....Barbers of the county were asked, at a meeting with the county council of defense, to fight the pro-German propaganda that has been rampant in the county. The council of defense believes that barbers talk to more persons in a week than those in any other profession, and the barbers pledged themselves to carry on a campaign of education.

Johnson County. Friday, August 16th, will be "patriotic day" at the Johnson county fair, and the program for the day is in charge of the chairman of the county council of defense. In addition to patriotic talks by prominent speakers, the Liberty Guard companies will give an exhibition drill, and the management are hopeful of having a company of U. S. army soldiers from Fort Harrison for an exhibition drill also....A committee composed of James G. Covert, Thos. Dorrell and Elmer Boone was appointed to select a list of songs to be used at various meetings throughout the county. The council will have 10,000 copies of the county songs printed and distributed when needed....The county council of defense has advised each township defense committee that they will be expected to meet at least once a month, and that each committee will be expected to send at least one representative to the meetings of the county council, which are held on the first and third Mondays of the month....Mrs. Polk and Miss Ruth Craig realized $6.00 from the sale of gladioli donated by Mr. C. G. Morris of Greenwood, and the money will be used in buying yarn to knit articles for the soldiers.

Knox County.—Ninety-one women responded to the call for volunteers for a canteen service in Vincennes. H. B. Davis, chairman of the Canteen committee, presided at the informal meeting, and J. N. Dyer explained the nature of the work. The workers will be divided into seven groups, each in charge of a matron. All trains, except the very late ones, will be met and the service rendered the boys will afterwards to furnishing magazines, sandwiches, cigarettes, drinks, etc. Among the volunteers were the following: Miss Ernestine Dunphy, Mrs. M. Green, Mrs. W. H. Ewing, Helen LaCroix, Mrs. Marion Gould, Mrs. W. H. Weed, Miss Margaret McClure, Mrs. Chester Adams, Mrs. Charles Judah, Mrs. Beach, Mrs. C. S. McClure, Mrs. E. McClure, Lillian Crowley, Helen Mayfield, Gretchen Crook, Mrs. Julius Haack, Mrs. F. D. Evans, Mrs. W. C. Tucker, Mrs. C. C. Daugherty, Mrs. Eugene Bowers, Miss Quillen, Mrs. E. G. Meyer, Mrs. John Boush, Anna Simpson, Mrs. George Littell, Rebecca Thurgood, Clara Haines, Mrs. August Schultheis, Mrs. Sam Meyers, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. J. J. Robbins, Alice Nance, Mrs. Henry Decker, Mrs. Henry Branning, Mrs. Cannon, Mrs. George Knox, Mrs. P. M. O'Donnell, Esther O'Donnell, Mrs. Jake Riddle, Mrs. Geo. Herin, Mrs. Horsting, Mrs. Dr. Bogie, Mrs. J. H. TeWalt, Helen Borrowman, Mrs. Kate O'Brien, Mrs. T. F. Willis, Mrs. T. D. Thorne, Mrs. Tom Dent, Mrs. M. K. Thomas, Mrs. Henry Watson, Mrs. L. M. Wade, Mrs. John LaCroix, Birdie Cassell, Mrs. L. M. Rindskopf, Helen Cogan, Claire McCarthy, Lena Kimmiller, Frances Lloyd, Emily Jane Judah, Mrs. Jas. Williams, Mrs. C. S. Miller, Mrs. Geo. Graham, Helen Selby, Helen Schumacher, Ruby Summitt, Susan Rabb Emison, Mrs. C. E. Gregg, Mrs. Helen Bierhaus, Mrs. Claire Duffy, Marie Simon, Virginia Abry, Mary Eber, Marie O'Donnell, Ruth Gardner, Martha Emison, Norma Held, Eugenia Johnson, Mrs. M. R. Moser, Mrs. Frank Bond, Mrs. W. L. Holt, Mrs. B. B. Griffith, Mrs. McTaggart, Mrs. Catherine Eby, Lois Holt. The following women will act as matrons: Mrs. J. L. Bayard, Jr.; Mrs. R. S. Blatchley, Mrs. H. B. Marsh, Mrs. Hugh Emison, Mrs. Walter Stein, Mrs. I. B. Kuhn and Mrs. T. P. Townsend....A Highway Transport committee has been appointed by the county council of defense for the purpose of looking after the proper maintenance of the main market highways in Knox county.

Lake County.—A census of all registrants in Gary, taken by the Calumet Township Council of Defense, shows that out of a total of 800 names, 600 are not engaged in essential war work, and will come under the "work or fight" order....The Gary Auto and Good Roads bureau has completed preliminary plans for the organization of the Return Loads bureau. Trucks going to and from Chicago and other points running empty either way are to be given orders for hauling goods for local concerns. A. S. Hess is chairman of the auto bureau.

Marion County.—Many new members have recently joined the Indiana division of the Friends of German Democracy, including many leading Indianapolis men of German birth or descent. The Friends of German Democracy is a nationwide organization of citizens of German blood who desire to see autocracy overthrown in Germany and democracy established there. Copies of the following communication, signed by a number of Indianapolis citizens, have been received by the executive committee of the Friends of German Democracy: "We, the undersigned, acting individually, herewith apply for membership in the Indianapolis branch of the Friends of German Democracy. When the organization was first brought into being we felt that, no matter how sincere the organizers might be, the movement itself would result in a political segregation of Americans of German ancestry. We have always been opposed to such disjunction. Considering ourselves an integral part of our great commonwealth, we exercised our citizenship as Americans and not as members of a racial group. We have never been in sympathy with the military dynasty of Germany. We have always abhorred militarism. We have never subscribed to the doctrine that 'might makes right.' If the German government should ever have entertained the slightest thought of enticing Americans of German ancestry to its side in the war it so ruthlessly forced on our country it should be brought to the speedy realization of the preposterousness of such a scheme. The principles of your organization harmonize with our views, and it is because the government of the United States regards the organization, Friends of German Democracy, as a means to enlist moral force against the autocratic government of Germany branch and hope it will be successful in further increasing its membership. We also believe in the thorough Americanization of our people and we trust that this organization will in itself contribute something toward local and national unification. In conclusion we wish to say we regard the object has been accomplished." The following are the members of the committee who drafted the communication, and their names are among more than 200 which have been signed to it: Leo Rappaport, Clemens Vonnegut, Carl H. Lieber, the Rev. Julius F. Grauel, Richard Lieber, Theodore Stempfel and Albert Berg.

Marshall County.—On August 12th a meeting of the women of Marshall county was held to organize the Marshall county women's motor corps. The work was started the first of the month, when Miss Catherine Oliver of South Bend, who holds the rank of major, explained the purposes of the corps at a meeting of the council of defense. Each woman enlisted pledges to give two hours each week to military drill and one-half day each week to other war work requested. Members will wear the uniform which has been adopted by the State.

Miami County.—Mrs. Willis Flora, chairman of the Food Production committee of the women's section of the county council of defense, is urging the women of the county to establish the custom of exchanging garden seed among themselves for the purpose of saving the money necessary to buy seed each year....The Loyal Citizens' Vigilance committee recently had before them, in the person of Rev. Nicholas Slabaugh of Harrison township, a man who, while enjoying the blessings of a free country, is unwilling to do his part in aiding this country to make the world safe for democracy. On his own admission, he had not helped the Red Cross by contributions, work or talk; he had not contributed to the war chest fund; he had not purchased a single War Savings Stamp or Liberty Bond, and in no manner, shape or form had he done one thing to help with the war. On being questioned, he stated positively he would not change his ways. The county council of defense intends to place the matter before the State Council.

Montgomery County.—The intense heat of the season has not interfered with Red Cross work in Montgomery county, and the report of the local chapter at Crawfordsville shows 730 garments finished and shipped from the sewing room during July; 615 pairs of socks and 185 sweaters furnished by the knitting room, and the surgical dressings department turned out an unusually large quota for the month. Several donations were received, $72.50 coming from the members of the Country Club; native citizens of Kentucky under the leadership of Capt. H. H. Talbot gave $15.85; Miss Mary Hannah Kroun contributed $5.00, the proceeds from a piece of her own hand work; while the domestic science department of the local high school gave $125.00, secured from the publication and sale of recipes which the girls had compiled throughout the year.

Newton County.—Members of the Indiana State Council of Defense and the Committee on Food Production and Conservation were guests of George Ade at Hazelden farm, Wednesday, August 14th.

Noble County.—"We can produce more wheat and we will" is the slogan of the Noble county wheat committee for the greater wheat production campaign which has been launched throughout the county. The campaign was started with a meeting at Ligonier the first of the month, and throughout the month of August meetings will be held in all parts of the county until every township has given the subject thorough consideration. Attention is being centered on increasing the yield per acre, the idea being to make the same amount of work produce more. Demonstrations will be run in all parts of the county by registrant associations to show the value of various commercial fertilizers, and they will also demonstrate the characteristics and desirability of different varieties of wheat. The subject of eradication of stinking smut will also be thoroughly gone into. The registrants' association asks the co-operation of every Noble county farmer, in order that the 17 per cent increase in wheat production which the government has asked for may be a reality in Noble county.

Owen County. Weekly community gatherings in Spencer are growing in popularity. Talks are given on such timely subjects as conservation, patriotism, etc., followed by music and moving pictures, and the citizens of Owen county are demonstrating their willingness to do everything in their power to aid the boys at the front.

Randolph County.—Ten men from Bartonla, in the southeastern part of the county, went to the farm of Mrs. Corn Flatter and assisted in harvesting the oats crop. They received $20 for their work, which they gave to the Bartonla Red Cross chapter.

Ripley County. An auxiliary to the Milan Branch Red Cross was formed last Thursday evening at Pierreville by Mrs. Margaret Dean, chairman of the Milan branch. The following officers were elected: Mrs. Tindor, chairman; Mrs. Jackson, vice-chairman; Miss Mamie Busted, secretary; Miss Zuma Dunn, treasurer. The ladies will meet on Tuesday afternoon of each week for work.

Rush County.—The latest report turned in to the Child Welfare department of the county council of defense, by Dr. W. S. Coleman, indicates that 51 children attending the Jackson school at Rushville showed physical defects, and each one of these children whose parents are unable to provide medical aid will be given proper medical care free of charge....A recent report of Miss Jessie Kitchen, chairman of the educational committee of the women's section of the county council of defense, shows that Rush county ranks among the first three counties in the State in educational work, being ranked only by Marion and St. Joseph counties....Rush county leads in the Sixth Indiana congressional district in cash sales of War Savings Stamps and is excelled by only three counties in the State, Ohio, Switzerland and Johnson, according to John A. Titsworth, county chairman of the campaign. The county's cash sales total $323,405.60, which is a per capita sale of $16.72 and only $50,000 short of the year's quota.

Shelby County.—This county has suffered considerable loss in wheat due to stinking smut, and County Agent R. G. East has called several meetings of farmers throughout the county to arrange plans to fight the spread of smut in the wheat fields of the county. It is estimated that 150,000 to 200,000 bushels of Shelby county wheat will show traces of smut this season.

Sullivan County.—The 600 war mothers of Sullivan county will be guests of the Merom chaqueta on Saturday, August 31st. Every war mother who wears on her arm the service star will be admitted to the grounds without a ticket.

Vanderburgh County.—Miss Eugenia Stinson, daughter of Harry Stinson, for many years county auditor of Vanderburgh county, was the first Evansville girl to apply for enlistment in the student nurses' corps....Approximately 100 boy scouts from Evansville went to Camp Gresham on an island in the Wabash river near New Harmony for a week's camp. The camp was named in honor of James Bethel Gresham, of this city, the first American soldier under General Pershing to fall in France.

Wayne County.—Eighty war mothers have volunteered to assist in the registration of their sons for voting. They voted to participate in the parade incident to the old settlers' picnic at Centerville, August 17th, at which Governor James P. Goodrich made the principal address....Mrs. C. D. Shideler is organizing United States food clubs. She has sixty workers in the field, including three squads with two lieutenants each....The profits from this year's chautauqua have been voted to the Red Cross Society by the directors of the association. The chautauqua is held in a public park and the city treasury receives one-half of the net proceeds....Miss Amy Horton of Richmond is a member of the first "over there theater company" which will entertain American soldiers in France. She will sail for France shortly.

White County.—The White County Council of Defense has ordered that beginning Sunday, August 11th, and continuing daily until the close of the war, business and industry of all kinds must suspend at 8 o'clock each evening for one minute and that all persons shall engage in silent prayer for the success of the allied nations in the war....Twenty-five acres on the farm of Ray Coble yielded 42 bushels of wheat an acre, making the net profit on the field practically $2,000.

Whitley County.—A woman's motor corps has been organized at Columbia City with Miss Katherine McLallen as first lieutenant, Miss Katherine Kessler as second lieutenant, Miss Helen Nowels as sergeant, assisted by the following privates: Miss Ellen Hood, Miss Mary Snyder, Miss Velma Whitefeather, Miss Frances Roberts, Miss Treva Kessler, Mrs. Earl Diffendarfer, Mrs. Wm. Kissinger.

Red Cross Activities

A thousand graduate nurses must be sent overseas each week for the next two months to meet the requirements of the allied armies, according to the word that has reached Indianapolis from Lake Division Red Cross headquarters. The "thousand-a-week" request to the Red Cross has been made by Surgeon General Gorgas, and Miss Anna Gladwin, acting director of the Lake Division Nursing Bureau, has appealed to Red Cross organizations throughout Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky to speed up enrollment of eligible nurses. In the six months ending July 31, 703 nurses had been enrolled from these three States—537 from Ohio, 136 from Indiana and 30 from Kentucky. Two hundred and ninety-one were enrolled in July. August and September must each produce at least triple that figure. Appreciating that public health must not be permitted to suffer, the Red Cross has been pushing its home care of the sick and its first aid care courses as well as co-operating with other agencies in recruiting student nurses to fill the depleted ranks of the hospitals.

Notice has gone out that the pay of nurses going into active military service has been increased to $75 a month for overseas duty and $60 a month for work in camps and cantonments in America. This is in addition to board and lodging and to the same war risk insurance privileges that are granted soldiers, sailors and marines.

In the past six months Red Cross women workers of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky have made 15,560,912 articles for war relief.

Announcement of this huge production total was made today by Carl W. Fuller, director of the Bureau of Supplies, Lake Division, American Red Cross.

Surgical dressings led in number with a production of 13,336,638. Second in the list was hospital garments, of which there were produced 968,082.

Articles for soldiers and sailors, which included sweaters, socks and other knitted goods and comfort kits, numbered 871,069.

The total number of hospital supplies made in the period was 521,224, and the refugee garments total was 63,899.

Three hundred and fifty-nine chapters, 1,134 branches and 1,365 auxiliaries participated in this production.

Food Administration

Bulletin No. 158.

(Supplementary to Bulletin No. 147-M-20.)

August 8, 1918.

FEEDING RYE.

We are in receipt of the following letter from Washington which very clearly sets forth the attitude of the U. S. Food Administration regarding the feeding of rye:

"The Coarse Grain Division of the Food Administration is receiving inquiries as to the present attitude of the Food Administration on using rye for feed. Whether this is proper depends on local conditions. If some other feed is available, we prefer that rye should not be used. It is a bread grain and there is a demand for it for this purpose.

"In many localities, however, the farmer cannot market his rye and purchase other feed except at financial loss, and there is no reason, at this time, why he should be required to do so. In such instances permission should be given to use the rye as feed, and where such permission is proper it should be freely granted and care taken to avoid giving the impression that using rye for feed is in any way unpatriotic or against the wishes of the Food Administration. We do not believe general publicity desirable on feeding rye, and suggest that you handle the matter by posting your county administrators on our views and authorizing them to give permission to feed rye only where they think this is advisable.

Faithfully yours,
U. S. FOOD ADMINISTRATION."

Please note that in accordance with the desires of the Food Administration as above expressed—

(1) Permission to buy rye for feeding cannot be granted.

(2) All applications for feeding rye must be handled according to instructions contained in Bulletin No. 147-M-20.

Sincerely yours,

H. E. BARNARD.

Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

TO THE PRICE REPORTERS AND FAIR PRICE COMMITTEES.

Please note the following suggestions as to the duties of price reporters and fair price committees:

(1) The Price Reporters should fill out the form furnished them by the Food Administration at Washington asking for prices paid by the consumer. Mail one copy to the Administration at Washington, another copy to the county food administrator and a third copy to this office. The copy sent to this office may be made on either the white or the blue form furnished by the office at Washington. We use these reports for checking purposes only and can file them regardless of color or heading. Some of the price reporters have written to Washington for a special form on which to report to this office. They have no such form and refer all correspondence in regard to same back to this office.

(2) The Fair Price Committee will have charge of the publication of fair prices to be paid by the consumer on about twenty-one staple articles. It must be understood that this committee is not a price fixing organization, and that prices are published as a guide for the buying public, and are not intended as an arbitrary list from which the dealer must not deviate. In case some dealer sells at a price far in advance of the maximum price quoted in the list and is reported by the consumer, an investigation will be made and if he is found to be profiteering, he will be penalized. No attention should be paid to newspaper stories and alleged interviews published in the newspapers concerning our plans for fixing food prices. We have no authority to fix prices and shall never attempt it.

Within the next few days additional information and instructions will be sent out to the various county food administrators regarding price publication. We want a fair price list published in every county in Indiana. Bulletins 6-H-529, 6-H-612 and 6-H-728 should have your careful attention as they contain much valuable information.

Price reporters should get their reports to us promptly. It is very necessary to the successful working of the state organization.

Sincerely yours,

H. E. BARNARD,

Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

Reports from thrashing committees over the State show that from three pints to nine quarts in each 2½ bushels of wheat thrashed have been saved by proper precautions against leakage and through the correction of defective machinery. Thousands of bushels of wheat which might have been lost attest the wisdom of the wheat saving campaign. A special priority order for repair parts for thrashers has been issued by the management of the federal express business. Complaints on account of delayed shipment of repair parts should be filed promptly with the local express agents, who have directions to give preferred consideration to this class of freight.

The threatened congestion in the Indiana wheat market has been relieved by official notice received by the milling division that government agents are buying wheat at Buffalo, Cleveland and Toledo. This will afford Indiana dealers a market. They had been withholding bids for wheat, due to the government's withdrawal from the market, and the absence of storage facilities and the risk in piling up wheat in the sub-terminals.

A test of efficiency for separators is suggested as follows: Direct the straw blower against a blanket, sheet or canvass during the time the weighing device trips five times, recording 2½ bushels. If more than one pint of wheat is winnowed from the straw on the canvass, bad work is indicated. One and one-half pints indicate a loss of one per cent. A second test should be made after an adjustment following a discovery of as much as a two per cent loss.

Reinhold Rahm, a Terre Haute baker, was permitted to pay to the Red Cross $50 in lieu of losing his baking license for the period of the war, upon his admission that he had persistently violated the federal regulations relative to the use of wheat flour substitutes.

Hotels, restaurants and public eating houses are released from the restricted serving of beef. Householders complying with the regulations restricting individuals to one and one-fourth pounds per week likewise are freed of any further obligation to so limit themselves. It is highly desirable, the Food Administration asserts, that the American public consume medium and lighter grades of cattle, conserving the heavier cattle for our armed forces and those of our allies. Butchers are asked to handle no cattle weighing less than 475 pounds and to assist in educating the consumers to the lighter cuts.

August Garden Hints.

Don't gamble with the Weather Man. Each rain may be the last one of the season. Cultivate your garden.

Don't let the weeds go to seed. You will be sorry next year if you do.

Light sprinklings are worse than none. When watering the garden soak it thoroughly.

Cultivate thoroughly after each rain or after each watering, but don't cultivate when the soil is too wet. Do not hoe deeply close to plants that are half grown or larger. Seeds sown now are particularly in need of artificial watering. Turnips can still be sown.

Keep after the potato bugs. Don't let them destroy the late crop.

Cabbage worms are very bad and must be fought continually.

If every garden is an ammunition plant, every weed is a Hun. Go after the Huns.

County Councils

General Bulletin No. 174.

August 10, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

Referring to General Bulletin No. 132 of March 28, 1918, we beg to advise that it is the desire of the State Council that, if the home service section of the local Red Cross chapter is organized and in full operation, the legal advisory committee of the county council of defense should turn over to the home service section any work included under paragraph B of the bulletin. All of the other duties of the legal advisory committee should be continued and they should offer the home service section of the Red Cross their full co-operation in the work included under paragraph B.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

General Bulletin No. 175.

August 13, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

The Federal Government has requested Indiana to increase her wheat acreage 17 per cent. This request comes a little late, and for that reason it is necessary that every organization in the State take a deep interest in the matter. It is necessary that the county council of defense co-operate to the fullest extent with the County Agricultural Agent, Emergency Demonstration Agent or County Wheat Leader, in order to make the campaign a success.

Several hundred copies of the Wheat Production Circular have been sent to every County Agent and Wheat Production Leader. Bankers, millers, grain dealers, and fertilizer men are assisting in the distribution of these circulars as one means of getting authentic information before the people.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

General Bulletin No. 176.

August 13, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

It is not desired either by the authorities in Washington or by the State Council of Defense that the county councils of defense address communications to or request information from the several federal departments. We have information that several of the county councils have done this regarding matters which the State Council has already taken up and on which it has full information.

Kindly do not lose sight of the fact that the reason for the organization of the state, county and township councils was that the tremendous load might be taken off the shoulders of the departments in Washington.

In view of the fact that a communication from a county council of defense to a federal department involves a large amount of correspondence between that federal department and the State Council, including the furnishing to the State Council copies of all letters written, you will realize the additional burden such procedure entails.

Please form the habit of looking to the State Council as the source of all information and advice not obtainable within your county.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

Committee on Construction

The Committee on Proposed Construction reported to the Indiana State Council of Defense, at its meeting August 14th, as follows:

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON PROPOSED CONSTRUCTION.

To the Indiana State Council of Defense:

Your Committee on Proposed Construction begs to submit the following report:

1. In the matter of the repair of the Union street road, running from Mishawaka to Bremen, in St. Joseph county, your committee recommends that the State Council accept the unanimous conclusion of the St. Joseph County Council of Defense, that these repairs should be undertaken.

2. In the matter of the improvement of a rural highway in Cass county, covered by the letter of the chairman of the Cass County Council of Defense, dated August 7, 1918, your committee recommends that on the facts stated the construction of the highway in question should not be undertaken during the period of the war, and that a copy of the recent opinion of the attorney-general of the State with reference to the maintenance of highways should be sent to the chairman of the county council of Cass county, and to the other county authorities having in charge such matters.

3. In the matter of the construction of the Shelby road in Buck Creek township and the Harmening road in Sugar Creek township, in Hancock county, your committee recommends that the conclusion of the Hancock County Council of Defense, that the construction of the highways be not undertaken, be concurred in, and that the bonds therefore be not sold during the period of the war, and that the action of the chairman of the State Council of Defense in requesting the county authorities to refrain from making sale of such bonds, be approved.

Respectfully submitted.

ARTHUR W. BRADY,
CHARLES FOX,
GEORGE ADE,

Committee.

The report was approved as was a supplemental report from the committee to the effect that the council approve the recent action of the Randolph County Council of Defense which resolved recently that the proposed construction of the Parker gravel road, at a cost of $16,000, be deferred.

U. S. Employment Service

The following bulletin has been addressed to delinquent counties:

Chairmen County Councils of Defense:

In checking over the Community Labor Board organization for Indiana we find that your county lacks one of the following members, which is checked:

Chairman;
Representative of labor;
Representative of employers.

We request that in order to protect your county in the matter of recruiting for war industries that you take immediate steps towards the completion of these boards. We suggest that where there is no chairman but the two representatives have been appointed that you get the two representatives together and see if they cannot agree upon a man as chairman who will be suitable to both sides. This man should be not too closely connected either with labor or capital. He should be a man of high standing in the community. If the employers have not selected their representative we request that you call immediately a meeting of the employers to elect their representative. Likewise if labor has not sent in their representative we request that you call a meeting of the labor organizations and all workers to elect their representative. If your county now lacks one representative and the other is elected, after having completed the matter of electing the one missing, please get the two men together to select the chairman. Wire this office of your action.

We respectfully request that this work be completed not later than August 21st, as our recruiting campaign will begin approximately at that time and any county not protected with Community Labor Board will bear the brunt of recruiting for enormous war projects. We cannot too earnestly urge upon you to take this matter up and see that it is finally completed. We are enclosing a list of the districts in the State which will show the district you are in.

Very truly yours,

STATE ORGANIZATION COMMITTEE.
Adolph J. Fritz, Secretary, State Federation of Labor, Representing Employers.
Ernest N. Smith, Secretary, Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, Representing Employers.
H. H. Buskirk, Asst. Federal Director, Representing U. S. Employment Service.

Two Important Things.

Two things, therefore, are of the utmost importance—to bend every effort to increase production and to be equally alert and efficient in effecting savings.—David Houston.

Turkey is starving, Germany pinched and Austria rioting for food. The Allies are well fed and full of fight, thanks to Uncle Sam who invited them to sit down to his table a year ago—he has been passing around the victuals ever since.

President Urges Further Use Of the State Council's System

Chief Executive Recommends That Federal Departments Avail Themselves of Existing Organizations Rather Than Seek to Extend Their Own, in All War Activities

President Wilson's desire that all federal departments carefully determine whether they cannot utilize the state council system of war organization and activity rather than extend their own organizations is indicated in the following correspondence, which was released for publication during the week:

COUNCIL OF NATIONAL DEFENSE.
Washington.

July 24, 1918.

My Dear Mr. President:

As chairman of the Council of National Defense, I beg to report to you the noteworthy accomplishments of the state councils of defense in the forty-eight States of the Union, and to indicate the war activities for which they seem to me to be peculiarly fitted and peculiarly responsible, and to ask your advice and assistance in a matter vital to their future effectiveness.

The state councils of defense, as you are well aware, were instituted at the suggestion of the Council of National Defense shortly after we entered the war. Almost from the day of their organization they took a prominent part in recruiting our armed forces. Since the early months of the great struggle they have rendered particularly valuable service on behalf of the Department of Agriculture in increasing the production of foodstuffs. Before the creation of the United States Food Administration they led the national campaign for food conservation. Most of them took a leading part in the institution of home guards to take the place of the federalized militia. They met many another state emergency by prompt local action. As time went on, in the natural course of events many of the fields of action which they had occupied were officially taken over by especially created federal administrations. But new problems constantly arose and the work of the state councils, instead of diminishing, has notably increased in scope and in significance.

To accomplish this work they have built up an organization uniquely suited to its purpose. Every state council of defense has active county, or equivalent, councils of defense under it, while in nearly every State the organization of community councils in the school districts, bringing the government to the people and the people to the government, is progressing rapidly.

Through their speakers, their war conferences, their contact with the press and their contact with the people themselves through their community councils, the state councils are now in a special sense the guardians of civilization morale in each State; carrying on a work of education and information which we look to see continued and strengthened in order that the will to win and the knowledge of how to make that will effective may be everybody's possession throughout the war, in the dark hours of trial as well as in the hour of victory.

In States with a considerable population of foreign origin the state councils of defense are leaders in the work of Americanization, establishing war information bureaus, correlating existing Americanization agencies, increasing as far as possible the educational facilities available to the foreign-born, and seeing that such facilities are used.

The state councils are engaged in preparing the young men of the country for the high duty of selective service, advising and informing them in particular upon the adjustment of their legal affairs and upon military conditions and requirements and social hygiene.

They are bringing their great influence to bear on behalf of economy and thrift throughout the country. It is also their special task, in the interest of economy, to supervise the solicitation of funds for war relief by voluntary agencies, and to co-ordinate the efforts of these agencies, seeing that they work harmoniously and to a common purpose, and determining what agencies shall be approved and what discouraged.

They act also as the state representatives of the Highways Transport committee of the Council of National Defense in the increasingly important work of extending and facilitating motor truck transportation, in order to reduce the tremendous burden on our railroads and to stimulate the production of food by providing means of transporting it to market.

In addition, they are doing notable work in connection with public health; in connection with vocational education; and in studying and assisting in the solution of the difficult housing and rent-profiteering problems which the war has brought to many a locality.

Last, but far from least, their ramifying organization enables them to play a valuable part in the practical execution of the policies of the Department of Agriculture, the Food Administration, the Fuel Administration, the Labor Department, the Shipping Board, and the other federal agencies which are extended into the States. We expect the state representatives of these federal agencies to feel in the future, as they have been able to feel in the past, that the organization of the State Council of Defense is their ready right hand. Most of the state councils are incidentally performing the special service of bringing these federal representatives together for frequent and regular consultation, and in most of the States these federal representatives are actually members of the councils of defense.

These, in general terms, are the broad lines upon which the state councils are now acting, and I have said nothing of the local industrial and social emergencies which it is their special province to meet by local action.

The existence of this great national system, valuable for each and every government department, makes, of course, for economy of effort and renders unnecessary the creation of much local federal machinery which would otherwise have to be set up for the performance of specific tasks.

May I suggest, then, that you ask all federal departments, administrations, and commissions, when planning new work or extension of their organizations, to consider carefully the possibility of using the state council system so as to prevent duplication? A better understanding on this point throughout Washington would, I think, make for the general efficiency of the war machine.

Furthermore, will you not remind the heads of all federal departments, administrations and commissions, that all requests and suggestions for work on the part of the state councils should be submitted through the State Councils Section of the Council of National Defense? This section has attained a strong position as the agency to which the state councils look for authority and guidance in the programs committed to them for execution. It is clear that in the interest of efficiency, all requests for action from the federal government should go to them through this single channel. In the past federal authorities have, not infrequently, caused confusion by going directly to the state councils with recommendations—sometimes with conflicting recommendations. I believe a word from you would prevent such misunderstandings in the future.

It is difficult to estimate the importance of the service rendered, since our entrance into the war, by these state councils, their county councils and the multitude of workers banded together under them, whom we estimate to number at least one million. I feel sure that you, as their commander-in-chief, will be proud of their unique contribution in the war and will use your authority to broaden the scope of their activities as conditions permit, so that they may go on to still greater achievements.

Very sincerely yours,

NEWTON D. BAKER,
Secretary of War and Chairman of Council of National Defense.

—o—
THE WHITE HOUSE.
Washington.

July 30, 1918.

My Dear Mr. Baker:

I have read with great interest your account of the achievements of the state councils of defense and your general summary of the activities in which they are now engaged. It is a notable record, and I shall be glad to have you express to the state councils my appreciation of the service they have so usefully rendered. I am particularly struck by the value of extending our defense organization into the smallest communities and by the truly democratic character of a national system so organized.

I believe in the soundness of your contention that in the interest of economy and efficiency such machinery as that provided by the state council system for the execution of many kinds of war work should be utilized as far as possible by federal departments and administrations. May I suggest, therefore, that you communicate to the heads of all such departments and administrations my wish that when they are considering extensions of their organization into the States or new work to be done in the States, they determine whether they cannot utilize the state council system, thus rendering unnecessary the creation of new machinery; and that they transmit all requests for action by the state councils through the State Councils Section of the Council of National Defense?

Cordially and sincerely yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

Hon. N. D. Baker, Secretary of War.

Food Club Questions Are Easily Answered

(By C. V. Stainsby, Assistant to Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.)

When such a large organization as that of the U. S. food clubs is undertaken many questions arise. The first one to present itself in this case is: Why form another organization when there are so many already? The answer is easy. There is no other organization that can do the work. Many other organizations were willing to help. Many organizations have given great assistance. The U. S. Food Administration appreciates all that has been done, but there were too many gaps left which could not be ignored.

By working through existing organizations some homes would be reached through half a dozen different sources. The great majority of homes, however, were not reached at all. It was necessary that these homes be reached to keep them in touch with the needs of the hour. Hence the food clubs.

There is another reason why existing organizations could not satisfy all requirements. A literary society, for example, would meet to discuss food problems. The same program would be given perhaps as that carried out by a food club. The literary society would still think of itself as a literary society doing work different from its usual line. The food club, on the other hand, realizes that it is doing its own work. When four thousand U. S. food clubs are at work, conscious that they are doing the work for which they were created, there will be greater interest and greater results than would otherwise be possible.

A special organization is necessary to fight our food battles at home just as surely as a special organization was needed to fight the battles in France. The War Department created the national army. The U. S. Food Administration for Indiana is organizing the U. S. food clubs.

Be ready to join a U. S. food club in your neighborhood.

Every producing farm is a dynamo of victory.

Woman's Section

The Junior Red Cross of Fort Wayne will equip and maintain free clinic rooms for child welfare. Fort Wayne is also to have a new and better supervised swimming pool.

Mrs. Gwin, chairman of the Child Welfare committee of Jasper county, reports that $50 has been raised towards the fund for the employment of a community nurse, and additional sums will be secured through the receipts from children's entertainments in each township.

Fayette county ranks high in the list of Indiana counties which have done effective and thorough child welfare work. Mrs. Blanche Stoops, who is a public health nurse and probation officer with police powers, is the county child welfare chairman. Aside from her routine work she has had charge of the registration of all children under six years of age, twenty per cent of whom were found under weight in the recent government test. In the follow-up work of this examination she secured homes for two boys and one girl; solicited money and help for a dentist's attention for four children; twenty-two tonsil or adenoid operations; operations and hospital care for two prospective hunchbacks; and daily milk and lunch for forty children (two months).

In Putnam county the voluntary registration of women over sixteen years of age was 98 per cent.

The examination of children in this county is still being continued in order that 100 per cent of Putnam county babies shall have had the advantage of this government test.

The Red Cross and French Relief of Putnam county have received 1,658 garments during the past month.

The Fourteen-Minute Women have spoken in behalf of every campaign launched. They made especially effective appeals for child welfare work and for the War Savings Stamps drive.

The Woman's Section of the St. Joseph County Council of Defense is now holding meetings in its new and permanent headquarters in the Oliver Annex, South Bend. At the last meeting Miss Adah Hillier, chairman of the Home Economics and Food Administration, told of the satisfactory results in the distribution of food pledge cards; from one precinct 174 pledges were signed and received in one day. The work of collecting surplus produce has been successfully launched. Recently a local hospital was supplied with a quantity of dew-berries gathered by the members of the domestic science department of the high schools, at a time when it was impossible for the farmers to dispose of them.

Mrs. Horace L. Greene, chairman of the Home and Foreign Relief, told of the work done in the several departments of the Red Cross, and reported that in the period from June 15 to Aug. 1 the Home Service Section had given aid to 64 families; 51 inquiries were answered regarding allotments and insurance provision; 21 families were given financial aid; 69 visits were made in the interest of home service work; 132 letters written in the interests of clients; 11 cases were given medical aid; 2 cases given dental aid; 8 investigations made for the military authorities; employment found for 5 persons; extension of credit secured in 3 cases, and 4 cases given hospital care.

For the hospital supply department the following articles were furnished from June 2 to July 29: 179 hospital shirts, 181 underdrawers, 147 undershirts, 15 operating gowns, 4 pairs leggings, 35 operating caps, 20 operating masks, 59 help-less case shirts, 93 pajamas, 58 women's chemise, 7 morning jackets, 16 petticoats, 190 pillow cases, 1,024 hand towels, 5 sheets, 306 hot water bag covers, 5 spreads, 255 comfort bags, 400 napkins, 14 infant layettes, 19 pairs bed socks, 4,000 gun wipes, 1,363 pairs socks, 302 sweaters, 96 pairs wristlets, 27 helmets and 3 scarfs.

Mrs. Thos. A. Olney of the Department of Enrollment and Women's Service, advised that the tabulating and filing of registration cards had proceeded throughout the month of July, and the work of copying the cards was still in process. She advised that all women who registered for paid government work had been interviewed and a number of them had been placed in local ammunition factories.

Miss Geraldine Robertson of the Woman's Motor Corps gave a very interesting report of the work accomplished by that organization in the county. Miss Robertson told of receiving a telephone call at 4 a. m. and being asked to serve breakfast to a troop train of 500 soldiers who would pass through South Bend at 7:30. As the local canteen, which is a branch of the Motor Corps, is prepared to furnish only chocolate, cigarettes, cookies and matches, on account of Chicago and Elkhart being canteen stations, the request was not an easy one to fill, but quick work on the part of the young women, with a little outside help, made it possible to serve an appetizing breakfast at the appointed time. Two more trains were met that same day. The members of the corps have entered into their work with such earnestness, and are responding so efficiently to the calls made on them, that this department of the county council is proving a valuable acquisition. The personnel of the Motor Corps is made up of the following young women: Captain, Geraldine Robertson; first lieutenant, Josephine Sullivan; second lieutenant, Mary Leeper; privates, Helen Booth, Helen Lower, Belle Livingston, Mrs. John Reynolds, Sarah Witter, Dorothy Miller, Helen McCarty, Frances Salinger and Margaret Elbel. Miss Catherine Oliver has the rank of major and is organizer for one-third of the State.

Helps in Using Substitute Foods

This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.

DESSERTS WITHOUT SUGAR.

Dessert is not necessary these days unless it furnishes part of the food value actually needed in the meal. Adding a pudding or pie to the end of the meal just because it is the custom and because "we like it" is not practicing food conservation.

In using a dessert be sure that it is replacing some part of the meal that it is customary to have; for example, if baked custard is served, remember that the milk and eggs should replace other protein foods, such as meat and cheese. If a fruit pie is served, remember that the crust is furnishing a good deal of food value, especially fat and other heat-producing material, and it should not be served at the end of a dinner composed of a fat meat and creamed vegetables.

Our job is to cut down on the use of sugar. In preparing desserts make them with sugar substitutes.

Candy should be used as a dessert and not as a food upon which to "piece" between meals. It should also be sugarless.

The following recipes may be helpful in solving the sugarless dessert problem:

Tapioca Fruit Mold.

2 cups milk.
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup honey or  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup corn syrup.
 6 level teaspoons minute tapioca.
 1 teaspoon vanilla.
 1 cup cream.

Heat milk in a double boiler, add sweetening and stir in the tapioca. Cook for 30 minutes. Pour in a bowl to cool, then add vanilla and fold in the cream, which has been whipped. Ornament with fresh berries, chill and serve.

Grape Sherbert.

1 teaspoon gelatin.
 1 tablespoon cold water.
 1 cup syrup or  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup honey.
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup water.
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup grape juice.
 2 tablespoons lemon juice.

Soak gelatin in 1 tablespoon cold water, dissolve it in boiling syrup and water. Let mixture cool, add grape juice and lemon juice and freeze.

Junket.

3 cups whole milk.
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup corn syrup.
 1 junket tablet.
 1 tablespoon cold water.
 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Heat the milk and corn syrup over hot water, stirring the mixture constantly until it is warm. Crush the junket tablet and dissolve it in the cold water; add this with the vanilla to the milk; stir the mixture quickly to mix it thoroughly. Pour it into sherbert cups or dishes in which it is to be served. Let it stand in a warm place until it is firm, then chill it. This junket may be served plain or with cream, whipped if desired, or may be sprinkled with a mixture of two parts maple sugar and one of cinnamon.

Date Pudding.

3 eggs.
 1 cup corn syrup.
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup dry bread crumbs.
 1 cup chopped dates.
 1 cup nuts.
 6 tablespoons flour.
 Few grains salt.

Beat eggs, add syrup, crumbs, dates, nuts and flour. Bake in greased and floured muffin pans. Serve with whipped cream.

Chocolate Pie.

$1\frac{1}{4}$  cups corn syrup.
 3 tablespoons flour or
 $1\frac{1}{2}$  tablespoons corn starch.
 $\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoon salt.
 3 egg yolks.
 1 teaspoon vanilla.
 $1\frac{1}{2}$  cups milk.
 2 ounces chocolate or  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup cocoa.

Mix flour or corn starch with 2 tablespoons milk until smooth, then add to rest of warm milk in double boiler. Stir until smooth, add corn syrup, salt and grated chocolate. Cook 15 minutes. Cool slightly and pour over beaten yolks, return to double boiler and cook until egg thickens mixture. Flavor, pour into baked crust and cover with meringue. Brown.

Candied Apple.

One pound of apples which do not cook readily. Peel and cut into size desired. Drop into one cup of corn syrup and boil slowly until apple becomes translucent. Take apple out piece at a time and drain on fork. Let stand on wax paper three to four hours, roll in cocoanut.

Other fruits may be used in place of apples.

Fruit Leather.

Mash ripe fruit (berries, cherries, figs, apricots, peaches and blue plums may be used) to a pulp, spread on lightly oiled platters and dry in the sun or dryer. When dry sprinkle with sugar and pack away in jars or very tight boxes lined with wax paper.

Serve this leather in place of candy.

Fruit leather may be soaked in water and used for pies, puddings and sauces. When intended for this purpose, omit the sugar.

What is "War Work"?

For the purposes of the centralized war labor recruiting program, "war work" means:

1. The manufacture of products or the erection of structures directly or indirectly supplied to some department of the Government for use in connection with the war. "Indirectly supplied" includes goods delivered under subcontracts to Government contractors.
2. Coal mining is wholly war work.
3. Railroads and farms are engaged in war work to the extent that under this program they are protected from all recruiting by other industries.

The making of products which may ultimately be used for war purposes but which are not to be delivered either directly to the Government or to some contractor who uses them in producing or as a part of products to be delivered to the Government is NOT considered war work.—U. S. Employment Service Bulletin.

Care of Garden Essential Now.

Neglect of the garden during the hot August weather is fatal to a good crop, says W. E. Lommel of Purdue university, assistant county agent leader, in charge of garden work. More work in the garden is necessary now than at any other time of the year, if full value from earlier efforts is expected. Enthusiasm of the war gardeners must continue till frost.

"Vegetables require moisture and food for their proper development, and the food is not available for plant use if water is not present in the soil," said Mr. Lommel. "A good supply of soil moisture in the garden, therefore, is of vital importance. In watering, soak the soil thoroughly, as frequent light sprinklings do more harm than good. Seeds which are planted during hot, dry weather especially need artificial watering, as do the young plants.

"As soon as the soil can be safely worked after watering, a thorough cultivation should be given the garden in order to conserve the moisture. A thin layer of loose dirt is the best means to keep moisture and encourage the growth of plants. Each rain should be treated as if it were the last of the season, and as soon as the soil can be worked, the top crust should be broken and a good mulch obtained. Cultivate more shallow and farther away from the plants as they get older, so as not to cut off too many of the 'feeding roots'."

Every weed in the garden takes just that much plant food from the vegetables that need it now more badly than ever.

How One Boy Made Good

Wayne Fiscus, Patriot.

March—Plowed ground for corn.
April—Helped plant corn and cut timber.
May—Cut timber.
June—Plowed corn and cut wheat.
July—Shocked wheat, rye and oats.
August—Helped thrash.
Total earnings, $170.
Saved $100 (invested in Liberty Bond).
Gained in weight 12 pounds.
Name—Wayne Fiscus, age 17, home 540 East North street, Indianapolis.

The above summary of the record of Wayne Fiscus is the source of no little gratification to Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve. Mr. Straus declares Fiscus's record is a complete answer to the critics of the Reserve, who questioned its practicality, and jeered at the suggestion that boys between the ages of 16 and 21 can be of material assistance in winning the war by replacing their elders who have taken up arms.

Young Fiscus went to work for Charles Smith, Bloomington, Ind., R. R., in March. He worked steadily as indicated by the report above, until injured and incapacitated from further work on the farm, having caught his hand in a mower, severing one finger at the first joint.

"Yes, I enjoyed it, too," said young Fiscus in telling of his work. "And say, I'll soon be big enough to be a soldier," he added with the pleasure of anticipated triumphs in his eyes.

A very small per cent of the boys placed on farms by the United States Working Reserve failed to make good. Not all, of course, were as efficient nor as thrifty as young Fiscus. His example is commended to other boys of the Reserve by Mr. Straus.

To the names of the illustrious generals of today, history will justly add General Housewife.

Ten Percent Increase In Pork Is Wanted

Uncle Sam Calls on Indiana and County Agents Plan to Respond at Once.

Agricultural agents in all counties have organized, or will organize this month, local swine committees to co-operate with the State Food Committee and the extension department workers from Purdue university to bring about the ten per cent increase in pork production sought by Uncle Sam. The ten per cent increase is requested in addition to the twenty per cent asked for last fall.

"When we stop to consider that one hog out of every three marketed is used by the government to feed the soldiers and sailors, every farmer should be optimistic about raising more hogs," said one of the men who will assist in the campaign. "The army and navy are growing steadily, and so are the demands of our allies, which will require more pork than ever, and unless the supply is greatly increased the government will get more than one out of every three hogs marketed."

These committees will make direct appeals to farmers in their counties, asking them to keep more brood sows this fall, use pure-bred sires, improve their housing conditions, and take other steps to save the increased number of pigs expected.

Reports from the Indianapolis stock market for the first six months of 1918 show that hogs marketed this year are 23 pounds heavier than those sold in the same period last year. Receipts at all central western markets to which Indiana hogs are shipped show conclusively that farmers of this State measured up to the government's request for 20 per cent more pork this year.

The only tear we can shed with a smile is the profiteer.

Shall we give our best in men and not in food?

New War Books Recently Received by the State Library

Any of the following may be borrowed from the Indiana State Library by any citizen of the State. Ask your local librarian to apply for them, or if there is no library in the town, write to the State Library for registration blanks. The only expense is that of transportation.

Bott, A. "Cavalry of the Clouds."

Interesting story of experiences in the air, told by an English aviator.

Buchan, J. "Nelson's History of the War." 19 volumes.

"Well-ordered, comprehensive narrative of the operations in all fields." The volumes are small, thus being easily handled, are well supplied with maps and documents.

McBride, Capt. H. W. "The Emma Gees."

The Emma Gees are the machine gunners. The book is written by an Indianapolis man who enlisted with the Canadians in the earlier days.

McKenzie, R. T. "Reclaiming the Maimed, a Handbook of Physical Therapy."

Methods of restoring maimed soldiers to normal activity.

Ross, E. A. "Russia in Upheaval."

Written by the eminent sociologist, from personal experience in Russia in the latter half of 1917.

Woodhouse, H. "Text Book of Military Aeronautics."

Of interest to anyone who is going into the air service. Not the mechanics of aircraft, nor of flying, but their various uses in warfare. The book is intended for practical use and the illustrations are plentiful and a valuable addition to the text.

Special Committee On Use of Language

State Council Discusses Proposed Abolition of the Use of German in Public.

Following the adoption of the reports of the special committee relative to alleged discrimination in the treatment of soldiers at Purdue university, and on proposed construction, both of which appear elsewhere in this bulletin, the Indiana State Council of Defense at its meeting August 14th at Hazelden farm discussed the question of policy relative to the use of the German language in schools and churches. A letter from the Iowa State Council of Defense asking information as to the attitude of the Council relative to the use of German in teaching and preaching was, on motion of Isaac D. Straus, referred to a special committee consisting of Arthur W. Brady, Rev. Allan B. Philpott and George Ade. In the discussion it was brought out that action had been taken in some Indiana communities looking to the total abandonment of the use of German in any public way. John B. Peterson, of the Lake County Council of Defense, informed the Council the Lake county council had inquired into the alleged disloyalty of certain German churches against whom complaint had been made principally because of their use of the German language, and had found the disloyalty charges entirely unfounded. On the plea, Mr. Peterson said that any departure from the use of German in religious services would work a hardship, especially on the old people, the Lake County Council of Defense had authorized a continuance of the use of the language. Arthur W. Brady informed the Council that during the Americanization conference, held recently at Washington, the United States Commissioner of Education had declared himself not opposed to the continued use of German. Mr. Brady urged that the matter be given very careful consideration in view of its large significance.

Charles Fox, chairman of the Labor Committee, reported to the Council that 1,000 employees of the American Tin Plate Company at Elwood had gone on strike. He said the workmen had agreed to mediation through the Federal War Labor Board after, he said, a threat had been made that those of draft age would be reclassified and put into an advanced classification unless they desisted from their present attitude. He said an investigation at Washington had disclosed the fact that the government had no intention or purpose to reclassify the men. He said the employers had refused to ask the intercession of the federal agents, and he recommended that the State Council address a letter to the Department of Labor urging that prompt action be taken to the end that the war products of this plant be not reduced, and that the men be permitted to resume earning a livelihood.

A petition purporting to bear the names of 70 business houses in South Gary, Indiana, asking the revocation of an order issued by the Lake County Council of Defense requiring all Gary business houses to be closed four evenings each week at 6:30 o'clock, was referred back to the Lake County Council of Defense on the representation that the petition properly should be filed there before coming to the attention of the State Council. John B. Peterson, chairman of the Lake County Council of Defense, assured the State Council that the Lake county council would give the matter a fair and prompt hearing. The petitioners were represented by an attorney, who was directed to present the matter to the Lake County Council of Defense.

Elevator owners and operators at Morocco, Indiana, appeared before the Council to protest against the erection of a third elevator there. The Council referred the matter to the Newton County Council of Defense, with the suggestion to the contending parties that it is altogether inconsistent with the policies of the State and National Councils of Defense that there be any unnecessary expenditure of men, money and material, and to all appearances the conditions at Morocco do not warrant the additional investment.

A letter asking an expression from the State Council relative to the proposed abandonment or discontinuance of chautauquas was ordered placed on file with the understanding that any local grievances be presented in the regular way on an appeal from the county councils of defense.

Dr. Philpott asked the Council to give consideration to an appeal to young men especially, and also young women, that they remain in college, and particularly the smaller institutions, including church colleges. He called attention to the increased attractiveness of military service and training, which he said are more likely to be obtained from the larger institutions, to the possible detriment of the smaller schools. Dr. Philpott was authorized to present a resolution embodying the subject of his remarks at a later meeting.

In connection with the following resolution presented by Arthur W. Brady and William M. Sparks, and adopted unanimously by rising vote, Chairman Foley commended the work being done by Mr. Ade as a member of the State Council of Defense and in other ways, and described it as "a splendid patriotic service of which all Indiana is proud":

"Resolved, That the State Council of Defense express its appreciation of the generous hospitality of Messrs. George Ade and Warren T. McCray, again exhibited by inviting the members of the Council and of the Food Conservation and Wheat Production committees to hold their meetings of this date at this home; and extends its thanks for the entertainment furnished by Mr. Ade and Mr. McCray with characteristic liberality and good fellowship."

Mr. Straus called attention to the serious drought that prevails particularly in the northeastern part of the State. He pointed out the great danger of fire that exists from careless handling of cigars, cigarettes and lighted matches, and on his motion the Council adopted the following:

The protracted drought has caused a condition that hazards homes and the harvested products of the fields, now in the granaries; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the widest publicity be given admonishing everyone to be extremely cautious in the use of matches and the throwing away of lighted cigars and cigarettes in an effort to obviate fires.

Dr. Harry E. Barnard, federal food administrator, told the Council that the Indiana canners were about to harvest the largest tomato crop on record. He said the government had commandeered about 33 1/3 per cent of the output. He added the thought that the Council might use its moral influence to secure the necessary help in order that these tomatoes may be saved for the boys in the army and navy. He expressed the opinion that the women of the State can well afford to leave their work, and their knitting if need be, in order that there be no loss of this valuable food product. Dr. Barnard said that notwithstanding the possible surplus of two hundred million bushels of wheat, that the conservation program would be continued as a measure of protection against a possible wheat shortage next year.

The Council voted its indorsement and approval of the plans of the Committee on Food Production and Conservation for a campaign to select enough seed corn of suitable variety for next year's planting. Prof. Coleman stated the work will be done by a committee co-operating with the Extension Department at Purdue, and that steps will be taken to guarantee a sufficient supply of tested seed corn for next year.

On motion of Mr. Wampler the Council adjourned to meet August 20th, and regularly thereafter on Tuesday instead of Wednesday of each week.

"The American people will gladly make any sacrifice in consumption and in the production of foodstuffs that will maintain the health, comfort and the courage of the people of the Allied countries. We are in fact eating at the common table with them."—President's message to the conference of Allied Food Controllers in London.

Food Committee to Select Seed Corn

Sufficient Varieties to Be Tested As Guarantee for 1919 Planting.

The Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation and the Wheat Sub-committee were entertained at Brook, Indiana, by George Ade and Warren T. McCray, in conjunction with the State Council of Defense, August 14th.

After an inspection of the Hereford cattle on McCray's farm, an excellent dinner was served in the Hazelden clubhouse.

The State Food Committee and the Wheat Committee met in joint session in the George Ade pavilion, at 1:45 p. m.

A plan was approved outlining a seed corn selection and storing campaign for 1918, the object of which was to locate and store suitable varieties of corn in quantities large enough to plant the 1919 acreage. Purdue University has been asked to appoint a state leader for this campaign.

The forces which will co-operate in carrying out this project are the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, Indiana Corn Growers' Association, State Board of Education, Indiana Bankers' Association, Indiana Grain Dealers' Association, Indiana Millers' Association, County Better Farming Associations, and Purdue University.

The report to the Wheat Committee, relative to the 17 per cent increase in wheat acreage, was approved, with special emphasis being laid on the necessity for wide publicity in relation to sowing smut-free seed this fall. Warren T. McCray said that the work of D. S. Myer and the Wheat Committee, to insure the planting of seed free from disease, was one of greatest importance at this time. Thousands of bushels of disease-free seed have been located. Four to six "hot water" demonstrations are being conducted in forty or fifty counties to show the effectiveness of this method in the control of smut. Formaldehyde treatment for stinking smut is being employed by county agents in local demonstrations, in addition to a publicity campaign concerning it all over the State.

The meeting was most enjoyable and profitable.

Conditions at Purdue

The special committee appointed to investigate the alleged discrimination as between civilian and soldier students at Purdue University made the following report to the Indiana State Council of Defense at its meeting August 14, which report the council unanimously approved:

To the Indiana State Council of Defense:

Your committee begs leave to report:

That we find that the student soldiers at Purdue do not now have the use of the gymnasium, swimming pool or library. They do have a restricted use of the campus, restrictions having been imposed by the military and not by the civil authorities. The operation there is being carried on under a contract between Purdue and the government, and this contract is being fully carried out by both parties to the contract.

The authorities at Purdue express a willingness to grant the use of the other facilities at Purdue if requested by the military authorities.

In order to evidence the whole-hearted co-operation of the State, we recommend that the authorities of all State institutions be asked to tender to the military authorities the use of any of their facilities, leaving it to the military authorities to decide, after such tender, how far they care to avail themselves of such offer.

Respectfully submitted,

SAMUEL T. MURDOCK,
FRANK WAMPLER,
H. R. KURRIE,

Committee.

Good crops are brave promises to the Allies.

Woollen Presents The Coal Situation

Says Country Has Neither the Miners Nor Equipment to Provide Sufcient Fuel.

Evans Woollen, federal fuel administrator for Indiana, a member of the Indiana State Council of Defense, and acting director of the bureau of state organizations of the United States Fuel Administration, addressing the conference of county fuel chairmen for New York State, in session in New York City, said in part:

"We fuel administrators have to do with what the President recently spoke of as 'a grave danger.' Indeed, he went on to say of the existing scarcity of coal that it is the most serious danger which confronts the nation.

"In the presence of that fact we can not meet otherwise than sober-mindedly and in all humility. Yet we are stirred and are grateful, are we not, that to us has been entrusted what concerns the lives of our soldiers and the welfare of our neighbors.

"To you who, I doubt not, have gathered in such mood, I bring greeting from those who labor in such mood at the Capitol.

"They, more than you, have to do with the fundamental of our problems—production. They are not unmindful of the criticism that the fuel administration does everything about coal except to get more coal. Neither are they unaware that the coal in the ground is unlimited and that all the fuel administration's difficulties would be overcome by sufficiently increased production. Be assured that Washington is at work on production. A committee, skilled in mining and devoted in patriotism, is working on the problem with imagination and initiative and vigor. However, the members of that committee, better perhaps than some of the fuel administration's critics, know the limitations. They know that our national activities in this time of crisis are limited not by money or credit but by labor and material and transportation. We were asked, the other day, why the miners do not work in three eight-hour shifts. The answer, of course, was that the country has neither the miners to fill the shifts nor the equipment for the transportation of their product. Drafted miners who are essential are being given deferred classification and are being urged against their inclinations to accept it as a patriotic duty. At the mines, production committees have been organized. Representatives of the management and of the workers co-operate on these committees in removing obstacles and stimulating zeal. The railroad administration is making its contribution to production by doing, I doubt not, everything that can reasonably be done to enlarge transportation equipment and facilities.

"In a word, production is being increased and unprecedentedly. The increase was fifty million tons of bituminous last year and will be, we hope, at least fifty millions more this year. Further, this is the only country that has increased its production since entering the war.

"But, notwithstanding whatsoever increase is within the possibilities, no assurance can be given against a serious coal shortage. The reason, of course, is that the war-made demand keeps bounding on beyond reach. Let me give a single instance. The allotment to the navy at the beginning of the coal year was three and a half million tons. It is now estimated that the requirements for the year will be eight millions. Having in mind a multitude of such instances, we do not hesitate in the assertion that the fuel administration's problem as of April 1st, the beginning of the coal year, has been solved. It is the problem caused since April 1st by the enlarging war program that has not been solved.

"In view of this enlarging program and consequent fuel problem, there is necessity for a modification of the fuel administration's policy in the matter of storage. We are, as you know, well informed about storage by the reports we now have weekly from nearly one hundred thousand industries, utilities and retailers. From these reports it is evident that storage by non-preferred consumers must be checked. The administration's policy as modified under existing conditions is based on the assumption that the hazards of winter delivery should be borne by the non-preferred consumers. Accordingly, it is being provided that coal in demand for winter storage by preferred consumers shall not be available for such storage by non-preferred consumers. You will find yourselves much engaged during the ensuing weeks in carrying out that policy.

"In conclusion, permit me to remind you, as to the seriousness of our responsibility, that in dealing with coal, we are dealing with that which Lloyd George has said 'is the most terrible of enemies and the most potent of friends'—'life for us and death for our foe'."

Grasshoppers Causing Big Losses in Indiana

Reports of serious depredations on corn and clover of grasshoppers throughout Southern Indiana have come to the attention of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation during the last week. These insects have invaded entire townships, stripping the clover fields and damaging the corn.

County agricultural agents have been responsible for the saving of thousands of dollars to Indiana farmers on the control of this pest. In many counties the advance of the hopper hordes was halted by the use of poison bran bait or the employment of a "hopper dozer," a large box-like trap which was dragged over the field.

The poison bran which is sown broadcast at daybreak, before the hoppers start feeding, consists of 25 pounds of bran, one pound of arsenic, a bottle of lemon extract or six lemons ground up, a half gallon of cheap molasses (the kind which is used in cattle feed), and enough water to make a bran mash. A few bites of this takes the hop out of the grasshopper.

Plans for the hopper dozer may be obtained from any agricultural agent. These have been used effectively during the past week in Shelby, Jennings and other counties. They are dragged over clover or alfalfa fields.

The bran bait has been used effectively in corn fields of Spencer county. Through the co-operation of the farmers of Spencer county, an agreement was made to purchase the necessary materials at wholesale prices through a Rockport merchant, thus saving 15 per cent. The cost was sixty cents per acre. Twenty-five hundred acres of corn and 500 acres of alfalfa which were wiped out last year by the hoppers, suffered scarcely any this year, by the community co-operation and the work of County Agent W. J. Piggott, Jr., when the pests started.

To Sow Only Treated Seed for 1919 Wheat

Another Important Step in the Campaign
Which Has for its Object an Increased Food Production.

Another means of getting the increased wheat yield asked by the Government, a campaign for which is being waged by the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, is to sow only treated seed. To obtain this end, a campaign is being waged by special representatives from the Department of Agriculture and the Extension Department of Purdue, along with county agricultural agents, to show farmers how to treat their seed with formaldehyde in order to stop the ravages of stinking smut which has cut Indiana's wheat production several million bushels this year.

These men will hold demonstrations in every county of the State to show how wheat seed should be treated and to encourage this work among the farmers.

In Shelby County arrangements have been made for the establishment of a central wheat treating station by the farmers so that their seed will be treated by the hot water method which controls loose as well as stinking smut and scab. Several hundred bushels will be treated this way by an expert and put out in three or four bushel lots to farmers all over the county who will sow it in a separate plot away from the other wheat fields so that it can remain disease free. The seed from the three or four acres will be used next year by the grower and his neighbors, all of whom will have disease free seed which, of course, will yield better. The total amount of smut infected wheat received by the elevators in Shelby County up to August 15th, was 229,629 bushels. Reports from various counties show that elevators are docking a great amount of wheat because of the prevalence of stinking smut.

An excellent wheat production circular has been prepared under the direction of County Agent T. C. Cravens of Martinsville. The publication says that Morgan County raised 12 bushels of wheat per acre in 1916 on 19,245 acres, 19 bushels per acre in 1917 on 23,890 acres, and 23 bushels per acre in 1918 on 31,520 acres. The county wheat committee, moreover, says that Morgan County can raise more wheat per acre in 1919 and meet the Government request for 4,000 additional acres. An increase of two acres of wheat per farm will more than add the needed acreage.

A special campaign is being waged on how to increase wheat yields through better preparation of the seed bed, the use of disease free seed, and a greater use of fertilizer and lime.

Asa J. Smith is Gassed.

Asa J. Smith, formerly State organizer for the United States Boys' Working Reserve, has been gassed in France. Smith joined the marines following his tour of Indiana high schools, and was in the famous action at Chateau Thierry when the Americans helped stem the German drive toward Paris. He wrote his mother in Wabash that he is recovering and, except for the effect on his eyes, was almost well again.

The office of the director of the Boys' Reserve has two stars in its service flag, the other being for Linton Cox of Indianapolis, now an aviator in the American forces.

Patriotism in Indiana

Bartholomew County.—The vigilance committee appointed by the county council of defense will pass on all cases of reported disloyalty, and in very extreme cases the names will be referred to the federal authorities for action. Foreigners in the county will be looked after by the Americanization committee, of which Rev. E. E. Valentine is chairman, and T. A. Bruce and Miss Lois Wets his assistants. The farmers of this county are experimenting with Rosen rye, which has been grown successfully in other parts of the State, but has never been tried out in Bartholomew County. Rosen rye in the field is exceptionally long; it produces four rows to the head and fills out perfectly, and is the equal of common rye either for feed or flour, and where grown in the northern part of the State has shown an increased production of 35 per cent over the common grades.

Dearborn County.—Mrs. James G. McKinney of Lawrenceburg has formed a new war workers' organization of girls, 16 years and over. There are about 45 members at present, but it is hoped to increase this number. The girls will have military drills, and do their bit in various war work activities. The following officers have been elected: Elizabeth Bessler, captain; Tura Dober, first lieutenant; Agnes Haverstick, second lieutenant; Lorene Staus, first sergeant; Lucille McKim, second sergeant; Mildred Hayes, quartermaster sergeant; Viola Liddle, Lorena Federle, Leslie Staus, Alberta Bateman, corporals. The health and recreation committee of the county council of defense is still pushing their campaign of raising funds with which to purchase articles of recreation for sailors. The Dearborn County war mothers have charge of the collection, with Mrs. John Stier in charge, assisted by Mrs. Chas. Olcott, war mother of Aurora. Splendid assistance has been given by the Aurora girl volunteers, who engineered a house-to-house canvass for funds.

Delaware County.—J. F. Treasure, county agent, reports that Delaware County has over 700 acres in well tended gardens. The watchword of the county is "Save your best seed—can all you can and some more."

Elkhart County.—A snappy game of baseball between the "lean" and "fat" aggregations of Goshen recently netted $25 for the Red Cross.

Floyd County.—Flagwomen are guarding the street crossings of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company within the city limits of New Albany. The women of France and England have long been filling such positions, but it is an unusual thing here. The substitution for manpower is spreading to many lines and the women of Floyd County are patriotically responding to the call of the government to help win the war. Floyd County is one of the eighteen counties in Indiana which has not appointed an agricultural agent for war work.

Fulton County.—The county commissioners at their August meeting paid the county council of defense $940.08, covering list of itemized expenses filed by the various attaches of the council.

Gibson County.—The reorganization of the county council of defense by Judge Vandever brings in three new members, E. S. Robinson, Sanford K. Trippett and T. Morton McDonald, who succeeded Dr. J. M. Williams, Lawrence Sullivan and B. N. Barrett. Mr. Robinson, the new chairman, has been exceedingly active in war work, and is well equipped for the undertaking of his new duties.

Hancock County.—At the invitation of the Fortville Liberty Guards the "guards" of New Palestine will spend Labor Day in Fortville, and it is hinted that some surprises in the way of fancy drills, etc., are to be staged. The New Palestine company has 75 active and 12 honorary members, with the following officers: Captain, Ross Raper; first lieutenant, Ralph Logan; second lieutenant, Guy Westlake; first sergeant, Roscoe Andrews; sergeants, Earl Swisher, Arthur Walls, Charles Herrlich and Munsey Addison; corporals, Henry Hanes, Julius Fraley, Walter Lynch, Henry Lantz, Glenn Mann, John Gould, Henry Kirkhoff and Everett Snodgrass.

Hendricks County.—Many anonymous communications received by Dr. W. T. Lawson, federal food administrator for Hendricks County, regarding the violations of the food regulations by certain individuals, have brought forth the following signed statement from Dr. Lawson: "It should be understood that the food administrator is not a detective. It is not his business to go around over the county running down violators of the law. If violations are known to exist it is the patriotic duty of all to report them. When violations are reported, either verbal or written, the name of the person is not divulged, yet for the protection of the food administration it must be known that the information comes from reliable source and is founded on facts. Some of these letters doubtless come from individuals acting in good faith who are desirous of having the law enforced, while others may come from some one having a personal grudge. The citizens of Hendricks County as a rule are loyal and patriotic and deserve a word of commendation for their willingness to co-operate. The food administration desires to help and it is not its purpose to force hardships upon any one. Food rules are made only when it seems necessary. Unless rules are wilfully and maliciously disregarded it is much better to quietly talk to the individual rather than report to this office until the facts are well known and the person given an opportunity to get in line. We must remember also that many stories are being circulated that have no foundation. Many times these stories are only gossip and other times they are the vilest kind of German propaganda and are started to create dissatisfaction among our own people. Hun-born gossip reports that the food administration will requisition certain crops at less than the cost of production, that the price of wheat will be lowered in 1919, that hogs will not be purchased at the ratio agreed upon and that the French people eat white bread five times a day while we Hooverize. It has been reported that Hoover agents have been in this county and have told certain farmers to cut and thrash their rye instead of hogging it. These stories are dangerous and are intended only to poison the minds of the farmers and create a feeling of resentment and thus lessen the production of certain crops. These stories are malicious in their origin but are sometimes repeated by the innocent person in good faith. Do not repeat any story until you are absolutely sure it is true. It may look plausible, but some of them are the most dangerous kind of German lies. It is safe to repeat nothing until you know it is true. You might be asked to explain and if there was no foundation for the story it would fall upon you. Personally I believe more people are betraying their government today by circulating these stories than by violating our food rules. The government has not and will not in the future take any crop without due notice and always by paying all it is worth. There is no evidence that the price of wheat will be lowered nor that the agreed ratio of hog prices will not be maintained. There have been no agents here telling farmers what to do with their rye or other crop. The people have nothing to fear from the food administration except where wilful violations of food rules are reported and where these Hun-born stories are persistently circulated. An old Chinese proverb says: 'A lie has wings and can fly far, but has no feet and cannot stand.' Let us kill snakes wherever we find them and call a lie a lie and a Hun sympathizer a Hun without hesitation or ceremony."

Howard County.—In spite of the widespread warnings issued to the public regarding the operations of "sharks" selling "blue sky" stock, a number are still operating in Kokomo and other parts of Howard County. Any proposition of this kind that is submitted to the research committee of the Kokomo Chamber of Commerce will be investigated immediately.

Knox County.—Due to the fact that the district war board issued an announcement that melons were not considered essential foodstuffs, urging the farmers to raise wheat and corn instead, the cantaloupe output in Knox County is not as large as in previous seasons, but higher prices are being realized.

Lagrange County.—Prizes from a number of concerns have been received by the promoters of the Lagrange corn school week, which is held in October. To date, the Dupont Powder Company has sent a check for $10; the St. Louis Coal Company sent a check for $5; the J. H. Channon Company contributed a ten-foot wood hunting flag, and the Beck & Corbitt Iron Company of St. Louis contributed two automobile tire pumps. Thrift stamps will be bought with the checks, and offered as prizes.

Madison County.—A band of fifty men, composed of those in the deferred classes for military service, has been organized for the purpose of escorting all men leaving Anderson for service, and to assist at various patriotic gatherings.

Marshall County.—The child welfare committee reports 1,079 children registered in the recent drive, as follows: Bourbon Township, 312; Bremen, 100; Center, 220; West, 50; Polk, 69; Union, 100; Tippecanoe, 80; Walnut, 88; Greene, 60, with North Township not yet reporting. Approximately, this represents a registration of 50 per cent. One-half of these showed up normal, having no noticeable disease needing correction, while the remaining 50 per cent registered had either adenoids or diseased tonsils. Only a small number were otherwise physically defective, and not a mental defective was registered. On the recommendation of the physician in charge, several operations have been performed to correct minor defects. Parents who did not take advantage of the opportunity for previous registration are advised they will be given the privilege of having their children examined in the future. In this work Mrs. Floyd Dunnell, county chairman, was assisted by the following township chairmen: Mrs. Stackhouse, of Bourbon; Mrs. Craig, of Bremen; Mrs. Laird, of Tippecanoe; Mrs. King, of Donaldson; Mrs. Ruff, of Tyler; Mrs. Martindale, of Plymouth; Mrs. Roming, of Argos; Mrs. Towne, of Argos; Mrs. Farber, of LaPaz.

Noble County.—Kendallville's war chest fund has reached $28,500 in pledges, and $7,712.41 of this amount has been paid in cash. At a meeting of the general committee it was reported that only $532.41 has been paid out, and of this sum $384 was to Kendallville military registrants as they entered military service. Each man received $8 when he left home.

Parke County.—J. S. McFadden succeeds F. H. Nichols as chairman of the county council of defense, and George W. Rohn succeeds W. B. Collins, resigned. W. P. Montgomery will serve as vice-chairman, and Mrs. F. W. Leatherman continues as secretary.

Porter County.—The government has added a motor school to the line of instruction at the Valparaiso university military training school. The first building to be devoted to this particular branch of military training is in use, and 500 embryo soldiers have received their initial training, and accommodations are being made for 800 more to fill the places vacated by the first lot.

Ripley County.—Batesville has the distinction of not having had a fire alarm sounded within a year. This is pointed out as practical conservation of a most patriotic character.

Shelby County.—Russell G. East, county agent for Shelby County, is receiving many requests for the use of his "hopper dozer," a trap for grass hoppers which he constructed. During one trial more than a bushel and a half of the pests were caught in the "dozer" during a thirty-minute trip through a field. In line with the government's statement that the food question should not be left to become a matter of discussion in literary clubs alone, Shelby County is planning an intensive food club drive, and before it closes in September it is hoped to have every home in the county allied with some food club, and every man, woman and child backed up by their individual efforts the national food program.

Tipton County.—Fred R. Farnam, assistant director of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, states that the Royal Packing Company of Windfall will require the services of from twelve to fifteen boys to help gather the tomato crops, on or about the first of September. The work will last about a month and a half, and is not heavy for any boy of average physical strength. The boys will be properly housed and looked after; present plans contemplate placing them all in one house under the supervision of Rev. M. G. Long, boy scout master at Windfall.

Vanderburgh County.—The year's work of the woman's section of the county council of defense was reviewed at a luncheon given at the Hotel McCurdy in Evansville, attended by Mrs. F. M. Hostetter, secretary, and fourteen women, heads of the various departments of the woman's section of the council. A short talk was given by Mrs. Hostetter, followed by impromptu talks on Registration of women, by Mrs. W. J. Torrance; on Americanization, by Mrs. E. A. Torrance; Food Production, by Miss Eva Mae Epperson; Child Welfare Work, by Mrs. Albion Fellows Bacon; the Four-Minute Women, by Mrs. Frederick Erbacher; Home Demonstration Work, by Miss Lola Hemstock, and the Liberty Loan, by Mrs. Frederick Lauenstein. An interesting study on "Woman's Duty in War Times" was presented by Miss Elizabeth Cowan, bringing out the necessity of observing the regulations promulgated by the state and national administrators.

Vigo County.—Terre Haute's community singing, which started in beautiful Centenary Church last winter, still continues in Collet park. No matter how hot the Sunday nights are, the people come in crowds and sing heartily. Patriotic songs, Foster's southern melodies and more modern tunes vie with each other in favor. Enthusiastically these people sing—sometimes twelve thousand of them and sometimes more. And when they leave the park instead of a myriad of strangers leaving there is always a community with one common binding tie of loyalty toward their country and city. On G. A. R. night Colonel Asbury, a Civil war veteran of Farmersburg, was the four-minute speaker. The park was decorated in flags and old soldiers were there from all over the county. The music was led by George Wyckoff, city scoutmaster. Besides the community singing there is always a soloist and band. The expense of these sings is borne by the council of defense, the street car company, and one or two persons. Chairman Earl Houck is enthusiastic over the spirit created by these Sunday night meetings and plans to keep them going as long as it is warm enough. Then they will go back to the churches again.

Wabash County.—Intense interest in the Fourth Liberty Loan is shown in many counties, and Wabash County is fast getting under way for a quick canvass. A regular bond committee will have charge of the sales, and every assistance will be given by the county council of defense. Chester Township is well along with its organization, and the members of the council of the township will be directed by Thomas A. Peabody, chairman, assisted by the following precinct captains and lieutenants: Precinct No. 1—J. J. Wolfe, captain; Irvin Delauer, Charles Grossnickle, Millard Farley, Jasper Jinks, D. L. Krisher, Charles Ruple, Oliver Williams, Tony Stocker, William Ginterick. Precinct No. 2—Charles B. Comstock, captain; George Fitch, C. M. Martin, S. E. Lixgett, Freeman Rittenhouse, D. L. Bauman, Calvin McCutcheon, T. J. John, Willard Heeter, J. A. Heeter. Precinct No. 3—G. B. Frame, captain; Chesley Bone, Charles Olinger, Jonas W. Warvel, Herman Martin, Louis Naber, Ivan Little, Ira Mummert, William Jennings. Precinct No. 4—F. J. Ginterick, captain; Earl Heeter, Thurlie Little, Dr. H. A. Dugley, Tyree Clevenger, Virgil Hanley, L. P. Urschel, Robert Weiner, G. C. Orr, Howard Williams. Precinct No. 5—Oscar Reiff, captain; Lawrence Tyner, Lee Rager, Robert Briner, Harvey F. Hanley, T. C. Hanley, Henry N. Shook, Walter Loeffel, George E. Hester, Frank Dunbar. Precinct No. 6—William Huffman, captain; John Reiff, Charles Schroll, William Working, Louis Shanahan, Jesse Harrison, Loran Hoover, David Kilty, Shirl Hobbs, Amos Kriebbaum, Albert Baker. Precinct No. 7—A. C. Wolfe, captain; Homer Baker, George Conrad, L. A. Lynn, Philip Goehler, Ed Kitterman, Will Ballenger, Henry Hoover, A. B. Rager, O. G. Haupt.

Wells County.—Well County is without negro residents of draft age, the only man in the county coming within the draft having been sent to Camp Taylor at Louisville to enter the service.

Whitley County.—An organization embracing every township in the county, has been thoroughly worked out for the purpose of carrying forward the work of the Registered Men's Association of Whitley County. One of the prime purposes is a greater wheat production, and the head of a wheat production committee in each township has been appointed.

Take what you eat; eat what you take.

Stamp Out Sedition By Lawful Means

Council of National Defense Issues Statement on Un-American Practices.

The State councils section of the Council of National Defense has issued the following:

To the Several State Councils of Defense:

In the past few months in many parts of the country there has been a tendency toward lawless treatment of those suspected of disloyalty. However patriotic may have been the motives which prompted these outbursts, their effect is deplorable. They are blots upon the war record of a nation which has declared itself to be fighting for a universal reign of law; they furnish ammunition to those makers of enemy propaganda who are trying to make the world believe that the enemies of Germany, too, are capable of atrocities; and frequently by rousing anger and fear, they tend to undo the work which the Councils of Defense, through their educational campaigns, their Americanization work and their community organization have done and are successfully doing to unite the Nation in the fellowship of war work.

The only way to prevent such un-American occurrences is by setting against them the full weight of public opinion. The Council of National Defense, therefore, calls upon the State councils of defense and their county and local councils, as the leaders of the organized public opinion of the country, to bring home to the isolated communities which tolerate such disorders the fact that whatever their purposes in effect they embarrass the Government and weaken the fighting power of the country. The Council of National Defense looks to each State council of defense to see to it that these disorders do not occur in its state, but that sedition is henceforward stamped out by lawful means and by lawful means only; and that differences and disputes are adjusted, not by voluntary or self-constituted committees, but by official authorities.

This task calls for leadership and action. The Council of National Defense makes this request in the full confidence that each State council will assume the responsibility for keeping the fair record of its own State clean from this time forward.

Very truly yours,
ARTHUR H. FLEMING,
Chief of Section.

Food Administration

With the growing shortage of farm labor, the food problem resolves itself largely into one of maintaining maximum production. The Federal Food Administration is committed to the support of the program of the United States Department of Agriculture, which is asking Indiana farmers to increase their wheat acreage for 1919 seventeen per cent and at the same time continue the intensive effort to increase production per acre. The harvest of the corn crop is one of the present issues before the agricultural community, and every patriotic Hoosier available will make it his business to contribute his part. His part means his work, not just his sympathy.

The salvation of the unprecedented yield of tomatoes has become as important a task in Indiana as the purchase of Thrift Stamps and Liberty Bonds. It ranks with a prompt registration and report under the selective conscription law. The tomatoes are absolutely necessary to the success of the crusade for freedom and democracy, and except that every man, woman and child in Indiana realize that it is a part of his business, where the opportunity affords, to help pick, peel and pack the tomatoes, his patriotism will not assay 100 per cent when the test comes. The Federal Government has requisitioned one-third of the Indiana tomato pack in a realization of the importance of canned tomatoes in the soldiers' rations.

The United States Boys' Working Reserve in

Indiana is one of the dependable supports of the farm labor line. There are, in the State, thousands of boys who have pledged themselves to assist in the patriotic work of tilling the soil. During the planting season, since school dismissed in the spring, they have demonstrated their usefulness, their ability and their right to claim succession to their elders who have left the farm for the training camp. The boys helped save the sugar beets in northern Indiana and southern Michigan; they plowed corn, shocked wheat and oats and have in large measure relieved their elders of the responsibility for doing farm chores, which added to the time every man may spend engaged in the heavier work of crop production.

Indiana farmers in many counties already have been educated to look to the Boys' Working Reserve for emergency help. They have done so profitably, satisfactorily and successfully. In other counties business men have banded together in a mutual agreement to close their stores, where necessary, to save the crops. "Shock troops" have helped wherever they have been formed and thousands of dollars' worth of grain and hay that might have been lost have been saved to the nation's supply through the willingness and organized readiness of volunteers.

But for a successful program, that will take care of the requirements over the possibly long period of time during which the government must draw more and more heavily on the labor supply, it is essential that every producer look ahead. He must accept the untrained youth between fifteen and eighteen years of age and teach him the rudiments of agricultural work. He must be patient and painstaking, and accept the boys as the only labor obtainable, and realize that he can do his full duty to the fighters in France only by making the best of the situation at home and devoting himself wholeheartedly and without restraint to the task of producing food crops.

Arrangements are being made whereby school officials will permit boys of the Reserve to absent themselves from school to help in the corn harvest.

Farmers, cannery men and others engaged in this important war duty who may be in need of help are urged to write to Isaac D. Straus, federal state director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, 83 State House, Indianapolis, Ind., for directions as to how to secure the assistance of the agency by means of which the federal government expects to maintain the production of food.

Indiana is allotted 12,276,000 pounds of sugar for September. This makes certain that there will be sufficient for all patriotic cannery men who are willing to abide by the regulations and not abuse the canning privilege to secure more than their fair share of sugar for ordinary consumption. The Food Administration encourages maximum canning with a minimum of sugar.

M. Zandal, a Lafayette grocer, was closed for a week; A. C. Foerster, a Batesville grocer, was deprived of 1,000 pounds of sugar, and O. M. Jeffries, a Union City bottler, was permitted to pay $200 to the local Red Cross for violating the sugar regulations during the past week.

Indiana candy manufacturers have been asked to adopt a regulation similar to that agreed to by New York manufacturers, to limit candy sales to one pound per customer during the sugar shortage.

July Saving Stamp Sales Pass All Prior Records

The Treasury Department issues the following:

For the month of July the cash receipts in the Treasury Department from the sales of War Savings and Thrift Stamps surpassed all previous records, totaling $211,417,942.61, and representing an investment and a loan to the government at the average rate of $2 for every man, woman and child in America.

From the beginning of the war savings campaign, and up to and including July 31, total receipts from the sales of war savings securities are $518,510,334.03, this representing the purchase of War Savings Stamps to a total maturity value of $624,711,245.

Motor Truck Trains Create Road Problem

Resolution Suggests that County Officials May Secure Rerouting by Appeal to Proper Official.

To counties wherein a serious problem has been created by the wear and tear of motor truck trains routed through by the War Department, the following resolution adopted by the Indiana State Council of Defense, at its meeting August 20th, will suggest a means of securing relief:

WHEREAS, It is the wish of the Indiana State Council of Defense to protect at all times our system of improved highways and also to co-operate with the War Department in providing direct and serviceable routes to motor truck trains now passing through Indiana in large numbers, be it

Resolved, That the following suggestions be made to the County Councils of Defense:

1. If any county highway, by reason of motor truck travel, is damaged so that the county superintendent of roads finds it difficult, either because of a lack of materials or labor or a shortage of maintenance funds, to keep it in satisfactory condition, it will be proper for the county council to communicate with the Motor Convoy Service, Q. M. C., 230 East Ohio street, Chicago, and suggest that the truck companies be routed over lateral or parallel routes, which will give these truck trains equally good roads and no considerable increase in mileage.

2. It is believed that the Motor Convoy Service will be glad to receive, at any time, information from county councils which will enable the routing officer in Chicago to select, in the various counties now traversed by these truck trains, the highways which will provide a sensible passage without great loss of mileage, and at the same time which will enable the county authorities to best maintain their highways in good condition. It is not the purpose of this suggestion to annoy the War Department with frequent demands that routes be changed. It is the belief of the state council that a friendly arrangement can be made which will occasionally divert the heavy truck travel to our splendid substitute routes, thereby conserving Indiana highways without in any way delaying or hindering the movement of motor truck trains.

3. It is suggested to county councils upon the advice of highway experts that the frequent dragging of the hard roads over which these heavy trains are passing will help greatly to maintain them in condition for travel and to lessen the ultimate cost of repair and reconstruction.

Great Saving in Power Plant.

The United States Fuel Administration's conservation bureau reports a saving at the rate of 350,000 tons of coal annually in its campaign for fuel economy in steam power plants. This saving has been initiated through the inspection of three hundred of the larger plants of the country.

Each of the 250,00 plants in the country will be inspected as fast as the work can be accomplished and it is estimated that 20,000,000 tons of coal can be saved.

This saving has not been effected by any closing down or curtailment of industry and is the result of applying scientific methods to the operation of boilers and engines. It has put money in the pockets of the plant owners, and at the same time made available a large amount of coal for war needs and for heating homes next winter.

L. E. Clapp, technical assistant in the fuel engineering section, has just returned from a trip through six of the northern central States, where he was in conference with the administrative engineers in charge. David Moffatt Myers, chief administrative engineer, is in New York City speeding up the work there.

U-Boats and Wastefulness are twin enemies.

Attention,
County Councils

General Bulletin No. 179.

August 19, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

The Gas Defense Division of the Army advises that the supply of walnut and hickory nuts as well as the shells of these nuts is not sufficient to meet the demands in connection with the manufacture of gas masks. The requirements for nut shells are tremendous in quantity, approximating 800 tons per day, and our information indicates that the Government is supplying material to the allies as well as securing it for its own use. The carbon from these shells constitutes a very good absorbent of poisonous gases.

The Gas Defense Division has called upon the State council to assist in obtaining all possible supplies of these nuts and shells. They are willing to pay around $8.00 per short ton for this material, which will probably be sufficient to cover the expenses of bagging and transporting to cars. It is suggested that the nuts and shells be sent to or delivered to the chairman of the county council who will then be furnished with a Government bill of lading and with marking, shipping and billing instructions. A sufficient quantity of bags to take care of estimated receipts will also be furnished and these could either be sent to the various producers or arrangements could be made to bag the nuts or shells after their delivery to the chairman.

Other shell materials which can be used are coconut shells, peach pits, apricot pits, etc.

Please give this matter your immediate attention and arrange to secure all available supplies of this material in your county.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

Must Be No Breakdown.

There must be no breakdown on the farm—no failure of foods, foodstuffs, and clothing. The duty is pressing of furnishing abundant supplies for our own people and, in large measure, for the peoples with whom we are associating. The necessity of increasing production and of saving is no less important in all other directions.—David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture.

Liberty Guard Lights

General Order No. 3.

Office of the Adjutant-General, State of Indiana.
Liberty Guard Division.

Indianapolis, Ind., August 19, 1918.

All commanding officers of Liberty Guard companies in the State of Indiana, upon receipt of this order, will at once present themselves to the chairman of the local conscription board in the county where the company is located and tender to the State conscription board the services of the company in aiding in the carrying out of the recent order of Provost Marshal General Crowder, wherein the local conscription board is directed to appoint a committee for the education of the conscripted men.

In carrying out this order the spirit of cooperation will be observed and the captains of the Liberty Guard organization will arrange his details and assignments so that all the men in the county will be served as nearly as possible.

It is not anticipated that the conscripted men will be enrolled in the Liberty Guard companies, it being sufficient that they be grouped into squads or platoons at definite places and at such times as is convenient for all parties; and some officer or non-commissioned officer be detailed to give them as much instruction as is possible within the limited time prior to call to service.

If the deferred class men desire to perfect a permanent organization, such an arrangement should be encouraged.

By order of the Governor.

HARRY B. SMITH,
Adjutant-General, Indiana.

Wonderful Record of U. S. Boys' Reserve

The Department of Labor has reason to congratulate its field organization upon the achievement of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, a branch of the employment service that from small and experimental beginnings has already attained an importance claiming national attention.

Under fortunate leadership in the various States, the movement has grown to proportions which, in view of its recent inception and early handicaps, I regard as truly remarkable. The necessity that the country avail itself of boy labor on a large scale is upon us. That this should be done according to an intelligent plan is essential to the fullest utilization of this labor, together with due consideration for the welfare of our young manhood.

The boy power of the country can not be treated merely as productive mechanism. As a human element of the war machine it merits special consideration, and I am happy to see that it is receiving the thoughtful care of minds well trained in the problems of the American boy.

It is a delicate and responsible task to mobilize the vast productive forces latent in the youths of high school age, and at the same time to accommodate the workers to a new environment and surround them with physical and moral safeguards upon a standardized plan. I am gratified to say that this problem has been approached intelligently and conscientiously. The officials in control of the policies of the United States Boys' Working Reserve have the full vision of its possibilities and are making the most of them; and this with reference both to production and to boy-conservation.

The facts and figures for 1918, not yet complete, are eloquent of what may be expected of this vital branch of the employment service in the coming crop year. I look forward with confidence to a still more wonderful record by the United States Boys' Working Reserve in 1919.

Thanks of the Department of Labor are due to the governors of the States, the state councils of defense, the educational forces, and our agents in the field, for their unselfish devotion of time and effort to this important work.

W. B. WILSON.

Fritsche in Federal Post

C. B. Fritsche, assistant State director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, to whom a large measure of credit for the splendid organization that has been built up in Indiana belongs, has tendered to Isaac D. Straus, Indiana Director of the Reserve, his resignation to take effect September 1. In recognition of his very effective work in the State Mr. Fritsche has been nominated a national field organizer for the Reserve, which promises to become an increasingly important factor in the agricultural and military life of the nation.

In connection with his new responsibilities Mr. Fritsche has made public the following self-explanatory letter:

"U. S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR,
U. S. Employment Service,
Public Service Reserve.

Washington, August 13th, 1918.

Mr. C. B. Fritsche,
83 State House,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

Dear Mr. Fritsche:—In extending the enlarged national program of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, the Department of Labor finds it essential to add to the national staff several of the State organizers whose efforts during the past year have contributed very largely to such successes as the Boys' Working Reserve has enjoyed. Therefore, I am writing to Mr. Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director for Indiana, and Hon. M. E. Foley, Chairman of the State Council of Defense, asking if you can be released from your work in Indiana in order to accept a position in this department as national field organizer, in which capacity it will be your duty to stimulate the activities of the Reserve among the several states, keeping their respective organizations more closely in touch with the national office.

I fully appreciate that your natural inclination at this time is to enter the army, and know that since you have qualified for a commission as captain in the United States Engineers Officers Reserve Corps your acceptance of the position which we offer you will involve considerable sacrifice. However, due to the peculiar experience you have had with our organization during the past year, I feel that at this particular time it is your duty to forego entering military service for several months, at least, in order that the Boys' Reserve may have the benefit of your organizing ability, which has accomplished such splendid results in Indiana.

Will you kindly advise me of your decision at the earliest possible moment?

Faithfully yours,

W. E. HALL,
National Director,
U. S. Boys' Working Reserve."

Liberty Guard By-Laws

Suggested by-laws for Liberty Guard companies have been distributed with the request that arrangements be made in each instance for the annual or semi-annual business meeting of each of the patriotic organizations. It is stated by the chairman of the military section of the council that such paragraphs as are not pertinent may be omitted. It is added that within a few days the military laws of the State will be published by the adjutant-general, and these may be used as a guide:

BY-LAWS

OF THE LIBERTY GUARD COMPANY ORGANIZED AT _____, INDIANA.

Purpose.

This organization is formed under the call made by the Governor of Indiana in his proclamation dated December 12, 1917, wherein the sedentary militia of the State is called to organize under the provisions and purposes set out in the proclamation. It will be our duty and aim to maintain, while our nation is at war with the German Empire and its allies, an intense patriotic organization in this community; to perfect ourselves in military training and to train those associated with us who may be called to the colors; to take part, in so far as we can, in the civic activities of the community as they relate to the problem of winning the war; to maintain due vigilance in ferreting out disloyalty and treason, and to report same through proper channels, and to generally obey the orders of the Governor of Indiana or those whom he may delegate with authority over us.

SECTION 1. The membership of this organization shall consist of all able-bodied white male citizens of this community who desire to join with us in the purposes herein set forth, and who are accepted as members by the council of administration.

SECTION 2. The active members shall consist of those who are physically able to attend drill and who are able to perform such active service as may be called for in the event the Governor of the State should call this company to duty. These members only shall be entitled to vote at the annual meetings of the company.

SECTION 3. The honorary members of this company shall consist of those who by reason of age or impairment are not thought physically fit for active service, but who desire in this way to contribute their presence and influence to furthering the aims of the company and aid in perfecting it in military knowledge.

SECTION 4. The civilian administrative affairs of the company shall be administered by a council of administration, consisting of five members, one of whom shall be a commissioned officer, a majority of whom shall constitute a quorum, and who shall be elected at the annual meeting of the company, to be held.....on the..... day of.....

The said council of administration shall have charge of the business and administrative affairs of the company. Following the election of said council, the members thereof shall at once organize by the election of a president, a secretary and treasurer, these officers to perform the duties usually devolving on officers so named. The said council shall act on the question of who are to be members of the company, and shall have active charge of recruiting members for the company, a majority vote of those present being necessary to the admission of a member.

At the annual meetings of the company, or in the meetings of the council of administration, a full, free discussion of the subject under consideration shall be granted, regardless of rank, but in the strictly military matters the captain, or, in his absence, the lieutenant in charge shall be in complete control, and his word in these matters shall be final unless reversed by higher authority in the line.

SECTION 5. The weekly dues, due and payable by each member of the company, shall be..... The same is payable to the treasurer of the company, who shall credit the same to the member and report to the first sergeant those who are delinquent, who will report the same to the council of administration for action.

SECTION 6. The active members of this company shall meet on.....nights for drill. Those failing to attend without a valid excuse, such as may be prescribed by the council of administration, shall be fined in the sum of..... Those failing to attend drill for four consecutive nights may be dropped from the roll by the council of administration if such action seems necessary.

SECTION 7. All funds of the company shall be in charge of the treasurer, and shall be expended only on the order of the council of administration.

SECTION 8. All members during the period for drill are to conduct themselves in strictly military manner and to observe due courtesies to their superior officers. If any member should so fail in his conduct toward his superiors, or if during the period of drill he should be guilty of conduct unbecoming a soldier and a gentleman, he may be expelled or suspended from said organization by the council of administration, and action of said council of administration will be final in the matter.

SECTION 9. It will be the duty of all members to furnish the sergeant with their present address both day and night, their telephone number if possible, or directions as to how they may be reached in the event of an urgent call for duty. They are directed to call the sergeant's attention to any change in address or change in residence.

SECTION 10. Any member removing from the community, so that he would be unable to attend drill without great inconvenience and expense, will be discharged by the commanding officer, and a letter to that effect will be given him, setting forth his character as a soldier, so that it may be deposited with the company of Liberty Guards if there be one in the community in which he takes up his new residence. The secretary of the council of administration will make a quarterly report of members added and members dropped from the company roster to the adjutant general of Indiana.

SECTION 11. These by-laws may be amended at the annual meeting of the company, or at a called meeting thereof, after due notice is given of the proposed amendment and each member is notified of the purposes of said called meeting.

Let's All Be Plain Americans

Correct the 50-50 Proposition and Defend 100 Per Cent Americans.

By CHARLES DHE.
Chairman Benton County Council of Defense.

Traitors, or even slackers in time of war, no matter who they are or where they come from, should be dealt with vigorously. They are "our enemies inside more dangerous," according to Caesar, "than our enemies outside." They see what we do, they hear what we say at any time, they can take advantage of us and stab us in the back. I, for one, am not inclined to leniency towards them and I do not care, either, if they are American born, of French, English, German or Irish ancestry. To me, a traitor by deed or a traitor by omission is a black devil who should be sent home, not by freight but by express.

In this, I hope, we all agree. It will pay to be on our constant guard and to report promptly to the proper authorities any act of treason in any form; the strong arm of Uncle Sam will soon apply the proper remedy. However, if it is right to condemn and punish severely any act of treason, it is absolutely wrong arbitrarily to suspect, accuse or condemn anyone on account of his name or of his ancestry. America is made up of all the nations of the world and it is precisely that amalgamation of the different races that constitutes the physical and moral superiority of the American people so well manifested today in the battlefield of Europe by the initiative and bravery of our soldiers.

Is it not strange that this master of German "Kultur," Kaiser Bill, did not realize that fundamental rule of natural history and refrain from forcing America into this world conflict by his arrogance and often repeated criminal provocations? He must have his eyes partly open by this time and begin to realize that the "contemptible army of Americans" is the very one that will make his name pass to posterity under the title of "Kaiser the Last," accursed by everyone and in every clime, Germany included, as the true cause of the most bloody tragedy ever perpetrated in the world.

After centuries, the infamous judge who cowardly sent our Savior to the cross is still receiving the condemnation of mankind, and Christians the world all over still curse his memory by repeating the "Apostles' Creed," He has suffered under Pontius Pilate. For many generations to come history will teach the children of the universe that for five long years, 1914-1919, the world has suffered untold agonies under the "Beast of Berlin," "Kaiser the Last." Time, that reduces and effaces almost anything, can never blot out the stigma attached to his name. Kaiser Bill's and Nero's names from now on will go together.

This, however, is not the point I want to make nor the lesson I desire to offer. No one is responsible for the place of his birth. Therefore I say without hesitancy, it is entirely out of place, un-Christian and un-American to expose a man to ridicule, to suspicion or to contempt just because he happened to be born in Germany, or from German parents, or with a German name. When a man is true to his God, to his family and to his country, he is certainly entitled to the respect of the public, no matter where he comes from; and we all know that we actually have in America not only thousands but millions of citizens of German origin whose integrity cannot be contested by anyone, whose industry has often been commented upon, whose loyalty to the flag is beyond suspicion, who are represented liberally in our armies, whose names appear already in a conspicuous manner in the casualty lists. They are true American citizens. Why look down on them? Why call them the Dutch or even Germans? Why not honor them like anybody else in our daily relations with the title of "Americans"? As far as I know, to be born in France is nothing to be ashamed of, yet I do not like to be called by anyone, a Frenchman, after I have sworn allegiance to this country. Why should the public refuse me the title of an American citizen, officially conferred upon me by Uncle Sam? If we want to suppress the hyphen, do away entirely with the French-American, the German-American, the Irish-American or any other fifty-fifty American. Let us stop, ourselves, those terms and grant to our citizens of foreign origin the title they deserve, the title they like best, and call them simply Americans.

"Silo Time Is Now."

Jefferson County silo leader and the county agent have published a pamphlet dealing with their local campaign. The pamphlet says, "The time to plan for your silo is now—this summer. Now is the time to decide the kind of silo you need, and the size, and make plans for purchasing."

"Now is the time to consider either for yourself alone, or in co-operation with your neighbors, the question of silage machinery. Perhaps the equipment is already available in your neighborhood, and perhaps a part of it will have to be purchased. In the latter case it is well not to put it off until it is too late to obtain delivery."

"The value of corn silage as a feed, especially for cattle, is too well known to need support by argument. An acre of fairly good corn, yielding at the rate of 50 bushels, will make ten tons of good silage, and this amount will feed two cows for six months, and there will be silage to spare. So think it over, and order that silo now."

"The silo will help solve the labor problem. Fortunately, silo filling time comes just before wheat seeding and corn cutting. Therefore, the farmer during this slack period, can fill his silo with the assistance of his neighbors; use the same general plan as thrashing wheat. Through such a system of co-operation he will be able to get stored a winter's supply of succulent food, although help is scarce. And this feed will be in such a condition that one man can easily feed it to the stock during the cold and severe winter months."

Woman's Section

Vanderburgh County reports to the Woman's Section, Indiana Council of Defense, that as a result of the registration of women 7,151 women of the county are enrolled for war service, and that 3,416 registered for more than one occupation. Every conceivable vocation was entered in the registration.

In Putnam County, out of a total of 5,698 women over 16 years of age, 5,588 registered, making about 98 per cent registration. Homes for convalescent soldiers were offered both in towns and country, and several women offered to share their homes with widows or children of soldiers.

The home service section of Henry County reports that information has been given by the department to 92 families, and 110 soldiers have been advised in regard to making their allotments and government allowances and urged to take out war risk insurance. Every contingent leaving Newcastle since April 15th has been so instructed.

The home service department of Fayette County has given financial aid as well as helpful information to soldiers' families. All these homes are visited from time to time and investigations made as to their needs. For more than a year a welfare room has been maintained in the basement of one of the school buildings in Connorsville, where people are urged to bring their discarded or outgrown clothing, shoes, hats, etc. Under the supervision of the welfare chairman, and several local organizations, these garments are renovated and made over into wearables for the needy.

Washington, D. C., August 13, 1918.

Mrs. Charles A. Carlisle, 83 State House, Indianapolis, Indiana:

My Dear Mrs. Carlisle—The report of the work of the Indiana state division, from June 15th to July 15th, has been read with great interest. It is a splendid record in every respect, and we are very much interested in the remarkable report of the war gardens which have been established in your State. The follow-up work in child welfare is a striking proof of the value which we expected would come from the weighing and measuring tests. We are more than glad to have our faith in this work confirmed.

The progress which you report in community singing is of especial interest, since our department of Education is at present co-operating with the state councils section in developing this particular line. We hope that it may be made a means of drawing committees closer together.

With thanks for your report, and congratulations upon the work which you are doing, I am,

Very sincerely yours,

(Signed) RUTH WILSON,

Assistant to the Chairman Department of State Organizations.

Chairman, Department of State Organizations.

Teaching Children to Play the Game

By Mrs. Max West

This is one of a series of articles on How Mothers Can Help in Children's Year.

During the summer months, while American soldiers in the front-line trenches have been demonstrating that they possess the ability "to play the game," the children's bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor, acting with the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense, has been conducting a recreation drive, in an attempt to bring home the importance of play in fostering those qualities of courage and resourcefulness that make not only good soldiers but good citizens. The Duke of Wellington said that the battle of Waterloo was won on the cricket fields of Eton. On the playgrounds of America, boys and girls must receive the training that is to fit them to do their part in keeping the world safe for democracy when the war is over.

Many parents do not realize the training and discipline to be obtained by a child from neighborhood games. Such games increase physical adeptness, train the eye, and develop in a child the ability to respond instantly to the direction of the leader. They foster in him the habit of subordinating himself to the need of the group with which he is allied. They teach him the value of "team-work." He learns, in brief, "to play the game"—a lesson that will always be valuable to him.

Fathers and mothers should accept as one of the responsibilities of parenthood the leading and encouraging of group games for children. No neighborhood can be called an ideal place for young people to grow up in until the people who live there accept the fact that they are under a moral obligation to provide a place, a time, and a leader for games and sports. One of the sorry sights of any city or village is that of a crowd of young people—oftentimes very young indeed—wandering about seeking amusement where no amusement has been provided for them. Especially in war times, when the air is full of disturbing influences, the provision of recreation, abundant and free, is necessary in every community. The neglect to provide such recreation has been named as one of the causes of the increase in juvenile delinquency in European countries since the war. Furnishing attractive, wholesome play is the best of all means of keeping children out of mischief.

One of the very best and most wholesome forms of recreation lies in the playing of the old familiar games, which call for no expensive equipment, and are within the reach of every community. Suggestions for playing them will be found in the booklet, "Twelve Good Games," which will be furnished free upon request by the Playground and Recreation Association of America, 1 Madison avenue, New York City.

Helps in Using Substitute Foods

This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.

USING SORGHUM IN CANNING.

During the shortage of sugar, women are urged to do the maximum amount of canning with the minimum amount of sugar, and to use substitutes when possible.

The Food Administration is suggesting the use of sorghum in canning, and has issued the following recipes that have been tested out by Mrs. M. M. Davis, emergency home demonstration agent, Raleigh, N. C.

If any woman has a supply of sorghum available the recipes may be helpful.

Canned Peaches.

Prepare the peaches as for canning with sugar. For each pint jar allow one-fourth cup syrup and three-fourths cup water. Pack the peaches into hot sterilized jars, pour over peaches the boiling hot syrup, getting out all bubbles by running a knife or paddle around jar, fill jar brimming full of juice, put on top and process thirty minutes for pint, thirty-five minutes for quart.

Peach Marmalade.

Use very ripe peaches. Cut the peaches, either pared or unpared, into small pieces. Place in stew kettle with very little water. Boil until fruit is tender and mash with a spoon or put through a coarse colander. For each cup of cooked fruit allow one-fourth cup of the boiled syrup. Mix fruit and syrup well and cook until clear, stirring constantly, as a mixture containing syrup burns more quickly than one containing sugar. Place in hot sterilized jars and seal.

Apple Marmalade.

Cut apples into uniform pieces, using apples of the same variety if possible. Cook apples until tender, using very little water. Cinnamon is the best spice to use with apples. To each cup of cooked fruit use one-half cup boiled syrup. Proceed as for peach marmalade.

Pears or quinces may be used for marmalade or butter as are apples, but pears, lacking a decided flavor of their own, are improved by the addition of lemon juice or some other flavor.

Mixed Fruit Marmalade.

A mixture of peach, apple and pineapple in the proportion of one cup cooked peach, one cup cooked apple and one-half cup raw grated pineapple makes a delicious marmalade—using one-half cup of syrup to each cup of cooked fruit mixture.

Apple and quince is also a good combination. One cup of cooked quince and one cup of cooked apple—using one-half cup of syrup to each cup of the fruit mixture and proceeding as with peach marmalade.

Pear and pineapple is also a good mixture. Use one cup of cooked pear and one-half cup of raw grated pineapple with one-half cup of syrup to each cup of the fruit mixture.

Sweet Pickled Beets.

One-half gallon baby beets.

Three cups vinegar.

Three cups sorghum.

Three tablespoons mixed pickle spices.

One-half teaspoon salt.

Wash beets, leaving roots and about three inches stems on to prevent bleeding, cook until tender. While beets are being skinned, put vinegar, sorghum, salt and spices on the fire and allow to boil three minutes. Pack beets in one-half gallon jars and pour boiling sorghum over them at once, filling jars. Fasten covers on tightly, invert to test for leakage, and store in dark place.

Sorghum may be used in recipes for pickled pears, peaches and sweet cucumbers or watermelon pickles where brown or white sugar has previously been used.

Four-Minute Men Rally

Four-Minute Men of Indiana have been called into a state-wide rally in connection with the Indiana State Fair and the War Exhibit, by C. R. Eggleston, acting State director. A tentative program for a conference and discussion of appropriate speaking material is offered for the consideration of the speakers.

Our future is vitally linked with that of the Allied nations.

War Books Recently Received by the State Library

Any of the following may be borrowed from the Indiana State Library by any citizen of the State. Ask your local librarian to apply for them, or if there is no library in the town, write to the State Library for registration blanks. The only expense is that of transportation.

Allen, E. F., and Fosdick, R. B.—"Keeping Our Fighters Fit."

Work of the various agencies which help to give our soldiers a healthy environment, and the hearty response made by the men.

Baker, N. D.—"Frontiers of Freedom."

A collection of speeches made by Secretary Baker in 1917 and 1918 on war subjects.

Dawson, C.—"Out to Win."

The author of "Carry On" and "The Glory of the Trenches" was taken temporarily from active service in order to tell what America is accomplishing in France. "Out to Win" is his story of America in France.

Hall, J. N.—"High Adventure."

Account of training for aerial service and something of the life of an aviator. The writer is believed to be now a prisoner in Germany.

Sack, A. J.—"The Birth of the Russian Democracy."

The story of the Russian revolution from its beginning in 1825. The latter half of the book is taken up with the events since March, 1917.

Committee Opposed to the Sheep-Killing Dog

The committee which had under consideration the question of the sheep-killing dog, as a menace to the wool and meat industries in Indiana, made the following report to the Indiana State Council of Defense, at its meeting August 20th, which report the council approved:

It having arrived now at the season of the year when the sheep raisers will be separating the lambs for market, the State Council of Defense earnestly urges upon the farmers that the ewe lambs be held on the farm for breeding purposes; and as a pledge that this organization will do what it can to protect the sheep industry of the state, so that the American boys in the service of their country may be kept warm and comfortable in their arduous work for the nation, we suggest and recommend the following plan:

It is well known that the dog is the principal enemy of the sheep industry. The answers to the inquiries sent out by the Agricultural Department reveal that fully sixty per cent of the losses to this industry occur through marauding and worthless dogs, who, in addition to inflicting losses on the flock in the way of killed and maimed animals, and in the way of frightening the remaining animals so that they are no longer productive, but also discourages the owner, so that this industry in Indiana and throughout the other states has depreciated more than half within the last ten years; whereas, as a matter of fact, it should have doubled in growth and productiveness.

We realize that from time immemorial the dog has been man's friend, but that this friendship has been abused there can be no doubt. Neither can there be any doubt that a mawkish sentiment is being fostered by those who have lost sight of the desirable end to be attained, i. e., the proper clothing of the soldier, who is to win the war and make the world safe for future generations.

Because of this false sentiment and a false interpretation of the dog's affection for mankind, much harm has been done in the past; but we must not allow a matter of this kind to stand between us and our present imperative duty.

The dog, therefore, being the principal enemy, we recommend a vigorous and systematic extermination of this peril to the industry, for between a boy in the trenches clothed in warm woollens and the life of a worthless cur, there can be but one choice; and we ask that all the cities and towns of the state pass such an ordinance, the object of which is not to simply tax the dog, but to see that his owner keeps him limited to his own premises, or within view; and to seek to exterminate the worthless dog by paying a premium to those who will take the matter in charge.

We earnestly recommend to the incoming legislature that a prompt, vigorous measure be enacted, wherein dogs are taxed not as property, but in proportion to the damage they cause, and in order that a fund may be created from which rewards or bounties may be paid to those who engage in the extermination of the worthless dog, we recommend that a system of tagging taxed dogs be enforced. We suggest that said law provide that county treasurers in the fall of the year forward to the secretary of state estimates of the number of dogs upon which a tax would probably be paid in the following year; that the secretary of state order suitable metal tags of the aggregate estimates given him, and that the same be sent out to county treasurers for use and distribution at tax-paying time.

That said legislative enactment should fix a fee of not less than ten dollars as a tax upon dogs, to be paid by the owner at tax-paying time, and for which fee the owner is to receive a tag to be placed upon his dog, and to be constantly worn by the animal upon which the tax has been paid.

We also urge that a bonus, or bounty, be provided for in said law, and, if possible, we urge the immediate modification of existing laws so that a bonus, or reward, may be paid to the citizen or officer who engages in the extermination of worthless curs and untaxed dogs; that said bounty, or reward, be large enough to produce the desired effect, and to be paid upon the affidavit of one or more persons to the effect that the animal has been destroyed and the carcass disposed of according to health regulations.

Nothing in said act should be construed to prevent any society from carrying out a plan for the humane disposition of dogs according to their tenets and ideas, and nothing placed therein repealing the present laws allowing cities and towns to tax dogs and regulate them in periods of epidemics; nor should said act repeal our present laws allowing the killing of licensed dogs who are unlawfully off of the owner's premises.

Ewe lambs must be saved to promptly increase the flocks in present emergencies; worthless dogs must be exterminated if the soldier is to be made warm and comfortable, and we urge and recommend that nothing be left undone to bring about these desired ends.

COUNCIL ACTS WISELY.

The St. Joseph County Council, without a dissenting voice, has voted $5,000 to assist in defraying expenses incident to disposal of the county's share of the Fourth Liberty Loan. This share will probably be $6,000,000, an amount greatly in excess of the county's quota in any previous loan. The amount voted for expense is, therefore, one-twelfth of one per cent of the presumed amount of the loan, a small matter when considered relatively. It is cause for congratulation that the members of the council grasped the situation so quickly and lost no time in making the appropriation. They voted wisely and demonstrated that they recognized the justice of the request.

Those not conversant with the means used in disposing of the first three Liberty Loans and unacquainted with the vast amount of energy and hard work that will be required to sell $6,000,000 of Fourth Liberty Loan bonds in St. Joseph County may not understand why $5,000 for expense money is necessary. Expense of selling previous bonds has been borne by banks, newspapers and other organizations and by individuals. Part of the money for the third loan expenses was raised by assessments upon those on committees. If a man was on a committee he was asked to help pay the expense. Newspapers donated every line of reading and display advertising. Busy men devoted all their time for days to the work, always without pay. In short, a few organizations and men bore the expense of an undertaking which was beneficial to every person in the county.

Loans are coming with frequency. The demands on the same organizations and the same individuals have been too great to continue. The expense of disposing of bonds should be paid by the whole people and not by a few. Paid by a few it will become a burden. Paid by all taxpayers it will not be felt by any. The council took this view and demonstrated its good judgment by not quibbling but by expressing its confidence in those in charge of selling the next loan by quickly appropriating the sum sought. The council did right.—South Bend Tribune.

Committee on Construction

At the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, August 20th, the following report of the Committee on Proposed Construction was adopted:

To the Indiana State Council of Defense:

Your Committee on Proposed Construction reports as follows:

1. With reference to the action of the Henry County Council of Defense, approving the installation of a heating plant in the county court house and county jail at New Castle, your committee recommends that the conclusion of the Henry County Council of Defense be accepted.

Respectfully submitted,

Every Worker Should Find a Place In War Work Declares the Council

Indiana Must Contribute Its Share to the Million Laborers Needed to Back Up American Soldiers on the Fighting Line

Announcement was made to the Indiana State Council, August 20th, by George Ade, that the Publicity Bureau has been urged to emphasize the growing seriousness of the labor situation as it pertains to the success of the government's war program. Mr. Ade asked the council's consideration of the following statement, which was approved for state-wide publicity:

The Indiana State Council of Defense authorize the following appeal to all local councils and to patriotic citizens:

The Nation is faced with a shortage of one million unskilled laborers, needed immediately in war industries. Indiana is asked to provide 20,940 unskilled workmen to contractors engaged in war work. The Department of Labor asks every workman to engage in war work. Farming, railroading and coal mining are classed as essential industries. The unskilled laborer who is not engaged in raising food-stuffs, or mining coal, or assisting in railway transportation, or in some industry directly contributing to a successful prosecution of the war, is called upon to enlist for war work. Through community war boards the Government expects to enlist and distribute the unskilled workers. Later on, skilled workmen not engaged in war work may be assigned to war contracts.

Our immediate duty is to organize the unskilled labor of Indiana to assist in the large task of sending to France an unbroken supply of everything needed by our soldiers. Every workman is asked to make it his personal business and first duty to inquire at the local district office of the U. S. Employment Service as to how he can best direct his energies toward the winning of the war. He is urged to engage in war work even if, in performing this patriotic service, he is compelled to change his place of residence for a time and make certain sacrifices. War work must be carried on. The call of duty now comes to the unskilled workmen of Indiana. They are asked to give their loyal support to our soldiers at the front.

Vigorous Action to Provide Facilities

For the Proper Care and Treatment of Many Sufferers from Tuberculosis Urged on County Councils.

At the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, August 20, Dr. Alfred Henry appearing, he said, at the suggestion of Dr. Charles P. Emerson, chairman of the medical section, presented the following resolution, which the council unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, Paralleling the experience of European nations, the State of Indiana is at the present time undergoing a war increase in the mortality and morbidity on account of tuberculosis as witnessed by the fact that in 1916 3,821 deaths resulted from this disease, in 1917, 3,980, and in the first six months of 1918, 2,183, the death rate up to 1916 having declined uniformly, from 4,170 in 1910 to 3,821 in 1916, and

"Whereas, The State Council of Defense realizes the obligation of this State to make available scientific treatment to its soldiers who have been called upon to risk their lives in defense of the principles of liberty and democracy and have now been discharged from the army on account of tuberculosis, being not entitled to Government care on account of the short term of their service, and

"Whereas, There are at the present time 404 of these discharged soldiers and 30,000 civilians afflicted with this disease in Indiana, and

"Whereas, The State of Indiana has provided but 379 beds to care for such cases, therefore "Be it Resolved, That this council urge all county governments to provide without delay sanatorium and medical treatment for their tuberculous soldiers and citizens, and

"Be it further Resolved, That all county councils of defense be requested to take vigorous and active part in all campaigns for tuberculosis sanatoriums.

Daniel B. Luten of the Committee on Scientific Research, directed the attention of the council to a resolution adopted by the Engineers' Club of Indiana, August 9, as follows:

"Whereas, Our country is now engaged in a war that is calling for the exercise of the highest engineering skill in the struggle at the front and in the development of the essential industries of supply at home; and

"Whereas, The demand for engineering skill has become so great that the supply is no longer sufficient for the needs of the country and should be conserved;

"Now therefore, Be it Resolved, that we, the engineers of Indianapolis in mass meeting assembled at the call of the Engineers Club of Indianapolis and of the American Association of Engineers, do petition the Indiana State Council of Defense to appoint a State Director of Engineering, to co-operate with the Director of Engineering of the United States Employment Service, in assisting engineers to place themselves to the best advantage to meet the demand for technical help.

"(Signed) PAUL KLINGENSMITH,
Sec.-Treas., American Association of Engineers.
(Indianapolis Chapter).

"Indianapolis, Ind., August 9th, 1918."

Mr. Luten stated that the Government's need of technically trained men is constantly increasing and of growing importance. On motion of Wm. N. Sparks the council adopted a resolution as follows:

"Be it resolved, by the Indiana State Council of Defense that the Indiana Engineering Society is hereby requested to recommend some member of said society to act as State Director of Engineering in the State of Indiana; said engineer so selected to co-operate with the Director of Engineering of the U. S. Employment Service."

Chairman Foley requested the association, through Messrs. Luten and Garman, to nominate a satisfactory technical man for appointment as State Director of Engineers.

Adjutant-General Harry B. Smith appeared before the council with telegrams received from Miami County, representing that the residence of P. H. McGlone had been "attacked by a mob" and that McGlone had been threatened with violence. General Smith said, "My fear is that a matter of this kind may spread and result in a very bad condition." He stated further that a man named John McGlone had appeared in his office the day before and asserted that men were being "handled" by a "Miami County vigilance committee" and that all members of a so-called "anti-war" society are subject to violent treatment, including the shaving of heads, application of paint, etc. McGlone said he had been threatened because he had paid $8 toward the County War Chest, and had been requested to pay $21. General Smith said he had advised McGlone to go home and pay the other $13. The adjutant-general stated further that efforts to get into communication with the peace officers of Miami County had been unavailing. He added that, in the absence of the Governor, he considered the matter a proper subject for the consideration of the State Council of Defense. Chairman Foley was authorized, on motion of Judge Ibach, to make inquiry of the Miami County Council of Defense as to the facts, and to call their attention to the recent statement by President Wilson "on the importance of refraining from mob violence." The chairman was expected to receive a report promptly on the situation.

Reports that wheat crops in Indiana are wasting, that oats are down, and that serious loss has resulted because of farm labor shortage and the disaffection of farmers on account of the conscription of their sons and the farm labor supply, were found without the support of fact in four counties where he had visited personally, General Smith told the council. In connection with this inspection, General Smith said that he had found crop conditions five or ten days advanced over what they were last year at this time, and the prospects for a successful harvest better than ever before. He said the report had gone to the Provost Marshal General at Washington that conditions were bad due to the operation of the draft law. Conferences with local conscription boards, county officials, including judges, farmers and other representative citizens had indicated, he said, that sufficient help is being supplied all emergencies to prevent discouragement on the part of the farmer, or the loss of his crops.

Liberty Guard companies of the State have been directed to offer their services for the training of registered and drafted men, the adjutant-general informed the council. He added that 82 per cent of the drafted men who have belonged to the Liberty Guards or State militia have, on induction into the regular army, received warrants because of their military experience. General Smith said the military division of the State government has appreciated the co-operative work of the State Council of Defense, particularly in reference to Liberty Guard operations which, he said, have been eminently successful in their purposes and number.

Pursuant to the request that he do so, Rev. Allan B. Philpott, chairman of the Public Morals Committee, presented the following resolution, which the council approved:

"Whereas, The Government is calling for the mobilization and development of the brain power of our youth, owing to the need of thousands of highly trained men as officers, engineers, doctors, dentists, chemists, administrators, etc., and

"Whereas, The War Department has so thoroughly recognized the colleges as able to train for this leadership that the Students' Army Training Corps has been established, thus making a strong appeal to the patriotism of young men for enlistment in this curriculum of preparation for service, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the State Council of Defense urges upon all county councils of defense, as well as upon all superintendents and teachers in high schools, and parents of boys over 18 years of age, the duty of inducing these young men to go to college and thus at once begin their training as enlisted men, though without pay, and classed as on inactive service, in the army of the United States. Be it further

"Resolved, That we urge prompt action in this matter, as in case Congress should lower the age of liability to immediate military service, men of the new ages, not already enlisted, may find difficulty in entering the service otherwise than through the draft boards. And for the same patriotic reason, be it further

"Resolved, That young women of the country be urged to offer themselves to colleges for training and that the supply of potential leaders be guaranteed by keeping the elementary and secondary schools to full enrollment."

E. M. Wilson presented a report in behalf of the sheep committee, which the council approved without debate. Luke W. Duffy, a candidate for the legislature from Marion county, pledged his support to measures having for their purpose the elimination of the sheep-killing dog. The report of Mr. Wilson appears elsewhere in the Bulletin.

George Ade presented for the consideration of the council, a statement of the growing seriousness of the labor situation as it pertains to the war program. This statement, which includes an appeal for workers to engage in war work, was approved by the council for general distribution. It appears elsewhere in this issue of the Bulletin.

The report of the Committee on Construction, which appears elsewhere, was unanimously approved, and with it the statement from Walker Winslow that, as a representative of the State Council Construction Committee, he had investigated the Ewing road in Knox County, and had obtained an agreement whereby the contractor is to make this road passable for traffic during the approaching winter.

Mr. Ade's resolution relative to the maintenance of highways now being used by the Government motor truck trains, was approved by the council. It appears in another column.

A. E. Reynolds announced that his recent conference with officials at Washington, in company of John McCordle of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, had effected a relief of the car shortage situation in the Indiana grain trade. He said that grain is now moving satisfactorily, and that within three days after an order for relief was given 2,800 cars had been assigned to Indiana elevators. Mr. Reynolds told the council that the grain corporation of the Federal Food Administration is now at work on a schedule of maximum prices which he expects will settle questions as to the proper margin for handling grain, as distinguished from profiteering, which have been before the council on numerous occasions.

Food Clubs Ferret Out the Un-American

(By C. V. Stainsby, Assistant to Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator of Indiana.)

The United States Food Clubs show their Americanism by ferreting out that which is un-American. Germany has her spies and secret supporters in every land. While we were still at peace with Germany her representatives betrayed our confidence and violated our neutrality. Now that we are at war her agents are trying to hinder our war preparations and thus help the very country from which they fled for greater freedom. Germany's supporters work in every conceivable way to hurt America. Some, who have ample means, refuse to buy government bonds. Some will not support the Red Cross or Y. M. C. A. Others go to the extent of burning bridges and blowing up factories. Still others do nothing but spread lies about America. These last are the most contemptible. They are among the most dangerous. They are the hardest to catch. Every complete United States Food Club will have a "slacker committee." This committee will report to the proper authorities for investigation all cases of failure to support America. Failure to observe food regulations is one form of disloyalty and will be reported to the federal food administrator of the county or state. Disloyalty of any other sort will be reported to the County Council of Defense. When the members of four thousand United States Food Clubs have their eyes and ears open there will be little room in Indiana for German sympathizers.

Get ready to join a United States Food Club in your neighborhood.

"Good Lord, deliver us from the hyphenated Americans, the pro-German, the spy, the profiteer, the pacifist, the slacker and all who would retard the prosecution of the war for human rights, happiness, in the establishment of a permanent peace, for Christ's sake. Amen."—REV. HENRY N. CONDON, Chaplain United States House of Representatives.

Indiana Courts Asked To Assist Registration

Adjutant-General Smith Requests State Council to Enlist Support of Lawyers.

Adjutant General Harry B. Smith of Indiana, appearing before the Indiana State Council of Defense at its meeting August 27th, read the following communication:

August 27, 1918.

HON. M. E. FOLEY,
Chairman State Council of Defense,
City.

My dear Sir—I desire to call the attention of your honorable body to the fact that within the next few days the men of Indiana between designated ages will be called upon to register. It is apparent that the number called will be greater than the number registered in June, 1917.

It therefore behooves us, as citizens of a State that has taken high rank in all matters pertaining to winning the war, to make advance preparations for this event, so that the business may be transacted efficiently and speedily.

I therefore ask the Indiana Council of Defense to petition and urge the judges of the courts of the State to arrange the business of the courts so that the lawyers and those skilled in legal and clerical work can assist the registrants in making out their questionnaires.

I hold in mind the patriotic and efficient work done by the lawyers of Indiana in the registration just past; and it will be gratifying to know that this, the largest registration of all, can be transacted with the speed and efficiency that marked our progress in the former registration.

I beg that you not only petition the courts to arrange matters so that the attorneys may have wide latitude of time to give to this patriotic work, but that you urge your organizations throughout the State to join with the judges and attorneys, and those skilled in this form of clerical work, to perfect such intensive organization that the selected men may have the services of competent persons available at all times and at convenient places, so that this, the largest registration (and perhaps the last) can be expedited with such facility and accuracy as will add further laurels to our war work.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) HARRY B. SMITH,
The Adjutant General.

In deference to the request of the adjutant general, Frank Wampler moved that the chairman be authorized to prepare a proper resolution to be addressed to the circuit and superior judges of the State. The motion was unanimously adopted.

In reply to an inquiry as to his purpose, it was stated by the adjutant general that it is intended to utilize as far as possible the services of the registration boards as originally constituted, notwithstanding these boards include many men between the ages of 18 and 45 who may be subject to the provisions of the pending law.

General Smith informed the council that the appeal to officers of the Liberty Guards and State Militia, that they offer themselves to local draft boards for the military training and education of registered men, had met with a unanimous willingness to undertake this task. Each of the 124 boards in Indiana, he added, have expressed themselves as appreciative of the offer and will avail themselves of this opportunity to follow the wishes of the provost marshal general in securing for the prospective soldiers some knowledge of the rudiments of military proficiency.

On motion of Joseph G. Ibach, the council adopted a resolution indorsing plans for an intensive campaign for the quick distribution of Indiana's allotment of the Fourth Liberty Loan, and calling upon county councils and other organizations to enlist under the loan organization in doing the work promptly and effectively. The resolution in full appears elsewhere in this Bulletin.

The report of the Committee on Proposed Construction on cases from Jay and Vigo counties, which appears elsewhere in this Bulletin, was adopted by the council.

A communication from W. A. Hammond, chairman of the Miami County Council of Defense, relative to telegrams presented to the council by the adjutant general, in which it was represented that John McGloin and his family had been "threatened with mob violence," was read. The council was informed that "no one questions Mr. McGloin's loyalty" and that a misunderstanding had arisen relative to his subscription to the War Chest fund. Mr. Hammond added that the committee which called on Mr. McGloin "had positive instructions not to violate the law in any way," and he added: "I feel sure there is no cause for alarm in Miami County." On motion of Dr. Allen B. Philpott the council ordered the communication placed on file and the incident considered closed.

Dr. Charles P. Emerson referred to his earlier statements that there probably would arise for the consideration of the Medical Section of the council two crises—one relative to the tubercular and the other relative to nervous and mental disorders resulting directly and indirectly from the war. In anticipation of the condition now confronting the State, Dr. Emerson said, the Medical Section is fortunate in having a State Board of Charities that has matters well in hand for the scientific expedition of relief work, but that so far as the means at hand to do effective work are concerned Indiana is far behind. As a summary of the situation Dr. Emerson called upon Amos W. Butler, secretary of the State Board of Charities and Corrections, who read the following report, which was referred to the Medical Section for further consideration, and enlargement as the circumstances warrant:

The problem of the mental defective and the insane is one of the largest with which our State has to deal. It is forcibly brought to our attention by the war. Its difficulties will be increased and it will become complicated in many ways. How great the special demands upon the State for this cause at this time will be we do not know. The Board of State Charities is trying to find out something about it. At the request of Governor Goodrich the Secretary of War has supplied this board with a list of the persons from Indiana, disclosed in the examination for enlistment or by subsequent medical examinations. Those who have been so identified number 322. Enlistment was refused to 136 men. That is a total of 458. Many of these will not seek institutional

Purdue Students to Receive Furloughs

May Thus Continue Their Studies After Enlistment Under New Arrangement.

Announcement was made August 14th by Dr. W. E. Stone, president of Purdue University, that all students enrolled and all those who register at Purdue this fall, may enlist upon coming to the university, be furloughed immediately and continue their studies until they become of military age and perhaps until their courses are completed. This announcement came upon receipt from Washington of detailed plans for the Students' Army Reserve Corps which provides for enlistment and furlough of men taking courses from which they can enter some technical branch of military service.

"The purpose of the plan is to provide for the very important needs of the army for highly trained men as officers, engineers, doctors, chemists, and administrators of every kind," reads the word from Washington to Dr. Stone. "The importance of this need cannot be too strongly emphasized. The plan is an attempt to mobilize and develop the brain power of the young men of the country for those services which demand special training. Its object is to prevent the premature enlistment for active service of these men who could by extending the period of their college training multiply many fold their value to the country. If, however, the need arises for the services of these men in the fighting line, the terms of their enlistment are such that they can be called by the President on a day's notice. For the present it will be the policy of the Government to keep them in training until draft age is reached."

Students under 18 years old may enroll and receive military instruction preparatory to enlisting when they reach military age.

"The boy who enlists in the Students' Army Training Corps will be a member of the army of the United States," the statement continues. "He will be provided by the War Department with uniform and equipment but will be on furlough status and will not receive pay. He will undergo regular military training as a part of his course during the college year, will attend a six weeks' camp for rigid and intensive military instructions at private's pay, and will be subject to the call of the President for active service at any time, should the exigencies of the military situation demand it. The policy of the government, however, will be to keep members of this corps in college until their draft age is reached, and the War Department will have the power to order such men to continue in college even after their draft age is reached whenever their work is such that the needs of the service, e. g. for doctors, engineers, chemists, and the like, are such as to make that course advisable.

"The importance of this plan for combined military and collegiate training, if we are to meet in the future the urgent needs of the army for highly trained men, is so great that the War Department earnestly requests the colleges, councils of defense, and other patriotic societies to co-operate in bringing it to the attention of the young men of the country and urging them to do their part to make it a success."

There is no vacation on the firing line.

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—The Washington Township Council of Defense at its eleventh meeting enjoyed a splendid literary program, featured by patriotic remarks, appropriate songs and Victrola music. A committee was appointed to write a letter of condolence to the parents of any boy from the township who is killed or wounded while in the service. The township council urged that the county agent, whose place was recently vacated, be refilled at once in order that farmers may be encouraged and assisted in producing a maximum of foodstuffs. A committee of three was appointed by Chairman Busche to investigate any reports of disloyal utterance and to deal with the offender kindly and try to win him. If he can't be won, and persists in being pro-German, then his case will come up before the council. Frank Breiner, Elmer Cook and O. T. Johnson are the members of the committee for this work. Twelve new members were enrolled for active patriotic work. The council meets again September 3d.

Allen County.—Marion township is proceeding splendidly with the organization of the war saving food clubs. Section 1, with Mrs. Otto Hake as president, having completed the house-to-house canvass, reaching almost 100 per cent. Mrs. Hake has chosen for her assistants Mrs. Marvin Trier, Mrs. Lewis Behrman, Mrs. Henry Saalfrank and Mrs. Henry Koehlinger. They are planning to hold their first meeting on Thursday evening, August 29th. Mrs. E. A. Fauve and Charles Niezer were the speakers at an enthusiastic food club meeting held at Wesley Chapel in Eel River township. Another meeting was held at St. Joe chapel, in St. Joseph township, with Judge Wood as the speaker. These food club gatherings are doing good work throughout the county, bringing home in a personal way to the housewives the program of the food administration, and the various ways of helping win the war by kitchen conservation.

Benton County.—The Rev. Charles Dhe, chairman of the Benton County Council of Defense, has been named chaplain of the Third Regiment of Indiana Liberty Guards. The appointment was made by Col. Warren McCray of Kentland. The appointment is in recognition of the active interest the Rev. Dhe has always manifested toward the Liberty Guard organization.

Blackford County. In spite of the fact that the sewing rooms of the Montpelier branch of the Red Cross were closed for a while, this chapter has just completed and shipped its twenty-eighth box to headquarters. The box just shipped contains 10 comfort pillows, 13 suits of summer pajamas, 12 hospital bed shirts, 46 hospital bed socks, 15 pairs wristlets, 91 wash cloths, 6 gray cloths, 53 cup covers, 68 handkerchiefs, 8 nurses' rugs, 2 afghans, 3 refugee kimono, 1 pair refugee drawers, 10 refugee petticoats, 13 refugee dresses, 3 refugee pinafores, 2 refugee rompers, 2 refugee hoods, 5 pairs refugee bed shoes, 1 roll old muslin.

Bonne County. Some time ago the Red Cross auxiliary of this place, desiring a Red Cross pageant, began a search for one. After applying to the State Council of Defense headquarters Red Cross Lake Division, and a number of other places, and being unable to secure anything, the auxiliary was not to be defeated, and the following outline will give an idea of an original "Red Cross pageant" as worked out by Mrs. J. E. Higgins and Miss Sallic Beaver, two of the local workers. The stage setting consisted of a miniature hospital camp. Hospital building, tents, canteen wagons, stretchers, everything constructed of light frames covered with heavy paper. At a given time various episodes of our national history were brought out by children in costume applicable. First came the Indian, then the Revolutionary soldier, a negro represented the Civil War period, etc. These grouped themselves on one side of the stage, while Columbia, Miss Indiana and various other patriotic representations took their places. Then came Boy Scouts marching and also visiting the canteen wagon. Little children dressed as Red Cross nurses filled the hospital, while as a climax two soldiers (?) bore a wounded companion on stretchers to the hospital. This was all worked out in a very realistic way, nearly 100 children taking part. This was in panorama. Much might be added by dialogue. In addition there were patriotic drills, the singing of all the late war songs, etc. Advance feels that it certainly had a Red Cross pageant, even if unable to find any help.

Clay County.—Retail grocers of Brazil have planned a one-delivery-a-day service. The association of retailers will further seek to conserve man power by early closing except on Saturday nights. There are no grasshoppers in Clay County, and the owner of a drove of 170 pure blood Bourbon turkeys, learning of the ravages of these pests in other counties, wants to sell them to some county agricultural agent in a county now overrun by the hoppers, in the belief that they will make short work of these pests.

Delaware County.—At the canning factory at Eaton, for several weeks, numbers of prominent people have been working in the fields in a determined effort to save the enormous tomato crop. Lawyers and doctors are working side by side with boys and young women in addition to the regular employees of the factory. A special car has been provided on the Union Traction lines for the accommodation of the tomato harvesters. The Delta Sigma sorority has turned into the Muncie Red Cross chapter $126.64, the proceeds from a booth maintained by the sorority during fair week.

Elkhart County.—The Nappanee Liberty Guards staged an open air athletic program, which was featured by an address by Dr. E. T. Payne, local food administrator, who reviewed the country's record and purposes in the war. The guards were generously applauded at the perfection in which they displayed. An inspection resulted in four members being called from the ranks for special examination and special compliment of their proficiency. Nappanee will have a big Red Cross day about the middle of September. Negotiations are in progress to bring one of the big Jackie's hands of the Great Lakes naval training station here and also one of their baseball clubs, which will be matched with a club composed of all the best semi-professional players of this section. It is expected that one of Indiana's leading orators, possibly Governor Goodrich himself, will be asked to come in behalf of the State Council of Defense. The purpose of the day is to raise funds for the local Red Cross, which is doing considerable work for our boys who are "going over the top" in France. Aside from raising funds for this noble purpose, it will give the people of this section an opportunity of hearing one of the greatest hands of our time. It will be composed of about sixty pieces. The Liberty Guards from the surrounding towns will be invited and the parade will be one of the features of the day.

Fulton County.—The Rochester company of Liberty Guards has been presented with a handsome American flag by the Woman's Relief Corps. The presentation was a surprise and was a pleasant feature of the weekly drill at the Armory. Mrs. Sarah Musser made the presentation speech and Private Earl Miller accepted in behalf of the company, and Captain Cy Davis, who regard the emblem as the company's most cherished and honored possession. The Fulton County Council of Defense has arranged a "win-the-war" chautauqua in connection with the county fair. The chautauqua features will be held every morning of the fair at 10:30 o'clock, and patriotic subjects will be presented by the most capable public speakers available. The Liberty Guards and the Culver Black Horse Troop will be secured to give an added military and patriotic atmosphere to the fair.

Hendricks County.—There will be a meeting in the assembly room of the court house on Friday, August 30th, at 1:00 o'clock, for all those who are interested in food conservation. The following program will be given: Roll Call; response with report of work in townships. Minutes—Mrs. Cory Vestal, secretary and treasurer. Food Clubs—Mrs. W. A. King. Domestic Science and the Community—Marcella Kendall. School Lunches—Josephine McCard. Food as a War Work—Miss Lella B. Gaddie, Purdue University. Plans for the Coming Year—Mrs. W. F. Franklin, county president. Plans for Township Work—Mrs. Paul Christie. Report of County Work—Miss Daisy Norton, Home Domestic Agent. Round Table discussion. Everyone is invited to this meeting who is in any way interested in food conservation.

Howard County. Liberty loan workers under Howard C. Davis, chairman, have pledged themselves to distribute the county's allotment of the fourth liberty loan drive in three days. Emphasis is being laid on the plan of a "conscience campaign," by means of which it is expected to secure a major portion if not all of the allotment the opening day of the drive. The township and community organizations have been completed and there is reason to believe that the work will be completed with greater expedition than ever before.

Lake County.—A number of Gary merchants appeared before the Lake County Council of Defense to protest against the enforcement of the closing hour rule as applied to business houses. Several of the merchants were heard, as well as their attorney. Following the hearing the secretary of the council read two resolutions, one from the Lake County Building and Trades Council and the other from the Central Labor Union of Lake County, in which these bodies, representing several thousand workmen in Gary and Lake County, endorsed the closing rule and asked the county council of defense to enforce it to the letter, pledging the organized labor men of the city and county to aid the council in enforcing the rule. After the arguments, the council voted unanimously for the strict enforcement of the closing rule. The surgical dressings department of the Red Cross in Gary is about to reopen its workrooms, and the patriotic women of Gary are asked to lend every assistance to make this a success. The county council of defense has appropriated $200 to encourage food production. This money will be spent by a committee of nine, under County Agent V. A. Place. Farmers of the county will be organized on a war basis.

Marshall County.—Through the generosity of E. R. Culver, seventy-two uniform outfits will be supplied to the Culver Liberty Guards, and Capt. Riggs advises this will completely uniform the local unit. This unit has been doing good work in guarding grain elevators in this community.

Martin County.—The council of defense, at the regular monthly meeting, passed an order calling upon dog owners in Martin County to keep their dogs tied or confined at night in order to reduce the casualties among the flocks of sheep in the county now resulting almost nightly from depredations of the sheep-killing dogs. Damage to flocks of sheep, especially in the north part of the county, are said to have been exceedingly heavy of late, a single farmer in one township having just recently filed with his township trustee a claim for more than $500 for damage to his flock. In some of the townships the dog fund, which goes to make good the losses of livestock, poultry, etc., caused by dogs, is already greatly exhausted by the amounts of the claims charge brought against the night prowling dog is that he is a big factor in the spreading of hog cholera about the country, and the presence of cholera in several localities of this and nearby counties adds to the seriousness of the dog nuisance at this time when the whole world is crying for the maximum in production of food and clothing. Members of the defense council are thoroughly aroused to the seriousness of the situation in this section, and, unless general heed is given their warning order by dog owners, a more drastic action by the council at the next meeting can be expected. The council is determined to put a stop to the night prowling dog nuisance.

Montgomery County.—Waveland dedicated a Brown township service flag Sunday evening, August 25th. Arrangements have been made for a Community Sing Saturday evenings at the corner of Cross and Howard streets, in charge of Mrs. William Ogilvie, assisted by the Waveland Music Club. Leaflets containing the words of popular songs have been printed for distribution, free, at these sings. The public is invited.

Randolph County.—Pursuant to a call from the county council of defense the garage owners of Randolph County met at Winchester and organized a county trade organization with J. O. Carpenter of Ridgeville, president; Glen Davis, Winchester, secretary, and V. E. Harmon, Saratoga, treasurer. The rules of the organization prohibit the selling of gasoline and oils or doing any repair work on Sundays. On week days all repair shops close at 6:00 p. m., but gasoline and oil may be bought until 10:00 p. m.

Rush County.—The Rush County Defense Council is working out a plan whereby in the future the same tribute will be paid, publicly, to each Rush County boy who sacrifices his life in France. The fact that as the war progresses there will be an increasing number of casualties, some of which are bound to be from Rush County, shows that it will be impossible to hold a union memorial service for each Rush County boy, and has been suggested that the church with which the soldier has been affiliated conduct the service, announcing their memorial program beforehand and giving the service any form they wish it to take. It was also suggested that a county memorial be held at stated intervals for all of the men who have lost their lives in the intervening period. This plan was suggested at a recent meeting of the county defense council and definite action is expected to be taken on the matter at the next meeting. Leading agriculturists of Rush County have united in an effort to stamp out the grasshopper pests, which have caused great damage in rural districts this year, particularly in clover fields which had been left for seedling purposes. The grasshoppers have practically stripped these fields. Two means are being employed, the "hopper-dose" and a mixture composed of twenty-five pounds of bran, one pound of Paris green, six chopped lemons, two quarts of strong molasses and two gallons of water. After thorough mixing, five to seven pounds are distributed per acre where the grasshoppers are prevalent, the mixture being sown broadcast at daybreak. In order that the pest may get it before the start feeding, the communities the farmers are forming clubs in order to purchase the ingredients in quantity, thus saving quite a little in the purchase price.

St. Joseph County. On account of the numerous trains that pass through South Bend and Elkhart on Sundays, Capt. Geraldine Robertson and her motor corps girls will continue on caution duty regardless of the Sabbath. Last Sunday it was reported a number of trains loaded with troops pulled through the two cities without the boys having been privileged to secure refreshments, and the motor corps will endeavor to see to it that such a thing doesn't happen again. The motor corps of South Bend is collecting waste paper under the direction of Miss Katherine Guthrie. It expects to raise $50 through donations of old papers, magazines, books, etc. Selling farm equipment on a replace value basis is merely another form of profiteering, according to an announcement received by John S. Jordan, county agricultural agent, from the office of the United States Department of Agriculture, Friday. He explained that the licensing of the farm equipment industry was administered under the food control act, and that violations would meet with severe penalties.

Sullivan County.—Citizens of Hadden township met at the call of Gilbert W. Gambill, chairman of the county council of defense, in the Carlisle library and organized a township council of defense, electing Charles E. Curtis of Paxton, chairman; O. L. Somers, Paxton, secretary-treasurer, and the following members of the council: L. J. Kismiller, W. L. Nash, F. B. Ridgeway, Joe Rogers and E. W. Rogers. A woman's committee of three members will be named by Chairman Curtis. Township councils will be organized in each of the nine townships of the county for the following specific duties: 1—Universal patriotism; practice it; preach it; stand up for loyalty, first, last and to be end; stamp out every vestige of disloyalty, sedition and treason. 2—Assist in recruiting for army, navy and civilian war work; lend your aid to soldiers' and sailors' welfare movements and the welfare of dependents left behind. 3—Help the maintenance of all branches of an intelligent labor bureau or clearing house; primarily, assist the national government in obtaining the necessary civilian labor needed from time to time; secondarily, give your ablest assistance in solving labor problems of all character in the county and township. 4—Assist food production in every way in your power; add your effort to national, state and county food production representatives activities; initiate home movements to increase food production of a direct neighborhood character. 5—Conserve food; urge all to conserve; see that the laws and rules of the food directors are lived up to on all sides; report violations but more particularly seek the nature of food by example and patriotic efforts; you know the necessity; explain it to the careless or indifferent and turn the disloyal food waster over to the county food director through your county council. 6—Officially and individually lend your fullest assistance, with or without specific invitation, to liberty bond sales, Red Cross drives and

Y. M. C. A. fund campaigns; usually these movements are conducted by specially appointed individuals; help them in the ranks and side lines; they have their own official heads. 7—Particularly give your heartiest assistance to all branches of woman's war activities; your woman member or members constitute the leadership of this branch; encourage them; knitting, sewing and Red Cross hospital supply materials are keenly needed.

Tippecanoe County.—Plans are under way for the organization of a woman's motor corps in Lafayette. Mrs. Charles Q. Erisman has the work in charge.... Chairman Thomas Bauer, of the council of defense, has announced that every taxpayer in the county has been listed in anticipation of solicitation for the fourth liberty loan. Mr. Bauer estimates that 4,000 taxpayers of the county failed to buy bonds in the last drive. He said neither force nor intimidation would be resorted to in this campaign, but that every taxpayer failing to buy bonds will be expected to give a good reason. He added that the plan of weekly payments has been abandoned, and that there will be no sales through the banks, the liberty loan headquarters handling all subscriptions direct.

Vanderburgh County.—The Vanderburgh County Council of Defense added a new department to its work when it named a committee for the maintenance of existing social agencies, to be headed by Mrs. S. W. Levi, chairman. Mrs. Levi will name her associates on the committee. A state conference of workers in this branch of the service has been called, to meet in Evansville October 5-8, by Miss Vida Newsom of Columbus, Ind.

Vermillion County.—Letters sent out by the National Fuel Administrator indicate the government is going to keep a perfect tab on the miners and operators, and if there is any lag in the production of coal they will know the cause. The mine locals here have received letters to the effect that, beginning next month, it will be known just how many miners are working and why those who are not are idle. The letter of instruction directs that a committee of three operators or operators' employes be appointed for each mine, and they are to make daily report to the national or the state fuel administrator. In many instances the miner goes to the mine and comes home before noon, or before the day is finished. When the new order takes effect, the miner leaving work for home is to report to the committee, giving the reason, and the committee is to investigate and report the case to the state or national fuel administrator. In some cases, the miners quit and come home because they could not get cars to load, failure of the company to supply track for their room, or for some other cause which is the fault of the company. Then often he comes home on account of illness or from reasons for which he is responsible. In either case the matter of his quitting work and coming home, or for not reporting for work is to be reported to the government officials. This rule is presumed for two reasons. One is to be sure that registrants who are in the third and fourth classes are keeping faith with the government, and the other reason is for the purpose of making sure that the operators are doing all they should do to keep up the production of coal to meet the demand. A secretary is to be appointed to look after making out the reports of the joint committee and sending them in to the fuel administrator as soon as the investigations are completed. The secretary is to be paid by the operators and miners.

Vigo County.—Following the suggestion of Earl Houck, chairman of the council of defense, a campaign was instituted against draft evaders, slackers and loafers. The drive lasted four hours, was conducted by fifty members of the Liberty Guards and fifty patrolmen, and extended all over the county. As a result of the drive fifty-five men were added to the service, many unemployed were given work to do, and still many more, who had been classified wrong, were reclassified. Several men who had never registered at all, but who were going from town to town trying to evade such a drive as this, were discovered. This was due to the short time in which the drive was conducted and the many men who conducted it. Besides the slackers being discovered young men, who had not yet formed the habit of carrying their classification cards, saw the necessity of so doing. But the drive, while effective, was carried on so courteously and sincerely that every one—even those who rushed home for their classification cards—maintained perfect good humor.... Saturday, August 25th, 182 colored soldiers left Terre Haute for Camp Dodge. On Thursday night they were given a rousing farewell at the Armory by the colored people of the city. Mayor Hunter spoke and urged the people to make their drive for the Negro Soldiers' Dependents' Fund reach the thousand dollar mark instead of five hundred, which had been Terre Haute's allotment. Probably the proudest people at the reception were the colored war mothers. And the one hundred and eighty-two were certainly happy men, because they knew they were going upon a mission which was thoroughly appreciated by their people.... The Vigo County Community War Labor Board was organized last week. John L. Smith, an official of the Highland Steel Co., was the representative elected by the manufacturers, and D. J. Williams of the laboring men. Mr. Williams has been one of Vigo County's most effective four-minute speakers. Then Mr. Smith and Mr. Williams elected Mr. John Cox of the council of defense as their chairman.... Vigo County is organized ready for the fourth liberty loan drive. At the meeting Thursday afternoon, at the Deming hotel, their plans were discussed. John T. Beasley was chairman of the meeting and State Director Will H. Wade was one of the speakers.... The Teachers' Institute is to be conducted along patriotic lines this year. At every session there will be at least one war lecture. Private Scott is to be one of the speakers.... The Camp Rose boys are drilling on the Rose campus daily. As an echo of their military tactics the small boys of the neighborhood are likewise marching and countermarching.

Wabash County.—Wabash County merchants who have adopted the one-delivery-a-day system are well pleased with the arrangement. Grocers and feed dealers say they will be able ultimately to release many employes to do more essential war work, and these men will be urged to go into factories having war contracts. In addition to the saving of man power, which is the principal object of the reform, the grocers say they are saving in overhead expenses in doing business, an economy which ultimately will be reflected in the retail prices of merchandise.

Whitley County.—A recent meeting of the Whitley County swine committee was addressed by Prof. J. R. Wiley of Purdue, and the three main points of his lecture were illustrated by slides. The first point was the value of better breeding stock; the second covered approved types of hog equipment, their housing, feeding and care in a general way; while the third covered the results of actual feeding tests at Purdue. Following this was a discussion of the comparative value of different commercial hog feeds. During October a swine tour of the county is to be made.

Red Cross Activities

Posters telling how to send mail, money and parcels to prisoners of war in Germany or Austria are to be placed in every postoffice and post-office substation in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, the Lake Division Red Cross states. The poster has been prepared by the American Red Cross Bureau of Prisoners' Relief and is being distributed by the Lake Division Bureau of Communication. Money for prisoners should be sent through the Bureau of Prisoners' Relief, American Red Cross, Washington. Letters and parcels should not be sent through the Red Cross but direct to the prisoners. From $5 to $15 per month may be sent through the Red Cross to privates captured by the enemy. Officers captured may receive from $5 to $50 a month. The poster gives the complete list of articles that may be sent to prisoners. Not more than one package a month may be sent to any one prisoner.

W. H. Hill of Vincennes, Ind., has been appointed assistant field director in the Red Cross Bureau of Camp Service at Camp Taylor, Ky., it is announced by James L. Fieser, division director of civilian relief for the Red Cross in the Lake Division. Mr. Hill, who was formerly city attorney at Vincennes, is a graduate of Indiana University and has been chairman of chapter Red Cross home service work in Vincennes. He will be assistant to Associated Field Director A. J. Strawson, formerly of Indianapolis.

During the first two weeks of August forty-nine graduate nurses of Indiana have applied to the American Red Cross for military service, it was announced at the Lake Division, Bureau of Nursing, today.

Forty-two of these applications came from Indianapolis, while Ft. Wayne and Vincennes furnished two each and South Bend three.

In a corresponding period 96 Ohio nurses and 14 Kentucky nurses have applied for service.

As a result of Surgeon General Gorgas' call for 1,000 nurses a week for overseas duty and special efforts planned by the division office and by chapter nursing committees, it is expected that enrollments will show a great increase in the next seven weeks.

That the many thousands of Red Cross knitters in Lake Division, Red Cross States of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky may know the plans of the Red Cross for future knitting, George E. Scott, acting manager, of the American Red Cross, has sent the following statement to the Lake Division office for publication in workrooms of chapters, branches and auxiliaries:

"When the war industries board some time ago advised the Red Cross that future production of knitting yarn would be greatly reduced we immediately commenced to purchase all yarns suitable for our knitting. As a result, we have today in stock or on order 1,400,000 pounds of yarn for distribution to our chapters. It is hoped that we may obtain some additional yarn from wool unsuitable for government uses. The expected total, however, will be considerably below the 10,000,000 pounds used last year.

"While the total of yarn we can secure is being determined we are studying how to use our supply to produce only garments which are most essential. When a decision is reached we will announce our full program of knitting.

"In addition to this stock of yarn the Red Cross has ready for distribution 1,600,000 sweaters, 134,000 mufflers, 384,000 wristlets, 228,000 helmets and 1,328,000 pairs of socks, a total of 3,674,000 articles. We hope, therefore, that these and such additional garments as we shall be able to make will enable us to meet the more urgent requirements of our men during the coming winter.

"In this connection, it will be of interest to the women who have been knitting to know that from September 1, 1917, to June 30, 1918, the Red Cross distributed 5,875,000 knitted garments to the army and navy of the United States. During the same period 870,000 knitted articles were sent to the Red Cross commissioners in France and Italy for distribution to soldiers, sailors and civilians.

"At the request of the war industries board, with which the Red Cross work is in close cooperation, we have urged chapters and individual workers not to buy wool in the open market, but to secure their materials through our department of supplies."

Help Get Walnut!

The American Red Cross has been called upon to help the bureau of aircraft production of the War Department secure more walnut wood for aeroplane propeller blades and gun stocks.

As walnut grows in many inaccessible sections of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, Lake Division Red Cross headquarters, which supervises Red Cross work in these three States, is to ask chapter chairmen to use their organizations to spread "help get walnut" propaganda.

Notices are being prepared for display on workroom bulletin boards and for reading at church services, grange and lodge meetings. A poster is also to be distributed at railroad and inter-urban stations, postoffices, country general stores and on market roads and highways.

Guard Against Theft.

The other day a woman boasted that she had bought six pounds of sugar by going to each of the three stores near her home. "But if I didn't use it, someone else would," she said cheerfully.

That's just the point!

She has kept that sugar from someone who really needed it. She might as well have left it on a high wall, out of reach of the people below who struggled in vain to get it.

There is one-half of our normal supply available for home consumption. Any person using or hoarding more than her share based on that ratio is lessening the fraction for others. "Like taking candy from a child," we used to say of a particularly mean transaction. Now each of us is in danger of stealing whenever we sweeten our tea.

The person who takes more than his share from the nation's sugar bowl is more than a slacker; he is a traitor to his countrymen.

One-half of our normal supply for home consumption—that means that each must greatly reduce his demand. When our ordinary home consumption is cut to meet the requirements, we have two pounds a month left for each person—only about an ounce per day. It will take thought to use it to best advantage. With the three rounded teaspoonfuls that make up the daily ounce we cannot have sugar-made icings, or liberally sweetened breakfast cereals.

Thoughtful action is the solution of the difficulty. The housewives of the United States have already joined hands and made a chain to the Atlantic ports, where stevedores load the sugar for our soldiers. Now it must pass quicker and in greater quantity along that chain, growing grain by grain until the deficit is made up.

To get the needed supply to the trenches we must watch our own share jealously. America must keep dividing by two and keep passing one-half along to Europe.

Give your neighbor a lift; this war is a single front under a single command. What is anybody's trouble is everybody's trouble.

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and state governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Patriotic Press Comment

BABY WEIGHING SHOULD HAVE BEEN COMPULSORY.

In the recent baby-weighing campaign in the city of Laporte some 400 parents refused to bring their offspring for weighing.

No compulsion was exercised. But as the weighing of babies was a war measure it is rather surprising why compulsion was not exercised.

We are compelled to give our names to census takers every ten years; we are compelled to obey health laws for the benefit of the community; we are practically compelled to buy government securities to further the war; we are compelled to join the colors; we are compelled to do a host of things not considered incompatible with democracy and freedom.

The weighing of babies was for the good of the tots and the nation. It should have been compulsory in order to be complete.—Laporte Herald.

Helping to Solve the Food Problem

LAPORTE.—Under the patriotic setting of the Stars and Stripes and the flags of the allies, 50 young girls assisted Mrs. John E. Winn, woman member of the County Council of Defense, and Miss Gladys Snapp, county food demonstrator, in staging the food exhibit in the Balcony building at Laporte and making it successful not only in point of attendance, but instructive in the many practical lessons given on the preparation of food with substitutes for our two great commodities—wheat and sugar.

How to tastefully prepare meals on the present slender ration of sugar and wheat is a problem being solved by the suggestions and practical demonstrations of the girls at the exhibit under the able leadership of Mrs. Winn, Miss Snapp, Mrs. James Terry and Mrs. Walter Crane. The patriotic women of Laporte have been initiated in the mysteries of making toothsome cakes and cookies without sugar, and accomplishing it in sufficient variety to relieve the monotony of an almost sweetsless diet.

The 50 girl volunteers were divided into groups, with a captain and eight girls in charge of the cooking each day, and under the guidance of the promoters of the exhibit, the public is served practical samples of sugarless muffins and cakes, and sugarless tea, all the food being prepared by the girls and brought to the exhibit for serving.

The exhibit has proved that honey and syrups are coming into their own, replacing sugar so satisfactorily that even the consumer with the proverbial "sweet tooth" hardly recognizes these war-time menus in their new guise.

Attractive little caps marked "Food Exhibit" are worn by the girls, together with the Food Administration insignia. Pertinent, snappy posters here and there accentuate the best known food slogans. Each afternoon from two to five well-informed women answer questions and distribute literature, while still another sees that each visitor registers her name in a book provided for that purpose. The women and children of the city are invited to come with their knitting and spend a pleasant afternoon talking and exchanging ideas on new recipes.

No Work As Important As Food Conservation

(By C. V. STAINSBY, Assistant to Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.)

The tendency is apparent in some communities to regard the United States Food Clubs as of small importance. Some women say they are too busy doing other kinds of war work to bother with food clubs. This is the wrong idea. There is no other work so important as the food work. Let's consider it for a moment. Suppose the Food Administration should fail to secure the necessary distribution of food. What would happen? Disaster would be the result. The armies of America, Britain, France, Italy and Belgium would collapse. The munition workers in the same countries would be unable to produce the machinery of war. The physicians and nurses would be unable to care for the sick and wounded. The wounded themselves would have less chance of recovery. The tragedy of the Russian collapse might easily happen in any other land if the same conditions were to prevail. Any one of these conditions would be sufficient to lose the war. Any of them or all of them could easily happen if the United States Food Administration fell short of its task. Can you see now the relationship between the United States Food Clubs and the war?

Look at it from another point of view. You are knitting a sweater for your son, your brother, your husband, your lover. How would that sweater feel over an empty stomach? You are knitting socks for the soldiers. Socks protect only the feet, food strengthens and warms the whole body. You are spending three or four afternoons a week making clothes for the children of France and Belgium. Which would make them happier, those new clothes or three good meals a day? The sewing and knitting are important. Go to it, but don't get such a false sense of proportion that you give all your time and attention to one branch of work and neglect that which is more important.

The United States Food Clubs are the approved means through which the Food Administration for Indiana is trying to meet its share of a tremendous responsibility. Join a United States Food Club in your neighborhood.

Warrick County Perfecting Township Defense Councils

The Warrick County Council of Defense is making a personal campaign of the ten townships perfecting a complete organization of township councils of defense. A most enthusiastic response is met with and splendid co-operation is being given. A chairman and five associate members form the plan for the township councils. A vice chairman and secretary and treasurer are elected out of these five members.

Each member is assigned duty as chairman of particular departments, to assist the county administrators, directors or committees. Registration cards are distributed for the enrollment of all who will pledge themselves to assist the council in any of its activities. It is hoped this winter to have working units in each school district.

Following is the membership pledge used in perfecting the township organizations:

Committee on Construction

The following report of the Committee on Proposed Construction was adopted at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, August 27th:

To the Indiana State Council of Defense:

Your Committee on Proposed Construction submits the following report:

1. The committee recommends that the action of the County Council of Defense of Jay County in postponing the improvement of Miller's Branch and the dredging of the Salamonina River and the construction of the William Wellman ditch, because of large expenditures involved, and the fact that the construction is not immediately needed, be approved.

2. Your committee recommends that the paving of the streets, as proposed, in the city of Terre Haute, be deferred until the close of the war.

Respectfully submitted,

GEORGE ADE,
JAMES L. KEACH,
CHARLES FOX,
Committee.

Short Loan Campaign Is Advocated

At its meeting August 27th, the Indiana State Council of Defense, on motion of Joseph G. Ibach, unanimously adopted the following resolution:

WHEREAS, The people of the State of Indiana very soon will be called on by the Government of the United States to subscribe for the fourth issue of Liberty Loan Bonds, to a total amount hitherto unprecedented in Indiana; and

WHEREAS, Those in charge of the Fourth Liberty Loan Campaign in Indiana, under the authority of the United States Treasury Department, and in co-operation with the Indiana State Council of Defense, are requesting all agencies in the State, as an evidence of determination to keep war work in this State at its zenith constantly, to join hands with the Liberty Loan sales, publicity and women's departments in each county for the swiftest possible distribution of Indiana's quota of the fourth issue of Bonds; and

WHEREAS, The war-time business throughout the State of Indiana can proceed best without continued strain and disruption incident to long-drawn-out campaigns, be it

Resolved, That the Indiana State Council of Defense hereby calls on all its constituent departments, the County Councils of Defense and all other patriotic agencies and individuals within the State, to place their entire war-time resources and powers of organization at the immediate call of the Liberty Loan county chairmen, in each county of Indiana, from now until the Indiana allotment of the Fourth Liberty Loan has been oversubscribed; and be it further

Resolved, That the Indiana State Council of Defense hereby approves the plans now in formation for a short campaign in the Fourth Liberty Loan bond sale in Indiana, and that it calls on all citizens of the State to prepare themselves financially for such a campaign, and to lend immediate aid in all counties to the building of the loan organizations with a view to completing the sale of Indiana's quota within a few days after the formal opening of the sale, September 28.

"Either the civilian must go short of many things to which he is accustomed in times of peace, or our armies must go short of munitions and other things indispensable to them."—Lord Kitchener.

The International Sugar Commission took stock of the sugar on hand, subtracted Allied requirements, and allotted America her share; then the Food Administration counted noses and announced two pounds per for our folks. Has anybody a better plan?

Achievements of U. S. Food Clubs in Townships; One Hundred Per Cent.

One of the unique features of the United States Food Administration is the fact that it has organized a system of food clubs in every township in the country. These clubs are the backbone of the food conservation movement, and their achievements are truly remarkable. In Allen County, the food clubs have achieved a one hundred per cent record in every township. This means that every family in the county has been organized into a food club, and every club has been successful in its efforts to conserve food. The achievements of these clubs are a testament to the patriotism and efficiency of the American people.

Food Conservation in the Home and How It Applies to Victory Over the Enemy For America and the Allies

Food conservation in the home is a vital part of the war effort. It is the responsibility of every citizen to conserve food, and to do so in a way that is both efficient and economical. ## State Fair War Display For Patriotic Hoosiers

Council of Defense and Food Committee Will Have Headquarters in Two Large Tents.

The State Council of Defense and the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation will have their headquarters in two large tents stationed at the Indiana State Fair grounds, August 31st to September 7th. The smaller of the two tents will contain the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation. Co-operating in the food work presented there, consisting of food exhibits and food demonstrations, will be the Home Economics Department of Purdue University and the Liberty Kitchen of the Marion County Council of Defense. Canning, drying, and war bread demonstrations will be given by the Misses Lella R. Gaddis and Alma M. Garvin of Purdue, and Misses Florence Boston and Eleanor Ferris of the Liberty Kitchen. Miss Miriam Beal, of Purdue, will give the demonstrations with special reference to the utilization of dairy products. Better methods of home management, and other points of interest to housewives, will be given prominence.

War gardens will be emphasized, and a vegetable storage pit will be shown. An exhibit of canned goods, dried vegetables and fruits, and salted vegetables, will be made.

State leaders for the wheat, corn and silo campaigns will also be there to give first-hand information concerning their work.

The committees which will be found in the large State Council tent will be the Woman's Section, Highways Transport Committee, United States Boys' Working Reserve, United States Public Service Reserve, Speakers' Bureau, Publicity Bureau, Military Committee, Merchants' Economy Committee and the Medical Section.

School of Agriculture at Fair.

A veritable school of agriculture and home economics, with every practical lesson taught, thoroughly emphasized by materials or pictures from the actual demonstrations, will with a mammoth exhibit constitute the contribution of Purdue University to the State Fair.

More than six and a half tons of exhibit material from the university and from various county agents over the State will be in place when the fair opens next Saturday morning.

Exhibits from agricultural agents, showing the results of better farming practices in every county of the State, will be on display with those of the boys and girls club members in the Oliver building. The Purdue building will house exhibits of the dairy, insect control, poultry, horticulture, animal husbandry, soils and crops, veterinarian, and State chemist departments.

Stereopticon slides will be shown all the time in the Oliver building as part of the county agent exhibit. Some of the finest corn ever grown in Indiana, part of which was shown at the Panama-Pacific exposition, will be in the Purdue building. The corn exhibit will be arranged by W. Q. Fitch, who was in charge of the exhibit at the exposition during 1915.

Seed Corn Leader Appointed.

Clarence Henry of Purdue University has been appointed State leader of the seed corn selection and storage campaign. The campaign will be pushed vigorously by him under the direction of the food committee. A special seed corn leaflet, dealing with the unusual seed corn situation of this year, is under preparation and will be off the press in time for distribution at the Indiana State Fair.

Farnam Assistant Director.

Fred R. Farnam, county superintendent of schools of Laporte County, has received an appointment in the Employment Service of the United States Department of Labor as assistant State director of the Indiana division of the United States Boys' Working Reserve. During the past eight years Mr. Farnam has made an enviable record as an educator in Indiana, and since the war started has obtained splendid results as county director of the Boys' Reserve in Laporte County.

I. D. Straus, federal State director of the Reserve, under whom Mr. Farnam will work, states that beginning September 1 the entire expense of the organization in the State of Indiana will be borne by the Federal Government. It is said that as soon as the enlarged national program of the Boys' Reserve is put into effect, several more paid assistants will be added to the State office.

The food program is a fighting program, and every fighter counts.

SUGAR MUST BE SAVED!

A teaspoonful means nothing. You say. Yet a heaping teaspoonful saved each meal for 120 days for each of the 100,000,000 persons in the United States makes a pile as big as the Woolworth building enough to supply the entire armed forces of the nation.

U. S. FOOD ADMINISTRATION

Use of Boy Power in Production of Food

Becomes of Major Importance as War Lengthens, Says Federal Director Hall.

As the war lengthens, it becomes more apparent that the development along sane lines, of the use of boy power is of major importance, particularly in food production, says W. E. Hall, National Director of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve. In a recent editorial the Waukegan, Ill., Gazette, had the following to say, under the heading "Boy Farmers Break Records":

"The boy farmers of the country bid fair to make and break records right along. They are taking their work seriously in instances too numerous to mention. Many a boy who started on a small scale has produced not only a big crop of grain or vegetables or stock, but has developed at the same time some mighty helpful ambition, and is definitely planning to study agriculture and to get to the top in his chosen business.

Indiana Boy Champion.

"It is interesting to read that the champion corn-grower of Indiana (Dale Calvert, of Delphi) is a boy of 15 years. His first attempt in 1916 resulted in a yield of 85 bushels of corn to the acre. He was beaten by hundreds of other Hoosiers. But he didn't stay beaten long. With the experience he had gained from his 85-bushel acre, with his own seed and his own determination, he bettered his first results by more than 60 per cent. Last season he made one acre yield 140.9 bushels of dry shelled corn at a cost of 11.3 cents per bushel. He won the championship, and gave Indiana a new record.

"The record acre corn crop of the United States goes to another boy, this time a southerner, and only 12 years old. It is said that nearly all the record crops of the country have been raised by boys under 18.

"The war-time farming for boys has been a fine thing. They become genuinely interested before they have gone very far. And when a boy is interested in anything he makes it succeed, if he's got the right stuff in him. It is right, that as far as possible, boy farming activity be kept under official supervision, eliminating the danger of exploiting for private benefit in the name of war conservation. The boys deserve the help and protection of old and wiser people. But after that let them go to it—and watch the record-smashing that will take place."

Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director for Indiana, says that one of the principal functions of the Boys' Working Reserve is to keep the farmer's son cheerfully at work on his own farm rather than be attracted to the city by the high wages offered in industrial employment. One other service rendered by the farmer's son is to help train the inexperienced city boy, who for patriotic reasons spends his vacation in food production. City boys and country boys who farm for six weeks or more and who are of reserve age are awarded by the U. S. Government, with a war service medal at the end of the season.

We Are Not to Be Diverted.

"And, we are not to be diverted from the grim purpose of winning the war by any insincere approaches upon the subject of peace. I can say, with a clear conscience, that I have tested those intimations, and have found them insincere. I now recognize them for what they are—an opportunity to have a free hand, particularly in the east, to carry out purposes of conquest and exploitation.

"Every proposal with regard to accommodation in the west involves a reservation with regard to the east. Now, so far as I am concerned, I intend to stand by Russia as well as France."—President Woodrow Wilson.

Woman's Section

Indiana has reported the registration of 522 student nurses. Other registrations are pending, delayed by the lack of printed material from Washington. The Woman's Section is confident that Indiana young women, once convinced of the need of their services, will join in this important work.

Three hundred women are needed immediately as auditing clerks in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., according to a circular issued by the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense. Applicants must have graduated from a four years' high school course or completed a course of study equivalent to that required for such graduation. Also they must have graduated from a college or university of recognized standing, or have had four full years of study in a normal or other school of college grade, in either case specializing in economics, statistics, mathematics, or business administration. The entrance salary for this position generally will be $1,200 a year and in exceptional cases $1,400 a year, and the opportunity for advancement by successive grades to a maximum of $2,000 a year will depend entirely upon the ability, industry and aptitude of the appointee. Application blanks (Form No. 2,118) and additional information as to requirements (Form No. 464) may be obtained from the Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

"Win the war for freedom" is the slogan proposed by P. P. Claxton, commissioner of education, for the 1918 Labor Day celebration, September 2. In a letter to the secretaries of central labor unions, Commissioner Claxton says:

"Our military and naval forces have enrolled thousands of men of foreign extraction, who are fighting side by side with our native-born soldiers to win the war.

"Will you not therefore help our foreign-born industrial soldiers over here, who are so valiantly standing back of our army and navy over there, to better understand America and its ideals, and in your local celebrations urge them:

"To obey cheerfully the American laws and regulations, especially those made necessary by the war;

"To learn to understand the language of America;

"To prepare themselves for an understanding of American citizenship;

"To secure a home-stake in America and buy Liberty Bonds; and

"To be American—in thought, in heart, in speech and in the will to win the war."

Americanization is one of the departments of war work in which the Women's Committee, Council of National Defense, has been delegated to assist. To the many women workers throughout the country these suggestions are equally applicable.

The women of the country are being urged by the Women's Committee of Washington to assist in fuel conservation. Since the women control the use of fuel in the home, it is considered that this is a matter in which they can greatly assist the State and local Councils of Defense and the United States Fuel Administration in the campaign for conserving the nation's fuel supply.

The women members of local councils everywhere, especially community Councils of Defense, are asked to campaign actively for economy in the domestic consumption of coal, for early buying and for the use of wood and peat where possible, adapting their campaign always to the instructions of the State Fuel Administrator.

Constructive work at home must run well ahead of destructive work at the front.

Only the simple life is honorable or even decent today.

We are giving our work, our time and our money, but "They" are giving their lives.

Helps in Using Substitute Foods

This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration, and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.

CHEESE.

Cheese is a food which may replace meat in the diet on meatless days and in meatless menus. Many people use cheese only as a "side dish" and at the end of meals after enough food has already been eaten, believing that it aids in the digestion of the meal. Instead it only adds extra food which must be cared for by the body.

Cheese is most easily digested when grated or ground before using. Cheese should always be cooked at a low temperature or it becomes tough and rubbery—have the oven only moderately warm for baked dishes and cook in a double boiler over the direct heat.

The following dishes may suggest new ways of using cheese as a meat substitute:

Cheese Ramekin.

- 4 tablespoons cheese.
- 2 eggs.
- 2 tablespoons butter.
- 2 cups of bread.
- $\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoon mustard.
- $\frac{1}{2}$  cup milk.

Put bread in milk and place on stove to heat. Stir until smooth. Then add cheese and butter. Cook a minute. Remove and add yolks, well beaten. Add seasoning. Beat the whites very stiff and fold in. Pour into a greased baking dish. Bake 15 minutes.

Cheese Souffle.

- 1 cup bread crumbs.
- 2 cups milk.
- 3 eggs beaten separately.
- 1 cup grated cheese.
- Paprika, salt and pepper to taste.

Place crumbs in milk. Add seasoning and yolks, well beaten. Add grated cheese. Fold in stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Pour in buttered baking dish. Sprinkle top with crumbs. Bake 45 minutes in a very slow oven.

Cheese Strata.

Make a white sauce of one pint of milk, four level tablespoons flour and two tablespoons of butter, salt and pepper to taste, by heating the milk and adding the flour mixed with three tablespoons of the cold milk. Add the butter, salt and pepper when the sauce begins to thicken and is smooth. Remove from fire. Place a layer of white sauce in a baking dish, then a layer of thinly sliced bread, then white sauce, then a layer of grated cheese, more white sauce, bread, etc., until dish is filled. Bake slowly until nicely browned and the cheese is thoroughly melted.

Cheese and Tomato Toast.

- 1 cup milk.
- 1 cup tomato juice.
- 1 cup grated cheese.
- 4 level tablespoons flour.
- Salt and pepper to taste.

Heat the milk in the double boiler. Add the flour that has previously been mixed with a little of the cold milk. Cook until smooth and thickened. Heat the tomato juice and add one-eighth teaspoon of soda. Pour this into the thickened milk. Add the cheese and seasonings. Cook in double boiler until cheese is melted. Serve on toast.

Rice With Cheese.

Boil rice in salted water until done. Make a white sauce as directed in recipe for cheese strata. Place a layer of rice in a baking dish, then a layer of cheese. Repeat until dish is filled. Spread a thin layer of bread crumbs over the top. Bake in a moderate oven. This is a good recipe to use in a "one-dish meal."

Cheese and Olive Sandwiches.

Grate cheese and add to it chopped stuffed olives, paprika and enough cooked salad dressing to make it hold together well. Use as a filling in rye or war bread sandwiches.

Indiana Courts Asked To Assist Registration

care. It is expected that other lists will follow. Arrangements have been made by the Governor with the hospitals for the insane in this State to promptly receive discharged insane soldiers whose mental condition is due to causes existing prior to enlistment, who are legally committed to the respective institutions. The plan that the War Department and the Board of State Charities and the committee of the State Council of Defense has worked out is for the commanding officer of a camp to report the case to the Indiana Board of State Charities. The officer will then be directed to have the patient returned to the county clerk in the county where he has a legal settlement. The clerk of that county will be encouraged to immediately have the necessary legal steps taken so as to secure prompt medical care for the patient in a State hospital. These new cases will follow the procedure outlined. They are being received by the State board almost every day, coming from widely separated camps. The Indiana men are now scattered to many different places. We have recently had cases reported from Fort Thomas, Kentucky; Fort McPherson, Georgia; Fort Riley, Kansas, and Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Illinois.

The navy, it is expected, will follow a plan similar to that made with the army.

It is understood that cases of mental sickness arising in the line of duty will be cared for by the Federal Government and not by the several States.

In view of the fact that the needs for the groups mentioned—the mental defectives and the insane—in Indiana, are being strongly brought to our attention at this time, I venture to suggest the wisdom of this Council of Defense giving further consideration to the subject.

After hearing statements from Attorney Arthur Jones and other representatives of "thirty-five or forty" merchants of South Gary, Ind., in an appeal from the resolution of the Lake County Council of Defense, calling for the closing of retail stores four nights a week at 6:30 o'clock, the council heard from Chairman John B. Peterson and others of the council, then unanimously voted to sustain the action of the council, dismissing the appeal.

On recommendation of the Indiana Engineers' Association the council nominated Daniel B. Lutten of Indianapolis as State director of engineers, to assist the Federal Government in the execution of its war program, especially through the enlistment of engineers. Mr. Lutten will co-operate with the United States employment service.

Chairman Foley read the following communication for the information of the council:

U. S. RAILROAD ADMINISTRATION.

Indianapolis, Ind.

Dear Sir—Beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 16th inst. in respect to a supply of gravel from Pleasant Lake to Uniondale for public streets in that city.

The United States Highway Council, Washington, D. C., has ruled that it cannot make any recommendations regarding either material or transportation until the local authorities have made application to that committee through the State Highway Department.

Upon receipt of application from the State Highway Department, the United States Highways Council will then investigate the importance of the individual roadways, giving consideration as to their military or economic values, and submit recommendations accordingly to the War Industries Board and the Fuel Administration with respect to material, and to the Car Service Section of the Railroad Administration regarding the car supply and transportation.

I would suggest that you have the city authorities of Uniondale handle the matter along the above lines.

Yours truly,

H. F. BELL,

Assistant to Manager Inland Traffic,
War Industries Board.

The chairman was authorized on motion of H. R. Kurrie to make inquiry as to whether any of the State institutions providing vocational training for soldiers are withholding the use of any of their facilities that might contribute to the comfort or entertainment of the men in uniform.

At the conclusion of the meeting E. C. Perisho, professor in an agricultural college at Brookings, S. D., who is making patriotic addresses in Indiana, congratulated the Indiana council on its accomplishments.

Food Administration

FOOD AND THE PRESS.

One important war function which the press has performed with signal success is to tell the public of measures deemed necessary by the United States Food Administration to feed the armies and civilian populations of the Allies. These plans are carefully and painstakingly conceived. No one in the food administration is willing to waste time and print paper to send out incorrect information on food requirements. When a citizen disregards one of these requests, he prejudices the conduct of the war.

There are certain lines of conservation that probably will not change throughout the war. There will at no time be enough food to waste. There will not be sufficient sugar or beef or wheat to meet our present tastes and former consumption. There will always be the governing fact that we and the Allies eat at a common table and that the share of the Allies depends largely upon us. This much is "old stuff," of which the papers do not now remind people so constantly possibly as they did last year, for they are essentially purveyors of news.

However, there are items of fresh interest and changing aspect. No war program can be constant. The food situation varies with weather, railroad facilities, labor conditions and the constant struggle between ships and enemy submarines. The Food Administration must change its food plans to meet unforeseen circumstances, as a driver alters his gears to fit the road.

The press informs the public of these necessary changes in policy. It also tells of local conditions. When a shipment of fresh fish arrives on the markets, the papers announce it. Market conditions guide the housewife in her purchases, and the newspaper will often save her time in going from stall to stall as her own investigator. The "Fair Price Lists" will tell her what she should pay.

Before a person changes from one food article to another, he had best see whether he turns in the direction that the Food Administration urges. There is no particular glory due the woman who virtuously cuts down her milk supply when milk is plentiful and serves roast beef and frosted cakes for dinner.

There are all manner of cranks and opinionists abroad who have pet hobbies on the subject of diet. But today they are no more to be regarded than a German official report. The source of authentic food requests is the United States Food Administration and its older ally, the Department of Agriculture. Their bulletin boards are the newspapers, and their announcements bear the stamp of proper authority.

Keep yourself informed of the current rulings of the Food Administration by reading the papers.

FLOUR RULINGS IN EFFECT SEPT. 1, 1918.

The new flour rulings which become effective September 1, 1918, are as follow:

1. All flour rules and regulations now in effect are canceled. This order applies to all regulations and rules issued from this office, as well as to all special rules and regulations issued in the several counties, cities and towns.

2. The bread of the allies, including our own people, will contain 20 per cent of other grains than wheat.

3. The 80/20 formula, which takes the place of the 50/50 formula, is not intended to displace the use of corn bread. The 80/20 formula is used in addition to our normal consumption of corn bread.

4. Retail dealers selling standard wheat flour must carry in stock either barley flour, corn meal or corn flour, and with every sale of wheat flour shall sell a combination of some one or more of these in the proportion of one pound of substitutes to each four pounds of wheat flour.

5. No dealer may force any other substitute in combination upon the consumer, and the substitutes must conform to the standards fixed by the United States Food Administration.

6. The following flours may be sold in combination with standard wheat flour in lieu of all barley flour, corn meal, or corn flour, if the consumer so demands, at the ratio of one pound to each four pounds of wheat flour, namely, rice flour, oat flour, buckwheat flour, potato flour, bean flour, sweet potato flour, kaffir flour, milo flour, feterita flour, and meals of the last three named flours.

7. Pure rye flour or meal will be sold as a substitute in the proportion of at least two pounds of rye with three pounds of wheat flour.

8. The foregoing rules apply to all custom and exchange transactions and to the farmer as well as to city and townspeople.

9. The previous rule limiting licensed millers, wholesalers and bakers to a thirty-day supply of flour is changed to permit the stocking of a sixty-day supply.

10. The rules limiting the sales by retailers of wheat flour to one-eighth of a barrel in cities and one-fourth of a barrel in sparsely settled districts are rescinded. There are no limitations as to the amount of flour which may be sold to a consumer at a single purchase.

11. Mixed flours prepared for sale by millers, wholesalers and retailers according to the Victory mixed flour formula may be sold without substitutes, but in no case shall the price be greater than in the case of standard wheat flour.

These rulings are issued in accordance with the instructions received in a telegram from Herbert Hoover. They are subject to modification and amendment from time to time. Special instructions will be issued for the guidance of millers and bakers.

* * * * *

Violations reported to the State Food Administrator during the week, and penalties assessed therefor, follow:

Sam Ponteloe, grocer, Fort Wayne, ordered to close for a month for selling wheat flour without substitutes; Christ Tsetse, Sack Bodigan and M. Derloshen, grocers, Fort Wayne, deprived of the privilege of selling sugar for thirty days for violating Sunday closing order. G. Barry Tolan, administrator for Allen County.

Charles Cutilla and Andrew Cantina, grocers, of Gary, fined $50 and $4 for selling wheat flour without substitutes; J. Ross Cole and Dr. T. B. Templin deprived of 150 and 75 pounds of sugar respectively on charges of hoarding. R. G. Parry, administrator for Gary.

J. M. Jennings, of North Manchester, deprived of 8,000 pounds of sugar and certificates for 1,885 pounds; J. D. Beck, of Wabash, deprived of 2,000 pounds and certificates for 5,000 pounds. Scott Davis, administrator for Wabash County.

Wheat millers who receive wheat from farmers' wagons and grind such wheat on a toll basis, or exchange wheat for flour and feed, may charge not to exceed 35 cents per bushel for each 60 pounds of clean wheat so received. This toll is collectable on a money basis only. It is not permissible for mills to accept wheat as toll in lieu of cash.

Eat thou honey because it is good.—Proverbs xxiv:13.

Federal Agent Probing Attitude of Objectors

Responsibility for Refusal of Mennonites to Enter United Service Will Be Fixed.

Goshen, Ind.—Responsibility for the refusal of Mennonites to enter either the combatant or non-combatant branches of the United States army, when summoned under the draft, has been brought home to the Mennonite conference, held August 29, last year, at Yellow Creek, southeast of Elkhart.

The conference of bishops, ministers and deacons issued a pamphlet, "Mennonites on Military Service," which contained the following recommendation:

"And at the time you receive a summons to enter the military service, you are to present yourself to the authorities and meekly inform them that UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES can you consent to service, EITHER COMBATANT OR NON-COMBATANT, under the military arm of the government."

Shortly after the conference the pamphlet containing the paragraph, already given, was issued broadcast over the United States, Canada and India to all members of the Mennonite church.

It was a part of series of resolutions, spread upon the records of the conference, and signed by 185 bishops, ministers and deacons of the church.

Federal Agent F. R. Fortune of Wooster, Ohio, arrived in Goshen recently and immediately began the securing of evidence in the case. Local members of the church, who signed the resolutions, have been summoned to appear before Mr. Fortune in the draft headquarters at Goshen. Depositions are being taken of the testimony given by all those summoned before Miss Hattel, court stenographer.

The federal agent has copies of the pamphlet sent out and also, it is claimed, the original draft of the resolutions.

A large number of Mennonite leaders in this and adjacent territory, who signed the resolutions, have been summoned to appear before Mr. Fortune. The first to be called from Elkhart by Sheriff Sanford was G. L. Bender, a deacon, who is also secretary of the Mennonite board of missions. He was taken to Goshen by the sheriff. The list includes the following:

Bishops Jacob K. Bixler and D. O. Yoder of Elkhart, D. J. Johns and John Garber of Goshen, D. D. Miller of Middlebury, Jonathan Kurtz of Ligonier, and D. Burkholder of Nappanee.

Ministers W. B. Weaver of Elkhart, J. S. Hartzler, J. E. Hartzler, I. R. Detwiler, Silas Yoder and D. D. Troyer of Goshen, O. S. Hartzler and R. L. Hartzler of Topeka, Silas L. Weldy, J. W. Christophel, Henry Weldy and C. A. Shank of Wakarusa, Y. C. Miller and J. J. Miller of Shipshewana, and Jonas Loucks, L. W. Yoder and John H. Bare of Nappanee.

Deacons A. S. Landis, D. H. Coffman, H. B. Weaver and Ira S. Johns of Goshen, M. J. Yoder, John Emmert and M. D. Lantz of Topeka, Noah Weaver of Foraker, S. J. Schmucker of Nappanee, J. I. Weldy and Samuel Smeltzer of Wakarusa, J. J. Mishler of Shipshewana, J. C. Harshberger of Middlebury, and Jonas Brubaker.

Others from the vicinity who signed the resolutions, not officially connected with the conference, but "who heartily endorsed the acts of the body," include A. B. Yoder, H. M. Metzger, D. W. Hunsberger and William Moyer of Elkhart, J. S. Troyer of Lagrange, C. L. Ressler of Nappanee, and C. K. Curtis of New Paris.

This action taken by the federal government follows a long investigation of the causes for the refusal of Mennonites, when summoned for army service, to enter any branch of army work. Acting on the recommendation sent out by the conference in 1917, Mennonites in army camps refuse to don the uniform and perform any work whatever. Later many changed their minds when confronted with the possibility of prison, and accepted the work outlined by the federal government for those assigned to non-combatant service because of religious scruples.

From Elkhart County, however, several of the members of the church, including Jesse L. Breneman of Goshen and Homer B. Curtis of New Paris, have been sentenced to Fort Leavenworth for fifteen and ten years, respectively.

Others who are alleged to have been sent to Fort Leavenworth prison, who entered the army from this section, include Glen Schryer of Wakarusa, LeRoy Hostetler of Middlebury, Henry D. Blough of Goshen, J. V. Stauffer and Allen Christophel of Wakarusa. Many others have been shown the error of their ways and have entered the non-combatant branch.

Following the investigation locally by Mr. Fortune, if sufficient evidence is secured, an endeavor will be made to have the Mennonites who signed these resolutions indicted in the federal court at Cleveland. If found guilty, a fine of $2,000 and other punishment is possible.

Mr. Fortune has completed some similar work in Holmes County, Ohio, and other sections of that State. One prominent citizen who persisted in his efforts against the action of the federal draft law was given a sentence of five years at Fort Leavenworth.

The sugar S. O. S. is a do-it-now call—for what is not well done now will not be done at all.

Morale of Producers of Food Must Be Maintained

Farm Help Specialist Gives Valuable Suggestions in Reference to a Solution of An Increasingly Serious Problem.

The following self-explanatory letter may assist agricultural communities of Indiana in solving the increasingly serious farm labor problem, if the suggestions and spirit thereof are given due consideration:

Lafayette, Ind., August 19, 1918.

Mr. H. A. Stevens, Jeffersonville, Ind.:

Dear Mr. Stevens—In reply to your letter of the 9th, I wish to make the following statement in regard to farm labor conditions:

The supply of all kinds of labor in this country, including that necessary to run the farms, is being rapidly diminished by the draft and abnormal war conditions in general. There is practically no surplus of man power in any part of the State at present, and the government is increasing its calls for both military and industrial purposes. The proposed draft is expected to yield 2,000,000 men.

Farmers are merely facing the same problem that all other industries are. So we must realize that the farm labor problem is not one of selecting suitable men from some convenient source and placing them on farms to replace those called into the service. We feel sure that the following will not be drafted or drawn to the industries by the lure of higher wages—owners and managers of productive farms, renters with equipment for running farms, and married farm laborers with good jobs to hold them on the farm and dependents to keep them out of the draft.

First, we must organize the labor left in the community into a unit which will be able to close ranks and do the work of those who have gone and cannot be replaced. This labor comprises men and boys, women and children.

Second, we must attract efficient labor to the farms, as well as hold that which we have. Since there is considerable readjustment of labor going on all the time—men moving from one job to another—this may be done to a certain extent in obtaining married labor for those who are equipped with tenant houses. Proper comparison of wages of town and country may also persuade some exempted single men to seek farm work.

Third, we must plan the proper methods to make farm labor more efficient and make it possible for nine men to do the work of ten. For if we stop to consider figures we will find that only a small per cent of our labor is actually gone and that per cent, if divided among those remaining, makes a very small increased effort, indeed, for each one.

Why can't the idea of the co-operative thrashing ring be extended to include all the farm oper-

Worse Than a Slacker!

I want to say, however, that I heartily commend and approve of any organization which proposes to encourage and stimulate the patriotism of its own membership, but when it proposes to censor the conduct of those whom it presumes to judge, and to compel them to conform to standards of citizenship which it deems proper, but which are extraordinary or extra legal, it attempts something unjust and unlawful; and defeats the very purpose for which it professes to exist, and the end which, it says, it desires to promote.

The first duty of good citizenship is obedience to law. A man who refuses to buy Liberty Bonds or to contribute to the various war funds violates no law, although I think, that when able to do so, such a man is an undesirable citizen.

However, the man who by intimidation or threats compels or attempts to compel such a citizen to assume a part of those burdens, violates both the letter and spirit of the law and thereby becomes infinitely worse than the man he chastizes.—John R. Joyce, in Kokomo Tribune.

Those who dare all must share all.

ations in one neighborhood? An organization through which the efforts of a community are directed as combined rather than individual efforts surely would result in an increase of returns for the labor involved, and that is what it is going to take to replace the labor lost from the farms.

Prejudice against boy reserve labor and that recruited from the towns and cities to assist through emergencies must be broken down. It is true it is not as effective as the skilled labor the farmer has been accustomed to, but when skilled help cannot be had the reasonable thing for a man to do, if he really needs help, is to take the next best that is available and make the best of it. Besides, Canada through four years of war, and parts of this nation during last season, have demonstrated the value of such labor. Fifteen thousand Chicago boys alone serving throughout the season in Illinois with success, as well as the thousands of city men in Indiana who helped in the harvest fields should silence criticism from those who have not given town labor a fair trial.

As far as is possible, experienced help will be recruited and distributed to the farms through the offices of the county agents and labor bureaus already in existence. In case one county has serious shortage, other counties will be asked for temporary assistance. For instance, if a corn county is in danger of losing part of its crop from lack of labor, counties which have a small corn acreage will be asked to send men who can be spared at that time. Emergency labor, sowing wheat, spring rush work, and harvest can be taken care of as a rule by local help from towns and industries which are less essential at the time than food production. This was demonstrated beyond doubt this season in Indiana and only requires an efficient organization.

To sum it up then—skilled labor is scarce; farmers must recognize the fact and plan to make the most of the labor left them. Some very good and much labor of only fair efficiency may be obtained from cities. Farmers with houses for married men stand a better chance to get needed hands than those who can use only single ones. County agents should urge community unit effort instead of the old individual efforts on each farm. Above all, the morale of all agriculturists should remain unbroken; lack of labor should not be allowed to discourage production as long as there remains one plan untried.

Respectfully,

W. B. BRUMFIELD,
Farm Help Specialist.

Extravagance costs blood, the blood of heroes.—LLOYD GEORGE.

Home Service for Disabled Soldiers

Red Cross Issues a Manual Instructing Workers on Proper Procedure With Important Work.

In order to mobilize the 50,000 Home Service workers in the United States as an effective force in solving the problem of the disabled soldier, the Red Cross is issuing a manual of "Home Service and the Disabled Soldier or Sailor," which will go out from headquarters about September 1st and be circulated among all Red Cross chapters.

Curtis E. Lakeman, the author of the manual, describes the function of the Red Cross in the national rehabilitation program as follows:

"Among the private organizations whose efforts will naturally supplement the national program, the Red Cross occupies a unique position. Its purpose and its field of activity are in an unusual degree colored with public interest and controlled by Government authority. With its financial resources, its 22,000,000 members, its 3,900 chapters, and their 15,000 branches, the Red Cross is better equipped than any other private organization to give aid and comfort to our soldiers and sailors and assist their families at home. * * * Such an organization will gladly accept the opportunity to extend a helping hand to any man needing friendly aid during the critical period after he ceases to be a soldier and before he is able to carry the full burden of his duty as a private citizen and the head of a family.

"Within the organization of the Red Cross, the Department of Military Relief deals with the soldier or sailor as a fighting unit, while the Department of Civilian Relief aids in maintaining his morale by assisting his family. As soon as he is discharged and becomes a civilian, the responsibility for temporarily continued care falls upon the Department of Civilian Relief. Such service will begin in accordance with established policy, only when the need and wish for it is indicated, and will properly end when the former soldier is restored to full self-support, or when the burden of his care as a civilian has been taken up by appropriate public or private agencies."

The book sets forth in detail the manner in which the Government of the United States has undertaken to care for its disabled men. They will receive first of all the very best of medical and surgical care in order that the chances of permanent disablement shall be as low as possible. It is hoped that not more than 10,000 men in 1,000,000 of those who are in action during each year of the war will be so disabled that he will need vocational re-education in order to be self-supporting. If the United States is as fortunate as other nations in its casualties and in its surgical care, that very small percentage will be possible.

For those who are disabled, the Government will maintain a complete system of vocational training so that any man who chooses may be educated in some new occupation by which he can maintain himself in spite of his handicap. This training, given by the Federal Board of Vocational Education under the Smith-Sears law will not be compulsory although every man is urged to avail himself of the chance. Supplemental general education will be given wherever it is advisable. The men who do accept this training will not have their compensation for disablement cut down in any way because they have made themselves self-supporting. It is considered one of the special duties of Home Service workers that they put down the recurrent rumor that a man who accepts vocational training from the Government will have his compensation reduced in proportion to his increased capacity to earn money.

In the meantime every man who needs an artificial limb or an appliance will be supplied by the Government and these mechanical aids will be kept in repair. Men will continue under the care of the Government until they have completed their convalescence, their training, and have been put into a satisfactory job.

It is in supplementing this program that the Home Service workers of the Red Cross are expected to be of service. Since Home Service has been, from the beginning, the agency which has helped soldiers' families, it is expected to bring to the support of the Government the intelligent co-operation of the families. It will go directly to the men and explain to them their opportunities for aid from the Government and give money relief when it is necessary to keep a family from want while a soldier is taking his training. It will also help to influence public opinion through the soldiers' families on behalf of the disabled soldier. Home Service workers will help to create a public opinion that will frown upon the sentimental, dangerous sort of hero worship which carries a returned warrior for a few months, even for a few years perhaps, on a high wave of popularity and then drops him, when helpless, so that he becomes a pauper and an embittered, useless citizen.

They will discourage promiscuous entertainment which gives the hero an unhealthy idea of what he can expect from his fellow-townsmen and which in the meantime makes it impossible for him to re-establish the several home relations which are much more precious and lasting than the temporary popularity of brass bands and bar-room treats.

They will, on the other hand, encourage every hero's family to stand behind him in making a fair fight to regain a useful, normal position in the industrial community. They will point out to employers and men alike the danger of giving a man a job for which he is unsuited and which he cannot hold against competition after sentiment has worn off and also against the folly of taking a low paying position which has no chance for future progress.

Lawyers and physicians on Home Service Sections will give all disabled men who want it their professional advice. The work now being done by Home Service for the family of a man while he is away will be continued and for the man himself if he returns with his earning capacity lessened or endangered by the misfortunes of war.

Mr. Lakeman's book is complete enough to give Home Service workers much more than a merely cursory knowledge of the difficulties of the wounded man. It contains discussion of the leading types of disablement and of the diseases which have caused most trouble among the soldiers at the front. It outlines all the plans and methods discussed and adopted in other countries for meeting the problem of the mutes, as they are called in France, and gives an elementary understanding of the technical provisions of the American laws and regulations. It explains the workings of the Board of Vocational Education and the plans of the Surgeon General of the Army.

Every encouragement and neighborly helpfulness will be given to disabled soldiers by Home Service Sections, and this book points the way for their participation in the great work of reconstruction.

Priority on Lime Aid To Hoosier Producers

Farmers Have Become Wide Users of Product Essential to Large Food Supply.

Announcement at Washington that the War Priority Board has placed agricultural lime in preferred classification in the matter of fuel supply as well as in the matter of transportation, will be welcome news to Indiana farmers who have become wide users of this product in the last few years. This action was taken following the request of Secretary of Agriculture Houston, who acted on recommendation of the Agricultural Advisory Committee.

The committee declared that production and distribution of pulverized limestone and burned lime for agricultural purposes should be declared essential in the production of food and other war necessities, both directly and through many staple crops such as wheat and corn in this section of the country, and cotton in the south.

"This action will be a boon for Indiana farmers," said T. A. Coleman, county agent leader and acting director of the extension department of Purdue University. "Great quantities of lime are being purchased in and out of the State and its rapid movement is essential at this time, if it is to be used on wheat sown this fall. H. W. Crowe, county agent for Clay County, has ordered approximately two thousand tons of limestone to be used this fall on demonstration plots alone. Most of this will be applied on wheat. Similar work is being done by other county agents throughout the State and farmers who already have tried lime are using it again this year. The rapid movement of this important product to boom crop production should be emphasized everywhere throughout the State at this time."

Wheat Scab from Corn Rot.

Two million, five hundred and thirteen thousand bushels of wheat were lost in Indiana last year, due to the disease known as wheat scab, according to an estimate from the Plant Disease Survey conducted by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and reported to the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation. This loss is in addition to that from smuts and other sources.

Investigations conducted by George N. Hoffer, agent and associate botanist, at the Purdue University experiment station show that wheat scab is caused by the same organism that is responsible for a root and stalk rot of corn which is prevalent in Indiana. During the past summer, Dr. A. G. Johnson and D. Atanasoff, both of Wisconsin University, inoculated wheat, using the overwintered organism from old corn stalks collected in a wheat field in Shelby County and Dane County Wisconsin fields. Wheat scab resulted from this inoculation.

"A crop rotation avoiding wheat following diseased corn is undoubtedly important, unless the corn stalks are cut close to the ground, removed, and the remaining stubble plowed under before the wheat is planted," said Mr. Hoffer, who has charge of the corn root, stalk and ear rot research work for the entire country. "Badly scabbed wheat should not be used for seed. Ordinary seed treatments will not control wheat scab," he continued. "Hence clean seed on carefully prepared clean soil is advisable."

Patriotism in Indiana

Allen County.—An appropriation of $4,000 for the expenses of the county council of defense has been asked of the Allen County civil council. . . . H. D. Hemenway of the National War Garden Commission, addressing the liberty garden captains of Fort Wayne as a representative of the federal government, encouraged the liberty garden fair, at which substantial prizes will be awarded for the best exhibits of canned and preserved goods taken from Fort Wayne war gardens. A Fort Wayne business man has offered a kitchen cabinet for the sweepstakes. . . . Provision for a landing place for aviators who are making more frequent stops at Fort Wayne is now occupying the attention of the city authorities. The War Department has been consulted and the county council of defense is interested in anticipation of an extension of the aerial mail service.

Bartholomew County.—John D. Dahms of Columbus, who operates a grocery, meat market and ice cream parlor, was required to close his place of business for the current week by County Food Administrator John M. Thompson. Dahms' offense was in selling goods on Sunday in violation of the federal rule. . . . Bartholomew County is to have township councils of defense. Some time ago the county defense council selected two men and one woman from each township to form the nucleus of the new organizations, which will be composed of seven members, and in some instances where considered necessary this number will be even larger. The township councils will perform practically the same work as the county organization performs in the county, and will look after the promotion of all war funds and investigate charges of disloyalty and evidences of German propaganda. The members of the township councils will meet regularly with the county council once a month. Following are those appointed as a nucleus for each township organization: Clay—John L. Stuckey, Hardin Linke and Blanche Robertson; Clifty—Dr. J. H. Morrison, D. E. Glick and Mrs. Alvin Swain; Columbus—W. A. Abbett, Isaac L. Evans and Miss Kathryn Aaron; Flatrock—A. J. McQueen, George E. Miley and Mrs. Harrell; German—Charles Lambert, P. B. Loettiger and Mrs. John Sublett; Harrison—R. C. Hart, Jessie B. Ross and Carl Smith; Haw Creek—Clinton E. Marlin, Mrs. L. C. McKinney and J. O. Snider; Jackson—John H. Otto, Mrs. Elam Dye and Walter Anderson; Nineveh—William Essex, J. F. Waltz and Mrs. Jacob Stucker; Ohio—James R. Lona, Mrs. Alva Smith and Oscar Thompson; Rockcreek—John M. Williams, Charles D. Glick and Mrs. Charles Trent; Sandcreek—Joel T. Wilson, Edna Hall and Job Hamblen; Union—T. P. Rose, Mrs. Wallace Norman, and Frank M. McMurray; Wayne—Bert Gore, Mrs. Charles Massie and Scott Cook.

Blackford County.—A well attended food club meeting was held at the Metamoras schoolhouse in Montpelier, about thirty-five women from the various school districts and Montpelier being present. The cold pack method of canning and baking with substitutes were ably demonstrated by Mesdames A. L. Wilt, William Davis, George Huggins and Thad Ochiltree. Mrs. Charles Ritter of Hartford City, who is county chairman of the food clubs, was present and delivered a splendid talk on the organization of food clubs, as did Mrs. George Shull of this city. The meeting was interesting throughout and many helpful ideas and suggestions were exchanged. It was planned to hold a meeting once a month, at which time programs will be given.

Clay County.—Military training will be added to the regular curriculum of the Brazil high school, according to a resolution just passed by the school board. The government committee on uniforms is now considering a standard uniform to be universally used by the high schools of the United States which provide military training for their pupils, and when this is decided on it will probably provide a serviceable uniform at a reasonable cost. . . . John Nicolson of Brazil admitted selling foodstuff on Sunday and because of extenuating circumstances was permitted to pay $5 into the county war chest fund in lieu of more severe punishment. I. S. Easter admitted charging $1.25 for 12½ pounds of sugar in violation of the regulations, and he was permitted to pay $25 to the war chest fund. John Minor of Saline City charged 12 cents a pound for sugar and as a consequence will not be permitted to sell any more sugar for the duration of the war. The cases were all handled by C. W. Culbertson, food administrator for Clay County.

Dekalb County.—Dekalb County is being thoroughly organized for the food club drive which starts September 7th. Mrs. M. L. Greene of Garrett, woman member of the county council of defense, is superintending the drive and has appointed the following township chairmen: Grant, Miss Leora Yeagey; Jackson, Mrs. Thomas Dilgard; Stafford, Mrs. C. H. Grube; Wilmington, Mrs. F. L. Kiplinger; Spencer, Mrs. Anna Henderson; Keyser, Mrs. Jay Olinger; Richland, Mrs. Belle Harding; Concord, Mrs. Laura Leighty; Smithfield, Mrs. Marion Clark; Franklin, Mrs. Emma Jackson; Troy, Mrs. Hazel Myers; Butler, Mrs. Geo. Muhn; Nevville, Mrs. Rose Abel; Union, Mrs. Chas. Sidle; Fairfield, Mrs. W. O. Miser. Each township chairman will have six helpers, three of whom will be appointed by the chairman of the county council of defense and three by the county food administrator. . . . A body of men known as the military food of instruction has been organized for the purpose of giving registrants preliminary training before they are called into service. Board members are Capt. L. L. Denison, Garrett; Lieut. G. B. Denison, Waterloo; Lieut. Wilbur Miser, of near Corunna; Lieut. Philip Holman and Lieut. J. F. Cramer, Auburn. At a recent meeting of the board held at Auburn Judge D. M. Link and B. W. Binford of the Y. M. C. A. gave talks in which they explained to a number of Class A men who were present the importance of right preparation and defined their duty as citizens and Class 1 men. The county has been divided into three stations for the present—Waterloo, Auburn and Garrett—where Class 1 men will be assigned for instructions.

Elkhart County.—The Mennonite Relief Commission for War Sufferers, of which George L. Bender of Elkhart is treasurer, started out to raise $150,000 for the relief of war sufferers in Europe and Asia. Fifteen thousand dollars over the original amount has already been raised, and it is now hoped to reach the $200,000 mark. Part of the money goes to the American committee for Armenian and Syrian relief operating through Armenia, Syria, Palestine and other parts of Asia. The balance is distributed through the Friends Service Committee operating in France, Belgium, Russia and the islands of the Mediterranean. . . . Elkhart has at least 200 women employed in local factories, replacing men now in the service of the government. The Wheat Paper Company leads the list with 60 women employees, and the Buescher Band Instrument Company is second with about fifty. . . . Complaints have been coming to the county food administration from residents of Goshen regarding excessive prices charged for melons on the local market; in some cases the complaints also covered the poor quality of the melons sold. Deputy Food Administrator Slate has issued orders that not only must good melons be provided but prices must be reasonable or the sellers will be denied the privilege of the local market.

Fountain County.—Boys and girls of no community are better organized for war-time food production work than are the young Americans in and around Veedersburg, and it is doubtful if any in the State are doing a better job of helping supply food for Uncle Sam's fighters and the allies than these Veedersburg young folks who have enlisted in the Hoosier boys' and girls' club army of 86,000 members. Here are a few things they are doing, under the direction of their vocational teacher, A. J. Hesler, County Agent L. E. McKinsie, and the Purdue Extension Department: Eighteen are turning veal into beef, some of them at the rate of 100 pounds a month per animal. Eight boys in the state-wide one-acre corn growing contest cared for 250 acres of corn this summer, an average of 33 2-3 acres each. Twenty others are caring for purchased girls which will farrow this fall, helping give the 10 per cent increase in pork production which has been asked of Indiana. Sixteen are growing potatoes on ten acres, which is twice the area they had under cultivation last year. Sixty-four boys and girls are tending war gardens within the corporate limits of the town. Fifteen are in a poultry club, helping increase the meat and egg supply. Many girls are in canning and domestic science clubs, helping to conserve all the garden produce and fruits grown this summer. Lastly, the entire Veedersburg community is back of this company of young folks on the second line of defense, and they are going to do their part in a big way in this work.

Fulton County.—Fulton County averages 21 bushels per acre on 9,435 acres of wheat in 1918, or a total yield of 198,353 bushels. This is an increase of six bushels over the former average and eight bushels over the ten-year average for the county. The county will increase its 35,000 wheat acreage of 1913 by 20 per cent in 1919, under plans now progressing. . . . Bulletins from the State Council of Defense are to be read at public mass meetings in the city of Rochester.

Gibson County.—A proclamation issued by the mayor of Princeton at the request of the war mothers' organization calls upon the citizens to observe three minutes of prayer daily from 12:30 to 12:33 p. m., asking for the success of our soldiers and sailors and those of our allies in the war.

Henry County.—A refusal on the part of women employees of the Straughns Canning Factory to accept a wage scale of 6 cents a bucket for tomatoes was met by an offer of 7 cents from the company. A patriotic appeal to assist in the canning of tomatoes served effectively to prevent the waste of a large crop. E. J. Llewellyn, chairman of the county council of defense, declared that further refusal on the part of employees to accept a 7-cent per bucket wage would be considered unpatriotic. There was no further difficulty. . . . No gymnasium will be added to the Spiceland academy until after the termination of the war. The matter of making this addition came up in an informal way before the county council of defense, but since the proposed building is not to replace a destroyed one and is an entirely new project, the council decided the government rule covering conservation of men, money and material during the period of the war applies in this case and should be followed.

Howard County.—At the meeting of the Howard County civil council held the first week in September a petition was presented asking the council to levy a tax of six mills on every dollar of the assessed value of property throughout the county to provide funds required for war activities by the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., K. of C., Y. W. C. A., the Y. M. H. A. and Salvation Army. Some Howard County citizens feel that the taxation proposition for raising funds the special tax levy plan will wipe out the inequalities unavoidable under the subscription plan and will save the time and labor of those promoting the subscription campaigns. The petition calls for $150,000 and for a rate of six mills, but these figures are tentative and can be changed if, upon investigation, it is revealed that a less sum than $150,000 will be sufficient.

Jasper County.—Mrs. George Haberly has been appointed president of the United States food clubs for Jasper, and the war mothers of this city have promised her every aid in furthering this work. Mrs. W. J. Cramm of Dubois has been appointed president for Harrison Township and will begin at once the work of organizing her territory. The town of Dubois already has a number of signers of the federal food pledge and the work of organization will begin with these persons as a nucleus.

Lake County.—Southern Lake County is disturbed over the announcement that Dr. J. W. Iddings of Lowell has enlisted for war service. The fact that a large civil population is dependent upon the professional services of Dr. Iddings has prompted an appeal to the county council of defense, which will endeavor to effect some relief through the medical section of the State Council of Defense. Dr. Iddings has been active as the chairman of the Cedar Creek Township Defense Council.

Lawrence County.—M. H. Draper, Nelson Joyner and Stanley Chrysler constitute the community labor board for Lawrence County. Mr. Draper represents labor, Mr. Joyner the employers and Mr. Chrysler is the chairman, representing the United States employment service. Already steps have been taken to make a survey of the local labor situation in conformity with the recommendations that have come from the state labor director.

Montgomery County.—Mrs. S. C. Rowland has completed the task of summarizing the results of the registration of women in Montgomery County. All of the 6,257 women who filled out cards have expressed their ability and willingness to do more than one kind of work. Of agricultural occupations, poultry raising seems to be most popular with the women, as 1,688 have registered here; 4,632 profess themselves to be trained housekeepers and 394 are teachers; 378 are able to make surgical dressings and 969 can make Red Cross garments. It is particularly interesting to note that there are thirty women willing to contribute their services as chauffeurs, 72 willing to convert their homes into convalescent hospitals and 60 willing to share their homes with widows or children. A summary of registrants by classified occupations shows the following: Agricultural, 3,890; clerical, 1,394; domestic, 11,535; industrial, 851; professional, 1,652; public service, 707; social service, 1,491; allied relief and Red Cross, 1,432; contributions, 243.

Newton County.—In line with the policy of the federal government to conserve men, money and material during the period of the war, the Newton County Council of Defense has decided against the erection of a new elevator at Morocco. Two other elevators are now in operation there, and the erection of a third was not considered a war-time necessity.

Noble County.—Under the supervision of Mrs. Milo Clay a thorough food club organization will be established in Kendallville. The city has been divided into six districts, with a president and twelve lieutenants to formulate the work in each district. Mrs. Park, as general secretary, will care for each and all of these districts in their work. The presidents selected so far are as follows: Miss Anna Kreuger, northwest district; Mrs. Eva Barr, west district; Miss Helen Sumpson, central district; Mrs. Robert Bolton, southeast district; Mrs. Nevil Shook, east central district. No assignment has as yet been made for the northeast district. Committees have been arranged on membership, recipe exchange, patriotic gardens and candy saving, with the following personnel: Membership—Mrs. C. C. Weingart, Mrs. Rex Emerick, Mrs. Isaac Deter, Mrs. A. C. Shore, Mrs. O. E. Stiver; recipe exchange committee—Mrs. D. Cohen, Mrs. P. C. Emmons, Mrs. A. B. Waterhouse, Mrs. Clarence Coverstone, Mrs. Bert Slabaugh. This committee will appreciate good recipes from any woman in the city. They will be exchanged, and the best ideas of food conservation will be promoted. Patriotic gardens committee—Mrs. Walter Gillian, Mrs. John Libey, Mrs. Dick Neumann, Mrs. Charles Mendenhall, Mrs. H. C. Phillips; candy saving committee—Mrs. A. H. Minor, Mrs. E. M. Stewart, Mrs. Carl Schutt, Mrs. I. O. Reinohl, Miss Fannie Ihrie; question box—Mrs. T. A. Redmond. This is most important. Mrs. Redmond will be assisted in this work by all the club presidents and everybody else who can help out. Questions of special interest, or from a legal standpoint, will be referred to county and state authorities for interpretation. This should prove of value to all club members.

Ohio County.—A happy custom prevails in Rising Sun of providing departing registrants with sufficient money to tide them over until their first pay day under the service of the government. Funds are raised for this purpose by voluntary contributions. E. A. Anderson is treasurer and sees to it that each Rising Sun boy is properly cared for before leaving for camp. . . . The Ohio County Labor Board has been organized with B. H. Seranton, chairman; I. Langhaar, labor representative; and H. J. North, representing the manufacturing and business interests of the county.

Orange County.—It took a girl down in Orange County to exhibit grit enough to undertake to run a thrashing machine, which Miss Eva Turley, the twenty-year-old daughter of Oliver Turley, has been doing for the last two or three weeks. Her father has three machines and needed some one to take the oversight of one of them. Miss Eva told him she could do it, and he believed it. He put her to it, and no man could be more attentive and few, if any, more successful in looking after the details of the work.

Putnam County.—The county council of defense has given notice through C. C. Hurst that persons found violating the request of the fuel administration to refrain from the unnecessary use of gasoline on Sunday will be asked to give reasons. Names and numbers of machines will be taken and a public hearing held to ascertain whether they were justified in using the fuel which the federal government says is needed to support the allied armies in France.

Ripley County.—The Ripley County Council of Defense has filed a report of its transactions for the year ending August 1, 1918. During that period a total disbursement of $1,004 is listed. The expenses included printing, expenses of speakers, yarn and supplies for the Red Cross. The report shows a balance of $220 on hand.

Rush County.—Mrs. H. B. Armstrong, Rushville, R. R. No. 2, has accepted the position of county president of the United States food clubs. Although delayed in getting a start, Mrs. Armstrong is determined to make the township organizations complete.

Spencer County.—Spencer County women have co-operated very effectively with Miss Cook, home demonstration agent, and as a consequence the supply of canned vegetables and fruits, preserves and fruit butters made without sugar, bread and cakes made without wheat, sugar or animal fats, dried fruits, vegetables and cottage cheese is more generous in this community than ever before. The following women constitute a committee on collections for an exhibit at the Rockport fair: Mrs. A. R. Gentry, Mrs. Sam Shoemaker, Mrs. Bertha Hayford, Mrs. Ed Squires, Mrs. C. W. Halbruge, Mrs. W. K. Eberhardt, Mrs. Florence Tableman, Mrs. Lewis Tableman, Mrs. Emma Hiley, Mrs. J. W. Strassel, and Miss Emma Feigel. Miss Erma Hoch, Rockport; Miss Kestle Small and Miss Jennie Clark of Dale; Misses Helen and Edith Brothers, Rockport; Miss Marguerite McNaughton, Grandview; and Mrs. Lucile Day, Richmond, home economic teachers of Spencer County, will assist Miss Cook by taking turns at the food exhibit booth and helping answer questions that visitors may ask on various lines of food conservation. Recipes will be given out to those interested.

St. Joseph County.—South Bend manufacturers have pledged $1,000 to pay for an advertising campaign in support of the new labor program. The campaign involves newspaper advertising which makes clear the plans and purposes of the United States Employment Service of the Department of Labor....The police raided the residence of George L. Askilar and took 130 pounds of granulated sugar and 1,050 pounds of sugar, part of which was hidden under a bath tub.

Switzerland County.—Switzerland County's record shows a total of 2,549 women registered for war work. Of this number Jefferson Township furnished 592; Pleasant, 466; Posey, 450; York, 443; Cotton, 314; and Craig, 294. The housekeeping registrants totaled 1,853, this class outnumbering any other. The next largest number was "mothers helpers," 210. Of teachers there were 140 who registered; this takes in both those in active service and those no longer teaching. Housekeepers doing Red Cross and allied work or offering service in this class of work, 1,078; housekeepers not offering service of any kind, 775; housekeepers offering other service, 50; trained persons, 428; trained persons doing or offering Red Cross work, 313; trained in more than one occupation, 27; those wanting training, 188; those offering service in other than Red Cross work, 257; trained in surgical dressing, 10; trained in dietetics, 1; trained in first aid, 1; doing general Red Cross work, 426; working on garments, 82; doing surgical dressing, 43; knitting for Red Cross, 143; sewing for Red Cross, 72; willing to do Red Cross emergency, 28.

Tippecanoe County.—Hearty indorsement of the plan of the Tippecanoe County Council of Defense for raising war funds by taxation has been given by the Randolph Township Council of Defense, following a similar action by the Tippecanoe Township council. In approving the new plan the Tippecanoe Township council decided this was the most equitable way of handling the matter inasmuch as it relieves patriotic workers of much unnecessary work....The Tippecanoe County civil council has appropriated $125,000 from which to take care of the county's quota of all war benevolences. The action was taken on recommendation of the county council of defense.

Vigo County.—Charles Figg, proprietor of a hotel at Terre Haute, was found to have violated the food rules by serving too much bread. He was permitted to contribute $50 to the war chest fund....C. A. Hecklesberg, a grocer, admitted having violated the food regulations by selling sugar at 10 cents per pound. He, too, was permitted to contribute $50 to the war chest fund as a penalty. The action was taken by John F. Ahlgren, who has resigned as federal food administrator for Vigo County after a splendid record. He took the step because of his health and the increasing burden of the work.

Warrick County.—The Warrick County Council of Defense has appointed the following men as chairmen of the township council councils of defense: S. D. Purdue, chairman of Ohio Township; V. H. Watson, Anderson; Levi Barker, Skelton; L. W. Robinson, Pigeon; George V. Foster, Owen; Charles Dugan, Lane; I. D. Hart, Hart; J. V. Miller, Greer; Edgar Moyer, Campbell; W. L. Maris, Boon. Meetings were held in each township for the organization and instruction of the duties of the members.

Wells County.—The county council of defense will assist in the defense of a suit brought against the city of Bluffton and the war garden promoters by H. C. Arnold for alleged damage to his lots, which were used for patriotic purposes during the summer. Mayor Hunter has instructed the city attorney to fight the case to the limit.

White County.—The White County Council of Defense directed that beginning Sunday, August 11th, and continuing thereafter for every day until the close of the war, at 8:00 p. m. all business shall be suspended for one minute for prayer for the success of the allied arms and for protection to our boys over there. The council recommended that each town adopt its own signal for notifying the public of the moment of prayer. This custom is being followed in many places.

Whitley County.—Arrangements have been made for an increase in the wheat acreage in Whitley County totaling 5,082 acres. This is more than double the increased allotment originally contemplated. Whitley claims the distinction of being the first county in the State to "go over the top" on its wheat acreage quota. Whitley County registrants have assumed responsibility for seeing that every farmer fulfills his part of the agreement. The use of fertilizer and tested seed is being advocated also by this organization. It is believed that Whitley County will have the largest pro rata increase in wheat acreage of any county in the State, this in spite of the fact that the ground has been so dry and hard that plowing was delayed discouragingly.

Red Cross Activities

The following is authorized by the Red Cross War Council:

The War Council of the American Red Cross has planned to issue a series of reports to the American people concerning the use of the first Red Cross War Fund of $100,000,000 and the plans so far perfected for future work.

The first section of these reports issued today covers the work of the Red Cross in caring for the families at home of America's men in militant service. The report on this subject is as follows:

More than 300,000 families of American men in service have been relieved of money troubles, legal difficulties, family worries or of depressing loneliness by the Home Service of the Red Cross. This branch of Red Cross activity has 50,000 men and women serving on its 10,000 Home Service committees. It has reached into remote communities where there had never been organized social effort before. It has established the closest cooperation in the larger centers of population with the organized agencies of public welfare. It is spreading a doctrine of intelligent substantial neighborliness on behalf of the fighters' families and backing it with an expenditure of over $400,000 a month.

These expenditures have been made out of money raised in the communities themselves and reserved from the amount contributed to the National Red Cross war fund. The direction of each town and county's Home Service work is left to local committees. National headquarters is seeking only to guide and aid in organizing the neighborliness of each town for its own men in khaki.

More than 1,000,000 people have been helped by these local committees since the war began. Money has been, certainly, the least valuable contribution of Home Service to the welfare of communities since men began to go into training camps, but it amounted to $1,500,000 for the first six months of the present year and will probably exceed $4,000,000 for the second half of the year. By January 1, 1919, Red Cross will have spent in Home Service work a total of $6,000,000 and will then be carrying a burden, probably, of nearly $1,000,000 a month.

More important than money are the other kinds of help that are being freely given. Problems in soldiers' and sailors' families have arisen from sickness, worry, backward or unruly children, perplexities in household management, business and legal tangles, mental depression and sometimes mere longing for the man gone away. These things keep soldiers' families from happiness sometimes when there is no actual pressing need for funds and Home Service committees, by enlisting the aid of physicians, lawyers, business men, successful housekeepers and teachers, have successfully aided thousands of families to overcome such troubles.

Difficulties arise out of the failure of some dependents to receive their allowances or allotments under the War Risk Insurance law. At least 60,000 inquiries concerning such payments were received by the Red Cross through Home Service committees during the month of July and more than a third of those were taken clear through to headquarters by the information service in the effort to get matters straightened out.

Men in camps in this country or on the firing line in Europe are in touch practically all the time with Red Cross field workers who can, in response to an appeal, get word to the Home Service committee in the fighter's home town. The importance of this in keeping up the morale of men abroad has been spoken of again and again by officers in France. A worried soldier is not a good soldier, and the Red Cross is saving soldiers from unhappiness by taking care of their families and then seeing to it that the soldiers are informed that things are right.

Twenty or more inquiries after the welfare of soldiers' families are sent over from the army in France every day by cable and 100 more come in the daily mail to national headquarters. If conditions are such that a satisfactory answer cannot be sent, the Red Cross Home Service committee makes them as near right as possible and then sends its reassurance of further help and watchfulness.

The work of the Home Service Section as organized in France is under the supervision of R. G. Hutchins, Jr., vice-president of the Bank of Commerce of New York City. A letter from Mr. Hutchins, written in France, and just received, contains the following:

"You cannot realize the value of service that comes through my hands in what is called 'Home Service.' A girl writes that her young man came over a year ago from Canada, leaving with her an engagement ring, and she has not heard from him. She does not know the name or number of his regiment. A man sends me all the correspondence regarding a mortgage that is to be foreclosed on his home in Louisville. A boy writes that he has had a letter from his sister saying his father in Oklahoma cannot live three weeks, because of a cancer, and wants a cable sent to inquire. A boy says his wife or mother writes him that they are needy, because no money from his allotment and allowance has come to them since last October. An officer in a hospital asks to have his trunk, which is lost, found. A boy is found in a hospital who will soon be able to return to the front, and it develops that a New York newspaper reported two weeks ago that he was dead."

As a further contribution to the morale of the American armies, Home Service workers are carrying on a nation-wide campaign to encourage the writing of cheerful letters, in order that soldiers shall not be alarmed about their loved ones left behind.

To supervise all work an executive staff of 250 has been created covering all division headquarters in the United States. In addition 2,000 young men and women are serving as full-time secretaries—often as volunteers—for local committees.

Several thousand persons have attended training courses and lecture courses in order to fit themselves to do intelligent Home Service work and 1,000 have been graduated from more complete courses entitling them to certificates as qualified, to be secretaries of Home Service committees.

Plans for the future contemplate the development of this program intensively. It is already possible to say that there is practically not a soldier in the American army nor the family of a soldier out of reach of a helpful and sympathetic Home Service worker and as the army grows to 5,000,000 men the plans, now fully organized, can be strengthened to bear the greater burden.

The purpose of Home Service, sanctioned by the army and navy and by President Wilson, are to conserve human resources in fighters' families, to relieve emergencies, to supplement government provision for dependents, to aid disabled soldiers, to supply information of any kind to men in service or to their families, to help families to keep pace with fighters who are getting a broader outlook on life, and to help maintain the morale of our army and navy by safeguarding homes. Home Service has enlisted help from all creeds and races and is extending its aid to every person who will accept it regardless of rank, religion, or color. It is not charity, but only that neighborliness which is due every fighter from the people of the whole United States.

In number of Red Cross nurses actually enrolled with the American Red Cross since the United States entered the war, the Lake Division, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky Division, has secured 43 per cent of its allotment—1,205—with 1,543 more needed to make up the total originally asked.

When Will It End?

I'll tell you when it will end. It will end when the men who trampled down Belgium and France, who murdered people like cattle, who ruined the fruit trees and burned their homes—it will end when those men feel the grip of the world at their throats. It will end when the ## Men, Be Ready to Register!

Now that the Nation is about to call upon thirteen millions of her men to enroll upon the register of fighting man power, so that some two millions or more of them may be selected for active service, it is of the first importance that these men—all within the ages of 18 and 45 who have not already done so—be inspired to come forward voluntarily and gladly to fulfill their duty to the Nation by registering themselves.

With the certainty that you will be found ready and willing, I call upon you to stimulate this sense of duty and to inspire every other man between those ages to come forward on that day, September 12, and register.

Wars are fought with men and munitions, but the spiritual forces must set in motion the physical forces. Inspired conviction of the truth and justice of the ideals for which the army stands should permeate our ranks with unanimous devotion.

The time to inculcate such conviction is before the men are enrolled, so that it may inspire and help them also through the period of training preparatory to action, and bring them into battle strong and resolute.

E. H. CROWDER,
Provost Marshal General.

crowd who started this war of lust and loot are in full retreat, when Willie down at Verdun is shouting to papa at Berlin, "Come, for God's sake!" and papa at Berlin is screaming to Willie at Verdun, "Run, for God's sake!" It will end with the siege of the Rhine.

That's when it will end if it's left to us fellows who are going over. We're ready to stand in ice water up to our waists, to live with rats in a rain of German shells, to go over the top and be finished. Nobody need worry about our boys over there. But how about the bunch left over here—the crowd that wants to know how soon it will end? Are they going to queer us? Will they fall for the German tricks? Will the pacifists turn their blood to water? Only one thing can do for us, and that isn't the German army. It's our own people at home. Maybe some guy in Terre Haute will get tired putting 3-cent stamps on his letters. Maybe some fellow in Cleveland will get sick of the graham bread. Maybe some fat little soul in Denver will get to worrying about his profits. And they'll come together and decide that it's no use fighting it to a finish—and where will we be? Done for, licked, finished; thousands of dead for nothing—all because the people at home hadn't the grit to stick it out—Colliers.

U. S. Employment Service

The United States Employment Service, Department of Labor, authorizes the publication of the following:

MR. ARTHUR H. FLEMING, Chief, State Councils Section, Council of National Defense, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir—Tabulations of the U. S. Employment Service show that the nation faces a shortage of approximately one million unskilled laborers in war industries, and an equally serious shortage in the skilled trades. The situation will become even more critical with the increase of our armies.

As a result of this shortage, the U. S. Employment Service is faced with the necessity of combing the country for literally every laborer available. These men must come from nonessential industries in order to supply labor to the manufacturers of war materials, and to the mines, farms, shipyards and railroads—this for the reason that the reservoir of available unemployed is practically exhausted.

You are aware of the fact that the Community Labor Boards are now seeking to draw men from less essential industries in order to fill vacancies in essential groups, and are also aware of the fact that the War Industries Board is making rigorous rulings against supplying certain non-essential plants with raw materials.

War industries must have the men they need at any cost, even though nonessential business has to close down. Non-war employers must be shown in an unmistakable manner that they are faced with the paramount necessity for giving up men required for war work, and public opinion must force the release of workers where employers place their own selfish interests above the needs of the nation. Every man not engaged in a task vitally connected with the war must realize that the nation faces a serious alternative: either we must make war the whole business of the nation, disregarding everything not essential to the life and war-making power of our country, or our soldiers will be imperilled for lack of equipment. What we delay to contribute in shells, we shall have to make good in lives of our young men.

The work of the Community Labor Boards undoubtedly will meet with some opposition, particularly in their decisions as to what local industries shall be called upon to contribute men for war work. There will undoubtedly be certain employers who will prove recalcitrant and either through ignorance or selfishness refuse to respond to calls made upon them. It should then be the duty of the entire community to exert the full force of public opinion upon any such employer.

For this reason we are taking the liberty of asking that you, through the various state, county and community Councils of Defense, lay this matter before the nation.

We would suggest that, among other things, the various councils be asked to approach the banks of their communities and ask that they scrutinize carefully any application for loans which would provide funds with which nonessential industries could, during this war emergency, divert necessary labor from necessary plants for nonessential work.

We would also ask that your various councils take up with the several state, county and municipal authorities the question of postponing any unnecessary work in order that men employed or to be employed thereon may be released for war service. There are instances all over the country where public work is being carried on which might be postponed, and there are, on the public payrolls, in parks, in streets, in public buildings and in numerous other places, a large number of men who should be released for essential employment.

In a word we would ask that your various organizations give their full support to the Community Labor Boards and to the U. S. Employment Service, to the end that there may be built up a spirit in this nation which will make it impossible for any nonessential industry or group of industries to fail to comply fully and freely with the various appeals of the several Community Labor Boards in their efforts to secure men from less essential industries.

Will you not, therefore, lay this problem before your state, county and community Councils of Defense, so that these organizations may understand the problem fully, and take the proper steps to aid this service in supplying the labor needs of this nation?

Yours respectfully,

(Signed) N. A. SMYTH,
Assistant Director-General,
U. S. Employment Service.

Purpose of Bureau To Mobilize Opinion

Records Show Many Addresses by Eloquent Speakers Have Been Made in Indiana.

The Speakers Bureau, Indiana State Council of Defense, authorizes the following:

The purpose of the Speakers Bureau is to mobilize public opinion of and stimulate patriotic service by the people of Indiana. It endeavors to do this by increasing the interest of the citizens in the appeals of the Government, both Federal and State, and by official and semi-official organizations for support of specific war service.

In order to accomplish this work the bureau has enrolled about 400 speakers on the recommendation of the various county councils of defense and other organizations. These men have contributed liberally of their time and in some instances their money in the common cause in which our people are now most vitally interested.

Since the establishment of the bureau in the summer of 1917, approximately 300 speakers have been used, 1,588 engagements have been filled, and approximately 1,000,000 people, including repetitions, have been addressed.

Valuable assistance has been given our Speakers Bureau by the Speaking Division of the Committee on Public Information at Washington, as the accompanying report will show. Of the total number of out of state speakers used during the operation of the bureau, 21 have come from the Committee on Public Information. Most of the speakers thus secured have been of the type best fitted to do excellent work. They come from a selected group of speakers and most of them have had unusual advantages for the observation of war conditions in Europe.

We have co-operated with the organizations engaged in the following campaigns: Liberty Loan, War Savings Stamps, Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., K. of C., War Community Service, Jewish Relief Society, Liberty Guards, War Chest, Friends of German Democracy and other patriotic institutions including many which are local in character.

The bureau has furnished speakers for county councils of defense, chambers of commerce, lodges, four minute men, clubs, churches, schools, fraternities, fairs, county institutes, labor unions, factory patriotic clubs and many other organizations that are aiding in the successful prosecution of the war.

The Speakers Bureau is financed jointly by the Extension Division of Indiana University and the State Council of Defense. The university supplies the entire personnel of the office and the council pays all telephone, telegraph, postage and traveling expenses, incident to the work. The State Normal School furnished a field man for some very important organization work among the high schools of the State during January, February and March. All the other educational institutions of Indiana have contributed valuable speakers for the various campaigns that have been so successful in Indiana since the opening of the war.

The Speakers Bureau is prepared to continue and extend its service for the people of the State and solicits the co-operation of county councils of defense and all other organizations, whether official or private, in its effort to mobilize public opinion, for the unity of purpose and effort in the present crisis.

Report of the Speakers Bureau to September 1, 1918:

Month	Number of out of state speakers used	Total number of speakers used	Number of engagements filled

Sept. 1, 1917			70
September ...		15	15
October .....		70	64
November ..... 2		45	40
December .... 3		70	68
January ..... 16		60	82
February ..... 19		95	118
March ..... 8		196	146
April ..... 6		172	355
May ..... 15		100	262
June ..... 7		85	88

July .....	8	112	110
August .....	15	183	170

Total number engagements filled ... 1,588
Approximate number of addresses made 3,000
Number of State speakers on list ..... 400
Number of out of State speakers used... 60

The number of addresses made exceeds the number of engagements filled because the engagements are listed singly by the names of the towns which held patriotic meetings. Very often during the county war conferences five or six speakers made one or more addresses apiece in the same locality.

The Speakers Bureau has actively co-operated with other patriotic organizations in the various campaigns for funds such as the Liberty Loan, Red Cross, War Stamp campaigns, etc., and expects to co-operate even more fully hereafter.

During October, 1917, about 20 engagements were filled in connection with the Liberty Loan drive.

During January and February county war conferences were held in 80 counties and special meetings similar to these in at least 10 cities and towns. For these meetings the Speakers Bureau supplied from three to six speakers. The Committee on Public Information, the Federal Food Administration, the American Red Cross, the War Savings Stamp Committee, the Y. M. C. A., the Woman's Section of the State Council and one or two other organizations supplied speakers to the bureau for this work.

In March 18 community war conferences were held at which 68 speakers were used.

In April the week from the 22d to the 26th was designated as Education Week and 45 speakers visited 250 schools in the State to emphasize the importance of education.

In May during the Red Cross campaign speakers supplied by our bureau in co-operation with the Red Cross, Lake Division, and the Committee on Public Information, sent speakers to 151 towns where they made 224 addresses.

Powell Compliments Educational Program

President of Hobart College Tells What He Has Observed in His Addresses in Indiana.

Complimenting the efforts being made by Indiana defense workers generally, Dr. Lyman A. Powell, president of Hobart College, who has been making patriotic addresses in the state, at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, September 3, took occasion to pay a special tribute to the educational program that has been promulgated and is being carried out with splendid effectiveness, he said, in every community he has visited in the state. Dr. Powell said he had been talking to teachers' institutes and had observed therein proof of the fact that Indiana is setting a standard for patriotic education, inspiration and stimulation in such fashion that he took considerable pride in the fact that his friends "at home" are beginning to refer to him as a "Hoosier," due to his advocacy of the practices and policies in vogue in Indiana.

The council, upon motion of the Rev. Allen B. Philpott, unanimously adopted the following resolution of sympathy for Governor James P. Goodrich, now confined to a hospital because of an accident:

Resolved, That the members of the State Council of Defense have heard with profound regret of the accident which befell James P. Goodrich, Governor of the state, last Wednesday night, and that we extend to him our deepest sympathy in this misfortune, and express our wish for his speedy and complete recovery.

Meade A. Kelsey, secretary of the Armenian and Syrian relief committee, requested the approval of the council for a state-wide campaign in Indiana for $629,073, the state's allotment of the fund which is necessary, Mr. Kelsey said, to assist in the restoration of these devastated countries. He added:

"I do not believe it is the purpose of the entente allies or of the American government that there shall remain at the conclusion of this war anything of the Turkish government in Europe, as at present constituted."

The council reiterated its action of March, 1918, in approving the plan for a fund campaign for the purpose represented by Mr. Kelsey.

Charles A. Butler of Huntington, Ind., asked the council for approval of a proposed sale of $300,000 worth of bonds for the Little River drainage improvement in Huntington and Allen counties. He said 300,000 acres of land are affected and that 25,000 acres will be reclaimed for tilling next year. The council referred the matter to the Committee on Proposed Construction for a report to the next meeting.

In behalf of the Committee on Proposed Construction, of which a quorum was not present, Charles Fox moved that the council "do not disapprove the action of the Tipton County Council of Defense, which by a majority vote ruled against the construction of a $15,000 elevator at Windfall. Mr. Fox also moved that the council "do not disapprove" the action of the Elkhart County council in declaring against the proposed expenditure of $50,000 for the improvement of West Lexington avenue in the city of Elkhart. Both motions carried. Following up the second motion, A. E. Reynolds moved that the chairman be authorized to exercise all available power to back up the Elkhart County Council of Defense in its efforts to secure the postponement of the street improvement. The motion carried.

Dr. Frederick Henshaw, in announcing his enlistment in the Dental Reserve Corps and his withdrawal from active participation in the affairs of the council, bespoke "a hope for a continuation of the activities of the council, which have served to make Indiana absolutely first in war work."

At the suggestion of J. L. Keach, the Committee on Proposed Construction was authorized to investigate the reported plan to spend $178,000 for the improvement of a road in Marion County and to confer with the Marion County Council of Defense. The same committee was authorized to prepare a further resolution setting out to county councils the importance of considering the question of the conservation of man-power, capital and materials in connection with all road projects before giving indorsement to any.

On motion of Mr. Fox a letter from the Terre Haute Trades Council, expressing appreciation of the action of the state council in effecting a mediation in the labor dispute at the Standard Wheel Works plant in Terre Haute, was read into the permanent records.

Mr. Fox also moved that the woman's section be requested to compile figures showing the extent to which women are engaged in industry in Indiana, and particularly how extensive they are employed in war work. The motion carried.

Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle in a written communication called the attention of the council to the growing importance of the motor corps that is being organized by the women of the state, and she recommended that it be recognized as a part of the defense activity. The council approved of her suggestion by motion and the motor corps will be so recognized.

A. E. Reynolds called attention to the proclamation of President Wilson, fixing a 1919 price for wheat the same as obtained in 1918, with a proviso that there may be modifications with the further determination of the harvest and the world's supply.

Upon motion the chairman was authorized to ask Indiana colleges what facilities they have extended for the use of soldiers in vocational training.

Mr. Murdock, referring to the report of the committee named to make an inquiry at Purdue, said:

"This committee at the time it made the report reported that they found all the statements made of these things not being tendered to the boys as being correct. But we find this has been twisted and the statement has been sent out to the trustees that the committee approved of all they found at Purdue. I am speaking only for the three members. They found they did not have these things. Since there has been a contract made with the government, in a measure that is satisfactory."

Champion Egg Producer

PURDUE'S JOAN OF ARC.

Purdue's Joan of Arc, an unassuming little White Leghorn hen, on the Purdue farm at Lafayette, is the champion of the world for egg production, and is entitled to belt, crown, or scepter, whatever champion chickens get for such honors. August 21st she laid her one thousandth egg, setting the pace for all the rest of the chickens of all breeds. For many weeks of her seven years of activity, she has worked seven days straight, and is an Indiana patriot about which members of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation like to hear. She was shown at the State Fair.

A little glance at the figures year by year, tells how it was done: Fall of 1911 to 1912, 147; 1912-13, 162; 1913-14, 119; 1914-15, 185; 1915-16, 160; 1916-17, 127; 1917-18, 100; until Aug. 21. When her fiscal year ends she will have gone considerably over the thousand mark, as she has laid eight eggs since then.

Food Administration

Retailers, distributors or consumers who may have on hand a flour containing twenty per cent or more of substitutes for wheat flour may distribute the same without the addition of the additional twenty per cent of substitute flours. Where any mixed flour contains less than twenty per cent of cereals other than wheat it is the order of the food administration that one pound of substitutes be sold and used with each four pounds of wheat flour. Pancake and self-rising flours containing substitutes may be manufactured after September 1 only upon special permit from the food administration at Washington, and after a permit has been obtained such pancake flour may be sold without substitutes, provided it contains twenty per cent or more of substitutes other than rye. Manufacturers of Victory mixed flours must take out internal revenue licenses as heretofore. The milling section of the food administration will continue to inspect mills to see that the proper percentage of substitutes is maintained in the new flour.

Outstanding sugar certificates expire September 30, and to make sure of a proper, prompt and equitable distribution for the succeeding quarter new statements must be filed by all users in Classes C, D and E, which includes hotels, restaurants and public eating houses, bakers, and retail stores.

Changes in corn milling grades, affecting grits, cream meal, corn flour, pearl meal and common corn meals, are effective at once. The housewife may thus be sure, when purchasing, that she will always get the same grade under the same designation. The new grades will permit grits, cream meal and corn flour to have a moisture content of from 12½ per cent to 13½ per cent. Fat content may range from 1½ per cent to 2½ per cent, instead of being limited rigidly to 1½ per cent. In any case, the sum-total of the two must not exceed 15 per cent. Standard, bolted and plain or water-ground common corn meal, when shipped in interstate traffic, must not contain more than 12 per cent of moisture. It is to be unrestricted as to moisture or fat content if for local distribution. Pearl meal standards for moisture and fat, respectively, are now 12 and 3 per cent, whether domestic or export. The figures were formerly 11 per cent for moisture and 3 per cent for fat.

No extra allowances of sugar for the purpose of wine making, even for sacramental purposes, will be permitted by the sugar division of the United States food administration for Indiana. Neither will individuals be privileged to buy extra amounts, as for canning, in order to make wine. Edward H. Stein, federal food administrator for Greene County, was advised that in all cases where it is desired to make wine for sacramental or religious purposes, the pastors are to be instructed to solicit contributions of sugar from members of their congregations, to be taken from their own home tables.

Food Scarce in Austria.

The scarcity of food in Austria is revealed by the columns of "Want Ads" in Austrian newspapers. Valuable art objects, furniture, jewelry, clothing and articles of all kinds were offered in exchange for food. Here are a few of the advertisements appearing in Trieste newspapers that are typical of those in all the Austrian papers:

"Iron bed, pair of black trousers and coat offered in exchange for foodstuffs."

"New novels, large selection, in exchange for five pounds of food."

"Finest stockings, lady's colored, in exchange for sugar or fats."

"Linen sheet wanted to make into a dress, for cash or maize meal."

"Yellow canary in exchange for a rabbit; Japanese vases for fats or beans."

"A business suit offered in exchange for one pound of fat."

"Two and one-fifth pounds of unroasted coffee offered for a single bed and mattress complete."

Utilities' Extensions Must Be Postponed

Capital Issues Committee Indicates Policy for Guidance of State Boards.

WASHINGTON.—Every extension of a street car line, electric lighting system, water main, street paving or other public utilities enterprise not absolutely essential to the war should be postponed until peace times, said the government's capital issues committee in a letter sent to all state public utility commissions. These state bodies were urged not only to frown on additions and betterments requiring capital expenditures, but also to remove from public service corporations, if possible, the necessity of carrying out contract or franchise obligations which might be dispensed with in the war emergency.

The letter was the first of several planned by the capital issues committee, in co-operation with the treasury and other financial agencies, to draw tighter the nation's purse strings and prevent by a voluntary, though effective, method of supervision the dissipating of capital in less essential enterprises.

"If the men, money and material which the government needs are to be made available for essential war purposes," wrote the committee to the state commission, "there must necessarily be a considerable degree of sacrifice on the part of individuals, communities and corporations in adjusting themselves to the substitutions and changed standards which the situation compels. Existing facilities must be made to serve in place of new ones, regardless of temporary inconveniences and discomfort, unless the public health or paramount local economic necessity is involved.

"May we suggest to you that these considerations apply with marked force to the public utilities situation. The extensions and betterments which public service corporations are requested to make in normal times, either on the initiative of their own or by direction of the regulating commissions under which they operate, should, in our opinion, be postponed until after the war, unless an immediate war purpose is served, and may we ask of you consideration of the propriety of deferring even the performance of contractual obligations arising from franchise or other local requirements, when no military or local economic necessity is served by such expenditures?"

The suggestion of the committee, which consists of seven members with Charles S. Hamlin, member of the federal reserve board, as chairman, carries special weight in view of the committee's power to supervise applications for issuance of stocks, bonds or other securities for capital purposes, and to withhold its approval if it deems the project nonessential to the war. Recent developments have shown that most bank-organized investors decline to buy securities not approved by the committee.

By forbidding manufacturers to supply materials for any road building or street improvement project without its approval after September 10, the federal highways council virtually will assume control of such work after that date.

Helps in Using Substitute Foods

This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration, and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE SCHOOL LUNCH.

Now that the time for school to open has arrived, the question of the school lunch becomes an every-day problem for many housekeepers. The lunch must be attractive, palatable and nutritious and must be varied from day to day. The equipment for packing the proper kind of school lunch should consist of a box or bucket of tin or aluminum with a tight fitting lid—one with a thermos bottle is excellent put expensive—oil paper, paper napkins, some glasses or cups with tight fitting lids, spoons and forks.

When making sandwiches, cut the bread thin—nothing is more unattractive to a child than thick slices of bread with a thin layer of filling. Wrap the sandwiches in oil paper.

Do not add too many "sweets" to the lunch, such as cake, cookies or candy. The menu should consist largely of sandwiches, puddings and fruit, with a few simple cookies or cake or possibly candy. Milk should be included in the lunch for the younger child. Pie should only be used occasionally and then only for the boy or girl in high school.

A lunch is attractive when it is neatly packed, so arranged that things do not spill and so that the box does not look crowded.

The following recipes may suggest new dishes that can be used in the lunch:

Oat Raisin Bread.

1 cup syrup.	2½ cups rolled oats.
1 cup fat.	Put through meat grinder.
1 egg.	1 teaspoon salt.
1 cup milk.	4 level teaspoons baking powder.
1 cup raisins, chopped.

Mix ingredients by beating egg, adding milk, syrup and salt. Add rolled oats, raisins and melted fat. Lastly add baking powder. Beat well. Bake in moderate oven one hour. Good either cold or warm.

Boston Brown Bread.

1 cup rye meal.	1 teaspoon salt.
1 cup corn meal.	½ cup molasses.
1 cup bran.	2 cups sour milk.
1½ tablespoon soda.

Mix and sift dry ingredients, add molasses and milk, stir until well mixed, turn into a well-buttered mold and steam 3½ hours.

Rolls Oats Crackers.

2 cups rolled oats.	1 teaspoon salt.
3 teaspoons fat.	1 cup water.

Put rolled oats through meat grinder. Mix as biscuit dough. Roll out one-sixteenth of an inch thick. Bake 15 minutes in moderate oven.

Cocoanut Drop Cookies.

1 cup fat.	1 teaspoon salt.
1 cup corn syrup.	1 cup buckwheat flour.
1 cup sour milk.	1 cup corn flour.
1 teaspoon soda.	1 cup cocoanut.
1 teaspoon baking powder.	1 teaspoon vanilla.

Cream the fat, add the syrup, and then the milk and the sifted dry ingredients. Add the cocoanut and the vanilla last. Let the mixture stand for 20 minutes before baking, since it thickens on standing. Drop it by spoonfuls on a greased tin. Bake the cookies in a rather quick oven until they are a light brown.

Molasses Cakes.

1 tablespoon fat.	1 teaspoon allspice.
1 tablespoon sugar.	1 tablespoon vinegar.
1 cup corn syrup.	1 tablespoon hot water.
1 cup rye flour.	Salt.

Mix in usual way.

Junket.

3 cups whole milk.	1 tablespoon cold water.
1 cup corn syrup.
1 junket tablet.	1 teaspoon vanilla.

Heat the milk and the corn syrup in the double boiler, stirring constantly until it is warm. Crush the junket tablet and dissolve in the cold water; add this with the vanilla to the milk; stir the mixture quickly to mix it thoroughly. Pour into molds or cups. Let stand in a warm place until it is firm; then chill it. Sprinkle top with a mixture of two parts maple sugar and one of cinnamon.

Baked Rice and Apples.

Remove the cores from rather tart apples. Place apples on a layer of boiled rice about one inch thick in a greased baking dish. Fill the cavity of each apple with rice, add one teaspoon of butter and one tablespoon of corn syrup for each apple. A little nutmeg or other flavoring. Cover the dish and bake the pudding slowly until the apples are thoroughly cooked.

Food Clubs' Position That of Mother in the Home

By M. E. FOLEY,
Chairman Indiana State Council of Defense.

To my mind the place of the U. S. food clubs in our American war organization is similar to that of the mother in the home. It is always mother's business to look after the kitchen, and more particularly the food cellar. It is and always has been mother's special and peculiar privilege to see to it that her boy has all the food he wants and has it whenever he wants it. I can imagine no family duty that affords her greater pleasure, that more nearly represents her indispensable place in the home.

In the present world situation the American mother must serve as the mother for not only her own boy, but of the sons of other lands less fortunate in the matter of parentage and food supply. She represents and controls the opportunity for the most important service her sex can render not even excepting that of nursing the wounded. This the army recognizes and appreciates. Food is the first essential for an effective fighter, and, except that the American mother save and economize persistently and systematically, the boys can not be fed. America is not only the sole surviving producing nation, so far as foodstuff is concerned, she is the one hope of the world in the measure of her sharing.

I can think of no more patriotic work, no more natural duty than that the home makers of this country, of Indiana, should unite in the common purpose of co-operating to make wholesome, nourishing food, in sufficient quantity to sustain them, just as they were assured of anything and everything—if they wanted it—that the family larder contained, while at home.

Of course, more effective work can be done by collective action. An exchange of ideas is always valuable. Inspiration is afforded by mutual help such as is available only through organization. There are more unanswerable arguments and reasons why a mother whose son is in the service should join the food club movement, than in support of any other action she might take in a desire to help win the war. The same reasons are just as potent in reference to all other mothers and housewives who, in the conservation of food, find a direct responsibility and an easy duty. The U. S. food clubs have my heartiest endorsement and best wishes in carrying on their work.

Food Production Congress.

More than 6,000 farmers from northeastern Indiana gathered at Kendallville, August 22nd, and held a big food production conference arranged by agricultural agents from nine counties in that section of the State. Word reaching the State Committee on Food Production and Conservation told how solidly these men were behind every project to increase production and they showed it by the way they turned out for the Kendallville meeting.

The program began in the morning with talks and demonstrations by men from the extension department of Purdue university, who showed models of self-feeders for hogs, and other ways of meeting the high priced feed situation; who demonstrated how to treat wheat to prevent stinking smut, and various phases of improved farming. Home demonstration agents and women from the home economics department of Purdue were there in force and showed wheatless and sugarless bits of pastry, bread, etc.

The afternoon was given over to a number of patriotic addresses, on the program being former Governor Ferris of Michigan; Harry H. Hilgemann, of Fort Wayne; A. M. Groves, of Fort Wayne; C. Henry, Purdue University, assistant county agent leader, who spoke on "Efficiency on the Farm," and Capt. Staton, of the Canadian Army.

You can't eat your sugar and give it to the soldiers, too.

When it comes to winning the war sugar is a less-essential. So less talk.

The American Peace

In a Great Message Delivered to Congress on January 8th, President Wilson Presented the Following As Necessary Elements of World Peace

I. Open covenants of peace without private international understandings.

II. Absolute freedom of the seas in peace or war except as they may be closed by international action.

III. Removal of all economic barriers and establishment of equality of trade conditions among nations, consenting to peace and associating themselves for its maintenance.

IV. Guarantees for the reduction of national armaments to the lowest point consistent with domestic safety.

V. Impartial adjustment of all colonial claims based upon the principle that the peoples concerned have equal weight with the interest of the government.

VI. Evacuation of all Russian territory and opportunity for Russia's political development.

VII. Evacuation of Belgium without any attempt to limit her sovereignty.

VIII. All French territory to be freed and restored, and reparation for the taking of Alsace-Lorraine.

IX. Readjustment of Italy's frontiers along clearly recognizable lines of nationality.

X. Freest opportunity for autonomous development of the peoples of Austria-Hungary.

XI. Evacuation of Roumania, Serbia and Montenegro, with access to the sea for Serbia, and international guarantees of economic and political independence and territorial integrity of the Balkan states.

XII. Secure sovereignty for Turkey's portion of the Ottoman empire, but with other nationalities under Turkish rule assured security of life and opportunity for autonomous development, with the Dardanelles permanently opened to all nations.

XIII. Establishment of an independent Polish state, including territories inhabited by indisputably Polish populations with free access to the sea and political and economic independence and territorial integrity guaranteed by international covenant.

XIV. General association of nations under specific covenants for mutual guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity to large and small states alike.

When Is a Child Healthy?

By Mrs. Max West.

This is the nineteenth of a series of weekly articles on How Mothers Can Help in Children's Year.

How mothers may add to their patriotic service by presenting their children to public school in good health.

The weighing and measuring test conducted by the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor and the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense revealed to many parents the fact that their children were suffering from hitherto undiscovered defects of the sort liable to cause much trouble in the future. Such defects undoubtedly exist in many children, unknown to the parents. A child may have faulty teeth, weak eyes, or defective ears, "bad" tonsils or adenoids, without being actually ill. Yet such defects should be remedied in order to make sure that he may, in the future, be able to live and work efficiently and happily. Attention to the child's health in general is so necessary to his future well-being that parents should regard it as a grave responsibility to keep him in good condition. Especially now, as the opening of the public schools draw near, mothers should make sure that they are sending their little ones to begin their lessons well equipped from the point of view of health.

A healthy child is happy; he has bright eyes, an expression of wide-awake enthusiasm; he is alert, eager for play and full of laughter. His posture is erect and upstanding; his skin is clear and smooth; his hair is abundant and glossy; his sleep is immediate and dreamless; and he is genuinely hungry at least three times a day. If a child manifests the opposite of these characteristics in a marked degree for considerable periods of time, there is very likely something not quite right in his daily care. The following health rules may help some mothers whose children seem not to be quite up to the mark in their general condition:

1. The growing child must have plenty of sleep. Up to six years he should sleep half the time—12 out of 24 hours. Part of this time may be included in the daytime nap.

2. His food should be plentiful and nutritious. Each child should have at least three pints of milk a day. Part of this may be in some other food, such as custard or ice cream. He should also have limited quantities of meat and plenty of eggs, cereals, vegetables and fruits.

3. He should have plenty of out-of-door play—not too much work, nor too long continued.

4. His clothing should be sufficient for comfort, clean and simple.

5. He should have a daily bath or rub-down and a cleansing bath with warm water and mild soap at least once a week and oftener, if possible.

6. His bowels should move freely at least once a day. If they do not his diet and exercise should be so regulated as to bring about that result.

7. He should be interested in life. Sullen, dull, or unhappy children are frequently suffering from the want of interest in life. Such a child should be watched to discover, if possible, what he does enjoy and where his natural interest lies; and it is then an easy task to stimulate his interest until his whole attitude is changed.

8. He should be taught simple lessons of personal hygiene: the use of individual towels, handkerchiefs, toilet articles; good care of teeth, nose, eyes, hands and feet.

9. He should be taught to believe that to be healthy is one of the finest possible achievements in the world, and the most patriotic.

Purdue Boys Make Good

Letters received at the office of the federal state director from farmers employing boys who completed the two weeks special training in agriculture at Purdue indicate that not a single boy has failed to make good. On the contrary the work performed has shown a marked improvement over that of the untrained boy. The following letters from J. T. Minch, a White County farmer, and Aaron Potter, one of the Purdue boys who worked for him, speak for themselves:

CHALMERS, IND., August 26, 1918.

I found Aaron Potter to be of good character, possessed of excellent habits, honest and upright in every particular, willing to learn and always ready to do his best.

(Signed) J. T. MINCH.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 26, 1918.

Dear Mr. Straus:

My work on the farm this summer has been the most enjoyable as well as beneficial I have ever experienced. It has determined me in the kind of work I will follow for my life work, namely agriculture. My work has consisted of making hay, thrashing cats and wheat, plowing and carpentering.

My employer, Mr. J. T. Minch, is the finest kind of a man, and on his farm of thirty-five hundred acres I have learned a great deal more than I ever expected to in such a short period of time. I have the greatest desire to get back on a farm now and I assure you that I will just as soon as I possibly can. I was paid at the rate of $30 per month and board, and gained sixteen pounds in weight. Thanking you for your interest in me, I remain, Yours truly, AARON POTTER.

Food Clubs Endure The Test of Time

By C. V. Stainsby, assistant to Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

The U. S. Food Clubs can endure the tests of the time. During the stress of war all our institutions are being judged by their natural relationship to the war program. Those things that definitely hinder our war activities are quickly put out of the way. The list of non-essential industries, that do not help is steadily being enlarged and more clearly defined. These industries are being either reformed or restricted. Public opinion is rapidly shaping itself to oppose any expenditure of energy or material except in the interest of winning the war. Individuals and communities that do not support the Government's war program soon feel the disapproval of their neighbors. Some of the questions that we are all being required to answer in justification of our right to citizenship in this democracy are as follows: Are you supporting the selective service law? Are you buying Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps? Are you contributing to the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., and similar movements? Are you saving fuel? Are you supporting the U. S. Food Administration to the limit of your ability? It is easier to be a food slacker than any other kind of slacker because food is handled within the privacy of the home. For the same reason the food patriot is the truest type of patriot. One may purchase a Liberty Bond for the sake of appearances. Those who observe the food rules at home do so because they are loyal U. S. citizens.

It is impossible to sum up the whole food situation in one or two sentences. There are many phases to it. To observe the regulations fully we must put ourselves in a position to receive regular information from official sources. The U. S. Food Clubs offer the best opportunity for this enlightenment. They are being organized so that the Food Administration can communicate directly with the homes. They bring the housewives together so that they may discuss their problems and exchange ideas. They render a definite contribution to our war program. They are first essentials. They need not apologize for their existence. They place a stamp of loyalty on the individual members and on the communities in which they are maintained. Join a U. S. Food Club in your neighborhood.

Canada has gone up one better on the sugar ration, and is down to one and one-half pounds a month.

Lincoln's Tribute to a War Mother.

Executive Mansion,
Washington, Nov. 21, 1864.

To Mrs. Bixby, Boston, Mass.:

Dear Madam—I have been shown in the files of the War Department a statement of the adjutant-general of Massachusetts that you are the mother of five sons who have died gloriously on the field of battle. I feel how weak and fruitless must be any word of mine which should attempt to beguile you from the grief of a loss so overwhelming. But I cannot refrain from tendering you the consolation that may be found in the thanks of the republic they died to save. I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement, and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom.

Yours very sincerely and respectfully,
A. LINCOLN.

To Select Seed Corn From Standing Stalks

Serves to Guarantee Mature Ears Free from Disease, Declares State Leader C. Henry.

The proper time to select seed corn is from the standing stalk as soon as the corn is mature, declares C. Henry, State leader of the seed corn campaign which is being waged now in Indiana under the auspices of the Committee on Food Production and Conservation. "In this way the earliest maturing seed may be selected, tending to make next year's crop earlier and more uniform in maturity.

"The height at which the ears are borne on the stalk bears a direct relation to the maturity, the higher ears being uniformly later. Diseases can be detected at this time and all ears from diseased stalks passed by. G. N. Hoffer, of Purdue university, has proved that most diseases are transmitted through the seed. Nubbins are largely a result of some form of disease. The characters of the stalk and ear should be judged together. This is impossible where crib selection is practiced."

The seed scarcity of last year made it necessary to import many varieties from other localities of Indiana or other States. Years of careful study and selection have established varieties suited to the five State corn districts. These varieties stood the test of years and proved their value. It may be that in some instances introduced varieties are worthy of adoption. Caution should be exercised even here, because one season's experience is insufficient upon which to base judgment. Exceptionally favorable weather prevailed this season; another season may not be so favorable.

Corn is made up of cellular tissue. Freezing bursts the cell walls of moist corn in the same way that freezing bursts earthenware vessels filled with water. Freezing will burst neither when dry. Hence, corn should be placed in an airy place, where there is no danger of freezing, until thoroughly dry. It should be so hung up or raked that no two ears touch, insuring a free circulation of air from all sides. Molds and rots will not develop where these conditions exist.

Farmers Increase Wheat Acreage.

More than half of the Indiana counties have reported "over the top" in the campaign to increase the wheat acreage this year, according to a statement made today to D. S. Myer, State leader of the wheat campaign. Farmers in the Indianapolis county agent district, which includes Marion, Hendricks, Hamilton, Hancock, Morgan, Johnson, Shelby, Rush, Bartholomew and Decatur counties, will sow 20 per cent more wheat this fall than last, Mr. Myer declared.

Randolph County farmers will increase their acreage upwards of 50 per cent, and Fountain County, which was given a quota of 13,000 acres, will be "over the top" when the returns of sowing are checked up, according to advices from Covington. The northwest section of the State, where large quantities of corn and oats are grown, is coming to the front with the wheat acreage this year, some of the counties showing increases as much as 100 per cent.

"The fixing of the price for the 1919 crop also will have its effect," said Mr. Myer. "The assurance that the old price will prevail gives the farmer a sound basis on which to figure and promises a profit for next year, providing he has any kind of crop."

Three men of the Purdue extension staff or from the Department of Agriculture have been busy in the State the last few weeks demonstrating the control of loose smut in wheat by the hot water method. This work has been done in 16 counties and will be taken up in 17 more before wheat sowing ends. Agricultural agents in the 75 counties having such men to head their food production work, have also given a number of demonstrations to show the control of stinking smut by use of formaldehyde.

As to Pleasure Motoring on Sundays.

The United States Fuel Administration finds that in regard to the conservation of gasoline many have understood that the plan of not driving pleasure automobiles on Sundays was an order instead of a request. It has been suggested that the result to be sought might better be gained by a card system or some other method of rationing gasoline. The answer to this is that in the time it would take to inaugurate a card system of rationing, the shortage should be overcome, particularly if there is heed to the calls of conservation with regard to waste, leaks, and the running of motors when not actually in operation. There is further answer that from European experience the machinery of administering a rationing system to three or four million automobile users is so large and so extremely expensive that it should not be undertaken until the need is extremely great.

The request for no Sunday driving was limited to the territory east of the Mississippi because the great bulk of the country's gasoline is obtained in the mid-continent fields, in Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana, while all oil and gasoline sent to the war zone is shipped from our Atlantic seaboard, and transportation is saved by conservation in the east.

People have asked whether they should use their cars for church-going. The answer is, according to the Fuel Administration, that where church can be reached reasonably in another way, the automobile should not be used and that, after all, the conscience of each citizen will be his best guide.

It has been reported that in a great many cases the proprietors of hotels and restaurants in outlying districts, and many operators of soda fountains in the cities, refused to serve pleasure-seeking customers who drove out in automobiles. Taxicab operators in most cities refused, last Sunday, to take passengers except on specific trips. They declined all hourly and pleasure trips. Patrons of sight-seeing cars have also been made to feel that by riding on Sunday they are violating the administration's request just as much as the man who drives his own car.

Welfare Workers Wanted.

The Publicity Bureau of the Indiana State Council of Defense has been requested to announce that the Jewish Welfare Board, working in the United States army and navy, wants "big men for home and overseas service." Men between 36 and 55 years of age, with a Jewish and secular education are preferred, but these qualifications are not essential. The board announces that it already has 200 welfare workers with the army and navy forces in training stations and "over there." The work of the board is recognized by the War Department, and has its full approval. The headquarters of the board are at 149 Fifth avenue, New York City, where information may be obtained relative to the service.

Farmers Assured of Fair Price for Wheat

Carl Sims Tells State Council of Possible
Difficulties in Maintaining $2.20
Per Bushel in 1919.

At the request of Chairman M. E. Foley, Carl Sims, head of the Grain and Milling Division of the Federal Food Administration for Indiana, explained to the Indiana State Council of Defense, at its meeting September 10, the situation in reference to the President's proclamation fixing a price of $2.20 per bushel for wheat. Mr. Sims said there is a "reasonable certainty" of the Indiana farmer receiving "around $2" for his 1919 harvest of wheat. He added that the President had announced his purpose to name an equalization board early in 1919, when the full reports of the crop are in, for the purpose of considering modifications of the wheat price proclamation. Mr. Sims referred to the possibilities of the war coming to an end with immense surpluses of wheat in this country, in Argentine and in Australia, and the difficulties the government might encounter in maintaining the price now fixed.

Isaac D. Straus asked the attention of the council to the suggestion that came from H. M. Wells, associate federal director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, that high school boys be given the opportunity to extend their productive work by adding to their vacation periods. Mr. Straus then asked that President George L. Mackintosh of Wabash College be heard, and the following resolution offered by Dr. Mackintosh was unanimously adopted by the council:

Indianapolis, Ind., September 10, 1918.

Whereas, W. E. Hall, national director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, has emphasized in his letter of August 28, 1918, the depletion of man-power available for work on farms, and has pointed out in unmistakable terms the future serious conditions that are confronting the nation when the new draft has further reduced the said reserve to the extent of three million, and

Whereas, In the said letter he has suggested the speeding up of school work in an effort to reduce the length of the school year from nine to seven months, in order that the young men of reserve age may be available for farm service; therefore be it

Resolved, That we do recommend to the State Board of Education of Indiana that it takes such action with reference to high school as will best serve the existing emergency; and

Whereas, such speeding up of the school work will shorten the school year; therefore be it

Resolved, That the State Council of Defense suggests as an emergency measure the plan of revising contracts with teachers to read "per school year" in lieu of "per month," to the effect that where the work of a school year, ordinarily consisting of nine months, has been accomplished in seven months, the teacher shall receive the full school year pay.

It was stated to the council by Dr. Mackintosh that the resolution does not contemplate any reduction in the "already meager pay" of school teachers. Mr. Straus added that Attorney-General Ele Stansbury had advised that only by rewording the contracts of teachers would it be possible to have them receive the same pay hour

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—A case that will probably serve as a state test has come up in Adams County, where Judge D. E. Smith of Decatur, on the petition of George Kinzie, county treasurer, has ordered the personal property of Vilas Huser, a soldier fighting in France, sold for delinquent taxes, for the year 1917, due in 1918. The property consists of a half interest in a ditching machine, valued at $300, and an automobile valued at $200. The taxes were due the first Monday in May, 1918, and Huser enlisted March 30, 1918. Huser has fled, through his attorneys, a petition asking that the order of the court be vacated. . . . Mrs. Faye Smith-Knapp, county chairman of the woman's Fourth Liberty Loan drive, is getting her working organization into shape. Township organizers assigned to date are: Union, Mrs. Fred Linn; Root, Mrs. S. D. Beavers; Breble, Mrs. C. V. Connell; Kirkland, Mrs. Will Kremers; Washington, Mrs. C. S. Niblick; St. Mary's, Mrs. Ed Moses; Blue Creek, Mrs. J. S. Coverdale; Monroe, Mrs. Horace Callow; French, Mrs. J. L. Kocher; Jefferson, Mrs. C. L. Walters; Wabash, Mrs. C. A. Dugan; Hartford, Mrs. F. E. France. Mrs. F. W. Downs has been named chairman of the speakers' bureau, and Miss Jessie Magley will look after the publicity. . . . The labor board of Adams County, composed of Dan Erwin, chairman; Will Kremers and James Hurst, has been called on to furnish 88 unskilled non-essential war workers, and arrangements have been made for a survey of the unskilled labor material available in the county.

Allen County.—Ft. Wayne has adopted a novel way of raising money for the Red Cross. At the northwest corner of the court house a space has been set aside for the collection of old, worn-out automobile tires, and every auto owner in the county has been asked to dig out his old tires and bring them down and add to the pile, which will eventually be sold for the Red Cross on account of the rubber.

Clark County.—In response to the government call for walnut and hickory nuts as well as the shells of these nuts, the county council of defense has made arrangements, through the schools, to have receptacles at every school-house, in order to encourage the children to bring these war necessities. The council will gather up the accumulation and send it to the proper authorities. S. L. Scott, superintendent of county schools, has been asked to co-operate. . . . Saving by the community purchasing plan has been adopted by the Clark-Harrison Cow Testing Association, which was organized some months ago, and arrangements are now being consummated to purchase their winter supply of feed on the co-operative plan.

Clay County.—Over 400 Pekin ducks which were raised by Mr. Lewis McNutt, on Idylwild farm, close to Brazil, were picked by the ladies of the Jackson Township food clubs, and the feathers donated to the Red Cross for pillows. These pillows which are being made by the Red Cross will be sent to France for the use of wounded soldiers in hospitals. As the ducks must be picked every six weeks, quite a supply of feathers for pillows will be obtained. . . . That the coal miners of this section are doing their part toward the winning of the war was shown when the miners of the Brazil district on a recent payday received approximately $100,000. All mines are operating at capacity, and this is the largest amount ever distributed among the mine workers of this locality.

Delaware County.—Muncie employers and employees are realizing the benefits to be derived from the Community Labor Board. Manufacturers who have heretofore been at a loss to fill vacancies have discovered the employment office can meet the situation. Many specialty workers, such as structural iron workers, electricians, railroaders and mechanics, have been placed by the agency. Miss Mary Myer, in charge of the woman's division of the office, states that many women, the wives and daughters of men who have been sent to France, are ready to take the places of men in factories and offices. . . . At the closing session of the county teachers' institute, E. J. Black, county superintendent of schools, announced that according to a telegram received from Washington, Delaware County led in war garden work and canning. . . . Muncie attorneys originated a plan to financially aid the county war mothers' organization, which they learned was practically without working funds. During the Labor Day parade a number of attorneys carried a large flag into which persons were asked to throw coins as the parade marched by, and a little over $225 was realized in this way. In addition to making personal visits of sympathy to homes where a son, brother or husband has made the supreme sacrifice, in many instances this organization has proffered immediate financial aid. . . . Muncie physicians are considering some way of labeling their automobiles on Sundays in order to avoid insults where it is necessary for them to make use of their machines for professional calls.

Dubois County.—The Huntington canning factory, in order to care for the large crop of tomatoes it is receiving, has been compelled to work on Sundays and at night. On a recent Sunday a flag raising took place. A beautiful American flag, 8 x 12 feet, was purchased with money donated by the men employed at the factory, and presented a thrilling sight as it was hoisted to the top of the iron flagpole 25 feet above the building, while the employees sang "The Star-Spangled Banner." . . . The Dubois County Council of Defense has received an appropriation of $3,000. This amount was decided on at the September meeting of the civil county council. At the same meeting the council passed a resolution authorizing the county commissioners to have 40 acres of the bottom land of the county poor farm surveyed with a view of selling it at $70 per acre, the proceeds from this sale to be used in the purchase of Liberty Bonds.

Elkhart County.—A Mennonite church in Goshen has been splashed with yellow paint owing to a report that some of the members are not in sympathy with the war policy of the government. The same paint treatment was given several automobiles parked outside the church on the first gasolineless Sunday.

Fayette County.—A dozen young women of Connersville have been vigorously campaigning for the honor of being made sponsor of the new ship "Connersville." Ballot boxes have been placed in banks, drug and cigar stores. Votes are a penny each, and the proceeds from the campaign will go toward support of the Red Cross. Candidates have the public thoroughly interested in the race, and during one of the noonday luncheons held at the chamber of commerce 11,400 ballots were sold. . . . At the direction of the government, representatives of the ammunition box manufacturers of the United States met in Connersville to make a study of the methods of a Connersville company which is engaged in the production of ammunition boxes. A new system of crating the product, devised recently, has been accepted by the government, and the meeting was ordered partly on this account. Ultimately the government hopes to standardize its ammunition box business. . . . An additional appropriation of $500 to defray the running expenses of the county council of defense for the balance of this year has been made by the county council, which has also authorized an appropriation of $2,200 to be placed at the disposal of the defense body for 1918. It is believed the public will support this action of the civil council. Fayette County citizens have prided themselves on their record in war activities, and it is presumed they will be proud of the fact that the men handling the county's finances are ready to appropriate a sum with which to carry on the most important work of the age. . . . Mrs. George Cain, who has been acting chairman of the woman's section of the county council of defense, has retired, and has been succeeded by Mrs. F. I. Burrows.

Gibson County.—The draft has made such inroads on the Southern Railway shops at Princeton that Master Mechanic Johnson has had to call on woman labor. Twelve women are now employed regularly, ten colored women as engine wipers and two white women in the coach cleaning department. The management intends to give them a fair trial and if they make good other women will be called on to follow them in these and other lines of work at the shops.

Grant County.—At the meeting of the Ben Moore thrashing ring at Swayzee to make their season's settlement, the members devoted the money which in seasons past has been spent on refreshments to the purchase of Thrift Stamps.

Howard County.—John B. Joyce and D. P. Strode, two members of the committee named by the taxpayers of Howard County for the purpose of investigating the legality of the county council making an appropriation for benevolent war purposes, met with C. C. Shirley, E. B. Barnes and Lloyd McClure, to discuss the petition which is to be presented to the county council. The attorneys were of the opinion that the Legislature would probably pass an act legalizing such an appropriation and tax levy, and thought the levy could be made with the contingent that if the Legislature did not legalize the expenditure the money would not be collected. Mr. Joyce drew up another petition covering the matter, and Howard County citizens now await the council's action. . . . A permanent committee composed of Will H. Arnett, Carl S. Wadman of Russiaville, J. D. Haworth of Greentown, C. B. Tudor of Oakford, and John R. McIntosh has been appointed by the county council of defense for the purpose of investigating proposed improvements of roads and highways, and to push the improvement of any highway necessary to secure the proposed motor truck line. It was felt such a committee should be called into existence so that some designated body of men would be familiar with the situation in Howard County, and be in position to properly present such matters before the State Council, and procure the postponement of all improvements not needed and secure permission for proceeding with those which would prove a vital contribution to the success of the war. . . . Stimulated by the success attending the community sings being held in Indianapolis, Muncie scheduled its initial sing September 12th. I. A. Thompson, assistant secretary of the Y. M. C. A., made arrangements with the war camp community service headquarters at the state capital for an experienced leader, and such selections as "Over There," "Keep the Home Fires Burning," "The Long, Long Trail," "America" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" are to be put on the program, as public approval has stamped these as favorites.

Jackson County.—The answers to the questionnaires sent out to Jackson County farmers, requesting information as to the cost of using commercial fertilizer and lime on their land, and the benefits derived from same, will be used in arranging for special demonstration work this fall.

Johnson County.—The champion knitter of the Whiteland Red Cross auxiliary is Mrs. Jane VanArsdale, age 87 years. The last consignment to the county headquarters from this auxiliary consisted of 192 pairs of socks, and of these Mrs. VanArsdale knit 36 pairs. The women of the Whiteland auxiliary bought the yarn, knit the socks and donated them to the Red Cross without any expense whatever to the county chapter. The money for the yarn was obtained from the proceeds of various benefits and entertainments. The auxiliary also has made large quantities of surgical dressings, sweaters, helmets, wristlets and other knitted equipment have been produced in addition to the 192 pairs of socks. The donation is a most practical expression of the patriotic spirit which is dominating war work among Whiteland women.

Kosciusko County.—County Food Administrator James R. Frazier has announced the members of his newly appointed county price publication board, which will publish weekly a price schedule so the general buying public may be guided by it. Merchants do not have to adhere strictly to the prices named, but if they sell above the quotations listed by the price fixing board the public will know their prices are excessive. The personnel of the board is made up of one representative each of the wholesalers, retailers, cash and carry grocers, meat dealers, city trades, retail stores outside of Warsaw, and labor. In addition to Mr. Frazier, the members of the board are: Wholesale, Edward Braude, Silver Lake; Warsaw retail stores, Perry Easterday, Warsaw; retail stores outside of Warsaw, W. E. Davis, Burket; cash and carry stores, R. H. Collins, Warsaw; meat dealers, Richard Haas, Warsaw; Warsaw consumers, Eugene Alleman, Warsaw; Laboring people, Lou Rice, Warsaw.

Lake County.—With the coming of winter the fuel question becomes a most important one, and having in mind the shortage of fuel during the past winter, the Lake County Council at one of its late meetings passed the following resolution: "Whereas, The supply of fuel will no doubt be inadequate during the coming months and the use of coal must be curtailed in every manner possible. Therefore: Be It Resolved, That the use of wood as a fuel be encouraged and farmers and others in a position to procure and use wood be and are hereby asked and urged to prepare an ample supply of wood for their own use and to furnish same to others as far as possible at reasonable prices. And be it further resolved, That publicity be given to this resolution through the public press and the township council of defense." . . . In order to conserve fuel, oil, gasoline and labor, all garages, gasoline filling stations and automobile repair shops in Gary will close each evening at 6:30, except Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays. . . . Rent profiteering in Gary may be considerably reduced by the use of the publicity which is to be given the matter by the township council of defense. A committee has been appointed, charged with the duty of receiving and hearing complaints from tenants relative to alleged excessive rentals. Township Chairman Curtis advises in no instance will favoritism be shown. . . . Mrs. Wicks of Gary, reporting on the registration of women in Lake County, advises that Hammond is the banner city, with a registration of 6,300 women; Gary comes next, with 5,600; then follows Indiana Harbor, 3,000; Crown Point and southern districts, 2,800; Whiting, 1,000, and Hobart, 500. East Chicago has not reported, but Mrs. Wicks stated when the final reports were in she would say Lake County had registered 20,000 women, making it the banner county in the State. . . . Harvey J. Curtis, chairman of the Calumet Township Council of Defense, has been delegated to secure and make out a complete record of every soldier that has gone from Gary, and as Gary has sent practically 6,000 men this is no small task. It is not too big for the township council, however, and they are going after it in the spirit which spells success.

Lagrange County.—After serving only two weeks as county agricultural agent, C. R. Benjamin has been called into active service, and is now at Camp Taylor, Ky. In undertaking the work in Lagrange County, Mr. Benjamin was under the impression that agricultural agents would be exempt at this time. . . . E. H. Curtis donated ten bushels of Red Wave wheat from a field of forty acres which averaged forty bushels to the acre, and arranged that it be sold to the highest bidder for the benefit of the Red Cross. It was bought by Katherine R. Williams, representing E. W. Nash of Asheville, N. C., at a price of $60. Mr. Curtis will deliver the ten bushels to Miss Williams and will turn her check over to Valentine D. Weaver, treasurer of the Red Cross county chapter.

Laporte County.—W. C. Freeman of the Michigan City Y. M. C. A., who succeeds F. R. Farnum as local director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, is completing arrangements for a campaign which will bring the membership of the Michigan City Reserve to 800 boys. There are only 200 boys enrolled at present.

Lawrence County.—Miss Blanche Jambol and Mrs. Madeline VanDyke of Bedford are collecting guide books for American officers, and already have forwarded a number of Baedekers to the government at Washington to be shipped abroad for the use of our army officers.

Marion County.—Several of the large department stores in Indianapolis, before starting the day's business, assemble the employees on the main floor, where all unite in singing "The Star-Spangled Banner." . . . Indianapolis garbage wagons are now manned by women. Given a team already hitched, and they do their work well, the commissioners report; but men are still employed to hitch the mules before starting the day's work, the spirit of the women evidently quailing before the hitching process. Colored women are employed in this collecting of garbage.

Monroe County.—Overall for women workers have been officially approved by the city council of Bloomington, which held a special session to pass upon the propriety of the use of these garments by women war workers.

Montgomery County.—How to strictly adhere to the rules of the first "gasolineless Sunday" and still reach the golf links was a problem for Crawfordville golfers, which one of the enthusiasts solved by resurrecting an old party hack which years ago was a means of transportation in the city.

Owen County.—At the last meeting of the county council of defense, Captain Beem reported that 521 boys had been enrolled on the records of the council as having entered the various branches of military service.

Parke County.—The Parke County Council of Defense has mailed to the nearest relatives of Parke County men who have given their lives for their country a beautiful parchment seal attached to the parchment by a black ribbon. The memorials bear the signature of J. S. McFaddin, president, and Mary Leatherman, secretary. The memorial reads as follows: "To the Family—As we write these lines a great and momentous battle is being fought. America with her allies is engaged in the world's greatest war. A war of self-defense being waged by our armies in the cause of humanity, of democracy, of true Christianity. A war being waged that our children, and children's children, may enjoy liberty and equality; may enjoy the pleasures and blessings of freedom, of the free use of God's highways, of free speech, and the right to worship our God; not the German god of war, but our God of love and peace. We are engaged in war that there may be no other war. The name of ..... has been inscribed by the hand of death, on the honor roll of Parke County. We share your loss with you. The hearts of all loyal citizens beat in sympathy and we all sorrow with you. We honor him, in imperishable memory, because he gave his all that free America might live. While he has died in the glory of his youth, he has died a brave soldier in a glorious cause. At this time we should recall the words of the immortal Lincoln: 'That from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.'"

Porter County.—Valparaiso tersely sums up the results of the first Sunday under the "gasoline prohibition" requested by the fuel administration: "No Sunday accidents. Less work for the undertakers. Less toll for the casket makers. Less exercise for the cemetery laborer. Fewer chickens run over in the country. Saving of 3,000 gallons of gasoline in the city of Valparaiso."

Posey County.—The county civil council has made an appropriation to the county council of defense, of $300.

Putnam County.—Depauw University officials at Greencastle have indicated that the Beta Theta Pi, the Sigma Chi and the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity houses will be the first to be taken over under the government program for training students in military tactics during the coming school year.

Pipley County.—The county council of defense has received an appropriation of $3,000, to meet the running expenses of the council next year. They will also have the handing of an additional sum of $20,000, which was appropriated to them by the civil county council to meet Ripley County's quota for war relief purposes in 1919.

Shelby County.—Frank Meiks, winner of first prize in the Shelby County boys' pig feeding contest, is anxious that other boys in the county "learn the art of feeding and help raise meat to feed our boys so that we may lick the Kaiser." Following is his own story of how he became interested in the work: "Last year, 1917, our county agent, Mr. East, made plans to organize a pig feeding club. After consulting Mr. East, I decided to enter the contest and feed a pig. I enjoyed the feeding and considered it a valuable experience for a boy. This year I decided to feed again, so selected a pig from my father's herd, a big type Poland China, farrowed March, 1918. The pig was weaned when it was about ten weeks old, that being the first of June, and at this time weighed 50 pounds. The pig was placed on a self-feeder and was fed 307 pounds of corn, 37 pounds of shorts, 10 pounds of tankage, 800 pounds of skim milk. It was fed 88 days and made a gain of 160 pounds at a cost of $11.10. An average daily gain during the feeding period of 1.87 pounds per day, at a cost of 7.3 cents per pound. The pig has made good growth and is in fine condition to finish out. It is quite interesting to watch the progress of feeding from start to finish. I consider the self-feeder a profitable way to feed; it saves time, the pig always has before it what it wants, or, in other words, it can balance its own ration."....To Paul Carlisle of Shelbyville goes the credit for solving a problem which gave our government much concern during the early days of the war. Shells stacked on the ground suffered from the bad effects of weather conditions, and experts were called on to remedy the trouble. Finally Paul Carlisle succeeded in preparing a waterproof covering that completely protects the shells from climatic and atmospheric conditions. Shells may now be stacked on the ground, if necessary, and remain there indefinitely without injury....The Shelbyville Chamber of Commerce has a woman secretary, Miss Cecile Cox. She succeeds Carroll R. Woods, who has entered the army. Miss Cox is believed to be the first woman to be named as secretary of a commercial organization in Indiana....With each increasing draft call labor is depending more and more on the efforts of women in industry. Shelbyville reports that its entire Western Union office force is now composed of women. Mrs. Frank H. Wolfe is managing the office, assisted by Miss Eva Fillenworth as clerk and Mrs. Ivaold Duncan as messenger....Dr. Thomas Green has been appointed to recruit doctors in Shelby County for the "Volunteer Medical Corps." The government is short of doctors, and the medical section of the Council of National Defense has undertaken to ascertain the available recruits in every State, by counties....The Shelby County war chest fund has received a gift which is gratifying for other than pecuniary reasons. A citizen called at the office and, stating that he had been missed in the drive, left a check for $15, with the remark, "Other men are giving their sons, I should give my money." This is the spirit that is making our secondary lines of defense impregnable.

Spencer County.—The Rockport food club at its next meeting will be addressed by Miss Cook on the subject of "School Lunches." This is a timely subject, and it is a matter of importance both to mothers and children to be able to prepare a school lunch that has the proper proportion of food constituents and is also inviting in appearance and taste.

Sullivan County.—At a meeting of the Sullivan County Medical Association, a resolution was adopted to donate surgical attention to any Sullivan County men who are leaving for service. Physicians who voted for this gratis service to the boys leaving for the front were: Drs. R. H. Van Cleave and J. T. Oliphant, of Farmersburg; C. W. Thralls, C. W. Asbury and George Plew, of Hymersburg; J. H. Work, J. B. Maple and E. E. Robards, of Hymersburg; J. J. Parker, of Merom; C. E. Whippis and W. A. Bailey, of Carlisle; J. J. Jackson, of Pleasantville, and J. R. Crowder, C. F. Briggs, G. D. Scott, J. H. Neff, Joe Freeman, G. G. Billman, L. A. Stewart, S. E. Lindley and R. A. Barco.

Tippecanoe County.—The civil county council has appropriated $125,000, to be paid out of a county fund collected by taxation, to meet the demands which will be made on Tippecanoe County citizens during the ensuing year in support of war activities under the auspices of the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Jewish Relief and K. of C. A list of residents of the county whose names do not appear on the tax list will be compiled, and opportunity will be offered them to contribute whatever their circumstances permit or their generosity dictates. Public sentiment seems to be strongly in favor of the new plan, as it eliminates entirely the time and energy required in the past in making the various drives a success...."The Purdue Exponent," the university's daily paper, has discontinued publication until the close of the war.

Union County.—September 12th has been set aside as Liberty Guard day in Union County. A monster parade at Liberty has been planned. Two companies of the guard will head the procession, and the various county war organizations are to be in line, including the War Mothers, Fathers, Boy Scouts, Joan of Arc girls, school children, members of the Red Cross organization, Allied War Relief Society, and other organizations. A "country store" will sell off all contributed produce, and the proceeds will be used to buy uniforms for the guards. Committees for the various townships have been named, and they will appoint solicitors to secure contributions for the country store. At present there are about 150 men in the Liberty Guard of Union County.

Vanderburgh County.—Several American soldiers who were wounded in action in battle in France have arrived at Evansville and have been placed in the United States marine hospital for treatment. Evansville is the first Indiana city to receive a group of the injured fighters....Under the terms of the will of Charles Kahn, a retired grocer of Evansville, the Red Cross will receive the bulk of his estate, amounting to near a hundred thousand dollars.

Vigo County.—Mrs. John Cox of the county council of defense has finished the registering of Vigo's physicians who have not yet gone to war. She found between sixty-five and seventy physicians in Terre Haute and the surrounding small towns of the county....Terre Haute's next-to-the-last community sing at Collett park last Sunday night was the most enthusiastic one yet. Although it was autumnless day the park was crowded. Judge Swango was the four-minute speaker and George Wyckoff directed the singing....On last Sunday night Rev. O. L. Richmond of the Central Presbyterian Church conducted a unique Thrift Stamp campaign, which resulted in wholesale selling of stamps. A piano was loaded on a truck, with it a crowd of soldier boys from Camp Rose, and a tour was made through the principal streets of the city. The boys sang and a number of patriotic women sold stamps at every stop. Besides this campaign, booths are now running in full force upon Main street all the time. The city schools have taken up their sale again and the spirit of contest runs high. In two days the children at Thompson School bought $74 worth of Thrift Stamps....The executive committee for the Fourth Liberty Loan has been organized. Mr. James Royse was elected chairman. The committee is composed of a representative of every bank in the city, Mrs. Nicholas Mesirov and Mr. Earl Houck, chairman of the council of defense. They are holding a meeting every morning at 9:00 o'clock and expect to soon have all plans perfected for the campaign....The schools are enthusiastically collecting peach, apricot, plum and other varieties of seeds as requested by the government. George Wyckoff, city scout executive, has been appointed by the council of defense to take charge of this work.

Wayne County.—The first women rural route mail carriers of Wayne County were inducted into service when Miss Pearl Thomas and Mrs. Florence Hawk assumed their duties as substitutes while regular carriers are taking their vacations. Postmaster Charles Beck said "the women are getting along fine" and the carrierettes said they were enjoying their work immensely.

Wells County.—The Jefferson Food Club of Ossian held a very interesting meeting on September 12th. The program was in charge of Mrs. J. W. Crummit, and food talks were given by Mrs. H. C. Hunter, Mrs. Gerald Beaty, Mrs. J. G. Stirling, Mrs. W. W. Fryback and Mrs. C. A. Hostetter, following which was an address on "Belgium Enslaved," by Rev. Griffes, several good musical numbers and a general discussion on timely food topics.

Red Cross Activities

The following is authorized by the Red Cross War Council:

"The War Council of the American Red Cross to-day issued the second installment of its reports to the American people concerning the use being made of the Red Cross War Fund. This particular installment covers work being done in Italy since the beginning of the war and plans made for the period up to the end of December, 1918.

"In carrying out its work in Italy the American Red Cross has appropriated to July 1, 1918, the sum of $7,939,653.50. The greatly enlarged field of opportunity and obligation in Italy has called for an appropriation for the six months ending December, 1918, amounting to $12,657,837.50.

"Thus by the end of the year 1918 the American Red Cross will have expended since the war began, and up to the end of 1918, at least $20,000,000.00 in work of relief in Italy.

"Need for Red Cross work in Italy became apparent to the War Council in Washington early in the summer of 1917 and a temporary commission, headed by George F. Baker, Jr., was sent to Italy to make a thorough and exhaustive investigation of the needs there. As a result of the commission's report, a permanent commission was in process of formation when the Teutonic drive on the Austrian front filled all Italy with homeless, starving, despairing refugees and brought on a crisis which took American Red Cross workers into the Italian field. From that moment their activities have never ceased.

"To-day Italy is fully convinced that the American people are a nation of deeds as well as words. There is scarcely a village or commune which has not been given unmistakable evidence of the generosity, kindness and ability of America in the work of saving Europe from the grasp of Teutonic autocracy.

"In this connection, Col. John Buchan, one of the directors of the British Ministry on Information said:

"I hope Americans appreciate the work which their Red Cross organization has done in Italy. American work was wonderful. It was organized and accomplished with deftness, energy and tact. It must have been enormously expensive, but it was worth many times what it cost in its remarkable effect on the morale, not only of the people at home, but at the front, where its maximum was felt.

"A survey made in July shows that up to that time relief had been distributed to nearly 400,000 needy families of soldiers. At last reports the American Red Cross had in operation in Italy 41 kitchens with a capacity of 130,000 rations weekly. These were contributing to the comfort and support of 131,000 families. It is maintaining 43 workrooms where nearly 3,000 women are employed in producing an average of 80,000 garments. There are eighty-two nurseries caring for 13,000 children. There are nineteen health centers containing 8,046 children. There are twelve adult health centers caring for an average of 500 persons weekly.

"All this character of work done up to July 1, 1918, was accomplished at a cost of $4,347,383. Work among the soldiers at the front up to July 1, 1918, had cost $2,844,602. A special emergency fund was expended during the same period taking care of thousands of refugees. This was done at a cost of $174,700. Another item of expense during the early days was that of transportation. This amounted to $200,462. Operating expenses during this period amounted to $167,537.

"In connection with the foregoing there are two things that are worthy of note. The first is that the purchasing power of every dollar contributed to the American Red Cross, because of its vast field of voluntary endeavor and supply, is $1.59. The other is the strict economy observed in all branches of the work. The following cablegram from Mr. Henry P. Davison, chairman of the Red Cross War Council, to Col. Per-

Merchants' Economy

The following official statement comes from the Council of National Defense:

The Council of National Defense has heretofore emphasized the necessity of restricting Christmas buying during the coming fall for certain specific reasons which it has stated. These reasons are in brief the necessity for saving labor and material in the manufacture and sale of Christmas gifts and of saving the transportation and delivery facilities necessarily involved in the large volume of Christmas purchases.

After conference with representatives of leading industries and retail interests concerned, it is found that the manufacture of goods for the coming holiday season has been substantially completed, that the transportation of the goods to the point of sale is also largely done and that much of the material used for Christmas purchases, especially in the manufacture of toys, is the waste material derived from prior processes of manufacture.

The retail interests represented at the conference have agreed not to increase their working force by reason of the holiday business over the average force employed by them throughout the year and not to increase the normal working hours of their force during the Christmas season. They also agreed to use their utmost efforts to confine Christmas giving, except for young children, to useful articles and to spread the period for holiday purchases over the months of October, November and December. In order to relieve the transportation facilities of the country from a congestion in the latter half of December which would be so hurtful to the interests of the Nation that it cannot be permitted, the retail interests represented at this hearing have agreed to co-operate further in the campaign heretofore and now being carried on under the auspices of the War Industries Board, to restrict deliveries and to induce their customers to carry their own packages wherever possible.

The retail interests to which reference has been made have further agreed to make an announcement to the above substantial effect in their advertisements commencing in early September and repeating same weekly thereafter. The above suggestions if faithfully and loyally put into effect throughout the country will make possible a continuance of the holiday custom without endangering the national interests thereby.

The Council of National Defense will co-operate in carrying out the suggested measures. It looks to organized business bodies of every nature and throughout the country actively to join in the movement as providing means whereby that co-operation between the Government and the people can be had which alone will permit the continuance of holiday business in such form, on such scale, and by such methods as are consistent with the national welfare. This announcement is definitely conditioned upon loyal and thorough co-operation in spirit and in letter on the part of sellers and buyers throughout the country.

Americans Must Emulate Spirit of British Tommy

"How are you feeling this morning?" asked an American woman of the British Tommies in a base hospital ward.

"Top Hole, thank you, M'am," came the invariable reply. Everywhere a brave smile and a cheery "Top Hole" met her sympathetic inquiry.

"Their spirit is indomitable and makes me so ashamed of my momentary faltering this morning," she remarked later to the British surgeon in charge. "But tell me," she added, "just what do they mean by 'Top Hole'?"

"Well," laughed the physician, "I'll tell you. You see the British soldier of an earlier day wore a belt with his uniform, and when invited out to dine, if he was forced to loosen this to the very last or top hole, it indicated that he had had the best dinner possible. And so," he concluded, "'Top Hole' has come to express for the British Tommy a satisfied contentment."

All America today should learn to say "Top Hole" with the British Tommy, and just as cheerily, though with a trifle change in meaning. With every loyal and patriotic American it should mean the farthest inside hole instead of the farthest outside one, and should indicate that he is pulling in his belt willingly and patriotically whenever the Food Administration requests it.

What can be accomplished in this way has been demonstrated in wheat and meat conservation during the last year.

Shipments of meats, fats and dairy products increased last year over those of the previous year by 844,600,000 pounds.

Due to the concerted efforts of homes, public eating places, food trades, and, above all, the American housewives, this country sent to the Allies 80,900,000 pounds more cereal and cereal products than during the previous year. When we consider that we did not have the surplus of the previous year upon which to draw, but that these wheat shipments represent the individual savings of the people themselves, we can appreciate how faithfully Americans have buckled in their belts to the top hole.

This year will probably be the top hole of our agricultural production during the war's duration. More and more men will be turned from agricultural pursuits to fighting or other war work. There can be no danger of famine with such an abundant harvest in sight, but we know not what leaner years are ahead. It is the better part of valor to continue eating Victory breads and fill our storehouses with a safe surplus for ourselves and our fellow fighters. There may be no need for "Top Hole," but there should be at least a safe margin saved.

There is a very urgent need at present for "Top Hole" in sugar saving. No one needs quick energy and fuel food like our fighters at the front. One pound of sugar has 1,814 heat calories as well as being the most energizing of all food products. There are, however, other fuel and energizing foods still available over here, and what patriotic American would not gladly forego a box of candy or an extra teaspoonful of sugar for the sake of those cheerful Tommies who, with an eye sightless forever, or a leg gone, still insist that they are "Top Hole."

As to food the Allies have no reason to fear the future, while the enemy dare not look into the coming winter without a shudder.

Helps in Using Substitute Foods

This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration, and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.

SUGARLESS CANDIES.

"Candy and similar confections are used in the dietary less for their food value than to satisfy a desire for something to eat." At this time when sugar is so scarce, the old-fashioned candies made mainly of sugar should be replaced by sugarless sweets. Children crave candy and when eaten in limited quantities may be used in their diet. It is a favorite article to include in the school lunch. Candy should be eaten at meal time and should take the place of other desserts at the close of the meal, since the Food Administration asks that no "between meal piecing" be indulged in at the present time.

The following are sugarless sweets that have proved satisfactory as candy substitutes:

Parisian Sweets.

Put through the meat chopper one pound of prepared dates, figs and nut meats. Add one tablespoon orange juice, a little grated orange peel and one-fourth cup of honey or syrup. Mold into balls and roll in chopped nuts or cocoanut or chocolate. This mixture may be packed in an oiled tin, put under a weight until firm, then cut in any shape desired. Melted chocolate may be added to mixture before molding if desired.

Syrup Nongatines.

Boil one and one-half cups light colored syrup and one-half cup water to 240 degrees Fahrenheit or until it forms a firm ball when tried in cold water. Pour slowly onto a well-beaten white of one egg, beating constantly with a wire whisk. Place bowl over water kept just below the boiling point and fold and turn three or four minutes. Remove from fire, add one-half teaspoon vanilla or other flavoring and continue folding until mixture is nearly cool. Add one cup chopped salted peanuts or a mixture of any desired candied fruits and nuts. Spread one-half inch thick on rice paper, cover with rice paper and cut in rectangular pieces.

Maple Cream.

Two cups maple sugar. One tablespoon butter. Three-fourths cup milk. Pinch of salt.

Cook sugar, milk and salt together until a soft ball forms when tried in cold water or until thermometer registers 113 degrees C. Cool slightly and then beat until creamy. Chopped nuts may be added.

Stuffed Prunes.

Select sweet prunes. Soak over night. Dry, open carefully, remove stones and stuff with chopped raisins and nuts. Roll in granulated sugar.

Honey Popcorn Balls.

Farmers' Bulletin No. 653.

Honey can be heated up to about 245 degrees F. without being greatly changed in color or flavor. If it is heated carefully most of the water is expelled. The honey then becomes hard on cooling and can be used for making popcorn balls. To make them, dip the popped corn into the hot honey, shape into balls and cool. Honey popcorn balls absorb moisture on standing in the air. They must therefore be either kept very closely covered or reheated and dried before being used.

Taffy.

Two cups corn syrup. One tablespoon butter. One tablespoon vinegar. One teaspoon vanilla.

Cook until it cracks against the cup in which it is tested. Corn syrup candy must be cooked harder than ordinary sugar taffy.

Saving sugar saves shipping space for sending soldiers and supplies.

Tightening Up Policy on Building Plans Ordered by Federal War Industries Board

State Council of Defense Will Be Asked to Assist by Passing First Upon All Civilian Projects That Are of a Non-War Nature in Order That Building Materials and Labor May Be Conserved for Government Use

The War Industries Board authorizes the following:

The determination of the War Industries Board and its chairman, Bernard M. Baruch, to meet the demands for war materials from the United States military authorities and the allies, has brought a tightening up policy as to civilian building plans with a view to the conservation of building materials and the release of labor to war work.

To assist the board in passing on the need and essentiality of proposed new non-war construction, Mr. Baruch has called to his assistance the State Councils of National Defense, which are asked to investigate through their local organizations and report on all proposed new building projects in their respective territories.

While the recommendations of these local organizations will not be final, they will be followed to the extent that no application for materials for projects coming within their jurisdiction will be considered by the War Industries Board until the council has reported. Final decision in all cases is reserved by the board.

Judge E. B. Parker, priorities commissioner, is preparing a set of instructions for the various State councils for their guidance in making recommendations as to the needs and essentiality of non-war construction. The duties of the councils will not include undertakings directed by, or under contract with, the War Department, Navy Department, Emergency Fleet Corporation, Bureau of Industrial Housing and Transportation of the Department of Labor, the United States Housing Corporation, and the following civilian enterprises:

Certain Enterprises Exempted.

Repairs of or extensions to existing buildings involving in the aggregate a cost not exceeding $2,500.

Roadways, buildings, and other structures undertaken by or under contract with the United States Railroad Administration or a railroad operated by such administration.

Those directly connected with mines producing coal, metals, and ferro-alloy minerals.

Public highway improvements and street pavements when expressly approved in writing by the United States Highways Council.

For building projects not falling within one of the classes mentioned there will be required a special written permit issued by the Chief of Non-war Construction Section of the Priorities Division of the War Industries Board.

Anyone contemplating a building which he conceives to be in the public interest, or of such essentiality that under existing conditions it should not be deferred, should make a full statement of the facts in writing, under oath, and present it to the local representative of the Council of National Defense for his approval. This representative will report his approval with a statement of reasons, to the Non-war Construction Section of the War Industries Board for final decision.

Letter to Mr. Baker.

Secretary Baker, acting as secretary of the Council of National Defense and of the Advisory Commission, promptly accepted for the council the request for co-operation and assistance made by the War Industries Board in the following letter from Mr. Baruch:

August 22, 1918.

The Honorable the Secretary of War,
Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Secretary—Inspired by the exchange of letters between you and the President regarding the activities of the State Councils of National Defense—those splendid bodies of American business men—the thought comes to me that there may be a possibility of utilizing their services in a highly important connection with the work of the War Industries Board.

I am submitting a brief outline of the plan I have in mind to you as president of the Council of National Defense in the hope that your view may coincide with mine and that I may gain your co-operation in effectuating the system. No one is more familiar than yourself with the necessity of increasing our fighting forces of men and materials, and the consequently heavy drain upon our resources caused by the increment. To meet the needs there must be, as indeed there is, a constantly growing curtailment, elimination, or conversion of non-war activities.

It is toward the end of curtailment that the State councils can be of immediate value. These bodies are already organized and have a working knowledge of war work and war necessities, and, of equal importance, knowledge of the things essential to the protection and supply of civilian needs. Their co-operation would prevent a heavy and unnecessary duplication of those tasks they are organized to handle.

It is very probable that at a later period there can be a widening of their field of usefulness, but for the present I should like to put into execution a plan whereby no application for building materials or commodities employed for repair purposes shall be considered by the War Industries Board, unless it has previously been passed upon and approved by the Council of National Defense in the State in which the application originates.

It is obviously impossible for the State councils to pass the final judgment upon such matters, since they do not have a full picture of all of our varying and constantly changing war needs, but I have no doubt that with certain broad principles to guide them the councils could be of great value in eliminating at the point of origin such projects that are not of a necessitous nature.

I am not prepared to say that the War Industries Board would necessarily be committed to a favorable decision because of a State council's approval of any project, but the board would pledge itself to give fullest consideration to such enterprises as are so indorsed and would not receive any without such indorsement.

It needs but slight study of the situation to see the advantage to be gained by the process I have here outlined. The members of the several State councils, being directly on the ground, will have a more intimate knowledge of the nature of the various demands that are now being pressed upon the attention of the War Industries Board in almost overwhelming number.

Their approval or disapproval will greatly simplify the system of award and will, by reducing the volume, expedite the business of the board and make for greater satisfaction for the applicants.

It is not necessary for me to repeat what is in your mind, as well as mine, that every request should be scrutinized with the utmost care and granted only when the need is imperative.

If you agree with my view of the value of the instrumentality of the State councils, I shall be glad to take the matter up with you or your representative, to the end of devising a definite system of procedure.

I am, my dear Mr. Secretary,

Yours very truly,

B. M. BARUCH.

News From France Brings a Realization

By Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

To the Members of U. S. Food Clubs:

The news from France during the last few weeks has made us realize that we are indeed at war. Seventeen months ago the decision was made which committed us definitely to a share in the struggle, responsibility and sacrifice in the world war until a decisive victory should be gained. During the first few months we were almost hysterical in our efforts to get the various departments of our war machinery working satisfactorily. Movements, official and unofficial, together with many wasteful fads, sprang into existence, each one bent on "doing its bit." The period of hysteria is over now, most of the fads have died out and have made room for legitimate war work. We now recognize that war is our national business and the business of each individual. We are settling down to the conduct of this business as though it were to be our regular work for years to come. This is the right attitude.

Thrift must be our motto until the war is over and until the devastated nations are again in a position to look after their own needs. Thrift must be the keynote of our lives until we can conscientiously say that the need for it no longer exists. We must exercise thrift in the conduct of our homes and our business activities. Money should not be spent unnecessarily in increasing our physical comforts; we should even be satisfied with less. Instead of saying "Better be dead than out of style" we must learn to say "Better be out of style than spend money disloyally." The use of our personal abilities also demands attention. Many well intentioned people of high ability have been spending their time in work that requires no great amount of training when they might have made their efforts count for much greater good by helping organize some branch of our resources under Government direction. The waste of personal talent is serious. In handling our food we must be especially careful. Not only must the special regulations in regard to the use of sugar and flour be observed but the principle of thrift must be followed throughout. Let no food of any sort be wasted. Every pound of food that can be kept from wasting adds to our national strength. Each family is a guardian of the nation's honor. Each individual should feel that his or her co-operation is important.

The U. S. Food Clubs afford the best opportunity that is open to the citizens of Indiana for securing that high degree of strength that is the result of unity. Do not waste this opportunity. Talk over your problems, discuss your methods, pass on any useful information you possess to your neighbors in the food clubs. Make the food club the power it ought to be as a war agency.

The Brand of Judas.

By Herbert C. Hoover.

"It appears to us that no right-minded man wants extra profit from the war. If he does, he should be branded with the brand of Judas for selling the blood of our sons for profit. One looming shadow of this war is the drift toward socialism; for the gigantic sacrifice of life the world is demanding a sacrifice of property. We will surely drift to that rocky coast (referring to conditions in Russia) unless we can prove the economic soundness and willingness for public service of our commercial institutions. It is worth while examining the developments in Russia from this point of view. There no practical or effective form of commercial regulation or distribution was undertaken. In consequence of speculation, profiteering, and failure in commerce to serve public interest, the condition of the industrial classes became so intolerable as to steam the hotbed of revolution. The strain of practical socialism in the Russian revolution was the reaction from the failure of the government and the commercial classes to meet their public duty."

Division Will Offer Special War Courses

Extension Work of Indiana University Contemplates Meeting the New Situation.

Special war courses will be offered in Indianapolis by Indiana University Extension Division, beginning September 23. Dr. E. M. Linton, assistant professor of political science at the university, will give a course in the Great World War, its causes and problems, Tuesday evenings at 7:30, that will be of interest to students and to war speakers. His course in World Problems of Today, on Tuesday afternoons at 4:00, will deal with the important current events and developments of the war. Dr. Linton is at present giving similar instruction at the request of the War Department, to the men in the camps about the city.

War French is another course designed to prepare people for war service. This course, which will be given by Miss Alice Dunn of Indianapolis, will meet the practical needs of persons who expect to go to France, either as soldiers, nurses, relief workers, Y. or Y. W. C. A. workers, or members of any branch of the governmental service.

A Red Cross course in Dietetics will be given for women who wish to co-operate with the Red Cross by releasing women now doing home nursing. It will also take up the problems of food conservation as they are modified from time to time by the requests of the Food Administration. This course will be in charge of the Home Economics Department of Indiana University, and will be given on Monday afternoon at 4:00 and Monday evening at 7:30.

Dr. G. F. Reynolds, associate professor of English, will give a course of lectures and readings from the great mass of war literature. Students will be given a printed list covering a mass of books of verse, novels, essays, speeches and personal experiences of war writers. The course will be grouped around such subjects as the following: The war and the individual; the war and religion; the aims of the war; the new experiences of the war; the war and the nation; the growth of patriotism.

Public Speaking for War Service and Public Education, which Professor Edgar C. Frazier will give on Friday evenings at 8:00 o'clock, is intended to prepare men and women to undertake war speaking of different kinds. Students will be brought face to face with their audiences in the work of the class and in the assignments for speeches throughout the city. During the last six months Professor Frazier has trained many speakers who have gone out under the auspices of the State Council, the Four-Minute-Men, and the Women's Section of the State Council.

War Publicity Methods constitute another course that will be offered on Wednesday evenings at 7:30 by Professor J. W. Piercy, head of the journalism department Indiana University. Miss M. B. Orvis' course in Magazine Writing will take up the study of the different magazines.

Business Psychology, which Dr. W. F. Book, head of the Department of Philosophy at Indiana University, will offer on Thursdays at 8:00 p. m., will be valuable to people who have charge of the selection and promotion of employees and whose problems are much intensified by the war drafts.

Other war courses will probably be offered by the university as new demands are created by the war.

"Carrying On" the Baby Test

By Mrs. Max West.

This is the twentieth of a series of weekly articles on How Mothers Can Help in Children's Year.

Clinics for well children—many stationary, some on wheels, nurses, milk stations, dental clinics, classes in child care for older sisters, classes for mothers—all are combining to make healthier children in the United States as a result of the children's year weighing and measuring test. According to the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor, which is conducting the children's year campaign in co-operation with the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense, the examinations showed that of the millions of children examined many need more expert care, and consequently health agencies have been established to provide it.

And in addition millions of mothers have been set to thinking about the needs of the Nation's young citizens and seriously considering how to make conditions more favorable to their health, happiness and welfare. Thousands of parents have been stirred to take note of things that had never entered their consciousness before. Many a mother has been surprised to learn that for a child to be conspicuously under the usual weight for his height is a sign of a serious condition. Many have never before understood that malnutrition is a grave menace to any child. Perhaps they did not even know what malnutrition is, nor its hundreds of obscure manifestations. Many others have never before comprehended all that was included in their responsibility for their child's health. Today thousands of adults, who might have been perfectly healthy, are getting along on only about half-rations of health and strength because the parents of a generation ago were not awake to these things and did not know how to give their children the care necessary for a maximum of health.

Just now wholesome recreation is the topic of consideration in the Children's Year. As before, many parents have never understood the office of play in the life of the child nor its vital relation to his welfare. Many of these will learn much which will increase the well-being of their children from this demonstration of the value of recreation. A little later the Children's Year will ask the parents of the United States to consider other phases of child life and need. Among them will be child labor, compulsory education, the income that is necessary for a decent home life, and the question of what becomes of the child whose mother goes out to work.

Food Administration

The Sugar Equalization Board, upon the approval of the President, fixed the price of cane sugar for next year basis granulated nine cents less two per cent f. o. b. seaboard refining points, effective Monday, September 9.

Wholesalers and retailers will sell upon the old basis until their stocks of the lower-priced sugars are exhausted. No averaging of price will be allowed.

All increase in price of sugar in the hands of refiners, or of raw sugar under contract, is to be accounted for to the Sugar Equalization Board, so that manufacturers will not benefit by the increased price.

A price for beet pulp, wet and dry, will be fixed by the Food Administration, in the interests of cattle feeders, in the course of a few days.

Over Here!

By H. C. Witwer.

(With a genuflection to George M. Cohen.)

Johnny save your mon, save your mon, save your mon!

Help us lick the Hun, lick the Hun, lick the Hun! Uncle Sam's calling on you and me For another loan for Liberty!

Hurry right away, get your pay, go today!

Buy bonds by the score, then some more, win the war!

They're not asking much of you, look what our boys in France must do!

Over Here!
Over Here!

We can fight with all our might right over here!
Every Yankee dollar makes the kaiser holler
And fills our boys in France with cheer!
So do your share, make this loan a bear,
For every bond you buy helps over there!
Put this loan over, put this loan over,
And keep on buying till it's over, over there!

Woman's Section

Wabash County reports to the Woman's Section, Indiana Council of Defense, that its chairman of the Women's Liberty Loan Committee has her organization perfected for the Fourth Liberty Loan drive, which is scheduled to start on September 28, and that the women expect to outdo all former efforts at this time. They will solicit women only during the drive, and their organization will be on the same plan as that of the men of the County Council of Defense. Besides the chairmen in the various townships, there will be forty women captains, one to head each of the voting precincts, and each captain will have nine lieutenants. About four hundred enthusiastic, energetic women in the county are ready to pull together for the Fourth Liberty Loan. Speakers have already been selected and are now being instructed for the drive. This county has also been active in its food conservation department. The emergency home demonstrator has held more than seventy demonstrations, besides attending and speaking before many economics clubs. The community canning kitchen is still open for late vegetables. More than seven hundred cans of vegetables have been canned at this kitchen, and great quantities of corn dried.

Wayne County reports a total acreage in gardens of 1,529 1/2 acres, in which potatoes predominate. There are also 152 acres in sorghum in this county.

The following clipping from the Stars and Stripes, the official paper of the American expeditionary forces, suggests the wisdom of the policy of continuing a strict food conservation program:

"Germans are known to be massing troops in great numbers in the Forêt de Nesles. They are also digging trenches in and around the woods and stringing barbed wire. It is evident they intend to make a vigorous resistance here. They are, in fact, contesting all the ground yielded, and presumably intend to make the advance of the allied troops as costly as possible. However, the German losses unquestionably exceed those of the allies, and the German morale, it is known, is steadily weakening.

"A German prisoner seemed startled today when an American gave him a piece of white bread. He looked at both sides of it, apparently thinking there was something wrong with it. He then told what the rations of the German soldier in his regiment had been. A three-day supply, he declared, consisted of a chunk of black bread, a small can of pork, and a small package of biscuits. He and other prisoners, however, said the crop outlook in Germany is good."

Mrs. Carlisle authorizes the publication of the following dispatch from New York, which appeared in the newspaper press:

"The women of the West show far greater patriotism in foregoing extravagant dressing than the women of the East." This is the judgment of Mrs. Justine J. Hall, a designer of women's dresses at Indianapolis, who is visiting New York and is disagreeably impressed with the "stunning" gowns everywhere displayed in the streets of the metropolis. Mrs. Hall notes "Even factory girls of the East are wearing dresses more stylish than the best-dressed women in Indiana, who in their efforts to practice war economy have adopted a one-piece frock and straw hats," whereas in the East the women continue to be smart, and the styles change as rapidly as in peace time.

The most popular dress in the East is the "old-fashioned Mother Hubbard, cut on the severest lines."

Mrs. Hall earnestly appeals to Eastern women to imitate the sartorial simplicity and sun bonnets of the women of the West.

the seven months' intensified effort contemplated, in preference to the usual nine months.

Chairman Foley announced that arrangements had been made whereby the proposed $50,000 street improvement in the city of Elkhart, about which there had been a controversy, will be deferred until after the war. The Committee on Proposed Construction reported that it had been hearing testimony relative to proposed road improvements in Vigo and Marion counties. The committee asked for another week in which to prepare a report on these matters, and the request was granted.

Frank W. Duffy, a member of the Indiana Board of Vocational Education, and secretary of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, told the council that the federal government is urging the further extension of vocational training and industrial education wherever possible. He said it is essential to the success of the war program that skilled artisans be developed, and "yet," he added, "there are some places in Indiana where vocational training and industrial education are being opposed. Among them is Indianapolis." Mr. Duffy asked whether he should present his statements to the Marion County Council of Defense or to the State council, and on motion of J. L. Keach the matter was referred to the Educational Section of the State council for investigation and report. E. U. Graff, of the Indianapolis public schools, stated that he had never received any formal complaint on the subject, but that all he knew of it were charges printed in the newspapers, which he said were without foundation in truth.

James L. Fieser, district superintendent for civilian relief, Lake Division of the American Red Cross, with headquarters in Cleveland, told the council that he had established in the three States under his jurisdiction, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky, 361 committees whose work is to look after the families of enlisted men as a measure for supporting the morale of the soldiers. He described the methods used for the information of the council and expressed his appreciation of the support that has been accorded the work by Indiana defense organizations.

The council voted to send and pay the expenses of Miss Mable Many, chairman of the Committee on Women in Industry, in the Woman's Section, to the conference of middle western representatives of women workers, in Chicago, September 13 and 14.

W. J. Freeman informed the council that the car shortage had served to reduce the coal output of Indiana mines to 60 per cent of their capacity.

George Ade read a letter addressed to the chairman of the council, from President Stone of Purdue university, "approved" by Major Ed Jackson, now in command of the military post there, stating that satisfactory arrangements had been made relative to the use of the facilities of the university. Mr. Ade said that inquiry had developed that every other State university in the country had freely offered the unrestricted use of its facilities to the soldiers "except Purdue." He added that the council had been justified in appointing a committee to investigate the situation there. Samuel T. Murdock said that the report of the special committee had not intended to convey the meaning that there had been no basis for the assertion that the soldier boys had been denied the use of the Purdue library, the swimming pool and parts of the campus. "We made the report conservative in order to afford an opportunity for a modification of the conditions," said Mr. Murdock, and he added that the meaning of the report had been "distorted." The council on motion of J. L. Keach "approved the action of the committee."

A letter from Dr. S. T. Lytle, of the First Brethren Church of Warsaw, saying that certain persons of Warsaw had been subjected to violent treatment on the "first gasoline-less Sunday," was read by Dr. Allen B. Philpott. The letter said the headquarters of the self-constituted vigilance committee was at a corner cigar store, and that persons known to be patriotic had been abused. The matter was referred to the Kosciusko County Council of Defense for investigation and report.

S. J. Brandenburg, of the Ohio State Council of Defense, told the council he had come to Indiana to study the council and its methods, and felt well repaid for his efforts. He said he appreciated the courtesy extended him, as well as the information secured here.

Red Cross Activities

kins, the Italian Commissioner, at the close of the second war fund campaign, will be of general interest:

"The Red Cross drive has been an overwhelming success, not alone in the amount raised, but in the spirit shown throughout the country. I will cable you shortly the final figures. We are now in position to carry out such work as your commission recommends, and upon consideration of the War Council it will be approved, all to the end and in the spirit which you and your associates have perfectly understood. It is vitally important that any program adopted by the Red Cross in any part of the world should be carried out in such a manner that everyone can justly feel that each dollar has been treated as though it were the particular dollar given by the person making the greatest sacrifices in order to give.

"As stated at the beginning, the expenditures authorized by the War Council in Washington for the six months ending December 31, 1918, amount to $12,657,837.50. The original estimate was one million dollars less, but the battle of the Piave, while a great victory, was nevertheless attended with losses that entailed the expenditure of another million in caring for the wounded.

"In so far as the amount of money to be expended is concerned, the item of furnishing food to the refugees and families of soldiers at the front is given first place in the work now being done. This service, known as the canteen service, consists of furnishing 15,000 rations daily, which will take 14,000 tons of food from the United States each month and will be served from more than 100 kitchens. This service will be furnished at a cost of $3,300,000.

"The next matter is the employment of those who are able to do some part in the war. To this end 28 workshops have been erected in various parts of Italy. They give employment to 5,000 women, who are using 747 sewing machines. The appropriation for this branch of Red Cross activity amounts to $3,077,140.

A colony for refugees from Venetia, near the Pisa, is taking care of 2,000 persons, and before the snow flies, this probably will be increased by 15,000 more. Cost of the establishment of this colony amounts to $1,155,000.

"If the morale of the men at the front is to be maintained, their families must be properly cared for. Details provide for shops, shoe factories, work by nurses, financial assistance to Italian institutions engaged in this field. For this purpose $1,030,700 has been appropriated.

"There are many other activities that will cost heavily, and which have been provided for. Among them are: Surgical dressings and surgical instruments, $1,241,212.50; supplies, including gasoline and appliances, maintenance of every description, allowances for drivers and living expenses, $495,000; canteen rest-rooms, $453,722.50; gifts of clothing and other necessities for soldiers at the front, $110,000; food for children, $357,500; for purchase and maintenance of nurses' home at Milan, $55,027.50; for all medical work, $40,425; for district offices and general offices at Rome, $41,250; fund for prevention of tuberculosis, $1,100,000; transportation, $33,000; purchasing section, $4,620; storage section, $63,250; finance section, $21,505; section of the secretary-general, $46,695; section of public information, $31,700.

"The foregoing is a resume of the work that has been done in Italy and of the expenditures of the work being done. Should the needs of the war demand a continuation of this work and the expenditure of even a greater sum, there is no doubt that the American people will respond."

In August 82 graduate nurses of Indiana applied to the Red Cross for active service, according to the monthly report of Miss Anna Gladwin, acting director of the Lake Division Bureau of Nursing.

Sixty-six of these applications were received from Indianapolis, 11 from South Bend, 3 from Vincennes and 2 from Ft. Wayne.

The latest official report from Washington, stated that the Lake Division up to that time had only secured 43 per cent of its quota.

It is estimated that a total of 400 applications per month must be received if the division is to furnish its 1918 quota by the close of the year.

The August report of Red Cross articles received at the Indiana warehouse for the month of August show that Indiana women turned out 836,575 surgical dressings in this period. The report shows other activities of the Red Cross shops for the month as follows:

Hospital garments, 62,688; hospital supplies, 35,197; refugee garments, 54,509; pairs of socks, 16,780; sweaters, 16,561; helmets, 4,075; wristlets, 1,205; comfort kits, 6,769. With cooler and more comfortable weather on the program, state Red Cross officials expect the next three months to be a record breaking period.

Red Cross Home Service in August reached more Indiana families than in any other month since the outbreak of the war. Altogether 2,942 families of Indiana soldiers and sailors were dealt with by chapter Home Service Sections. Of this number 1,248 received information only. During the month these Indiana Sections spent $3,144.83 in carrying out their work.

These facts are from the monthly report of James L. Fieser, Director of Civilian Relief in the Lake Division American Red Cross.

In Ohio 8,205 families were dealt with and $1,506.96 was spent. The report shows that every chapter in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky now has a Home Service Section.

Mr. Fieser announces that 4 more Home Service Institutes are soon to be opened to train more workers for this branch of Red Cross work. An Institute will open in Cleveland on October 15, in Columbus September 23, at Cincinnati September 10 for Cincinnati people and on November 5 for non-residents of Cincinnati. An Institute will also open at Indianapolis on September 19.

Boys Helped Tomato Pack.

Benjamin Blumberg, city director for the United States Boys' Working Reserve in Terre Haute, who has been very active and effective in his efforts to secure boys to assist in the tomato harvest, has reported to the State director the receipt of the following letter, which is self-explanatory:

Terre Haute, Ind., September 6, 1918.

Mr. Benjamin Blumberg,
United States Boys' Working Reserve,
City.

Dear Mr. Blumberg—We wish to thank you for your efforts in obtaining boys to help us out in the rush of our tomato pack. We believe you were instrumental in our employing about 50 boys, who up until a few days ago did excellent work, and am sorry some of them had to leave to go back to school.

Thanking you for your co-operation with us, we remain,
Yours very truly,

THE LOUDON PACKING COMPANY.

Reports from other canners indicate that the city and county directors did a very valuable work in helping to save the 1918 tomato pack, a large portion of which has been commandeered by the United States government for the soldiers and sailors, who are said to have developed a great fondness for canned tomatoes.

Can all you can. This releases commercially-canned goods for our soldiers and sailors.

Local Importance of Work No Justification

War Industries Board Makes Clear Risk Involved In All Building Enterprises.

In reply to an inquiry received from the school authorities at Crawfordsville, Ind., which was forwarded to Washington, Chairman M. E. Foley, of the Indiana State Council of Defense, has been informed that in view of conditions—the lack of transportation facilities and shortage of raw material—it probably will be necessary to defer school building construction until after the war. The War Industries Board in this connection, sent forward a copy of a resolution on the subject of war-time improvements, as follows:

Whereas, It has come to the notice of this board that new industrial corporations are being organized in different sections of the United States, for the erection of industrial plants which cannot be utilized in the prosecution of the war; and

Whereas, Plans are being considered by certain states, counties, cities and towns for the construction of public buildings and other improvements which will not contribute toward winning the war; and

Whereas, The carrying forward of these activities will involve the utilization of labor, materials and capital urgently required for war purposes; now therefore, be it

Resolved, By the War Industries Board that in the public interest, all new undertakings not essential to and not contributing either directly or indirectly toward winning the war, which involve the utilization of labor, material and capital required in the production, supply or distribution of direct or indirect war needs, will be discouraged notwithstanding that they may be of local importance and of a character which should in normal times meet with every encouragement. Be it, therefore,

Resolved, That in fairness to those interested therein, notice is hereby given that this board will withhold from such projects priority assistance, without which new construction of the character mentioned will frequently be found impracticable, and that this notice shall be given wide publicity, that all parties interested in such undertakings may be fully apprised of the difficulties and delays to which they will be subjected and embark upon them at their peril.

The Spirit of France

Much has been told of the spirit of France since the war began. Many heroic things—victories, sacrifices, courage beyond belief, uncomplaining resistance to the slow agony of hunger, cold and personal loss—have developed from this marvelous, idealistic devotion to their own land. Nothing illustrates it better than a tale which a Red Cross worker brings back to America.

Last winter sugar was scarce in France, even as it is now—so scarce that it was and is an almost unknown luxury to many.

Officials of the Red Cross decided to invite the school children of Paris to a luncheon. So all the small folks of the city were gathered together and feasted on the great cups of chocolate, which is their delight, with an ample supply of bread.

Then because candy is no longer made in France, because the land of French pastry knows pastry no more, because there must be a surprise, a final treat, a "bonne bouche," each little guest, out of the stores of the Red Cross, was given to eat a lump of sugar, one of the half dominoes of loaf sugar.

There were smiles of thanks, grateful words of delighted appreciation from these children of Paris, starved for sweets through so many weary months.

But then—a pause.

A few of the scores and scores of children ate their sugar joyously; others looked at it longingly; but most of it was at once whisked out of sight, clasped closely in little hands, slipped into tiny pockets.

Then came surprised questionings from those giving and serving the luncheon—and whispered, half-shy explanations in response.

"Yes, yes, every one loved sugar, but—" and then it was discovered that each small person had the same thought, born of the wonderful spirit of France, quite without other prompting.

If the sugar were taken home, saved quite carefully, it might be put into a tiny box and sent to a soldier fighting at the front for France. We in America now are asked to eat not more than two pounds of sugar a month—which is far more than the French are getting—in order that we may send a part of our usual amount to our own soldiers in France and that we may share with these little French patriots.

Food Clubs Serve to Correct False Reports

By C. V. Stainsby, assistant to Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

The United States Food Clubs have a distinct service to render in correcting false reports. Occasionally a rumor will start that certain food regulations have been discontinued or that certain foods are injurious to health. Such a rumor soon comes to the ear of a Food Club member. Immediately the question is referred to the Food Administration for an official statement, and the lie is killed. The recent change in the wheat regulations furnishes a good example of this. No sooner had the word gone out that the fifty-fifty rule had been recalled than questions came to the administration offices from all parts of the State. Is it true that flour can now be purchased without substitutes? Is it true that rye flour is now a substitute on the same basis as other substitutes? Is it true that we may buy all the flour we want? These are typical of the questions that were asked. The neighborhood Food Club affords a medium through which reliable information can be secured. In order that there may be no misunderstanding of the new flour regulations, a special bulletin is going to all the Food Clubs in the State. In this way uncertainty and confusion will be avoided.

Every new regulation and every change in an old regulation affords an occasion for misleading rumors. These are intended to cause confusion. Every moment, every ounce of staples lost through misunderstanding the food rules is an aid to the enemy. Those who would favor the enemy are eager to cause just such delays. Do you want to be in line for official food information? Do you want to be able to nail German food lies when you meet them? Do you want to help Uncle Sam beat the Kaiser? The Food Clubs will give you your opportunity to help. Join a United States Food Club in your neighborhood.

Sick Enemy Fares Better Than Wounded

Reporting to Captain Hutchins of the Home and Hospital Section, Captain de Forest, of Base Zone No. 1, gives an interesting account of the Fourth of July distribution to the sick and wounded. This included 1,500 pounds of chocolates and an equal number of packages of cigarettes as well as other supplies.

Captain de Forest adds:

"It may be interesting also to you to know that in two different wards there was a German prisoner. In each ward, before offering to distribute the package to the German prisoner, Mrs. de Forest asked for a vote by raised hands from the men in the ward as to whether the package should be given to the German. In the first ward, where all the other boys in the ward are wounded who have come from the front, the vote was substantially 49 to 1 against giving the package to the German—who did not get it. In the other ward where there are no wounded, merely sick, the vote was unanimous in favor of the German's receiving the packages, and as a matter of fact, when he did receive the package he appeared to hardly believe that it was his."

President's Answer To Enemy Rejoinders

February 11, President Wilson addressed the congress following the rejoinders of Germany and Austria-Hungary to the speech of January 8. He outlined the following principles as a test as to whether it was possible for either government (Austria-Hungary or the United States) to go further in a comparison of peace views:

"1. That each part of the final settlement must be based upon the essential justice of that particular case and upon such adjustments as are most likely to bring a peace that will be permanent.

"2. That peoples and provinces are not to be bartered about from sovereignty to sovereignty as if they were mere chattels and pawns in a game, even the great game, now forever discredited, of the balance of power, but that

"3. Every territorial settlement involved in this war must be made in the interest and for the benefit of the populations concerned and not as a part of any mere adjustment or compromise of claims against rival states; and,

"4. That all well defined national aspirations shall be accorded the utmost satisfaction that can be accorded them without introducing new or perpetuating old elements of discord and antagonism that would be likely in time to break the peace of Europe and consequently of the world.

"A general peace erected upon such foundations can be discussed. Until such a peace can be secured we have no choice but to go on. So far as we can judge, these principles that we regard as fundamental are already everywhere accepted as imperative except among the spokesmen of the military and annexationist party in Germany."

Office Help Is Needed.

The federal government through the United States Civil Service Commission, John A. McIlhenny, president, renews its appeal for stenographers and typewriters. It announces that provision has been made for housing 4,000 additional workers, who are asked to take the tests offered in 550 cities of the country every Tuesday. It is stated that important war work is being delayed because of the shortage of office help, and the appeal is made to eligibles to engage in the work "as a patriotic duty." Plans are under way for housing thousands of workers in government constructed and operated houses.

Information relative to the tests are available at any postoffice.

The American Flag.

It flies to-day on the Seven Seas. In two continents, and on islands of the Pacific and the Caribbean. American soldiers carry it reverently.

In battle it shines over men who are paying a debt we have owed to France since a time when the Flag itself existed only in spirit. Our airmen bear it above the Italian Alps.

Dumb, it speaks all languages. It tells civilized Europe more in an instant than all the orators could say in a year.

A crude, inartistic combination of bold colors, it is the most beautiful thing in the world.

Its stars change in numbers, but its meaning is as changeless as the blue of a cloudless noon.

If all statutes vanished and all statesmen died, the Flag would still show the way.

No one man is particularly associated with it; no woman, except Betsy Ross and the bronze lady of New York harbor.

A thousand years hence, when men read of the Great War with the same distant curiosity that they to-day offer toward the Rome of Gibbon, the Flag will be as it is now.

It is not the banner of the sword, or ambition, or empire, but of mankind's undying desire for universal Liberty.

Council Requested to O. K. Improvements

Construction Committee Working Out Plans for Executing Enlarged Program.

Horace Ellis, State Superintendent of Public Instruction and chairman of the Educational Section of the Indiana State Council of Defense, at the request of Chairman M. E. Foley, reported to the meeting of the council, September 17th, the results of his inspection of Interlaken school at Rolling Prairie, Ind. Mr. Ellis informed the council that he had received communications questioning the loyalty of the school, but that his investigation had disclosed nothing in the personnel of the faculty or in the school's program that would indicate the least disloyalty. He said that he found German pictures, "steins" and other suggestions of Germany, which he advised the school officials to remove before the 1,500 American boys, who are to be assigned to the school for instruction in motor driving, for the United States army, arrive on November 1st. The council, on motion received the report and extended its thanks to Mr. Ellis for his information. Chairman Foley was authorized to report the results of the investigation to the War Department.

The report of the Committee on Proposed Construction, which appears elsewhere in the Bulletin, was read and approved. The chairman of the committee, A. W. Brady, then read for the information of the council communications from the State Councils section of the Council of National Defense the following documents outlining an extension of the policy of curtailing improvements during the war:

Bulletin No. 113.

CURTAILMENT OF NON-WAR CONSTRUCTION.

September 11, 1918.

To the Several State Councils of Defense:

The War Industries Board asks the State Councils of Defense to act as its representatives in passing upon proposed construction, in order that all building which is not absolutely necessary may be stopped. This is part of the new plan of the War Industries Board, by which permits from the board will be required for construction projects, with a few exceptions relating principally to government work.

This plan has been adopted only because of the imperative necessity of conserving labor, materials and capital for war purposes.

The procedure will be as follows:

1. The person interested in a construction project will apply, with a full statement of the facts under oath, to the appropriate local representative of the State Council of Defense.

2. The local representative of the State Council will then investigate the necessity of the proposed construction and transmit its recommendation, with a summary of the facts, to the State Council for review.

3. The State Council, or its appropriate committee, will review the case.

- (a) If the State Council decides in favor of the construction it will at once send its recommendation, with a full statement of all the facts, to the Non-War Construction Section of the Priorities Division of the War Industries Board. The Non-War Construction Section will

An Extended Mission

With this number the Indiana Bulletin becomes the joint publication of the Indiana State Council of Defense and the United States Food Administration for Indiana. The Bulletin will continue, as before, to encourage all patriotic activity in the State and in addition will seek to serve the Food Administration through a more extensive presentation of matter pertinent to the desired increased production and conservation of food. It will also try to stimulate the inauguration of price reporting and the publication in the newspapers of an "Official Fair Price List," in order that profiteering be reduced to an absolute minimum. It will also discuss the important significance of a food surplus as the best guarantee of our ability to successfully accomplish the task in hand—making the world safe for free peoples.

then grant or withhold the permit and notify the State Council of Defense, and also the individual concerned of its action.

- (b) If the State Council decides against the proposed construction it will notify the person concerned that his project has been disapproved.

4. The State Council will report monthly to the Non-War Construction Section all applications submitted to it, including those decided adversely.

The War Industries Board will inform all persons applying directly to it that they must first take up their projects with the appropriate local representative of the State Council of Defense. Persons interested in construction projects against which a State Council of Defense has ruled can appeal to the War Industries Board, but in such cases the board will attach great importance to the negative decision of the State Council. You will undoubtedly concur with the board's decision that it is not necessary to call public attention to the privilege of appeal.

The ability of the War Industries Board to enforce this whole plan rests upon the fact that it controls priorities and has also secured from the manufacturers of building materials a pledge not to supply materials for projects which are not authorized under the regulations of the War Industries Board.

To carry on the work outlined above, we recommend that you create a small committee on Proposed Construction. We urge the selection of men of broad experience, who are known to be disinterested and who are so located that they can assemble frequently. If an existing committee can do this work, it can be assigned to them. The duties of this committee will be:

1. To create and direct the sub-organization throughout your State. As the need of action is immediate, we believe in cases where practicable your county councils or like organization should be utilized.

2. To see that the plan of the War Industries Board for the curtailment of construction is understood throughout the State and to create a public state of mind which will automatically discourage building.

3. To maintain regular communication with the War Industries Board on the one hand and with local representatives on the other hand, in order that the policies of the War Industries

Auditor of State Commends Reserve

Otto Klauss Urges Bankers to Assist Farmers in Securing Only Available Labor for 1919 Season.

Otto L. Klauss, Auditor of State for Indiana, has made a personal appeal to all financial institutions of the State in a canvass of the labor needs on the farm. Mr. Klauss points out to the bankers that the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, organized under the statutory power of the United States Department of Labor, and co-operating with the Indiana State Council of Defense, has enrolled many thousands of physically able willing patriotic boys who want to do their bit by helping with productive work, principally on the farm.

He commends this agency as the only remaining source of labor supply for future requirements and especially requests that the bankers of the State assist in breaking down ancient prejudices and the prevalent apathy of the farmer, unwilling to depart from old customs.

In soliciting the co-operation on the part of city and county directors of the Reserve with the banks in this campaign, Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director, says that "we must realize the significance of the ever increasing call for help of the farmers of Indiana and the ever increasing drain on the supply of man-power available for farm service." He adds that the Reserve must put forth every effort to furnish a supply of young men from 15 to 18 years of age in agricultural production in this time of need.

School Boys Are Available.

National Field Organizer Carl B. Fritche, of the Reserve, referring to the plan adopted in Indianapolis, for the release of boys who have made the necessary credits, in time to do farm work, without penalty in their school standing, says:

"The able bodied boys themselves, and their parents who desire to assist in every possible way to win the war, may be assured that their school duties need not interfere with their doing their bit for Uncle Sam in this crisis. The school superintendents last year made arrangements for the release of those boys who were entitled to credits, at an earlier date than school dismissed regularly.

As a consequence many thousands of dollars' worth of food stuffs were planted and cultivated that otherwise might not have been produced. Indiana farmers are depending more and more upon the boys, and the Reserve is organizing to meet this situation. The United States Department of Agriculture has recognized the importance of the Reserve in its farm labor situation and is concentrating its effort to induce farmers to avail themselves of this important reserve.

"The Indiana high school boys and their parents know their first and most effective opportunity to contribute to the success of the war lies in productive work at home and they will measure their school duties in anticipation of this contribution. The boys will be available for the spring planting, now that they know that they will be protected in their school standing as soon as they have made the necessary credits. I am confident that they will prove equal to the needs of the times and be ready as early in the spring as the farmers make their wants known."

Patriotism in Indiana

Benton County.—At the meeting of the county council of defense it was decided that the county agent call a meeting of the farmers and working men to consider price for corn shucking. . . . A motion was also passed that each chairman of the township council of defense organize community singing in his township.

Delaware County.—The entertainment arranged for the "jacksies" who came to Muncie with the United States naval publicity train was so well received that prominent Muncie women are organizing a community service for the purpose of entertaining all service men coming to the city.

Elkhart County.—The Red Cross appeared in a new role when it took a hand in getting sugar cards to people. Four young women were assigned to Deputy Food Administrator P. L. Beck to assist in this work, and with this volunteer help work during the rush hours was much facilitated. . . . The frequent calls being made on the Elkhart Red Cross canteen service are creating the need for a canteen hut to be used for the storing of supplies and serving of meals. Last Saturday night at 9 o'clock a call came to feed 175 non-commissioned officers passing through on their way from Massachusetts to an officers' school in Illinois. They were promptly provided with sandwiches, hard-boiled eggs, fresh tomatoes, pickles, coffee, ice cream and cookies. The men were thoroughly appreciative of the service.

Clinton County.—The Clinton County War Fathers' organization held its regular meeting at Frankfort last Sunday. Although the weather was very unfavorable, not a member of the club used his machine, the members reaching the city on trains, interurbans and buggies, some even walking great distances, so great is their interest in the boys. H. C. Sheridan of the resolutions committee presented the following resolution, which was adopted: "Be it resolved, by the War Fathers' Club of Clinton County, at a regular meeting of that society, that we as individuals and as a whole deeply deplore the cruel murder of that gallant young soldier, Clarence Wohfeld, whose death was the result, not of honorable warfare, but of a bomb dropped by his murderers on the white cot in the hospital where he lay recovering from the wounds received in the battle for liberty. He met his death from the secret attack of uncivilized savages, who shall be taught, before this war ends, that nations may become enemies and fight honorable warfare, but that the taking of life of the weak and helpless non-combatant is not to be and shall not be endured. Be it further resolved, that his parents and family have our sincerest sympathy, and be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be furnished the family of the deceased soldier by the hand of our esteemed secretary."

Henry County.—Newcastle had a "tag day" last week for the Salvation Army and $526 was collected, which will be used in winter relief work. Efficient help was rendered by the Tri Kappas, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts. . . . About 70 of the soldiers in charge of a detachment of forty army trucks which drove through Newcastle on September 12th, were extended the hospitality of the Y. M. C. A. club rooms that night. The boys were stationed at the Millikan grove, east of the city, for the night, and returned to Newcastle in two of the big trucks. Some indulged in boxing and wrestling, others used the reading and writing rooms, and quite a number enjoyed the shower bath. The club rooms will hereafter be turned over to each detachment of truck drivers when they pass through the city. . . . The war mothers will hold an all-day meeting September 19th, at the home of Mrs. L. P. Kerlin in Middletown. The day will be spent in making comforts.

Huntington County.—The Huntington County Council of Defense has declared war on woodchucks (commonly known as ground-hogs), owls, hawks and crows, by offering bounties for proof of their violent death in the county. Twenty-five cents each is offered for woodchucks, owls and hawks, and ten cents each for crows.

Kosciusko County.—On September 16th twelve seed corn meetings were held at various points throughout the county—at schoolhouses and other places convenient for the assembling of farmers interested. The meetings were under the management of County Agent W. E. Zechiel and were held for the purpose of considering the time and method of selecting, storing and keeping seed corn. County agents from Grant, Wabash, Miami and Cass counties, in addition to Mr. Zechiel, were the agricultural experts considering conditions and giving the farmers helpful suggestions.

Langrange County.—Food conservation is to have the preferred attention of Lagrange women this winter. The city will be divided into four clubs, with monthly meetings. It is hoped to have every home in town represented in some one of these clubs. The Fourth ward section has held its organization meeting, and the following officers have been chosen: President, Mrs. Arthur G. Hinkley; secretary, Mrs. A. B. Cookerly; program committee chairman, Mrs. Clayton B. Hinkley; census list chairman, Mrs. Clarence L. Robinson; recipe exchange chairman, Mrs. Shuman; slacker committee chairman, Mrs. Hiram Norris; Lieutenants, Mrs. G. M. White, Mrs. William E. McKenzie and Mrs. Hiram Norris.

Laporte County.—Miss Gladys Snapp, food demonstrator, has arranged a four-demonstration program for Laporte County this week. On Tuesday a canning demonstration was given at the home of Mrs. John Perkins in Union Township; Wednesday a cottage cheese demonstration was given at the home of Mrs. Willard Place in Johnson Township;

Thursday yeast bread was her subject at Pine Lake Grange, Center Township; and Friday sugarless cakes and cookies were listed for demonstration at Hanna.

Marion County.—Following the discovery of the "made in Germany" mark on paints used by children in the Indianapolis grade schools, and after emphatic protests had been made against the use of the paints by the parents of the children, the president of the school board stated he would demand the removal of the paints from the school supplies.

Owen County.—An all-night campfire, celebrating the 104th anniversary of the writing of the "Star-Spangled Banner," was held in Jackson Township, where a huge fire was kept burning from twilight until dawn, illuminating a large American flag flying from a high hill on the Buning farm. At midnight a camp supper was served. Music was furnished by a quartette, and patriotic songs and talks completed an interesting program.

Perry County.—Mrs. Lee Rodman, woman member of the council of defense, has sent in a report showing Perry County Red Cross activities since the initial shop for this service was opened in July, 1917, at Cannelton. In the following three months four additional shops were opened and these five Perry County shops, up to the time Red Cross work was put on an assignment basis in June, 1918, turned out the following: Hospital garments, 3,248; bandages, 18,964; property bags and pillows, 129; with about 500 knitted articles. Practically $5,000 was raised by benefits and donations to help pay for the materials. Since June of this year the following assignments have been completed: Bed sacks, 500; petticoats, 300; comfort kits, filled, 80; and sweaters, 125.

Pussy County.—With an interesting ceremony at the opening of school, Monday morning, September 16th, Wabash chapter of the Camp Fire Girls of New Harmony presented a service flag, honoring all the boys who have been in this high school and are now in the ranks of war. The stars numbered fifty-two, with one triangle.

Rush County.—Official report shows that Rush County on September 7th lacked just $11,955.50 of its W. S. S. quota, but officials confidently count on this amount being overpaid during the balance of this month. . . . Because of the rapidly growing membership of the Rush County War Mothers' Association, the social club rooms of Rushville have been thrown open to them for their semi-monthly meetings. This is the first time in the history of the club that the rooms have been open to the meetings of any other organization, except the Red Cross, to whom the courtesy was extended last fall of having their headquarters there.

Shelby County.—Shelbyville has sent out an urgent appeal for help at the surgical dressing room of the Red Cross. The work for the September quota is far behind completion, and with the present limited number of women working it is not possible to make the required headway. Shelby County has practically a thousand boys in the service, and it is expected the women of the county will respond in sufficient numbers to help out in this surgical dressing work. . . . Miss Elizabeth Bennett of VanBuren Township is doing her bit as a farmerette. This is Shelby County's first farmerette, and the climax of her success was reached last week when she brought a load of corn to the nearest canning company's plant, unhitched the horses herself and transacted business in the company's office. This was the first occurrence of the kind at the canning plant, and created considerable comment on the splendid spirit of the girl. On the death of her father there was no one to manage the farm or care for the crops, but she has successfully undertaken this most important work.

St. Joseph County.—Mrs. Victor Jones, chairman of the U. S. Nurses' Reserve, reports the recent registration of 24 names, with an enrollment pending of 14. Registrants numbering 103 who asked for training during the recent registration of women were notified of this opportunity. Mrs. Horace L. Greene gave the following report for the hospital supply department of the Red Cross for the month of August: Winter convalescent robes, 350; trench foot slippers, 57 pairs; bandaged foot socks, 37 pairs; pinafores, 248; hand towels, 124; bed jackets, 21; pajamas, 2; hospital bed shirts, 29; hospital day shirts, 52; helpless case shirts, 23; undershirts, 64; undershirts, 120; petticoats, 3; infant layette, 1; comfort bags, 16; napkins, 354; wristlets, 78 pairs; helmets, 5; socks, 1,317; sweaters, 4,000; checker boards, 36; box checkers, 40. Capt. Geraldine Robertson of the Indiana Motor Corps presented the new rules and regulations from the State and reported in the past month 82 cars were used, 67½ hours of service were given, and 3,67½ miles were covered. There are now 47 members, 19 of whom are active. Mrs. George O'Brien, chairman of the child welfare committee, told of the registration of 6,700 babies in the county. The registration cards are being filed and nurses from the children's dispensary will follow up cases where the children need help. Miss Maud Heath, chairman of educational propaganda, told of the plans for closer organization, the aim being to reach every individual in the county, giving him a knowledge of the war situation. An investigation of the effect of the industrial situation on the schools will be made, with an effort in view to induce the children now employed in factories to return to their studies. . . . Women have displaced men waiters in the Hotel Oliver for the first time since its opening in 1899.

Sullivan County.—Sullivan held its initial community sing last Saturday night, and its unusual success was due largely to the personal efforts of R. W. Akin and the council of defense.

Vigo County.—The Terre Haute schools made the record of selling more Thrift Stamps last year than the schools of any other city in Indiana. There are very few school children who are not members of some thrift club. In one district alone last week two hundred dollars' worth of stamps were sold—one hundred of these being one-cent purchases. The same school also started forty-three youngsters upon their first book of stamps. . . . As a result of the drive there are many new alics in Vigo County this year. The alic at the Rose Orphanage is a means of helping the children do their bit. The youngsters raised the corn and are now helping fill the alic. They are also saving seeds of all kinds, and enjoy the saving, feeling that it gives them a chance to be "patriotic." . . . The Fourth Liberty Loan drive has opened enthusiastically. Mr. John Crawford of the Council of Defense is district chairman. The women are well organized. Mrs. Nicholas Mesrow is county chairman, and Mrs. Robert E. Lee is chairman of the city of Terre Haute. . . . Vigo County has an organization of 1,000 captains and lieutenants of the County National War Fund Association who are prepared to call on any delinquent members who fail to pay their war chest funds. They are not authorized to make collections, as the association employs no collectors, but simply remind the delinquents of their duty.

Council Requested to O. K. Improvements

Board regarding construction may be uniformly applied locally.

4. To pass upon actual cases of proposed construction.

The War Industries Board will shortly send you further information regarding procedure and will thereafter maintain direct communication with you. The board will also supply you with application and report blanks in quantity. We ask you, however, to set up your organization at once and notify us of your action.

It is hardly too much to say that the success of the entire priorities system of the government will under this plan depend upon you. We trust you will give it your unremitting attention and at the same time impress upon your entire organization the fact that this task will be one of their most important functions. We enclose a copy of a letter in which the Secretary of the Navy, as acting chairman of the Council of National Defense, has assured the chairman of the War Industries Board of your full support.

Very truly yours,
ARTHUR H. FLEMING,
Chief of Section.

September 7, 1918.

Mr. Bernard M. Baruch,
Chairman, War Industries Board,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:—Responsive to your letter of August 22, 1918, to the Secretary of War, as chairman of the Council of National Defense, it gives me pleasure to inform you that in pursuance of a resolution adopted by the Council of National Defense throughout the nation are being requested, through the State Councils Section of the Council of National Defense to co-operate in carrying into effect this plan designed to defer until after the war all construction work which cannot properly be classed as a direct or indirect war necessity, that labor, fuel, transportation, materials and capital may be conserved, mobilized and diverted into channels which will hasten the winning of the war.

The Council of National Defense without reservation pledges its entire organization—national, state and county—to give to the War Industries Board whole-hearted co-operation in carrying this plan into effect.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) JOSEPHUS DANIELS,
Secretary of the Navy and Acting Chairman of the Council of National Defense.

WAR INDUSTRIES BOARD.

Circular No. 21.

NON-WAR CONSTRUCTION.

To All Manufacturers, Jobbers, Distributors, Dealers, and Consumers of Building Materials:
As far back as March 21, 1918, the following resolution was unanimously adopted and given wide publicity by the War Industries Board:

"Whereas, It has come to the notice of this board that new industrial corporations are being organized in different sections of the United States for the erection of industrial plants which can not be utilized in the prosecution of the war; and

Whereas, Plans are being considered by certain states, counties, cities and towns for the construction of public buildings and other improvements which will not contribute toward winning the war; and

Whereas, The carrying forward of these activities will involve the utilization of labor, materials and capital urgently required for war purposes: now, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the War Industries Board, that in the public interest all new undertakings not essential to and not contributing either directly or indirectly toward winning the war, which involve the utilization of labor, material, and capital required in the production, supply, or distribution of direct or indirect war needs will be discouraged, notwithstanding they may be of local importance and of a character which should in normal times meet with every encouragement; and be it further

Resolved, That in fairness to those interested therein notice is hereby given that this board will withhold from such projects priority assistance, without which new construction of the character mentioned will frequently be found impracticable, and that this notice shall be given wide publicity, that all parties interested in such undertakings may be fully apprised of the difficulties and delays to which they will be subjected and embark upon them at their peril."

Since that time the manufacturers of the principal building materials, including paving brick, face brick, common brick, hollow tile, cement, and lime, have agreed to co-operate with the War Industries Board in carrying into effect the spirit of the foregoing resolution, and the individual manufacturers have signed and filed with the Priorities Division pledges in writing substantially as follows:

"The undersigned hereby pledges itself not to use, nor so far as lies within its power permit to be used, any products of its manufacture now in, or which may hereafter come into, its possession or control, save (a) for essential uses as that term has been or may be defined or applied from time to time by the Priorities Division of the War Industries Board, or (b) under permits in writing signed by or under authority of such Priorities Division; that it will make no sale or delivery of such products to any customer for resale until such customer has filed with it a similar pledge in writing, and that it will use its utmost endeavor to insure that its products shall be distributed solely for essential uses."

Similar pledges are exacted by manufacturers from their customers who purchase for resale.

That all interested in the manufacture and sale of building materials, as well as those interested in building projects of every character, may have a clear definition of or a ready means of ascertaining the uses to which such materials may be put, and be advised of building projects which may be prosecuted during the war with the approval of the War Industries Board, this circular is issued.

Structures, roads, or other construction projects falling within the following classifications are hereby approved, and no permits or licenses will be required therefor:

1. After having first been cleared and approved by the War Industries Board; those undertaken directly by or under contract with the War Department or the Navy Department of the United States or the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation, the Bureau of Industrial Housing and Transportation of the United States Department of Labor, or the United States Housing Corporation.

2. Repairs of or extensions to existing buildings involving in the aggregate a cost not exceeding twenty-five hundred dollars ($2,500).

3. Roadways, buildings, and other structures undertaken by or under contract with the United States Railroad Administration or a railroad operated by such administration.

4. Those directly connected with mines producing coal or metals, and ferro-alloy minerals; and

5. Public highways improvements and street pavements when expressly approved in writing by the United States Highways Council.

No building project not falling within one of the foregoing classes shall be undertaken without a permit in writing issued by or under the authority of the Chief of the Non-War Construction Section of the Priorities Division of the War Industries Board.

Should one contemplating building conceive his proposed project to be in the public interest or of such essentiality that under existing conditions it should not be deferred, then he will make a full statement of the facts in writing, under oath, and present same to the local representative of the Council of National Defense, applying to such representative for his approval of the proposed construction. Should such local representative approve the construction project, he will promptly transmit the application, stating clearly and fully his reason for approving same, to the chairman of the State Council of Defense, for his consideration. If approved by the latter, he will transmit it to the Chief of the Non-War Construction Section of the Priorities Division of the War Industries Board, Washington, D. C., for consideration, if need be further investigation, and final decision. Should the application be finally approved by the Priorities Division a construction permit will issue which will constitute a warrant to manufacturers and dealers who have taken the pledges of co-operation above mentioned to sell and deliver building materials required in the construction of the licensed building project.

While it is not the policy of the government to unnecessarily interfere with any legitimate business, industry, or construction project, it must be borne in mind that there is an imperative and constantly increasing demand for labor, material, and capital for the production and distribution of direct and indirect war needs, to satisfy which much non-war construction must be deferred. A full realization of this fact by all loyal and patriotic citizens, including state and municipal authorities, is all that is required to postpone such construction activities as interfere with the war program. The state and local representatives of the Council of National Defense are with confidence depended upon to fully acquaint the whole people of these United States with the pressing need for the most rigid economy, measured not only in terms of dollars but in terms of labor, materials, and transportation service. The construction projects which must now be deferred may be undertaken when we shall have won the war and will then furnish employment to the returning artisan now on the battle front as well as those who will then be released by strictly war industries.

Yours very truly,

EDWIN B. PARKER,

Priorities Commissioner.

Approved.

BERNARD M. BARUCH,

Chairman War Industries Board.

Washington, D. C., September 8, 1918.

The Construction Committee was directed to prepare a plan for executing the program as outlined in the communications, to be reported back to the next meeting of the council, if possible.

Charles L. Barry, representing the members of the Indianapolis Board of Education, presented a formal petition to the council, asking that the matter of the alleged opposition in Indianapolis to a program of vocational training and industrial education, advocated for the war-time emergency by the federal government, which opposition was reported to the council by Frank W. Duffy at a previous meeting, be recalled from the consideration of the Educational Section and heard by the council as a whole. Mr. Barry added that the members of the Indianapolis School Board consider the matter "is not an academic question of school administration, but of a personal nature, touching upon the loyalty of the board members." He added that the charges made by Mr. Duffy be filed in writing, and added that the board considers itself secure in its rights as a board and not legally answerable to any other body or organization. On motion of Dr. Emerson the council deferred action on the petition until it has a report from the Educational Section.

A letter from L. W. Roysse, secretary of the Kosciusko County Council of Defense, stated that the defense organizations of the community had no connection with the administering of yellow paint to vehicles at Winona Park, that it was a wrong not sanctioned by any officials or patriotic citizen, and efforts will be made to prevent the recurrence of anything of the kind. The letter was in response to an inquiry that was made following receipt of a report that violence had characterized the first gasolineless Sunday in Warsaw. The council accepted the explanation and the incident is considered closed.

T. A. Coleman of Purdue, acting director of the Committee on Food Production and Conservation, reported an investigation of the Little River drainage project in Huntington and Allen counties, which had been before the Committee on Proposed Construction. He made an inspection of the drainage area with C. A. Norman, rural engineer of Purdue, he said, and ascertained that about 12,000 acres of land may be reclaimed for cultivation next spring if the project is endorsed and work carried on during the winter. He said he had been informed that the maximum manpower asked for the work is forty, and that only twelve will be needed next summer, when agricultural demands may create a greater scarcity of labor. He added that 60 per cent of the assessments for the cost of the work, estimated at $300,000, will be paid in at once, and the money can be used for no other purpose.

J. J. Pettijohn, former head of the Speakers' Bureau of the State Council, now occupying a similar position with the Committee on Public Information, at Washington, told the council that it is the consensus of opinion at Washington that the most efficient State Council in the Union is the one in Indiana. He said the strength of the councils is considered to be not so much in their legal authority as their "directing influence."

The council referred a proposal to encourage the conservation of waste lubricating oil to the Fuel Committee. A representative of a refinery told the council that approximately 60 per cent of lubricating oil that now goes to waste can be reclaimed and that it is a commodity much needed now by the federal government in its war program.

Evans Woollen, fuel administrator and a member of the council, who has been in Washington assisting the federal fuel administrator, discussing the present coal situation, told the council that "we can reasonably anticipate a less serious condition in the state next winter as to the domestic situation, but as to the industrial situation we may not."

"Indiana has done better generally, from my observation, than any other state except possibly Illinois, in its coal production," Mr. Woollen said. He added that there has been a greater storage of coal than last year. As to the anthracite situation he said "it couldn't be more unsatisfactory. I have some hope, however, of its improving. The transfer of handling from Philadelphia to Chicago may help. But the present anthracite supply is not much in excess of 40 per cent of normal. Our plan is to distribute what anthracite is available in Indiana in three-ton lots to baseburner consumers. On August 1 we were only 5,000 tons behind the expected distribution to that date, but it slowed down during August, and I feel that we were more than that behind on September 1." Mr. Woollen said he expected to resume his regular attendance at the council meetings "within a few weeks."

Avoid the Hessian Fly.

D. S. Myer, state leader of the wheat campaign, has issued warning against the early sowing of wheat on account of the Hessian fly. The Hessian fly is the most troublesome wheat insect with which the farmer has to deal. The only way to combat it is to avoid it, and the best way to avoid it is to sow late. By good soil preparation and liberal fertilization, wheat can safely be sown much later than is commonly believed, and such late sown wheat is more likely to escape the fly.

The fly free dates for sowing range from September 10th in Northern Indiana to October 5th to 10th in the extreme southern part. All farmers have been urged to keep in touch with their county agricultural agents to learn the fly free dates for their section.

County Councils

General Bulletin No. 188.

September 18, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

Referring to General Bulletin No. 179 of August 18, regarding the collection of fruit pits and nut shells for the Gas Defense Division of the Army, we beg to advise that we are just in receipt of information to the effect that the War Department has discontinued the practice of paying for this material, but is appealing to the patriotism of the people of the nation to collect it and deliver it without charge to the designated centers in each county. The local chapters of the Red Cross have been requested to designate these collection centers and to take charge of the material thus collected and ship it to Washington.

The County Councils of Defense may do a great deal in forwarding this campaign by appealing to the boys and girls in school and to the Boy Scouts. The county agricultural agents have all been called on to assist in this work by the authorities at Purdue University.

We suggest that you work out plans for a campaign in your county with the chairman of your local Red Cross chapter, the county agricultural agent and the county superintendent of schools. STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

General Bulletin No. 190.

September 17, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

The campaign for selecting and storing seed corn is now on and the County and Township Councils of Defense are in a position to do a great deal in co-operation with the county agricultural agents, who are in direct charge of this campaign under the supervision of the Extension Division of Purdue University. Township Councils of Defense, Exempted Men Organizations, school children, boy scouts and business men's organizations should be asked to co-operate in reaching every farmer, and a week should be set aside as "Seed Corn Selection Week."

It should not be necessary for Indiana to import any seed corn next year. Corn from outside the State is expensive and generally unsatisfactory.

We are sure that a conference with your county agricultural agent will develop many suggestions which will prove valuable in bringing this campaign to a successful conclusion.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

General Bulletin No. 191.

September 17, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

We wish to call your attention at this time to your opportunity to give valuable assistance to the United States Forest Service in two lines of work which have become especially urgent under war conditions. One of these is that of encouraging the use of wood as fuel; the other is the locating of timber essential for war purposes.

The first of these was the subject of General Bulletins 39 and 51, to which you will please refer again. This work involves, on the one hand, encouraging the farmers to cut and haul in cord wood, and, on the other hand, developing facilities (such as municipal woodyards) in order to make delivery by the farmers easy and to maintain reasonable price levels for the consumers. All this work should be done in co-operation with the county fuel administrator, who should be consulted regarding any plans developed.

The second matter is one of great importance at this time. The manufacturers having contracts to supply articles to the War Department requiring the use of wood are having the greatest difficulty to locate the necessary timber in the central states. In Indiana most of the essential timber grows in scattered fashion and can best be located with the help of some widespread organization. At present these manufacturers are in great need of walnut for airplane propellers and gunstocks, white oak for propellers, ship building and wheels; basswood for saddles, rock elm and ash for airplane construction and black locust for tree nails in ship construction.

Please go over the first matter with your county fuel administrator and the second matter with your county agricultural agent and develop plans for assisting the forest service with their co-operation.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

General Bulletin No. 192.

September 18, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

As a measure of war-time economy, you are asked to undertake a campaign for the extermination of rats and mice.

Rats and mice consume annually food that it takes 200,000 men to produce, destroy property, increase the fire risk, and menace health. We have indifferently allowed this serious drain upon our resources to develop, although it is subject to scientific attack and control. Now, when we are straining every effort to conserve food, a nationwide intensive campaign for the extermination of rats and mice is imperative.

The National Research Council of the Council of National Defense is working with the Bureau of Biological Survey on such a campaign. The food administration is also deeply concerned. All of these organizations have requested the State Council of Defense to throw all of its resources behind this work. We request, therefore, that you immediately organize a campaign along the following lines:

- (1) Start a county-wide educational campaign to bring home to the people the seriousness of losses from rats and mice, and to popularize the best methods of exterminating them;
- (2) Induce municipal governments in your county to enact adequate building ordinances or regulations, providing for the rat-proofing of all new structures insofar as practicable, the rat-proofing of existing structures, and, especially those in which food is stored;
- (3) Instruct your township councils to interview personally all proprietors of warehouses and others handling foodstuffs in quantity and to stimulate each one to undertake combative measures as a public duty;
- (4) Require your Township Councils of Defense to conduct personally an intensive crusade for the extermination of rats and mice. Such a crusade will involve:
  - (a) The killing of rats and mice (the offering of prizes during the crusade may stimulate efforts along this line);
  - (b) The freeing of all premises from rubbish in which rats and mice can find shelter;
  - (c) The rat-proofing of foundations, cellar openings, doorways, etc.

Such township crusades will furnish a tangible objective and may be made the occasion of keen interest.

The State Council is requesting the Bureau of Biological Survey to send to each County Council of Defense full information and advice regarding the proper method of combating rats and mice. The county councils may also secure expert advice from the State Extension Director, Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind.; from the State Board of Health, State House, Indianapolis, Ind., and from the State Fire Marshal, State House, Indianapolis.

We enclose herewith copy of a statement by the chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey which will give you some general information on this subject.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

We enclose extra copy of this bulletin for reference to your proper committee.

STATEMENT

BY CHIEF OF BUREAU OF BIOLOGICAL SURVEY,
U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Control of the Rat Pest a National Problem.

A. LOSSES.

A careful investigation has shown that rats destroy annually foodstuffs and other property amounting to not less than $200,000,000. This exceeds the annual economic output derived from the continuous labor of more than 200,000 men. The following statements briefly summarize the character of the losses from rats:

1. Grain.—Grain is subject to heavy depredations by rats at all stages, from the planted seed to the granary, warehouse, elevator, and all steps of its progress until its final appearance in homes. Losses on the farm from this source sometimes amount to from 20 to 50 per cent of the crop.
2. Poultry.—Losses of young poultry on the farm are general, sometimes amounting to 50 per cent of all the poultry hatched in a considerable territory.

3. Other food products.—Fruits and vegetables, like other stores, are consumed by rats in the fields, in transit, in storage, in the market and in the home. Meats are also subject to their attack from the slaughterhouse to the kitchen, much more of these products being spoiled than are actually consumed by the rodents.

4. Merchandise.—In the aggregate, vast quantities of silk, cotton, woolen and linen fabrics, books, leather goods and practically all manufactured articles not made of metal, glass or hardwood are destroyed by rats.

5. Other damage.—Foundations and floors of buildings are undermined or pierced, and doors, furniture and furnishings are gnawed. In addition, many fires are caused by them through their gnawing the insulation of electric wires, packages of matches, and in other ways. Another direct charge against these pests is the large total cost of poisons, traps and other means of fighting them.

6. Menace to health.—The rat is often the carrier of infectious diseases. Through its parasites it is the primary means of spreading bubonic plague and epidemic jaundice. Millions of people have been killed through rats spreading plagues in the old world, and within recent years the plague was brought by them to San Francisco and New Orleans. Only the vigilance and prompt action of the United States Public Health Service prevented great losses of life and enormous financial losses from this disease in this country.

B. METHODS OF CONTROL.

Owing to the general distribution of rats throughout the country, control of the losses due to these pests can be accomplished only by a national campaign against them. The relative number of rats in any locality is dependent on available shelter and food. Wherever thoroughgoing efforts have been made to ratproof structures and to guard food from them, the results have shown that it is practicable to eliminate, at a moderate cost, a heavy percentage of the enormous annual loss from this source.

The following measures of control are of prime importance:

1. Ratproofing of dwellings, stores, elevators, warehouses and other structures.—New structures should be ratproofed by the use of concrete foundations and wire screens; old buildings should be ratproofed by closing openings and rat burrows with concrete and by screening doors and windows.

2. Protecting food from rats.—Wherever food is not kept in ratproof structures it should be guarded from rats in metal containers or cages of wire netting. Garbage should be kept in metal cans and disposed of in such a way that it does not become accessible as food for rats.

3. Cleaning up premises.—Old, disused buildings, also neglected piles of wood, and trash piles of all descriptions should be torn down or removed. Board walks and other harboring or breeding places for rats should be abolished.

4. Methods of killing rats.—Rats may be destroyed most successfully by the use of poisons, traps, fumigation (in case of ships), and heavy gases, such as that of bisulphid of carbon, when they occupy holes in the ground. Dogs and cats are of minor importance in this work.

5. Educational campaigns.—Widespread knowledge of the economic menace of the rat is essential to arouse the public to the importance of destroying these pests. Instruction in ratproofing and in all other means for their control is needed. For this purpose, states should have a centralized organization with means at their disposal to employ teachers and demonstrators in the work.

6. Organized rat campaigns.—Individual efforts, while affording personal relief, are not sufficient to bring satisfactory results in combating the rat pest. Carefully organized community efforts are needed. Statewide campaigns are recommended, working through county and city organization wherever possible.

Housewives should learn to read the Fair Price List as faithfully as men read the baseball score.

Red Cross Activities

The following is authorized by the Red Cross War Council:

American Red Cross relief work in Switzerland from the time the United States entered the war until December 31, 1918, will cost $1,972,233.75, according to a statement issued by the War Council of the organization. The statement was made in connection with the War Council's report to the American people of the use being made of the Red Cross War Fund.

The report shows an expenditure to June 1, 1918, of $200,000, consisting of a gift of $125,000 to the Swiss Red Cross and a donation of $75,000 to assist the Swiss government in taking care of interned Russians.

The report shows that, through the activity of the American Red Cross, great storehouses have been established in Switzerland and that in them on August 1 were supplies sufficient to provide for 15,000 prisoners for six months should the fortunes of war throw that many American soldiers into German prisons. These supplies consist of everything men in their condition may need. Plans are being perfected for keeping in communication with them and for sending news of them to their families in America. So far the appropriation for this work amounts to $475,000.

For the construction of homes, hospitals, huts and canteens $312,500 has been appropriated and the sum of $187,500 has been set aside for the construction of workrooms, training schools and materials for manufacture in such establishments. This covers the work through this year.

For refuge work among children, aid for civilian citizens of the United States in Switzerland and Swiss families whose sons or fathers are in the United States army $200,000 has been appropriated. The sum of $187,500 has been set aside as a contribution to civilian hospitals and equipping and operating workrooms for making surgical supplies and clothing.

For the assistance of other recognized relief societies in Switzerland $200,000 has been appropriated and $15,000 has been set aside for the use of the International Red Cross at Geneva, the report shows.

For rebuilding or remodeling warehouses in various parts of the country, the purchase of auto trucks, items of freight, boxing, packing and delivery, together with necessary labor in warehouses, chauffeurs' salaries and the general item of operating expenses, the report shows, an aggregate appropriation of $494,823.75 has been made.

Henry P. Davison, chairman of the War Council of the American Red Cross, has prevailed upon B. F. Bourne, of Cleveland, to assume the duties of manager of the Lake Division.

Mr. Bourne is prominent in the iron and steel industry, being president of the Bourne-Fuller Company, vice-president and treasurer of the Upson Nut Company, an affiliated company; a director of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company, a director of two of Cleveland's largest banks, the Union Commerce National Bank and the Guardian Savings and Trust Company, and one of the trustees of Lakeside Hospital of Cleveland. He is a member of the City Planning Commission and of the Cleveland Housing Committee, and serves in other important public welfare activities.

One big duty of the Bureau of Military Relief, American Red Cross, is to oversee the distribution of sweaters, socks, mufflers, wristlets and helmets knit by the women workers. In the Lake Division alone 266,936 articles were distributed to the various camps from January 1 to September 1, 1918.

In view of the fact that at least three months of that period are counted summer months, the following report from the office of E. B. Greene, director of military relief, Lake Division, shows vividly that the Red Cross is providing solid comfort for thousands of soldiers through this department.

The following shows the distribution by camps:

Camp Sherman—62,410 socks, 37,224 sweaters, 8,496 helmets, 17,257 wristlets and 10,774 mufflers.
Camp Taylor—15,046 socks, 25,631 sweaters, 13,408 helmets, 6,250 wristlets and 2,018 mufflers.
Fort Benjamin Harrison—18,056 socks, 11,097 sweaters and 5 helmets.

Wilbur Wright Field—1,205 socks, 245 sweaters, 386 helmets, 261 wristlets and 162 mufflers.

Minor Camps—8,648 socks, 2,116 sweaters, 2,390 helmets, 3,225 wristlets and 326 mufflers.

Camp Merritt, Port of Embarkation—20,000 socks.

Indiana Has Failed To Furnish Nurses

Indiana has fallen short in the Red Cross campaign for recruiting nurses for military needs. Indiana's quota for the year was placed at 553 nurses. Only 203 Indiana nurses had made application for service up to September 15, leaving 350 nurses to be recruited by January 1.

In order to meet this important need, 20 Indiana nurses a week for the balance of the year has been fixed as the State quota for Red Cross committees by Miss Anna Gladwin, acting director of the Lake Division Department of Nursing.

"Certainly, the greatest necessity exists for stimulating the enrollment of nurses," said Miss Gladwin, in commenting upon Indiana's record in nurse recruiting. "More vigor must be put into the campaign for recruiting army nurses. Every eligible nurse should respond. The Red Cross army of nurses will be the largest number of graduate nurses ever mobilized for any army, or for any navy. Every member of the Army Nurse Corps will be proud of her part in it."

Red Cross Collecting Fruit Pits and Shells

One hundred collecting stations for assembling fruit pits and nut shells to be made into charcoal for gas masks have been designated in as many cities by the Red Cross, which is in charge of the collections throughout the country. Two hundred others will be established.

Encouraging reports of collections already made have been received at Washington. Girl Scouts headquarters announces that at one collection point two little girls from one troop brought in 1,600 peach pits each, while another pair contributed 2,000 each. The organization has entered the campaign with ardor, and every troop under its jurisdiction is, or soon will be, at work.

Wholesale grocers in many cities, who were asked recently by the Food Administration to aid in the campaign that will save the lives of many soldiers, have sent in copies of posters they have had printed and circulated among retailers. Each of the latter has been asked to put a receptacle in his store for the pits and shells, and to cooperate with their local Red Cross representatives.

To Collect Tin and Platinum.

Red Cross workers throughout the country are being requested to devote part of their time to collecting tin and platinum for government use. As there is a shortage of both materials, the government has called upon the Red Cross to help make up a deficit.

It is pointed out that the entire industries of the country are dependent upon tin in some form, and that it would be impossible to operate steamships or build railroad cars without it. The platinum shortage is not so serious, according to the word which reached Lake Division Headquarters, but the government's program makes it imperative that a reserve supply be collected, as the production of platinum in Russia, the country which furnished the greater part of the world's supply, has been abandoned because of chaotic conditions.

A reserve supply is needed for the making of contact points for tractors, trucks, automobiles, telegraph and telephone systems, wireless apparatus and instruments for hospital and laboratory work. Because much of the jewelry containing platinum has a sentimental value, chapters have been instructed not to urge citizens to part with such articles.

Woman's Section

The Woman's Section of the Fayette County Council of Defense reports a recent celebration on what was termed "Patriotic Day," the purpose of the day being to honor the men who are serving the colors on land and on sea. Features of the day were a parade, speeches, the unfurling of a monster service flag by the War Mothers, and the unveiling of a service tablet, the pages of which contain the names of more than 1,000 men of Fayette County bearing arms. This tablet was presented to Fayette County by the members of Company B, Indiana Liberty Guards. Young ladies of the Tri Kappa sorority marched in the parade, carrying a large Red Cross flag, into which people tossed contributions to the amount of $325. The following week, during the free fair, these same young ladies performed the same service and secured $535 for the Red Cross.

The Fayette County chairman of child welfare reports the organization of a Girls' Patriotic Club. A picture show given recently by these girls netted $200. Of this amount $50 was donated to the Red Cross, $75 to the support of a French orphan, and the remainder is held in readiness to help along the child welfare cause. Another unusual organization in this county is the Red Cross Sacrifice Club of East Connersville Township. Members of this club receive all forms of donations from one cent to one dollar, but most contributions are from five to ten cents. During July and August $106.29 was collected by the club through this method.

An important announcement from the office of the surgeon general is to the effect that the Red Cross is now enrolling colored nurses for service in the Army Nurse Corps. Quarters are now under construction at five army posts: Camps Dodge, Grant, Sherman, Taylor and Meade. A group of approximately twenty colored nurses will be used at each of these stations for the care of colored troops.

The Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense requests that publicity chairmen throughout the country begin at once to emphasize the wishes of the National Council in regard to Christmas buying during the coming fall. The utmost effort is to be made to confine Christmas giving, except for young children, to useful articles and to extend the period for holiday purchases over the months of October, November and December. Retail interests have been asked not to increase their working force and not to increase the normal working hours of their force during the Christmas season; deliveries will be restricted and customers will be induced in so far as possible to carry their own packages. The National Council will insist that the continuance of holiday business be in such form and on such scale and by such methods as are consistent with the national welfare.

The Child Welfare Committee of Rush County secured permanent homes during the past month for two children, oculist services and lenses for one child, and tonsil and adenoid operations for two. Three defective children are to be entered in the State School for the Deaf, and application has been made to the Robert W. Long Hospital for the acceptance of a child needing surgical treatment. The committee also arranged to send to college this fall one high school graduate, a girl who is above the average in intelligence and does not have the means for higher education. Her tuition, her incidental expenses for the year and her railroad fare will all be paid.

In an effort to reach every individual in the county and give him a better knowledge of the war situation, the chairman of educational propaganda of St. Joseph County is making plans for closer organization. An investigation of the effect of the industrial situation on the schools will be made, with a view to inducing the children now employed in factories to return to their studies.

Buttons approved by the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense, for all patriotic women workers, have been received at the headquarters of the Indiana State Council of Defense. It is desired that every worker wear one. They will be sent forward on receipt of ten cents each.

The services of the Fourteen-Minute Women have been turned over to the State Liberty Loan organization for work in connection with the fourth loan drive, which begins September 28th and in anticipation of which an intensive educational effort is now in progress in all parts of Indiana.

To Instruct Users Of Indiana Coal

The United States Fuel Administration authorizes the following:

The great demands of the war program for coal has made it necessary for the Fuel Administration to "zone away" from certain sections of the country coal which was formerly used in such sections, but which is now needed elsewhere for vital war work. Coal from other localities has been provided to these districts deprived of their usual type of coal, but as the substitute coal is of a different quality from that previously used, different methods of burning are necessary in order to produce satisfactory results.

The Fuel Administration is preparing complete information to enable householders to burn this new coal satisfactorily in their present stoves and furnaces. Such information will be very shortly placed at the disposal of all householders throughout Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and elsewhere, where it has been necessary to furnish a different quality of coal in place of that formerly used. This information will be made available through the State fuel administrators and local fuel committees.

Assistant State Director.

Fred R. Farnum, of the United States Boys' Working Reserve.

Fred R. Farnum, successor of Carl B. Fritche, now national field organizer, as assistant state director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, for nine years has been superintendent of the public schools of Laporte County, Indiana. His work there in connection with the Reserve attracted the attention of Isaac D. Straus, federal state director, who selected him to continue the work so auspiciously begun by Mr. Fritche. He is 42 years of age and was educated at Valparaiso, Wabash and Chicago University.

Home Service Course For Red Cross Work

Indiana University Extension Division
Also Offers Instruction in Dietetics.

Two special Red Cross courses are being given in Indianapolis by the Indiana University Extension Division. The Home Service Institute, which is the third of a series for the State of Indiana, began September 19 and will run for six weeks. This institute will be in general charge of W. S. Bittner, who is receiving applications at the Extension Division office, 1116 Merchants Bank Building. Eugene C. Foster, secretary of the Charity Organization Society, will have charge of the field work, to which students are expected to give a large portion of their time. While many of the students come as the representatives of their local Red Cross chapter in different parts of the State, many enter upon their own initiative, taking the course in the hope that it will enable them to do volunteer war work among the families of men at the front.

The Red Cross Course in dietetics will be given as a regular sixteen weeks extension course, beginning on September 23, and carrying one hour's credit at the university. It will be in charge of Miss Wellman of the Home Economics Department and will deal with such subjects as up-to-date conservation measures, practical economy, budget making and household accounts. It will cover the kinds of food needed in our diet; building material for the body, economy in wartime use of meat; cereals—the "best return for your money"; sugar, an energy-producing luxury; fat, an energy producer and a necessity; vegetables and fruits instead of tonics; a few facts about feeding children; how much food should we eat; more food for less money; will you manage your work or allow it to manage you? where your money goes; a use of sugar approved by the government—jelly making and preserving; preparing for the future—canning; storage of food in the home. This class will meet in two sections at Shortridge High School on Thursdays, one meeting at 4 p.m. and one at 7:30. One of the chief reasons why the Red Cross is urging women to take this course is the fact that it will give women the fundamentals of dietetics, thus releasing many nurses, now in private homes, for Red Cross service.

Indiana University Extension Division reports an unusual interest in the late afternoon and evening courses this fall, arising probably from the impetus given to education through the recent action of the War Department. While the extension courses are not in any way related to military training or the student training camps, they offer people in Indianapolis an opportunity to fit themselves for business promotion and for war service. The courses attracting the greatest amount of attention are French, accounting, business law, economics, advertising, English, public speaking, business psychology, war problems and Red Cross dietetics.

The added incentive to study is indicated not only by the increased number of inquiries at the office of the Extension Center, 1116 Merchants Bank Building, but also by the number of hours which students propose to devote to study. Previously the great majority took only one extension course; this fall the majority are planning two and three courses of study.

Who Said Profiteering?

A few days ago Percy Wolfe purchased a watermelon patch from Garfield Rapp for $400. From this patch he sold two car loads to Frank Johnson for $900. Mr. Johnson received $700 for one of these cars and $600 for the other, selling to Fred McCoy, who bought for a Chicago concern. Johnson is the man who shipped Carlisle melons to Cuba last year. Wolfe sold another two car loads from the Rapp patch for $1,000. The melons in the car which sold for $700 retailed in Chicago for $1.70 each. Some price.—Carlisle News.

Seed Corn Selection Will End in October

County Agents Are Holding Field Demonstrations in Each of Ten Districts.

The Seed Corn Selection campaign under the auspices of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation is under way in the ten districts of the State. C. Henry, state leader of the campaign, stated today that the major part of the selection would be over by the first week of October.

In the Indianapolis district on September 17th the county agricultural agents from the ten counties from this district held their first field seed corn selection demonstrations. The various county agents, assisted by members of the Better Farming Association, conducted one or two of the demonstrations. As a result a seed corn selection demonstration was held in each township of Marion County on this date. The group of county agents went to Hancock County on the 18th and to Randolph County on the 19th, and so on until each of the counties of the district will have been covered. Each of the ten districts are organized in the same way.

A special pamphlet urging farmers to prepare now for the 1919 corn crop has been published by Purdue University, the State Food Committee and approved by the State Council of Defense. The pamphlet was arranged under the direction of Mr. Henry and contains the following timely statements:

TIME TO SELECT SEED CORN.

By Prof. A. T. Wiancko, Chief Soils and Crops Department Purdue University Agricultural Experiment Station.

The best time to select seed corn is as soon as possible after the corn has matured and while the stalks are standing and in condition to show all of their characters. The character of the stalk and the conditions under which it grew are important. There is no way to tell about this where crib selection of seed corn is practiced.

Seed ears should be taken only from well developed, healthy and vigorous looking stalks that grew under normal conditions of stand where there was a fair amount of competition. The position of the ear and the character and condition of the shank are also important. Avoid stalks showing smut or broken shanks—they are diseased plants and will affect the crop of next year, even though the seed ear is good in appearance. Disease carried in the seed ears is responsible for most of the nubbins and barren stalks. By field selection these points can be observed and it will pay well to take time to select every ear with care.

VARIETIES FOR OUR 1919 CROP.

By Warren T. McCray, Chairman, Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation.

Years of experience have shown that the changing of seed corn from one district to another should be done only in cases of necessity. In many parts of Indiana well established varieties of corn were almost wiped out by the early frosts of 1917. Hence it became necessary to introduce new seed. The new varieties that were introduced should be carefully investigated and should only be retained when their superiority seems to be assured.

As a rule, it would be much better for each community to save only such corn that has stood the test of years, and I therefore urge that in selecting seed you depend largely upon the standard varieties that were successfully raised prior to the disastrous experience of last year. Save more than you will need for yourself so that you will be able to supply your less fortunate neighbors.

SEED CORN STORAGE.

By C. B. Riley, Secretary, Indiana Millers' and Grain Dealers' Association.

The selection and storage of corn for seed is the most important work the farmer can engage in. The selection should be made in the field as early as possible after the grain hardens. The ears should be either placed on wire racks or hung up in well protected places where a free circulation of air prevails. The ears should not touch each other and should remain thus protected until both the cob and the grain are thoroughly dry, after which it should be stored in well ventilated places where artificial heat can be provided if extreme cold weather threatens. Each farmer should provide for and store double the amount of seed required for his own use, so as to supply others, or provide for increased acreage on his own farm. Next to licking the Kaiser, the saving of seed corn is the most important and patriotic service to be performed by the farmer this year.

Auditor of State Commends Reserve

The following circular letter has been addressed to all city and county directors of the reserve:

September 17, 1918.

To All County and City Directors:

A communication received recently from the office of the national director informs us that the War Department has sanctioned a national uniform for the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, consisting of hat, coat, belt, breeches, leggings and shirt. The material of the uniform is a twilled cotton of an olive drab. On the sleeve of the coat is emblazoned in red silk, "U.S." The same design appears in red upon the shirt, together with the letters "B. W. R." A green band around the hat is used to signify agricultural service, and a maroon band around the hat to signify industrial service in essential industries.

The cost of the summer uniform is $9.90—an amount less than the average cost of a suit of clothes. Prices have not yet been definitely obtained for the winter uniform.

It is our intention to send each director a print of the photograph of one of our Indiana reserve boys clothed in the sample uniform sent us from the national office.

Will you give this matter publicity among the boys of your jurisdiction, and use it as a spur for further enrollment?

In this same mail I send you for distribution to your township or ward enrolling officers copies of the National Prospectus for 1918-1919. These are apportioned to you on the basis of twice the number of townships in your county. You will note that they give you a very definite conception of the expanded plans for next year and that they also indicate the growing importance of the work of the reserve.

Kindly see that they reach your enrolling officer in ward and township and that the contents of the prospectus also reach the offices of the public press in your county.

Very truly yours,
ISAAC D. STRAUS,
Federal State Director.

Committee on Construction

The following report of the Committee on Proposed Construction was approved, at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, September 17:

To the Indiana State Council of Defense:

Your Committee on New Construction begs to report its recommendations based on the facts within its possession as follows:

1. With reference to the erection of a new four-room brick school building at Lyford in Florida Township, Parke County, the committee recommends that the action of the Parke County Council of Defense, approving such erection, be confirmed.

2. With reference to the construction of certain highways at Terre Haute, known as the Fort Harrison road, Seventh street, Thirteenth street, Lafayette street, and Thirteenth street road, the committee recommends that the authorities of the city of Terre Haute and of Vigo County be earnestly requested to make the necessary repairs to these highways and to postpone rebuilding until after the war, rebuilding now being disapproved.

3. With reference to the proposed construction of a library building at North Judson in Starke County, the committee recommends that the erection of this building be postponed until after the war. Construction now is urged on the ground that the gift of Mr. Andrew Carnegie of $10,000 for this library may lapse unless building is proceeded with. The committee believes that if Mr. Carnegie is informed of the reason for postponement he will be glad to give satisfactory assurances to the North Judson authorities that his gift will not fail.

4. With reference to the proposed construction of a bank building at Preble, Adams County, the committee recommends that the Adams County Council of Defense be advised that the erection of such building during the war is disapproved by the State Council.

5. In the matter of the completion of one-half mile of paving on Seventh street in Vincennes, the committee recommends that the action of the Knox County Council of Defense, approving completion of the highway, be confirmed.

6. In the matter of the change from crushed stone to gravel for the W. H. Lant et al., and the William H. Holder et al. roads in Ohio Township, Warrick County, the committee recommends that the action of the Warrick County Council of Defense in approving said change be confirmed. This action is not, however, to be taken as an approval of the construction of the highways referred to, as to the necessity of which construction the committee is wholly without information.

7. In the matter of the proposed construction of a library building at Warren in Huntington County, the committee recommends that the Huntington County Council of Defense be advised that the erection of this building be postponed until after the war.

8. In the matter of the Pannabaker sewer at Kokomo, the committee recommends that the action of the Howard County Council of Defense, approving the construction, be confirmed.

9. In the matter of the Keaton et al. free gravel road in Howard County, the committee recommends that the supplemental report of the Howard County Council of Defense, made September 13, 1918, approving the completion of the road, be confirmed.

ARTHUR W. BRADY,
JAMES L. KEACH,
E. M. WILSON,
CHARLES FOX,
Committee.

The council also approved the following resolution, which will be recommended to all city and county officials for their adoption:

WHEREAS, The national government requests that no "new enterprises not fundamental to the efficient operation of the country's necessary activities" in time of war shall be undertaken, and that "during the period of the war any new enterprise or undertaking should be tried and justified by the test: 'Will the men, money and material so applied best contribute in this way to the winning of the war?'"

Resolved, therefore, That this body, for the purpose of co-operating with the national authorities, declares that while the war continues it will not undertake the construction of any new public improvement of any character, on petition or otherwise, unless it is clearly shown that such improvement is justified by the test laid down by the national government as aforesaid.

Every Citizen's Duty.

"Do not forget that it is the duty of each citizen these days to see that every other person is loyal. The individual who goes around complaining of this rule and that regulation does far more than we realize to destroy the morale of the public and the sooner he is brought into line the better it will be for the community, nation and world."
—Rev. Allen B. Philputt.

U. S. Food Administration for Indiana

Official Regulations and Penalties Imposed

For serving excessive amounts of sugar and violating the wheat flour substitute regulations the Britling Cafeteria, Louisville, Ky., has been privileged to pay $1,000 to the Red Cross and suspend its baking operations for two weeks.

Max Himmelstein, a Ft. Wayne grocer, accepted $1 for a bushel of tomatoes he failed to deliver, and when warned paid no attention to the food administrator. As a result he will sell no more sugar or flour until after the war ends.

Profiteering was the basis of orders which closed the stores of Harris & Dixon and Eli Emil, Indianapolis grocers, for a week. They were alleged to have charged more than one cent per pound profit on sugar and more than the prescribed $1.20 per barrel on wheat flour.

Samuel Kuntz and Jerome Chevillot exhibited vegetables they had purchased, at the Ft. Wayne liberty garden fair, thus violating the rules and vitiating their prizes. C. Barry Tolan, food administrator, permitted them to pay $100 each to the war benevolence funds as a penalty.

Any mixture containing only rye and wheat must have two pounds of rye for each three pounds of wheat the mixture contains, under the present wheat flour regulations. Any mixture containing rye, wheat and substitutes for wheat must have three pounds of wheat for each two pounds of rye the mixture contains, and at least one pound of substitutes for each four pounds of wheat for the balance of wheat the mixture contains.

The Sugar Equalization Board has just closed a contract with the Cuban minister for the purchase of the Cuban sugar crop at a price basis of about $5.50 per hundred pounds f. o. b. Cuban ports. This purchase is made on behalf of the American, English, French and Italian governments. The crop will begin to be available in December, and its division between the Allies will be directed by the United States Food Administration. These arrangements, as was the case last year, put an end to all speculation in sugar and assure an equitable distribution between all Allies and our own consumers.

The Food Administration has amended the regulations governing green coffee by changing Rule 1 to read as follows, the new regulation going into effect at once:

"Rule 1. Licensees entitled to reasonable profit. The licensee in any sale of green coffee shall take no more than a reasonable profit over the cost of the particular coffee sold, provided that any sale of spot coffee shall be made at not more than a reasonable profit over the average cost of his entire stock of spot coffee. Each growth of coffee shall be averaged separately. This amendment applies to all sales made after this date."

Hitherto the dealer has been permitted to average spot coffee with coffee in transit or which he had arranged to ship from the country of origin

In order to prevent the waste of labor and parchment paper and cartons made for units of butter smaller than the pound size the rule prohibiting the manufacture or sale of butter in less than pound prints has been amended by the United States Food Administration so as to go into effect on January 1, 1919, instead of on September 15, 1918. This is to prevent the waste of supplies of printed paper and cartons already on hand. After the first of the year no quarter or half-pound prints or any prints less than a pound can be made or sold; provided, however, that a retailer may cut a unit of a pound or more and sell a portion of any size demanded by his customers.

The following telegram, signed by Herbert C. Hoover, has been received at the office of the United States Food Administration in Indiana:

"I wish you would express to each county food administrator in your State the great appreciation we all have for the fine service they have given our common task. I was particularly struck by the repeated occasions during our recent conference when such expressions arose as 'We can and must depend upon our county administrators for that,' or 'Our county administrators will put that over,' or 'Our county administrators have done this or that.' All these expressions recalled to me the relations of the army staff to the men on the firing line, and I wish you would take opportunity to thank them in my name for their great service to their country and her people at home."

Cost of Living in Bohemia.

If prices of necessities in the United States seem high, consider these of the enemy, where speculation has been allowed to run rampant:

One egg, 20c.
One quart milk, 20c.
One pound curd cheese, 60c.
One pound butter, $4.40—$5.45.
One pound rye flour, $4.70.
One pound wheat flour, $1.45—$1.63.
One pound fat pork, $4.18—$4.54.
One pound beef, 72—90c.
(Only obtained in small quantities.)
One pound horse flesh, $1.36—$1.45.
One pound potatoes, 12—18c.

Counterblast Against Hun Poison Gas Attack

As a counterblast against German poison gas attacks on the fields of France the Food Administration is issuing a call to housewives, grocers, cannery and proprietors of hotels and restaurants to aid in the collection of fruit pits and nut shells from which to make carbon for the millions of gas masks needed by the American army.

Investigation by chemists has shown that pits of apricots, peaches, prunes, olives, dates, cherries and plums, and the shells of Brazil and hickory nuts, walnuts and butternuts make the best carbon for masks. There is a double incentive to save these. Not only will their carbon save many lives at the front, but consumption of the fruit from which they come will result in utilization of perishable foods, while collection of nuts for their shells will also make possible the use of their meats as food.

All pits and shells saved should be dried and turned in to the nearest Red Cross organization or to such receiving stations as may be designated. The Red Cross will arrange for their shipment to central points. Grocers have been asked by the Food Administration to provide receptacles in their stores, into which pits and shells can be dropped, and to urge that their patrons save every seed faithfully. Cannery have been requested, through the Federal Food Administrators of the States, to save all pits.

Pits, seeds and shells should be thoroughly cleaned and dried in the sun or in ovens before being turned in. Only those named are of use; no others should be put into the receptacles, because time and labor must not be wasted in sorting.

Hotels and restaurants have been asked to save pits and to aid in giving publicity to the campaign. Housewives putting up fruit for the winter should lay aside their fruit stones for collection by Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts or other organizations that are enlisted for the campaign. Boys and girls are asked to scour the woods for hickory nuts, walnuts and butternuts. It is urged by the Food Administration that their meats be extracted for use as food before they are turned in. No attempt need be made to extract the kernels of fruit pits.

Red Cross chapters throughout the country are designating central depositaries for pits and shells, announcing their location through the papers and making all shipments. These go by parcel post from outlying territory to large centers in each State, in boxes or cartons of not more than 70 pounds in weight. Later carload shipments of 20 tons each will be made to centers of utilization.

"A Few Peach Stones May Save a Soldier's Life" is the caption the Food Administration is recommending for signs to be placed over receptacles for collections at original points. These may be in schools, churches, banks or department stores, as well as in places where food is sold.

Garments Wanted for Destitute of Belgium

Lake Division Red Cross chapters have been asked to furnish 400 tons of clothing for the destitute people of occupied Belgium and France, it was announced at division headquarters.

The week beginning Monday, September 23, has been set aside by the Red Cross at the request of Herbert C. Hoover, chairman of the Belgium Relief Commission, for the purpose of collecting these garments. It is hoped that at least 5,000 tons can be secured through the medium of Red Cross organizations in all sections of the nation. A statement issued at division headquarters says:

"Every kind of garment for all ages and both sexes is urgently needed. Garments of strong material are wanted, as they will be subjected to the hardest kind of wear. Flimsy garments, ball room dresses, high-heeled slippers, silk hats, straw hats and derbies, which were donated in large quantities in a similar campaign last March, will not be accepted; such articles would be of no use."

In his recent request to the Red Cross asking it to undertake the work of collecting this clothing, Mr. Hoover stated that millions of men, women and children are facing shame, suffering disease and some of them death, due to the lack of clothing.

"They must be helped," Mr. Hoover continued. "I hope the Red Cross will undertake a renewed campaign to obtain the clothing in America. Your first campaign yielded magnificent results, bringing in fully 500 tons of clothing in good condition, but much more is needed if these war-ravaged people are to get through the winter in safety."

Rooster Selling Week Proves Its Advantages

Indiana farmers and poultrymen saved at least 1,223 tons of feed, worth $73,426.50 at present prices, by the observance of Rooster Week, June 3 to 8, specialists in the Purdue University poultry department have figured. This campaign is a part of the state-wide poultry campaign which is being conducted by the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation. Reports from 427 firms in 56 counties show that 97,902 roosters were sold that week. Instead of eating the 25 pounds of feed, usually consumed by roosters from the first of June until Thanksgiving, the popular marketing time, and causing the loss of millions of eggs during hot weather because they are fertile, this large number of birds was sold. The average price of chicken feed is three cents per pound and the man who sold his birds in June is ahead of the game by 75 cents per rooster on feed and also got a higher price. The week before the "Can the Cockerels" campaign, the average price was ten cents per pound and the week of the drive the average was 13½ cents, some paying as high as 18 cents. Because of the increased price, the farmers who took part divided an extra profit of $8,417.47.

Let us keep our bodies strong, our minds clear, and our hearts pure, so that when we have finished the butcher business we can wash the blood from our hands and leave no stain upon them; can brush our garments and leave no smell of battle upon them and present our souls unblushing and unashamed to our God.—CLARENCE OUSLEY.

Council Approves War Work Campaign

Indiana Will Be Called Upon to Raise Four and a Half Millions for Seven Funds.

Reports from the Committee on Proposed Construction, at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, September 24th, included a plan for the execution of the enlarged program of censoring improvements of every kind, calling for the use of men, money and materials, as promulgated by the War Industries Board, through the State council's section of the Council of National Defense. The report, which will be found elsewhere in the Bulletin, was approved after its presentation by Arthur W. Brady.

Dr. L. E. Northrup, State Veterinarian, pointed out to the council the importance of "securing the last ten per cent of grease" from the carcasses of all dead animals, in conformity with the wishes of the Federal Government. He asked that the State Council through county councils of defense, co-operate to prevent the burial or incineration of dead animals, and he said there are 115 reducing plants in the State which will haul away such carcasses and, in cases of animals larger than a hog, pay for the same. He was authorized to prepare a resolution setting forth his object, which the council will consider at its next meeting.

F. L. Sims, of South Bend, who is directing the Indiana United War Work campaign, by which it is expected to raise the State's quota of the $170,500,000 wanted for the Catholic War Fund, the Jewish Welfare, Salvation Army, the American Library Association, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., and the War Camp Community fund, told the council that the State's proportion would be about $4,500,000. He asked the approval of a resolution adopted by the Council of National Defense, and the Indiana Council went on record as approving the following:

Whereas, The War Department has officially endorsed and the President of the United States has likewise sanctioned the joint drive for $170,500,000 to be conducted by the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, the National Catholic War Council, the Jewish Welfare Board, the War Camp Community Service, the American Library Association and the Salvation Army, from November 11th to 18th inclusive, 1918, and

Whereas, The Council of National Defense, composed of the Secretaries of War, Navy, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce, and Labor, believe that the service which these agencies are rendering to promote the comfort, contentment and efficiency of our soldiers and sailors and to maintain their morale, is emphatically in the national interest, and that therefore the forthcoming campaign should command the full support of the American people, and

Whereas, The Council of National Defense believes that in view of the inevitable continual increase in the army and navy, a generous subscription to the said fund is highly desirable in the national interest. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Council of National Defense in endorsing, as it does endorse, the purpose of the said joint drive, direct, and it does hereby direct, the State Councils Section of the Council of National Defense to request the State

Councils of Defense throughout the nation to do everything in their power to assist in making the campaign in question a complete success, placing their State, county and community council machinery at the disposal of the joint drive organization.

The Educational Section of the council, through a subcommittee reported that it had arranged for a hearing of the charges made by Frank W. Duffy, that the Indianapolis school board was opposing industrial education and vocational training, on the afternoon of September 23d. It was stated that Mr. Duffy appeared, presented his charges in writing, but that through an attorney the school board declined to appear. After a full discussion the council authorized the chairman to name a committee of three to arrange for a hearing of the charges. Chairman Foley named Judge Will M. Sparks, Rev. Allen B. Philpott and Arthur W. Brady, which committee will meet September 30th to set a time, make up the issues, etc.

The special committee appointed to report on the use of German language in Indiana, submitted a complete report, which was approved. It appears in another column of the Bulletin.

Chairman Foley reported the receipt of $553.65 from the secretary of the Indiana State Board of Agriculture, which, he said, represented one-fourth of the receipts from the Patriotic Day program, held during the State Fair. The money has been placed to the credit of the State Council.

Warren T. McCray, of the Committee on Food Production and Conservation, asked the council to pay the expenses of the agricultural advisory member of the district appeal boards, in connection with the extended draft. He said the cost would be about $500 for each of the four boards. At the request of the chairman the matter was delayed a week.

T. A. Coleman, of the Food Production and Conservation Committee, reported to the council that the Indiana corn crop is ripening "nicely" all over the State.

Dr. Harry E. Barnard, federal food administrator for Indiana, told the council of plans that are under way for taking a census of the hogs and cattle in the State, October 15th. Dr. Barnard said the school children are being enlisted to do the work, which probably will be repeated every six months. He said the census is needed to establish the amount of the world's food supply, and that figures for 1917 also will be secured where possible, for the sake of comparison.

A Tragic War Lesson From Bleeding France.

William Allen White, in his recently published series of war articles, made this statement: "Tuberculosis is the most gaping wound in bleeding France. Tuberculosis is for the French the greatest and most awful by-product of the war. Tuberculosis, if it is not checked, will conquer France after the German guns have been forced across the Rhine. For during the three years last past conditions in France have combined with devilish fatality to make the land a vast culture-ground of the tuberculosis germ." We have learned many lessons from the war experiences of our Allies, and this one of communicable disease control is not the least. Tuberculosis prevention in American soldiers and civilians must at no time be neglected.—Kansas Board of Health Bulletin.

An abundant harvest—a thankful heart—and safe reserves.

Food Program Must Provide for Victory

Herbert Hoover Tells Why There Must Be a Continued Conservation in America.

The following statement by Herbert C. Hoover outlines the food conservation program recommended for the American people during the coming year:

There is no prospect of a proper ending of the war before the campaign of the summer of 1919. To attain victory we must place in France three and a half million fighting men with the greatest mechanical equipment that has ever been given to any army. While we expect the position on the western front may be improved, from a military point of view, between now and then, there can be no hope of a consummation of the end that we must secure until another year has gone by.

If we are to accomplish this end in 1919 we will save a million American lives that will be expended if we have to continue until 1920. To give this final blow in 1919 we have not only to find the men, shipping and equipment for this gigantic army, but this army, the allied armies and the allied civil population must have ample food in the meantime if we are to maintain their strength. We can do all these things and I believe we can bring this dreadful business to an end if every man, woman and child in the United States tests every action every day and hour by the one touchstone—does this or that contribute to winning the war?

The food program is no small part of this issue. To provide ships for our army, we have not only to build all that we can but we must have the help of allied shipping. In order that the Allies may provide this, they must take food ships from the more distant markets and place them upon the shorter run to the United States. We must decrease our imports of sugar, coffee and tropical fruits.

Under these conditions, the demand upon us is for larger supplies. The conferences on food supply and shipping we have held in Europe enable us to estimate our burden. Compared with previous years, the allied civilians and armies, our own armies, the Belgian relief and certain neutrals who are dependent on us require the following round amounts from us:

	Average 3-year pre-war shipments, tons	Shipped year ending July 1, 1918, tons	Must ship year ending July 1, 1919, tons	Increase this year over last year, tons
Meats and Fats (Beef, pork, dairy poultry and vegetable oil products)	645,000	1,550,000	2,000,000	1,050,000
Bread Stuffs (Wheat and substitutes in terms of grain)	3,320,000	6,800,000	10,400,000	3,600,000
Sugar (From United States and West Indies)	618,000	1,520,000	1,850,000	330,000
Feed Grains (Mostly army oats)	950,000	1,950,000	2,700,000	750,000
Totals	5,533,000	11,820,000	17,550,000	5,730,000

Even this program means further self-denial of the Allies next year. They are making this sacrifice in the common cause. We must maintain the health and strength of every human being among them or they will be unable to put their full strength alongside our own in the su-

Patriotism in Indiana

Allen County.—Michael Kochler of Fort Wayne was called before Barry Tolan, Allen County food administrator, on a charge of permitting his horse to run loose and tramp down gardens. He admitted that he frequently had been warned, and was ordered to give $150 to the Red Cross, which he did.

Adams County.—Mrs. Mary E. Artman, secretary of the Adams County Council of Defense, and president of the Adams County United States Food Clubs, reports that thirteen food clubs have been organized in the county.

Bartholomew County.—In response to the nation-wide call for clothes for Belgian refugees, Bartholomew County is to have an "Old Clothes Day" immediately following the close of the Liberty Loan drive, with the Girls' Red Cross Auxiliary in charge. It is planned to make a thorough house-to-house canvass of the county and to get at least one garment from every household; the drive to be an intensive one and to be completed in two days' time.

Cass County.—The church division of the Four-Minute Men in Cass County is thoroughly organized with an enrollment of 52, and a four-minute message will be carried by Cass County clergymen into every community throughout the county.

Clinton County.—The County Council of Defense has arranged for winter quarters for army truck divisions passing through Frankfort. City officials have tendered the use of the city building. The third floor will be fitted up as sleeping quarters, and the basement equipped with a kitchen.

Elkhart County.—Interest in the Elkhart Woman's Motor Corps is shown by the fact that this organization has been offered the use of the Harman real estate office, Room 225 Monger Block, as local headquarters for its work. Miss Ellen Barney, chairman of the corps, is enthusiastic over the interest shown, and is fast getting the organization in good working order. The County Council of Defense has adopted the permit system in connection with the operation of gasoline cars on Sundays. Printed forms for display on cars are issued in cases where the owners are authorized to use their machines. A 26-cent fee is charged; this is done to cover the expense of preparing and issuing the forms.

Floyd County.—In the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign the woman's committee hopes to reach 25 per cent of Floyd County's quota of $1,000,000.

Gibson County.—Mrs. Fred Riggs of Princeton has been appointed as woman member of the Gibson County Council of Defense.

Lawrence County.—The poster submitted by the Lawrence County Council of Defense at the State Fair, setting forth statistics covering accomplishments during the past year, received first honors. This six-foot poster, done in black and white by five draftsmen of the Shea-Donnelly Company of Bedford, embodied, in condensed form, the various war activities of the county, including the Red Cross, War Mothers, Social Service, Anti-Tuberculosis, Liberty Loan, Child Welfare, Good Cheer Society, Four-Minute Men, Fourteen-Minute Women, Comfort Kit Unit, Mitchell Sweater Unit, Food Administration, Patriots' Fund, Boys' Working Reserve, U. S. Nurses' Reserve, Bedford City Schools and Registration of Women for Service. In order to meet the demand for mechanics in the army and navy, E. W. Montgomery, superintendent, and M. J. Abbott, principal of the Bedford high school, have organized a war mechanic school for men who will enter the service during the year. All men between the ages of eighteen and forty-five are eligible.

Montgomery County.—Miss Sylvia Medsker, home demonstration agent, is acquainting Bartholomew County parents with the proper preparation and manner of packing lunches for school children. This is considered one of the most helpful and educational works of the present time. The Darlington schools have adopted a plan to boost the Fourth Liberty Loan and give members of the senior class of the high school initial training in public speaking. Members of the class are required to write four-minute talks on the loan, then volunteers are called upon to appear at public gatherings and give these snappy four-minute talks. Three girls volunteered, Minerva Manning, Evelyn Booher and Gladys Frances, and they spoke at several of the churches and picture shows according to a schedule which had been arranged by Superintendent Coons of the schools. The youthful orators drew record crowds and drove home loan facts in a highly creditable manner.

Pulaski County.—Miss Esther Friday, county food club chairman, has announced the following township presidents of the United States food clubs in Pulaski County: Mrs. Robert Koster, Beaver; Mrs. Frank Pulaski, Cass; Mrs. J. H. Taylor, Franklin; Mrs. George Williams, Harrison; Mrs. May March, Indian Creek; Mrs. Frank White, Jefferson; Mrs. Vere Hathaway, Monroe; Mrs. Blanch Graves, Rich Grove; Mrs. U. C. Mellon, Salem; Miss Ola Reynolds, Van Buren; Mrs. George Hansell, White Post, and Mrs. Joseph Marbaugh, Tippecanoe. A neat little pamphlet, compiled by C. E. Paul, county silo leader, gives some interesting data on silo conditions in Pulaski County. The intensive campaign instituted in this county and carefully followed up by silo leaders has resulted in the erection of many new silos on Pulaski County farms. To facilitate community singing, the County Council of Defense has issued a four-leaf booklet containing patriotic and popular songs. "Marching Through Germany" is a clever parody on one of our swinging American airs.

Wayne County.—The largest pumpkin in Wayne County has been disposed of for the benefit of the War Mothers and Red Cross. The pumpkin, which weighed 111 pounds and was 68 inches in circumference, was on display in a Center-ville store, where a guessing contest was held as to the number of seeds it contained. Proceeds of this contest were given the War Mothers. Then the pumpkin was auctioned off and these proceeds went to the Red Cross. Requests had come from a number of sources for seeds from this giant pumpkin; these were sold and the returns divided equally between the War Mothers and Red Cross.

Vigo County.—Military training for Terre Haute's two high schools, and a plan for giving credits for military drill, has been approved by the Terre Haute school board. Some new courses contemplate classes in radio, machine shop work, and other crafts needed by the government. Open-air community singing will be discontinued for the present, and during the winter months the "sings" will be held in the churches. Boy Scouts are helping with the Fourth Liberty Loan; they are acting as aides to the committee, distributing posters and advertising matter, and upon their own efforts they hope to sell as many bonds as they did during previous campaigns. The public schools of Terre Haute have issued a small book showing the war activities of the school during last year's school term. Nine thousand seven hundred and ninety-seven school children were members of the Red Cross. They contributed $1,018 to the Y. W. C. A. war fund, $363.57 to the Y. M. C. A. They sold $24,124.45 worth of Thrift Stamps, $14,906 worth of War Stamps and $104,475 worth of Liberty Bonds. In addition they paid $1,118.60 to French orphans, $500 to the Belgian relief fund and $915 to the Vigo County war fund. Large quantities of hospital supplies were made, refugee garments made and garments for the soldiers were knitted. The book is in attractive form and has many illustrations—photographs of the children at their Red Cross work.

Union County.—The Woman's Motor Corps of Liberty has adopted the slogan "I'll keep my auto on the road and be a friend of man." The organization now numbers about forty members. The corps is very active and has done good work in transporting speakers, Liberty Guards, and in assisting in the handling of supplies for the Red Cross, etc. The following comprise the present membership: Nell Ballinger, Grace Little, Hope Carson, Freda Snyder, Mabel Bond, Lieutenant, Center Township; Maud Little, Laura Huff, Mary Carmichael, Emily Taper, Mildred Wood, Lieutenant, Brownsville Township; Marie Bryant, Helen McCoy, Verne Dunbar, Esther Beard, Mary Louise Wilson, Lulu Doner, Alta Wright, Mary McMahan, Lieutenant, Harmony Township; Olive B. Coughlin, Captain Mildred Donahue, Ella Barnard, Mary B. Farr, Chrissie Shock, Ruby Little, Esther McMahan, Anna Fosdick, Hattie Fahrnholz, Clara Hughes, Lola Abner, Lulu Vitter, Lieutenant of Union Township; Enid Orr, Jessie Stevens, Lena Green, Frances Stevens, Gertrude Groszerson, Ruth Kitchel, Mabel Lafuze, Ruth Edgeworth, Barbara Shendler, lieutenant of Harrison Township.

School Children Will Take Live Stock Census

School children of Indiana will take a census of the live stock in the state October 15th. The work will be done as a conservation measure under the direction of Dr. Harry E. Barnard, federal food administrator for Indiana. It is the present purpose of the United States Food Administration, Dr. Barnard says, to take a similar census every six months during the duration of the international food crisis. School officials and county agricultural agents have been asked to assist in the work.

Arrangements were made during the recent conference of state administrators, at Washington, for the census to be taken in all parts of the nation the same day. It was agreed that the public schools present the most available organization for the purpose, and they have been asked through state and county superintendents of public instruction to do it. Blanks for the figures are being printed for distribution in ample time to make it possible to give clear, uniform instructions.

The Federal Food Administration's request says the census "is to enable a direct comparison between the two dates (1917 and 1918) to determine the increase or decrease in the year, as well as the actual live stock assets."

It is imperative for the sake of final tabulations that there be a uniform system of counting, and for that reason every state has been furnished with sample blanks.

It is desired by the Food Administration that this census is in no way connected with tax assessing, and has no bearing whatever upon the tax question. It is to be the basis of calculation for those who have in hand the task of distributing the available food supply among the allied nations, and to regulate as nearly as voluntary co-operation, based upon the necessities, when once determined, renders possible in this country.

Field Division of National Council

Merging of State Section and Woman's Committee Under Governing Board of Six.

The Council of National Defense authorizes the following statement:

The Council of National Defense has created a field division of the council, merging the state councils section and the greater part of the machinery of the woman's committee of the council. The field division of the council will be headed by Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, and a member of the Council of National Defense, and there will act with him a governing committee of six men and six women, composed as follows:

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw.
Mrs. Joseph R. Lamar.
Mrs. Stanley McCormick.
Miss Ida M. Tarbell.
Miss Agnes Nestor.

Miss Hannah J. Patterson—all of the woman's committee of the council.

Daniel Willard, chairman of the advisory commission of the Council of National Defense.

Fuller Callaway, a business man of La Grange, Georgia.

George L. Berry of Pressmen's Home, Tennessee, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America.

H. M. Robinson of Pasadena, California, former assistant chief of the state councils section and a director of the Southern California Edison Company, the Union Oil Company, and various banks in California.

R. M. Bissell, chairman of the Connecticut State Council of Defense.

Grosvenor B. Clarkson, secretary of the council and of the advisory commission.

Mr. Clarkson, in addition to his present duties as secretary of the council, will act as director of the field division, and Miss Hannah J. Patterson, who has been resident director of the woman's committee, is appointed associate director of the field division.

The woman's committee of the council will be held together to meet whatever emergencies may arise in connection with woman's part in the prosecution of the war that may fall outside the province of the field division.

This amalgamation of two of the most highly organized federal war agencies has grown out of the need and desirability of bringing the women of the country more closely into the government's war work and at the same time causing a more efficient guidance from Washington of the state defense activities. Already in many states the state divisions of the woman's committee and the state councils of defense have joined hands to the end of better coordinating the war service of the whole people, women as well as men. Hence the reorganization now announced follows logically the amalgamation taking place throughout the states.

From the first month of America's entry into the war the Council of National Defense, through the state councils section, has coordinated and guided the work of the great system made up of the state councils of defense, which are now organized by counties or towns in every state, with community organizations in the majority of the states. President Wilson has urged the general use of the state defense councils through the agency of the Council of National Defense to carry out as far as possible the local work of the federal agencies. The War Industries Board recently put the local control of building operations during the war in the hands of the state councils.

The woman's committee was formed shortly after America entered the war and has performed a remarkable work in organizing the woman-power of the country for the nation's defense. There will be merged into the field division the 15,732 units which the woman's committee has built up throughout the United States. The present amalgamation is in effect a tribute to the contribution of the woman's committee to the war.

On the Use of German

The following report was adopted as an official expression of the policy of the Indiana State Council of Defense, at its meeting, September 24:

To the Indiana State Council of Defense:

Your Special Committee on the Teaching and Use of the German Language begs to report as follows:

The Indiana State Council of Defense has been asked to define its position in regard to the teaching of the German language in the schools of Indiana and the use of the German language in schools and colleges and at public assemblages within the state. The policy herewith outlined is in harmony with recommendations made by the Bureau of Education of the Department of the Interior. The Council of National Defense has made no definite pronouncement in the matter of alien speech in church service, schools and colleges, or at public meetings. Each state has been left free to adopt a policy which will meet local conditions. The national council has, however, declared with emphasis that English should be made the common language of communication within the boundaries of the United States.

The committee appointed by the State Council of Defense to formulate and report back a sensible course of procedure in regard to the use of the German language believes that the scattered efforts within the state to perpetuate German as a preferred language of communication in schools, churches, or at public meetings, are not so numerous or persistent as to constitute a serious menace, but are at the same time a hindrance to the Americanization of foreign-born citizens and a complete unification of patriotic sentiment. The use of German speech and the German printed page is to be discouraged when it induces residents of Indiana to think in German and set themselves in opposition to a government which has given them welcome and opportunity. Although the continued use of the German language by those who have preferred it to English is to be opposed, the German language itself may rightfully be regarded as an asset. It need not be banished because it is now the medium of propaganda which we detest. It may become a weapon to be turned against these very propaganda. Much useful knowledge is locked up in German books. The United States, as a world-power and a factor in the international trade of the future, must have in service civilian emissaries, diplomats and soldiers who can speak the languages of the large populations of the world, whether their communications be friendly or otherwise. A knowledge of German need not corrupt or mislead any citizen who has been Americanized by birth, environment and training before he meets the German language. The German language is to be attacked, however, when it becomes a barrier between the immigrant and a fair knowledge of the aims and ideals of the country he has chosen, or when it is forced upon school children of the elementary grades. Therefore your committee recommends the following declaration by the Indiana State Council of Defense:

The fact should be frankly recognized by everyone that ours is an English-speaking people, and that any use of a foreign language which tends to divide our population into racial groups and to perpetuate or instill un-American ideas and purposes must be vigorously discouraged. The preferred language of communication in all schools, colleges and churches and at all public assemblages within the State of Indiana shall be English. The German language should not be taught in any public or private school of Indiana below the high school grades, and should not be the common language of communication in any public or private school of any grade. In no school or college should the study of German be compulsory. The statute enacted in 1869 requiring the teaching of German in the common schools under certain circumstances should be, as this council has already recommended, repealed at the next session of the legislature. Great care should be taken to see that instruction in German be given only by teachers who are thoroughly American in spirit, and that the textbooks used contain no covert attempts to Germanize the pupils.

English should be made the preferred language at all religious services. Every congregation of any religious sect should see that its minister is qualified to speak from the pulpit in English, and at no church service should German be made the exclusive language of communication. The use of German as any part of a church service may rightfully be regarded as un-American and subject to condemnation unless it can be proven that a considerable percentage of the congregation is unable to understand even simplified English speech.

County councils of defense, township councils and patriotic citizens everywhere are requested to act in friendly co-operation with people of German birth or extraction who are endeavoring to get away from the German language and the Prussian manner of thought, and are striving to put themselves into harmonious relationship with the government to which they owe allegiance. Residents who continue their efforts to Germanize any part of the State of Indiana are not entitled to the same friendly consideration. The free use of the German language as the preferred medium of expression in any community or church building or place of public assemblage is not to be approved. It can be tolerated only when the German-speaking residents make it evident that they are trying to become English-speaking Americans.

Respectfully submitted,

ARTHUR W. BRADY,
ALLEN B. PHILPUTT,
GEORGE ADE,

Committee.

The Diary of a Sugar Hog

July 1—This is the day when sugar rationing begins. The Food Administration has announced everyone must go on strict rations on account of a shortage. That doesn't affect me any; I'm prepared for it. I was wise and bought a supply a couple of weeks ago, as I saw this shortage coming. Limiting us to two-pound purchases doesn't deter me from having plenty. I went to six stores and bought two pounds at each place. I thought that was rather clever. This business of asking us to limit ourselves to three pounds a month is all nonsense; I can't be bothered. When we are put on sugar cards will be time enough to worry about how much we are eating.

The Germans are still going strong, the papers say. I wish there was something I could do to help.

July 4—Independence Day. I shall show my independence by having Ellen make a good old apple pie. The Food Administration is still harping on the necessity of saving sugar. I don't see why. There is plenty of sugar to be had; I know that. Food officials tell us there is no danger of a famine if we limit ourselves to three pounds a month. I'll let the other fellows do that. I've got plenty, so what's the use in my depriving myself. I've got to have lots of sugar; my system craves it.

The war situation looks a little brighter. We'll win yet, but it is going to mean a lot of sacrifices. I'm glad I'm too old to fight. I wish I could help in some other way here at home.

July 10—I bought 25 pounds of sugar today by signing a certificate I would use it for canning and preserving. I've got it put away in the basement. There is danger of a real famine, I believe, so it is best to be prepared. I'm going to grab all I can. These rules and regulations are only for those who will follow them. There is nothing compulsory about them.

Submarines are busy again. This war is a terrible thing.

July 15—Ellen wants to put up some fruit with that 25 pounds of sugar I bought; says I bought it for that purpose and it must be used for that. She is strong for living up to the rules; that's just like a woman. She says if we have more than our share someone else will suffer. I should worry about that; I've got mine. I've quit buying candy for the children; that is sufficient sacrifice for one family.

I see the Belgians have only one pound of sugar a month. That is a terrible condition. I don't see why something isn't done to give them more. War is even worse than I had imagined.

July 25—Now we are being asked to limit our sugar consumption to two pounds a month, beginning August 1. That can't be done. I wonder what is the matter with the Food Administration, anyway, that it can't keep us supplied with sugar. I told Ellen not to put any more sugar on the children's cereal. We've got to make more sacrifices, I guess, in these times.

I hope the Kaiser is whipped soon. I'd do anything to help win this war.

July 30—I was in a restaurant today and asked for sugar for my ice tea. It's a bore to have to ask for sugar, but the Food Administration has put a ban on sugar bowls. The waitress would let me have only two teaspoons. As that wasn't enough, I took a little bag out of my pocket and put in two more. A man sitting at the same table looked at me and said:

"You're a fine patriot, you are."

"What's the matter with you?" I asked.

"Do you think carrying your own sugar around with you to add to your allowance here is going to help matters any?"

"It is none of your business," I replied. "There is plenty of sugar; if the Food Administration knew what it was doing there would be no sugar shortage. This is a free country, anyhow."

"Don't blame it on the Food Administration; blame it on the German submarines; they're responsible. And you and other sugar hogs are doing more damage than the submarines by eating all you want."

Another man had sat down at the table and heard part of our conversation. He was rather a belligerent looking person.

"So you think you can use all the sugar you want, do you? You won't deny yourself a little while my two sons are facing death on the front in France to protect you and other blooming slackers." And he called a waitress, had her take out the tea I had sweetened and ordered her to bring me some without any sugar.

I protested.

"Shut up," he thundered. "I'm going to teach you right now to do without sugar."

Not wishing to cause a scene, I left the restaurant. I believe I heard some people hiss at me as I went out. War seems to have changed conditions considerably.

August 5—A man came to my house today and asked me how much sugar I had. I told him three pounds for household use. He had records showing I had bought sugar at several stores and had 25 pounds for preserving purposes which had not been used. He asked me if I knew the penalty for hoarding food. I told him I did not and did not care to know. He left. No one can meddle in my affairs.

August 7—The Food Administrator for this county was in to see me today. He asked me if I would give up the excess sugar I have on hand. I told him I most certainly would not; that the sugar I had bought was mine and I intended to keep it. I'd like to see the government take it away from me.

August 13—I gave $300 to the Red Cross today. And I have let all my sugar go. That $300 was given in lieu of prosecution of a charge against me of hoarding sugar. I seem to have lost most of my friends since it became known that I had more sugar than was coming to me. No one speaks to me any more. Business is very bad. My store is deserted. The women seem to prefer to buy dry goods elsewhere now. I have been asked to resign from my lodge. They say they want no slackers and sugar hogs with them. Ellen is heart-broken; her friends are treating her so coldly.

(Here the diary ends abruptly. The writer left town suddenly for an extended vacation because of poor health. This diary was found among his effects.)

The conservation of food demands of each individual enlightened fidelity joined to genuine patriotism.

"Cash and carry" savings equal the interest on a safe investment.

It is as much the duty of the consumer to eat less as it is the duty of the farmer to produce more.

To County Councils of Defense:

Supplementing Bulletin No. 179 and No. 188 regarding the demand of the gas defense division for nut shells and fruit pits, we submit the following additional details for your guidance:

"In the manufacture of gas masks, the highest grade of carbon is essential. Research of government chemists has demonstrated that such carbon must be obtained from the following raw material only:

"Peach stones, apricot pits, prune pits, olive pits, date seeds, cherry pits (if native), plum pits, Brazil nut shells, the shells of hickory nuts, walnuts and butternuts (although the army can use the whole nut, it is desirable, for the sake of food conservation, to separate the shells).

"Any of the materials on this list, no matter how old, can be used, provided they are not decayed. No attempt need be made to keep the various materials separate, but they must be dry.

"It is not necessary to extract the kernel from such of the above pits as contain kernels.

"The shipment of the materials has been put in charge of the American Red Cross, which already has facilities for the handling of supplies. You should therefore find out the location of the collection depot in your county and direct all contributions to these Depots.

"Remember that all pits must be dried before they are shipped.

"The help of your township councils is especially desired in reaching the people of rural districts where, aside from the fruit stones of the present season, large quantities of old stones and nuts can be collected and where the gathering of nuts can be greatly extended.

"The heaviest demand for the materials listed above will come in the next few months. Furthermore, the fruit season is closing and the nut gathering time is almost here. The need for action is immediate."

U. S. Boys' Working Reserve

W. E. Hall, national director of the reserve, writes as follows:

The United States Boys' Working Reserve desires to assist in every possible way in maintaining the education and training of American youth. It is using its every endeavor to protect American youth from any serious invasion of its education and training. If the schools are alive to their opportunity in this crisis it will be perfectly possible, in the opinion of our highest authorities among the school men themselves, to do the work that is ordinarily done through a nine-months' period within the limits of a seven-months' period. All that the reserve is asking of the boys, and of their parents, and of the schools, is that they shall so adjust themselves to the crisis that they will be able to accomplish within seven months what now they accomplish easily in nine months.

It is not necessary in this country seriously to curtail the time ordinarily devoted to school work.

Whatever call the reserve makes upon the school boys of the United States has to do with their vacation periods. It asks the schools in some instances to prolong a vacation period, and in some instances it asks the schools to grant a vacation period, in order that work that is vitally necessary to the winning of the war may be done. But it relies upon the patriotism of the boys to return to school with a firm determination to devote themselves conscientiously to their school work, to waste no time in school hours and to make every moment of their school session count in accomplishing the course laid down for them by their teachers.

Among the hundreds of reports of service for 1918 coming into the office of the federal state director each day, that of Elmer Pattee, Laporte, Ind., is typical of the agricultural service rendered by members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve of Indiana. The summary of this report is appended herewith: Farmed 92 acres of land alone except in haying and harvest; put out alone 24 acres of corn, 23 acres of oats, 19 acres of clover seed, 26 acres of wheat; fed 5 horses and milked 7 cows daily; raised 2 calves, 13 head of sheep, 7 head of hogs; marketed all salable grain and livestock; sheared his sheep alone. In fact, carried on all farm activities alone except for assistance as indicated and the minor help of his aged mother.

U. S. Employment Service

The following general order has gone from the director general to all federal directors, effective at once:

There should at once be added to each Community Labor Board two women, one of whom shall represent the woman who works, preferably one who herself has worked in industry; the other of whom shall represent management.

It is highly essential that each representative shall be a woman who has practical familiarity with the problems involved, that she shall command the respect of the community, and shall be capable of taking a broad vision of the Nation's needs and of exercising conservative judgment.

Each Community Labor Board should suggest the names of two women to be added to it, selected in accordance with the foregoing principles.

In selecting a woman to represent the workers, local labor groups should be consulted. In selecting a woman to represent management, local representatives of management should be consulted.

The names of those selected should be reported to the director general, with, in each case, a brief description of the nominee, setting forth what have been her activities, and what is her present position, and stating upon what recommendations if any she has been suggested.

Since much depends upon a proper selection of the women members, the director general will reserve the right to ask for substitute suggestions in any case where to him it seems wise.

Upon all questions concerning the utilization of women in industry, the two women members shall have full voting powers. They shall be ex-officio and non-voting members of the Community Labor Board in respect to other matters, but shall be invited to attend all meetings of the board.

Committee on Construction

The report of the Committee on Proposed Construction, adopted at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, September 24th, was as follows:

Indianapolis, Ind., September 24, 1918.

To the State Council of Defense:

Your Committee on New Construction reports that, on the basis of the facts now before it, it recommends as follows:

(1) In the matter of the Little River drain in Huntington County, Indiana, your committee recommends that the action of the Huntington County Council of Defense, recommending the construction of the drain, be approved; and that the action of the council be certified to the War Industries Board.

(2) In the matter of the improvement of Lafayette avenue in the city of Terre Haute, the committee, in view of new facts presented and recommendations made by the Vigo County Council of Defense, and of the chairman of the State Highway Commission, and of the state engineer, recommends that construction be approved.

Plans for Censoring War-Time Building

Council's Committee on Proposed Construction Presents Program for Guidance of Counties.

The following report of the Committee on Proposed Construction, appointed to develop a plan for the execution of the program of the War Industries Board for a strict censorship of all improvements and building enterprises, was adopted at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, September 24th, and has been sent forward to Indiana County Councils, as Bulletin No. 195:

CURTAILMENT OF NON-WAR CONSTRUCTION.

To County Councils of Defense:

No New Construction Without Permit.

The War Industries Board has by its Circular No. 21 directed that no buildings or other new construction not falling within the exceptions stated below shall be undertaken without a permit in writing issued by its authority.

The only new construction for which permits are not required is that falling within one of the following classes:

1. Those undertaken directly by or under contract with certain governmental departments.
2. Repairs to or extensions of existing buildings involving in the aggregate a cost not exceeding $2,500.
3. Roadways, buildings and other structures undertaken by or under contract with the United States Railroad Administration or a railroad operated by such administration.
4. Those directly connected with mines producing coal, metals and ferro-alloy minerals, and production (but not refining) of mineral oil and natural gas.
5. Public highway improvements and street improvements when expressly approved in writing by the United States Highways Council.

A permit is necessary for any proposed new construction falling within the excepted classes, regardless of the size, cost or purpose of such construction.

PROCEDURE.

Any person desiring to secure a permit for a project which, to quote the War Industries Board, he conceives "to be in the public interest or of such essentiality that under existing conditions it should not be deferred" must proceed as follows:

1. A full statement of the facts must be made, under oath, and filed with the county council of defense.
2. The county council of defense shall investigate the necessity of the proposed construction and transmit its recommendations, with a summary of the facts, to the State Council of Defense for review.
3. The State Council of Defense will review the case.

(a) If the State Council decides in favor of the construction, its recommendations will be forwarded to the War Industries Board, which will grant or withhold the permit and notify the State Council, and also the individual concerned, of its action.

(b) If the State Council decides against the proposed construction, it will notify the county council and the applicant of such action.

Tentative forms of application and of report by you are herewith sent, and may be used until other forms are received from the War Industries Board.

HIGHWAY CONSTRUCTION.

Public highway and street improvements constitute class 5 of new construction for which no permit from the War Industries Board is required, provided such improvements are expressly approved in writing by the United States Highways Council.

The United States Highways Council is a body made up of representatives of the War Department, the Department of Agriculture, the United States Railroad Administration, the War Industries Board, and the Fuel Administration. Beginning September 10, 1918, no manufacturer may lawfully furnish any local building material until the project has been approved by the highways council, which acts on projects as they are submitted by the proper State Highway Department. Henceforth, therefore, all matters of road, street or alley construction, including highways, bridges, and culverts, in your county should be taken up by the parties interested therein directly with Mr. L. H. Wright, chairman of the State Highway Commission, Indianapolis, Indiana. Action by the State or county councils with respect to such construction is no longer necessary.

SURVEY OF CONSTRUCTION ALREADY BEGUN.

Circular No. 21 does not strictly apply to construction already begun, but it is not the desire or intent of the War Industries Board that projects already under way shall proceed to completion without regard to the importance or essential character thereof. In order to determine what should be done in such cases, each county council is requested to make a survey at once of all buildings and other construction already undertaken in their county and to make report promptly to the State Council of all such cases, together with their recommendations concerning the necessity of the continuance of such construction or the possibility of deferring the same until after the war. The State Council will then refer such reports, with their conclusions, to the War Industries Board, which will take appropriate action.

Reports from the county councils should show in the case of each piece of construction its location, nature, approximate cost when completed, state of progress, extent to which materials are on hand or locally available, importance under existing conditions, and any other facts bearing on the question of the propriety of completion at this time.

PUBLICITY.

There can be no doubt that the people of Indiana will loyally and wholeheartedly unite to carry out the policy which the War Industries Board has adopted and declares to be an important part of the war program as soon as that policy is brought to their attention. You are therefore urged to see that the requirements of the War Industries Board are at once given wide publicity in your county, and that the reasons why that policy has been adopted are known. Those reasons are briefly stated by the War Industries Board in these words:

"While it is not the policy of the Government to unnecessarily interfere with any legitimate business, industry, or construction project, it must be borne in mind that there is an imperative and constantly increasing demand for labor, material, and capital for the production and distribution of direct and indirect war needs, to satisfy which much non-war construction must be deferred. A full realization of this fact by all loyal and patriotic citizens, including state and municipal authorities, is all that is required to postpone such construction activities as interfere with the war program. The state and local representatives of the Council of National Defense are with confidence depended upon to fully acquaint the whole people of these United States with the pressing need for the most rigid economy, measured not only in terms of dollars but in terms of labor, materials, and transportation service. The construction projects which must now be deferred may be undertaken when we shall have won the war and will then furnish employment to the returning artisan now on the battle front as well as those who will then be released by strictly war industries."

It is the duty of the State Council and of the county councils to create a public state of mind that will automatically discourage construction that does not aid in winning the war, and we confidently rely on your co-operation with us in performance of that duty.

Wherein You May Help.

The great purpose of the Food Administration is to conserve food that we may win the war, that the world may be made free, that civilization may resume its exalted march—sublime objects it is your privilege to help attain.

Helps in Using Substitute Foods

This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration, and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.

LAST CANNING RECIPES.

The season for canning, preserving, brining and pickling is about over for this year. Green tomatoes, sweet peppers and pimentos are still available and are good to can or pickle.

There may be grapes, peaches, pears or crab-apples still on the market which can be preserved or made into jelly or marmalade. Much of the fruit is very inferior in quality and for this reason is not especially good for canning, but makes better marmalade, fruit butter or jelly. Corn syrups, sorghum and even honey may be used for sweetening these products, but a better flavor is usually produced when half syrup and half sugar is used. Honey is very pronounced in flavor and cannot be used where it injures the flavor of the fruit.

Green Tomato Pickles.

One-half peck green tomatoes, sliced.
One and one-half cups salt.
One quart onions, sliced.
One cup brown sugar or one and one-half cups corn syrup.

Four tp. finely broken cinnamon bark.
Two tp. whole allspice.
Two tp. whole cloves.
One-half cup white mustard seed.
Two quarts vinegar.

Add the salt to the sliced green tomatoes and let stand twenty-four hours. Drain. Add spices to vinegar and heat to boiling point. Add tomatoes, onions, syrup or sugar and cook until syrup is thick.

Chili Sauce.

Twelve ripe tomatoes.
Two onions.
One green pepper.
Three-fourths cup brown sugar.
One tp. cloves.
One tp. cinnamon.
One tb. salt.
One-half cup vinegar.

Peel the tomatoes and slice them. Chop the onions and the pepper. Combine the ingredients and cook the mixture until it is thick. Seal in scalded bottles or jars.

Canned Sweet Peppers.

Take out seeds and halve if very large. Soak in weak salt solution over night. In the morning boil until tender, but not soft. Pack in jars, cover with boiling syrup and seal at once. Syrup is made by boiling together one cup sugar or one-half cup corn syrup and one-half cup sugar, two cups cider vinegar and two teaspoonsful mixed whole spices.

Corn Relish.

One dozen ears corn.
One large cabbage.
Three green peppers.
One red pepper.
Three bunches celery.
One-fourth pound ground mustard.
One cup sugar or two cups syrup.
Two quarts weak vinegar.

Cut corn from cob. Chop cabbage and place over it two tb. salt and allow to drain while getting the rest of ingredients ready. Chop peppers and celery. Mix all ingredients, drain cabbage from liquid and add. Boil thoroughly and until ingredients are thoroughly heated through. Place in cans and seal.

Ginger Pears.

Eight pounds pears.
Four pounds corn syrup.
Three lemons.
Ginger.

Wash, pare and cut the pears into small pieces, add syrup and ginger. Let stand over night. In the morning add lemons cut into small pieces and cook slowly two hours.

Peach Conserve.

Three pounds peaches.
Two small oranges.
One cup dates cut into pieces.
One-fourth pound walnuts.
One and one-half cups corn syrup.
One-half cup seeded raisins.

Remove skins from peaches, stone and cut into pieces. Add syrup, raisins, finely chopped oranges, dates and water. Cook slowly for one hour or until the consistency of marmalade. Add nuts five minutes before removing from the fire. Dates may be added if desired.

Carrot Marmalade.

One and one-half pounds carrots (five and one-half cups chopped).

Three lemons.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Two oranges.
Four and one-half cups syrup.

Wash and scrub carrots, blanch in wire basket in boiling water from four to five minutes, cold dip, scrape and cut into small pieces. Place in double boiler, add lemon juice and salt and cook for an hour. Add finely cut rind from oranges, orange pulp and syrup; boil slowly until thick. Pour into hot glasses, partially seal and sterilize ten minutes. Tighten seal. Let cool and store.

Woman's Section

Mrs. Carlisle has addressed the following to the woman's chairman of each County Council of Defense, with the request that they give it prompt attention:

"In the future all drafted men on their way to training camps are required to wear a brassard on the left sleeve bearing the letters U. S. N. A., and each tenth man in addition to the above is required to wear a brassard with the letters S. P. appearing thereon. It is necessary that these brassards be sewed on and, due to the fact that there is very little time, the county women are asked to kindly co-operate with their local draft board in this work, where the Red Cross have not already co-operated with them."

"Problems of the War" is the title of the war study programs for clubs which has been prepared by the Department of Educational Propaganda of the National Woman's Committee. Because of the great number of requests from county chairmen for copies of this program, a supply is now being forwarded to the state chairman of educational propaganda, to be distributed to county chairmen. This distribution will be made as soon as the copies are received, and additional copies may be had upon request by any persons, libraries, clubs or other organizations desiring same.

The Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense in a letter to the Woman's Section calls attention to the fact that although the intensive drive for recruiting student nurses closed on September 5, it was not the intention of the committee that all effort to secure recruits should cease on that date, but only that the intensive campaign might close in order to stimulate applicants to send in their completed application blanks in time to fill the vacancies in the fall classes.

The letter states that "there is under consideration the possibility of an affiliation between the Army School of Nursing and the civilian hospitals whereby their second or third year students may have the opportunity for experience in military hospitals either in this country or overseas," and that if this plan is carried out more student nurses will be needed than were called for in the first estimate of 25,000. The Woman's Committee therefore calls upon the state divisions to continue recruiting student nurses through their county and local units, and particularly in those localities where the quotas have not been secured.

An announcement of special interest to the wives of men who are in overseas service is that the position of hospital assistant in the Army

School of Nursing is open to them. The applicant must be between the ages of twenty-one and forty, in good physical condition, of good moral character, and must also be a high school graduate or present an acceptable equivalent. If she has not already completed one of the courses given by the Red Cross, she will be given a six weeks' course in elementary nursing and hygiene, first aid to the injured, and dietetics.

The hospital assistant will not be sent overseas, but will be on duty in the military hospitals in which the convalescent soldiers are quartered for reconstruction work. There will be many large hospitals of this class, and a great number of assistants besides the nurses will be required.

Governor Goodrich Recommends that the Selection and Storage of Seed Corn Be Completed by October 15th.

September 19th, 1918.

Mr. Warren T. McCray, Chairman, Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation.

Dear Sir—I wish to commend the campaign for the selection and storage of seed corn, conducted under the auspices of the Indiana Committee on Food Production as being highly important at this time. It is apparent that the best seed corn obtainable should be selected and carefully stored in order to prevent a repetition of the unfortunate experiences of last year.

It occurs to me that your committee should urge the selection of twice the amount of seed needed for the next season, and further that all seed corn in the State be selected and properly stored no later than the 15th of October. The crop is well advanced and this is easily possible.

I hope your committee will act upon these suggestions and continue to push this important work in order that the farmer, who puts in his time and labor, may not cheat himself by using poor seed or waste the agricultural resources of the country at a time when food is such an important factor in the winning of the war.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) J. P. GOODRICH,
Governor of Indiana.

There is more than one way to meet the shortage of farm labor, according to The New Country Life. A farmer in the Middle West was seen driving a team of six horses hitched to a disk plow and leading three horses drawing a harrow. Single handed, he was working nine horses and two modern farming implements. In one operation he was doing the work that under the old system of farming several men and teams would have had to do in several operations.

Red Cross Activities

"Linen for France" next week will be the slogan of Red Cross chapters, branches and auxiliaries of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, when they will be busy with the collection of towels, sheets, napkins and handkerchiefs for use in French hospitals. A minimum quota of 439,349 pieces is wanted from these states which comprise the Lake Divisions of the Red Cross.

A statement from Division headquarters says: "The linen articles should be new or substantially new and of strong rather than fine texture. Laundering facilities abroad are poor, and this, together with the hard and constant usage to which the articles will be submitted, make it clear that much needed shipping space should not be wasted on material that is not strong and durable."

It was announced at division headquarters that, although no results have been tabulated, the Lake Division chapters will exceed their quota of 400 tons of clothing being collected this week for destitute Belgians.

Increase in Wheat Acreage Is Assured

State Leader Announces That Indiana Will Plant More Than the Total Requested.

The Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation met in special session at the State House, Tuesday, September 24th.

It was planned to lend assistance to the agricultural advisors of the various district exemption boards. The food committee delegated a committee to secure the co-operation of the State Council of Defense in helping to defray the office expense of these advisors who are so generously donating their time. The advisors for the various boards are:

1st District—John Brown, headquarters LaPorte.

2d District—Will Johnson, headquarters Fort Wayne.

3d District—Maurice Douglas, headquarters Indianapolis.

4th District—Not yet named, headquarters Vincennes.

Mr. Coleman reported for D. S. Myer, state leader of the wheat campaign, that the 17% increase in wheat acreage asked for by the Federal Government, would be obtained. Indications are that the increase will run over 20%.

Mr. Coleman reported also for C. Henry, state leader of the seed corn selection and storage campaign, that the field selection work was now in full swing. Thousands of farmers are posting their farms with the placard: "We have our Seed Corn selected. Have you?"

In several counties the Liberty Loan workers have been asked to talk seed corn selection in their rounds among the farmers. The food committee approved the idea expressed in a recent letter from Governor Goodrich, to Chairman McCray, suggesting that twice the amount of seed corn be selected and properly stored no later than the 15th of October.

Loan Workers Co-operating.

More than 75 per cent of the farmers in a number of northern counties have gathered their seed corn and have stored it properly. This is the report from county agricultural agents who have been handling the local phases of the state-wide drive for early selection of seed corn. In several counties the work is being done in conjunction with the Liberty Loan campaign. Every bond salesman will ask the farmer on whom he calls if he has his seed corn gathered and stored. In turn the seed corn workers will assist in the selling of bonds. Carroll and Laporte counties are two places where this plan is being tried out.

Dates for seed corn weeks or days have been set in practically every county of the State, said C. Henry, state leader of this drive which is being waged under auspices of the State Food Production and Conservation Committee. In the ten counties surrounding Indianapolis, the week of September 30th to October 5th will be the time for gathering seed and concerted effort in these counties as well as a number of others in the State will be made at this time.

To Avoid the Hessian Fly.

Be sure that danger of the Hessian fly is past, but delay sowing only until this pest is known to have disappeared for the season, is the message to Indiana farmers from D. S. Myer, state leader of the wheat campaign which is being waged under the auspices of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation. Every county agent in the State can give to the men in his county the safe date to sow wheat and avoid this insect which has created such havoc in Indiana wheat fields in years past. The date varies from September 15th in the extreme northern part of the State to October 10th in the "pocket" section. Reports received from over the State indicate that the acreage will be well above the 10 to 17 per cent asked by the Government. Farmers generally are turning to wheat to distribute their labor more evenly over the year as well as for patriotic reasons and the fact that it is a good, profitable crop with the guaranteed price.

Congratulates Christie.

The following resolution, indicating the appreciation of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, for the former director of its affairs, was adopted at its meeting September 24th:

Whereas, Prof. G. I. Christie, member of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, and State Food Director for Indiana, has been chosen as assistant secretary of agriculture, and,

Whereas, His extraordinary ability as an organizer of the agricultural forces in Indiana has won him this national recognition, and, the great loss sustained through his absence is only compensated by his greater service to the nation, therefore, be it

Resolved, That this committee express, by this resolution, their hearty congratulations upon his being chosen to this most important work, and after the present national crisis, the committee sincerely hope it will be possible for him to return and lend his ability toward solving the problems of Indiana agriculture.

Indiana Miners Are Doing Their Share

The United States Fuel Administration authorizes the following:

With the coal miners of Indiana and Illinois breaking all records in coal production, the fuel administration has found it necessary to provide additional markets for the vast output of those states. The miners of Indiana and Illinois are exceeding all expectations in their efforts to maintain the coal supply which is vital to victory.

To meet the situation the fuel administration has issued orders modifying the limitations of the zone system as applied to Indiana and Illinois coal. The orders will add the lower peninsula of Michigan to the territory to be supplied by the Indiana and Illinois mines. This will operate to relieve the overburdened mines of West Virginia, Kentucky and Ohio. Coal for domestic purposes, for by-product purposes and for gas plants and railroad fuel will be allowed to move into lower Michigan from West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky fields, under general order.

Coats of Blankets, Shoes of Waste

A statement from the Commission for Relief in Belgium, at whose request the Red Cross instituted the campaign for 400 tons of clothing for the victims of Hun brutality, says:

"Ten million persons living in occupied Belgium and northern France are dependent on the Commission for Relief in Belgium for clothing and food.

"This clothing can come from America only. Securing the clothing is a matter of life and death for this helpless, courageous population behind the German lines.

"In Belgium it is impossible to buy shoes. There is no more leather of any description on the market. Every available substitute has been tried. For a time old belting from factories was used; and roofing paper, of which there happened to be a stock, was resorted to for resoling shoes. But the Germans, after having seized all the leather, requisitioned these substitutes also, and soon not a single yard of belting was left in any Belgian industrial establishment.

"Now the Belgians fasten pieces of old rugs on to wooden soles and wear them for shoes.

"And they make coats out of old blankets—and blankets out of anything."

Food Program Must Provide for Victory

preme effort. At the President's direction, I have assured them that "in this common cause, we eat at a common table," and upon entering these conferences in Europe we promised them that whatever their war food program called for from us we should fulfill.

If we survey our ability to meet this definite promise to them we find that while our wheat production this year is better than last year, our production of other cereals is less. We have had severe losses through drought in many sections. On balance our resources are no greater than last year. We find, however, that we can give this increase in food supplies, of 5,730,000 tons over last year, and still have a margin over the amount necessary to maintain our own health and strength.

At best the allied table will be less than ours, for the allied peoples are denying themselves more in order to transport our soldiers. We can do no less than fill the ships they send us.

Of our imports, we shall apparently have sufficient sugar to maintain the present consumption and take care of the extra drain of the Allies from our markets, instead of compelling them to send their ships to the Far East. We can secure in sailing vessels the coffee we need, if no one makes an over-brew. Of our own products we must secure a reduction in consumption and waste in the two great groups of, first, breadstuffs, and second, meats and fats; that is, in all bread and cereals, beef, pork, poultry, dairy and vegetable-oil products. The average consumption of our people of breadstuffs amounts to about six pounds per week and of meats and fats to four pounds a week for each person. A reduction in consumption of less than one-half pound per week per person in each of these two great groups of foods would accomplish our purpose. We wish to emphasize, however, that we do not want curtailment in the use of milk for children.

Some of our homes by reason of limited income cannot now provide more food than they should have to maintain health in the family. They cannot rightfully be asked to make the suggested reduction in consumption. But the great majority of our homes can do more than suggested.

We need even greater simplicity of living than last year among all that section of the community to whom foodstuffs are a secondary item in expenditure.

We estimate that nearly 9,000,000 people eat at our public eating places—hotels, restaurants, boarding houses, clubs, dining cars and so forth. The food consumption in these places is larger than in the average homes. We are asking the proprietors and employees of these institutions to undertake in many particulars a more strict program than last year, and we are confident that they will willingly do this.

This is not rationing—a thing we will never have if our people continue to support us as in the past. We are simply making an appeal to the intelligence in the homes and public eating places of America to work out for themselves the means and manner of saving.

This year, as last, I believe we can accomplish the necessary ends by voluntary action of our own people. The willingness to assume individual responsibility in this matter by the vast majority is one of the greatest proofs of the character and idealism of our people, and I feel it can be constantly relied upon. Our simple formula for this year is to further reduce consumption and waste of all food. We have so arranged the international food program that, except for a moderate substitution of other cereals in bread, it will not, we hope, be necessary to substitute one foodstuff for another, nor to resort to wheatless and meatless days. What we need is to reduce directly our consumption of all foodstuffs, laying especial emphasis on the staples. The Allies are in need of all the surplus of the great staples that we can provide.

It is necessary that every family in the United States study its food budget and food ways to see if it cannot buy less, serve less, return nothing to the kitchen and practice the gospel of the clean plate.

U. S. Food Administration for Indiana

Official Regulations and Penalties Imposed

Ford & Moore, bakers, of Redkey, Ind., have been ordered to close their doors for ten days, dating from September 24. The firm had been warned previously for not using wheat flour substitutes as required.

Christian Bliss, a baker of Valparaiso, was permitted to pay into the Red Cross fund $25 for failing to use the required substitutes.

A record sorghum yield in Indiana is looked to, to materially relieve the sugar situation, especially in rural communities. County food administrators are asked to urge farmers and growers of sorghum, who have been taxing the capacity of the few mills in the state, to permit their crop to stand in the fields as long as such action is safe. When conditions are such that it becomes necessary to cut the stalks, the producers are requested to store the crop, if possible, covering it carefully against the effects of unfavorable weather conditions.

The Booker Packing Company, which until recently operated a retail market at 310 Massachusetts avenue, Indianapolis, will not be privileged to deal with any wholesale firm that holds a federal license, during the period of the war. The effect of the order also is to prevent the firm from re-engaging in business anywhere in the nation. It was alleged to have violated a number of official regulations relative to the handling and sale of food.

Tea and coffee will be sold only in non-metal containers, as soon as present stocks of tin containers are used up. This recommendation was made by a representative committee of the trade after a conference with United States Food Administration officials, during which the necessity for conservation of tin, lumber and labor as a war measure was laid before them. Coffee will be sold at retail only in packages of one, three and five pounds each, and tea in one-fourth, one-half and one pound containers, according to the recommendations. Square packages will be adopted, so far as possible, to save packing space, and cases for shipping cartons in quantity will be of fibre. This will save the lumber that formerly went into wooden cases and the steel used in the nails.

An official bulletin from Washington says: "Government wheat price for this year has been continued in effect for the 1919 crop by President Wilson in a proclamation fixing $2.20 as the minimum price at primary markets. The President has accompanied his proclamation with the statement that before the harvest of next year he will appoint a commission to report on increased cost of farm labor and farm supplies with a view of determining whether the wheat price should be higher than this minimum.

"Should the vast grain stores of Australia and Argentina be made available next year, the American farmer would still be assured of a minimum price for his wheat, with the assurance of consideration of the commission's report on the increased cost of farm labor and supplies in determining an advance in price."

Indiana school children have been asked to take a census of the live stock on Indiana farms, on October 15th, for the use of the United States Food Administration. An appeal has been sent out to the teachers, by State Superintendent of Public Instruction Horace C. Ellis, asking that the teachers divide the territory in their school districts so that there will be no duplications or omissions in the tabulations to be prepared by the pupils. The census is for the purpose of assisting in a nation-wide food survey, which is essential to the successful prosecution of the war. Figures for 1917 and 1918 will be asked and it is contemplated making the census a semi-annual affair. It is to be emphasized by the teachers and

Help Boost the Loan

To County Food Administrators and Presidents of United States Food Clubs in Indiana:

A few short weeks ago and every household in America read with bated breath the story of the impending peril—how the enemy had resumed his supreme, desperate offensive and was so near Paris that the long-range guns were taking a daily toll of innocent women and children in the French capital. How hopeless the situation seemed for those brave people! After four long years must they yield to the ravages of such brutal warfare? Were they, after all, to have struggled in vain to protect their capital, the great, throbbing heart of world freedom? The Marne had been reached again, and the hearts of the allies sank as they had in 1914. The Marne was crossed and the peril seemed to approach even to American shores. There appeared but a single ray of light in all that darkly clouded sky. It was the little force of American boys—your boys, for whose comfort you mothers of Indiana have had but a single thought in those trying months. They wanted to help, just as you folks here at home have helped. They asked to be sent against the enemy. Their leaders doubted their fitness. But the situation was desperate. The boys were finally sent forward as the sole remaining hope of stemming the onslaught. Gradually they relieved the pressure on the worn Frenchmen who had given their last ounce of strength in vain. Then the break came. The test of American valor, of American fighting spirit was at hand. The enemy was stopped, he was whipped, he was driven back and Paris was saved. American pluck did it. And that American pluck was born of the same spirit manifested in this country in less romantic but equally effective and necessary fashion.

In asking a continuation of the policy of conservation, of storing up a surplus that will tide us over a possible crop failure, the Food Administration is simply calling upon the same heroic devotion to the cause of liberty that has made for new standards of living, a new code of morality, based upon patriotism and the love of right, that these heroes may go forward uninterruptedly to final victory. For the present I feel that we have our task sufficiently well in hand to divert our attention temporarily to the more pressing business of helping finance the war. Money is necessary, not less necessary perhaps than the food it is intended to buy. Can we not consistently, therefore, give of our time and patriotic interest to guarantee the success of the Fourth Liberty Loan? With our splendid organization, functioning 100 per cent as called upon, I feel that the forces of the United States Food Administration in Indiana can be of very material assistance to the Liberty Loan committees of the various counties, and I respectfully urge that such assistance be tendered wherever it will not interfere with the responsibilities to which we are all committed—and I believe there is no serious risk involved in all of us helping some. Buy bonds—all you can, and wherever possible try to contribute something more to the success of the campaign which begins September 28 and which should be concluded quickly and successfully, in keeping with our proud Hoosier record.

Sincerely yours,
H. E. BARNARD,
Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

pupils that the enumeration has absolutely no relation to tax assessment, and the figures are for the sole purpose of assisting in making intelligent calculations for the conservation and distribution of the meat supply upon which America and her associates in the war against Germany may depend.

Advertisements calling attention to a probable increase in retail prices of coffee are tabooed by the food administration. It is not denied that there have been increases in green coffee prices in Brazil for "unknown reasons." However the food administration has been able to stabilize prices and will continue to be able to do so, it is thought, if there is no abnormal demand, due to a panicky misunderstanding of the price situation.

Cash and carry retailers may have a profit of 5 cents per pound on butter. Credit and delivery stores 6 cents, according to an official bulletin from Washington. September 23-28 is investigation week, when an intensive effort will be made to ascertain the reasons for present high retail prices of butter. The action of the Government in commandeering a large per cent of the storage supply, while creating the appearance of a shortage, is not legitimately subject to such construction. The federal inquiry takes in state inspectors who are authorized to examine wholesalers, brokers, commission merchants and others, with a view to ascertaining costs and margins of profit, particularly with a view to restricting resales within the trade.

J. W. Strauss, of North Manchester, sold sixteen sacks of wheat flour without substitutes and admitted his guilt. He was permitted to pay $200 to the Red Cross as a penalty, and has been prohibited from selling any more flour for the period of the war.

Charles Delauter, to whom he sold the flour, paid $100 to the Red Cross and the flour was confiscated by Scott Davis, Wabash County food administrator.

A Veteran Sugar Saver.

Mrs. Kate D. Barr of Keokuk, who was awarded first prize by the Iowa State Food Administration food committee, submitted the following suggestion as to how best to save sugar:

Seventy years of housekeeping have taught me that many fruit pies may be made with a little soda or corn syrup; that canned fruits need no sugar until eaten; that preserves may be made with corn syrup with twice as long boiling, or canned with little sugar, to be completed in the winter; that many good cakes may be made with corn syrup and spices and flavoring.

Mrs. Barr is an active housewife at 86 years of age. Many of the older women of the state submitted suggestions as to how to save sugar. They had gone through the pioneer days when sugar was a real luxury and had paid thirty-five cents a pound for it in Civil War days. They learned the lessons that necessity taught, and in these modern times when sugar saving becomes essential they are resourceful in invention of sugar savers.

Beet Growers Asked For More Live Stock

By-Products May Be Utilized to Increase Profits and Meet Needs of Nation.

Sugar-beet growers should raise more live stock, is the recommendation made by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The stock utilize by-products of sugar-beet growers—the tops and pulp—and increase the growers' profits, but there is another reason—the nation needs more meat as well as sugar. The combination of stock raising and sugar-beet growing, while beneficial to farmers, will also benefit the nation.

Live stock on the sugar-beet farm constitutes an important factor in success of beet growing from two standpoints—the utilization of beet tops and pulp to the best advantage and the production of stable or barnyard manure which can be used to enrich the soil.

The feeding operations should be located on the farms where the best tops are produced. When practicable the pulp should be handled with frame and fed. There should be available labor for handling the stock and other feeding stuffs used in combination with the pulp, and tops should be obtainable.

Good for Live Stock.

Sugar-beet tops and pulp are good feed for many kinds of live stock, including chickens, hogs, sheep, cattle, and, to some extent, horses. Generally the tops and pulp are fed to sheep and cattle. They may be pastured off, a process which consists in turning the live stock into the beet field after the beets have been harvested and the roots removed. The tops are left scattered over the ground, and this method of feeding results in the ground being more or less trampled. Sheep especially are inclined to travel more generally in paths, thereby trampling the ground unevenly. In no case should the pasturing of the tops be permitted when the ground is wet, since the ground itself would be seriously injured by trampling in that condition and many of the tops would be wasted by being trampled into the ground. While live stock thrives on beet tops and pulp, other feed must be used in finishing the animals for the market. Beet tops, especially the crowns, contain considerable mineral matter which is beneficial to live stock, but it should not be fed in too large quantities.

Feeding in Racks Economical.

Aside from pasturing the tops they are sometimes allowed to cure partly and are then gathered into piles, hauled to the feed yard, and fed in racks. This is a much more economical method than pasturing, but it involves the additional expense of gathering and hauling. The tops may also be used as ensilage. When chopped with straw, cornstalks or other roughage excellent silage is produced. Both the tops and the pulp are excellent for dairy cows, since they act as a tonic upon the animals as well as a food, and increase the flow of milk. Pulp is used either fresh or dried. It is dried artificially, either by itself or in combination with molasses. The object in drying the pulp is to make it easier to handle. About 80 per cent of the weight is lost in drying. The dried pulp should be soaked for several hours before it is fed to stock.

Animals can not be finished for the market on the beet by-products alone, and unless other feed is available it will not be advisable to purchase animals for feeding purposes with a view to turning them on the market later. If the farmer is provided with dairy cows it is advisable to furnish them with one or two feeds of tops or pulp each day. The tops, when cured or pitted, will keep for several months; the pulp, when left in a large pile, will not spoil for feeding purposes, except a thin layer on the surface. If the tops or the pulp are fed heavily to dairy cows, a distinct increase in the flow of milk marks the top and pulp-feeding period, and there will generally be a distinct falling off in the flow of milk when this feed is discontinued. If the supply of tops and pulp is limited, it is better to continue the feeding over a longer period, giving a smaller amount to each of the animals daily.

Blanks Are Being Printed For Census of Live Stock

County food administrators have been advised of the plan to enlist the co-operation of school children in the census of live stock to be taken by the United States Food Administration, in Indiana, October 15th. Blanks upon which the reports of the scholars are to be made are now in the hands of the printers and will be sent forward to school officials in plenty of time to permit of a survey of every quarter section in the State.

County food administrators and school teachers have been advised that this work is most important or they would not be asked to have it done. Upon the reports the world's food apportionment will be largely determined for the ensuing year, according to advices from Washington, where the complete reports, wholly accurate and reliable, are eagerly awaited.

The Fifth Wheel of Food

Women "come together over a cup of tea"; motorists stop at inns and country clubs for sandwiches or ices; and young people flock around soda fountains and candy counters. It isn't nourishment they want, for they have enough without that addition. It is merely a pleasant social habit.

But all these candies, creams and afternoon teas are made up of nourishing food. Every such morsel eaten is subtracted from the legitimate and necessary meals of the country. They offer a constant temptation to the seller to use more than he should of the sugar and wheat that is needed in Europe, and they lure the buyer into careless, extravagant food habits.

When people eat well-balanced meals and obtain sufficient nourishment at the table, any other food they use is wasted. It is like having a fifth wheel on a cart.

Why not cut out this fifth wheel of food consumption, as it doesn't help our progress? Conversation can go on gaily without tea and cakes, and a soda does not improve the plot of the movies. Try companionship for its own sake, theaters for the play, and driving for the scenery—without the expensive, unpatriotic food wasting too often connected with them.

Food saving was at first a fad; then a patriotic service; now a habit.

Council Probes Into Delay of Highways

Assistance Promised Danville Normal School in Securing Students' Army Training Corps.

Delay in the construction of highways to Ft. Benjamin Harrison were discussed at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense October 1st. Emsley W. Johnson, attorney for Marion County, related the difficulties in securing material, due to the lack of steam railroad transportation facilities, and he added that legal obstructions had entered into the situation. Luke H. Wright was delegated by the state council to make an inquiry into the situation with a view to effecting a completion of the work before cold weather. Representatives of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce were present at the meeting and pledged their continued co-operation in an attempt to get the roads completed.

W. V. Rooker, an attorney, appeared before the council and protested against designating Mr. Wright as "state highway commissioner." He asserted that the courts had said that Mr. Wright did not legally hold this office and the council had unfortunately held out the suggestion that he still continued in that office. He urged that the federal government be acquainted with the fact that the highway law had been held invalid and that there is no legally established commission in the State. Chairman Foley replied that the council had never had any purpose to influence the opinion of any court in the matter in question, and that the suggestion would be heeded in the future to the end that there be no misconstruction of the attitude of the council on a pending issue. Mr. Wright informed the council that he was acting as highway commissioner with the authorization of the officials at Washington, whom he said have full information as to his legal status.

C. F. Williamson, principal of a high school at New Albany, by letter informed the council that Charles Miller, operator of a moving picture show at New Albany had declined to admit colored school children to see "Pershing's Crusaders," the first official American war film, when he had announced that school children would be admitted free. The matter was referred to the Floyd County Council of Defense.

Edward P. Eagler, chairman of the county council of defense in Noble County, wrote to the council that onion growers in his county "are not getting enough for their crop to pay the cost of production." His communication was referred to Dr. Harry E. Barnard, federal food administrator for Indiana.

Horace Ellis, state superintendent of public instruction, told the council that he had been requested to ask the good offices of the Indiana State Council of Defense in securing the assignment to the Central Normal School of Danville of enough students to meet the federal government's requirement that there be 100 male students enrolled in such institutions before the government will recognize them for army training. He said the normal school officials were asking an extension of time from October 1, which was fixed in an ultimatum, for the reason that they had secured less than 75 male enrollments. Su-

Patriotism in Indiana

Boone County.—An exhibit of vegetables grown by Lebanon school children was held in the court house and attracted unusual attention. Officers and members of the Civic League who worked long and patiently with the children to accomplish these results, deserve credit for this practical showing of what can be done by organized effort. The display included vegetables grown by the children in the various city gardens, rows of canned fruits and jellies, together with flowers which the children had been encouraged to cultivate along with the vegetables; also bird houses, some of which had been constructed by girls showed considerable originality in design.

Elkhart County.—One of the Elkhart daily papers held a contest for the best short composition from the city school pupils on "Why Should We Buy Liberty Bonds?" In addition to stimulating interest among the children in the Fourth Loan, the contest brought forth some excellent reasons. The first prize of $5.00 in Thrift stamps, went to William Bragg, whose composition follows: "Why we should buy Liberty Bonds: First—Because our money is safely invested. Second—As loyal Americans we should do our best to help abolish Prussianism and punish Kaiser Bill. Third—This is a war in which everybody must either save or fight. What are you going to do? Fourth—You should do something if you value your life and honor your flag. Fifth—If you haven't bought Liberty bonds, buy them. If you have—buy more bonds. Three cheers for Old Glory. We'll all rally around her."

Fayette County.—During the recent roundup for clothing for destitute Belgian children, a Connersville merchant who had just received a consignment of several scores of bright, warm children's hoods, took the entire order to the Red Cross headquarters, and through this act of kindness many a little Belgian tot will be warm this winter.

Fulton County.—Instructions have been issued by the County Council of Defense to every township chairman, that any Fulton County citizen who is financially able to buy bonds and refuses to do so, be given an opportunity to show good reason for failure to purchase, and if this is not done their names will be published in a "Dishonor" list in every newspaper throughout the county. It is expected this step will result in the purchase of quite a number of bonds by individuals who in the past have refused to buy although financially able to do so.

Gibson County.—An appropriation of $2,000 has been made by the civil council of Gibson County for the use of the County Council of Defense. The money will be used for the promotion of all patriotic endeavors, including the financing of Liberty loan drives and subscriptions to the united war work funds.

Greene County.—An all day carnival was held in the main street of Switz City by the Red Cross workers of Fairplay and Grant townships and the sum of $617.19 was raised.

Lake County.—The Commercial Club rooms at Crown Point have been donated as headquarters for the boys in service passing through the city on motor trucks, and provision has been made for writing and recreation rooms. The cost of stamps and writing material was personally borne by Deputy Treasurer Bradford until it became so heavy that Mr. Bradford took the matter up with the Council of Defense, and at a recent meeting of that body an appropriation was made to cover this service to the boys....The Lake County Council of Defense has decided that a field man is necessary for the successful conduct of the work of the food and fuel administration in the county, and a man will be appointed shortly to look after this important work.

Lagrange County.—Many patriotic features have been provided for the annual Lagrange corn school which will be held October 7 to 11. There will be airplane stunts, a human flag formed by the school children of Lagrange, patriotic addresses by speakers of national repute, patriotic parades and a Red Cross auction. In past years it has been quite a problem to feed the thousands of visitors attending the "school"; this year the women of the county will put up dinners in boxes; these boxes will be sold at auction and the money distributed among the various Red Cross units of the county.

Montgomery County.—The beef cattle industry of Montgomery County will receive a decided boost when the latest plan of the club committee of the Boys' and Girls' Club is materialized. Through the courtesy of one of the Crawfordville investment companies, County Club Leader Romaine will be able to buy at least twenty beef calves to distribute among applicants who have the required credentials. The investment company will accept a note for the purchase of the calves, which note is to be paid when the calves are sold on the June market. The boys hope to realize a profit of 25 per cent. The new club will be known as the Baby Beef Club, and will not only enable the boy and girl members to obtain a better knowledge of feeding and caring for cattle, but will give them some idea of business methods as well.

Posey County.—The County Council of Defense is notifying all farmers to advise the county agent regarding any help needed to gather in their wheat and corn crops. During the earlier wheat harvest 530 calls for farm labor were taken care of through the county agent's office.

St. Joseph County.—Notice has been issued by the Woman's Section of the County Council of Defense that any women who did not register for war work in the spring may have this opportunity now by calling at the headquarters of the council. Women who have previously registered and who now find themselves available for service other than that for which they have registered, can re-register at this time.

Warrick County.—Two prominent Warrick County young women, Miss Alma Maurer and Miss Mena Haas, showed their patriotism in a practical manner, when they volunteered their services to help fill allies, and while rather tired after their first day's hard work, expressed their determination to keep at it while the need for help is urgent.

Wells County.—At a special session of the Civil County Council, it was voted to appropriate $2,750 to the Wells County Council of Defense, which with the $1,000 previously appropriated makes a total of $3,750 for the year....At the same session by a vote of 4 to 2 the council turned down the proposition of reimbursing former County Agent Harry Gray for a loss of $1,425 on unsold seed corn. It is possible the matter may be put up to the County Council of Defense to reimburse Mr. Gray, who acted in good faith in purchasing the corn which was delayed so long en route that it arrived too late to be sold....C. E. Sturgis, chairman of the County Council of Defense, reports that township councils throughout Wells County are now thoroughly organized and with one or two exceptions are in good working shape.

White County. Fuel Administrator W. K. O'Connell and Wright J. Hinkle, chairman of the County Council of Defense, have issued a joint notice stating that "For the purpose of attending the physical exercises and to the place where such drill is held the use of gasoline for automobiles is permitted to members of the registered men's organization and Liberty Guards only who participate in the exercises of their respective organizations."

Red Cross Activities

A telegram received at Lake Division Red Cross headquarters, written by Herbert Hoover, answers the charge being circulated that the clothing now being collected by the American Red Cross for Belgians will ultimately fall into the hands of Germans. The telegram reads:

"All clothing collected in America for Belgium is consigned to the office of the Commission for Relief in Belgium. At Rotterdam it is placed in sealed barges and sent into Belgium, through neutral Holland, with the help of the Spanish commission, which is working under the protection of Holland.

"The Spanish minister at Brussels controls final distribution of this clothing and accounts to the Commission for Relief in Belgium for every article sent.

"Absolutely none of this clothing falls into German hands."

Lake Division Red Cross headquarters authorizes the following statement regarding the shipment of Christmas parcels to men in the American Expeditionary Forces:

"The War Department wishes each man to receive only one parcel of standard size and weight. To carry out this plan, the army authorities are distributing Christmas parcel labels to men abroad, who will mail them to their relatives and friends. No parcel will be accepted for mailing by any postoffice unless it carries a label received from a man abroad.

"A few days ago it was announced that Red Cross chapters would provide cartons in which these Christmas parcels could be sent abroad, but these cartons will not be ready for distribution to local chapters until the latter part of October, which, according to advices from our national headquarters, will give ample time for parcels to reach their destination by December 25th."

Complete details regarding the handling of the cartons are to be sent out within a few days from Lake Division headquarters to all chapters in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

New Red Cross canteen stations are being established in the Lake Division to meet the growing war need. Anderson, Evansville, Howell, Vincennes, and Tipton (Ind.) have new canteen service. Logansport (Ind.) has recently reorganized.

Those old pewter teapots, sugar bowls and creamers reposing in attics and trunks in many households are wanted by Red Cross chapters, not so much for the money they will bring as to help the War Industries Board in its work of augmenting the nation's pewter and tin supply as a war measure.

Lake Division chapters are already engaged in collecting tinfoil and collapsible tubes, emptied of salves, shaving creams and tooth pastes. Boys and girls comprising Red Cross Junior membership are particularly active in this work.

Recent market quotations show that pewter brings $1,200 per ton; pure tinfoil, $1,600 a ton; lead foil, $150 per ton, and collapsible tubes, $300 a ton.

Helps in the Conservation of Foods

This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration, and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.

CANNING MEAT.

The canning of meat has not been so extensively practiced as the canning of fruits and vegetables and many housekeepers know little about the methods employed in the process. Meats may be canned at home and kept in excellent condition, and where there is a surplus to be cared for, canning may be the best method to use.

Cans should be tested as for the canning of fruits or vegetables. Rubbers also should be tested. Glass cans are entirely satisfactory to use in canning meat.

Meats should not be washed if it is possible to avoid it, as the water starts the flow of the juices and causes loss of food value. Meat should be kept at least twenty-four hours in a cool place before canning.

There are two methods of canning meats. The first is the method in which the raw meat is packed in the cans and the second is the one in which the meat is seared or slightly browned in a hot oven or in hot fat, or is boiled or steamed until it can be pulled apart before packing in the cans.

The following recipes may prove helpful for the woman who has a surplus of meat on hands:

Canned Chicken.

Canning surplus cockerels that have reached the proper size saves feeding and caring for them during the winter. A fowl weighing two pounds when dressed should make a pint can of solid meat when the bones are removed. In canning chicken, wash and dry. Pack in cans. Add 1 teaspoon of salt for each pint. Fill the cans with boiling water. Place lid on and partially seal. Process for three hours. Remove and finish seal. In canning by second method cut up the chicken, brown in hot fat, pack in jars, add hot water or stock. Continue as in first method.

Chicken may also be cooked until it can be pulled from the bone. Pack in jars with stock and process for three hours.

Fresh Beef.

Cut beef into convenient pieces and roast or boil slowly for one-half hour. Remove gristle, bone and excessive fat and pack into jars. Fill can with gravy or broth from meat concentrated to one-half its volume. Partially seal can. Process for three hours.

Skirt Roll of Beef.

Take skirt of raw beef, salt and pepper to taste and make into oblong roll to fit half gallon jar. Tie roll with cord and put into jar without water. Partially seal cans and process for four hours.

Spare Ribs.

Saw and cut into suitable pieces. Sauté or bake until brown and partly done. Salt and pepper to taste. Pack in jars, adding some of the liquor. Partially seal cans and process three hours.

Rabbit.

Rabbits may be canned, using the same method as that employed for chicken.

Chicken Broth with Rice.

For each gallon of soup stock use 12 ounces of rice. Boil the rice 30 minutes. Fill the jars with two-thirds rice and the remainder with stock or less rice if desired. Partially seal cans. Process for 90 minutes.

Sidelight on Conditions Existing Now in Germany

Translation of newspaper article an interesting survey of food situation among the enemy.

A translation from the Berlin Tageblatt, a leading German newspaper, of a recent article entitled, "The Starveling's Belt; the Pause before the Harvest," and signed by Erich Dombrowski, throws some sidelights on German conditions. It follows:

"Shortly before the goal the sportsman collects the whole of his strength together to make one wild plunge to obtain victory. The whole German civil population, as long as the war lasts—every year from about the middle of May up to the end of July—is in a similar position. When the old harvest is about finished and the new harvest not yet brought in, in this pause in supplies, after a turnip and potato winter of dissatisfaction, the housewife does not know which way to turn. Then the stomach and nerves are put to a very hard test. The authorities know this—the authorities whose wisdom and care for us fan us daily like a soft wind—or they should know it. Herr van Batocki (German food administrator) at least, with whom speech was like liquid honey, thought of this certainly, and in the past year about this time, when potatoes and flour became rare, we received a handsome extra portion of meat for a low sum. Barley and barley-groats were to be had as well as sugar, fruit and vegetables, so that one helped himself over the few hard weeks as best one could.

"And now? If Herr van Batocki will take pity, he who after building up our victualling arrangements is now far out of range as over-president in Königsberg, completing the restoration of East Prussia! This time we are living on shortages all round: our ration of bread has been cut down; meat, potatoes and fruit have been taken away from us altogether, and vegetables can only be obtained by those who keep the proverb in mind, 'Learn to line up ('an-stehen') without complaining."

"All that are left to us are barley and barley-groats, and a little sugar in addition has been granted, so that the present sad condition of foodstuffs may be sweetened a little for us.

"Recklessness is a swimming belt of life," wrote Ludwig Boerne once, wittily and carelessly. Without regarding the heavy losses which the strength, health and rearing of the German people have to bear in consequence of our continually miserable victualling conditions we dance away over this period. Our children will be the first to be able to judge in their own bodies and spirit the consequences of war famine which has lasted for years. One need only compare coolly the simple daily menu of a middle-class citizen during the years before the war with the present 'small midday'—as it is called in Low German—in order to recognize what we expect today from our stomachs, and thereby from our whole bodies.

"Once upon a time the, comparatively speaking, well-situated German consumed on an average daily in May, June and July:

- 1 pint good coffee with a grain of substitute.
- ½ pint milk and a little cream.
- ¼ pound butter.
- 1½ pounds bread.
- ¼ pound sausage or other cold meat.
- ½ pound meat.
- 1 pound potatoes.
- ½ pound vegetables.
- 2-3 pint soup.
- 1 pound fruit.
- ½ pound pastry or cake.
- ¼ pound sugar.
- 2 eggs.
- 2-3 pint tea.

"Certainly everyone may not have kept to this daily menu. Some complained of loss of appetite, which is only known of today from hearsay. Some ate, however, double the amount, with all the tricks of gastronomical art.

"And today? Daily we have to bore new holes in our belts, in order that they may fit our ever contracting waists. We would now consume daily in Berlin, if things went in accordance with the rationing:

- 1 pint bad substitute without a grain of coffee.
- milk (quality unknown).
- 1-50 pound butter and margarine.
- ½ pound bread.
- 1-7 pound sausage (apart from 1-11 "neighing" cold meats).
- 1-25 pound meat (together with 50 grammes of bones).
- ¼ pound potatoes.
- ¼ pound vegetables (when one is lucky).
- 1 pint soup.
- ¼ pound barley and barley-groats.
- ¼ pound fruit ("Polish" at 2.10 marks per pound).
- ¼ pound pastry (slime and froth).
- 1-10 pound sugar.
- ¼ egg.
- 2-3 pint German (Camomile) tea.

"Naturally one cannot simply add the number of ounces together and compare the results without further ado. But still one arrives by this method at at least an approximate comparison between former days and now. Formerly a hundred ounces and now 33 ounces. Therefore only a third of the quantity of food in peace time. A calculation free from any objections would naturally have to consider two further factors, the working out of the total daily quantity of foodstuffs of various kinds in the number of calories, and furthermore the additional quantities, which nearly every one can obtain 'at the back door,' in addition to the quantity rationed by the authorities. If we were only to be allowed the quantities according to the foodstuffs card file, there would not be sufficient hunger paws to suck, nor after the confiscation of woven materials still fewer hunger-cloths at which to gnaw. The quantities of products which are disposed of by illicit trading ('Schleichhandel'), however, defy all statistical grasp and one is only left to supposition. How large these must be is indirectly evidenced by the total quantity of foodstuffs which is rationed to the people officially, and which is too much to die on and too little to live on.

"Last year Dr. Michaelis endeavored to control the production of foodstuffs better by means of the imperial economic card ('Reichswirtschaftskarte') to no purpose. He only added another bureaucratic link in the endless chain of decrees, enactments and provisions, without attaining even the slightest advantage. On the contrary, conditions have only become worse. Evidence: the very flimsy menu which is served up to us daily.

"The Greater Berlin Victualling Union yesterday decided to allow the people 49 ounces of foodstuffs and 49 ounces of jam as a substitute for the smaller ration of bread. This does not mean much, as in the first place this consolation prize is only intended for the time up to the 15th of August, and secondly in the extra quantities are included the baker's goods substitutes which were expected and which have been partly delivered already.

"It would be of far more value if the supplies of fruit and vegetables were made more accessible to the public. Fruit is practically impossible to obtain this year. Neither cherries, oil-berries, currants nor gooseberries. It is as if the fruit trees had declared a general strike and everywhere had borne no fruit. On the other hand Polish fruit has arrived in such quantities as if the whole attention of the Polish agriculturists had been paid to fruit growing. The Old Testament tells us that when the prophet Elijah, in the days of King Ahab, came to the widow of Sarepta tired and hungry, he asked her to give him something to eat. When she shrugged her shoulders and called his attention to her own want, he promised her that her cruse of oil and her sack of flour would never give out. Apparently it is the same with the distressed fruit dealers. There is no end of their 'Polish' fruit. But only the better situated public are able to buy it. It is the same in all things. Always the same old story. Only the themes change. The housewife waits in vain for the 'Magic Table' ('Tischleindeck dich'). When, however, the miracle knocks at the door 'for servants and tradespeople,' then she has to pay the illicit traders so much that she experiences her 'blue marvel.'

"We have now sworn peace and friendship (or what one understands by the words when alone) with all sorts of countries and peoples, with Russia, Poland, the Ukraine, Roumania, the Caucasus and Finland. We have entered into commercial treaties and contracts for supplies and continual promises. We have fattened ourselves on hope, either boiled or baked. All delusive conclusions. Already it is beginning to dawn on the housewife that even after a general peace, considering the complete derangement of the economic conditions in all countries, things will not be altered, will not improve much. What, therefore, remains for her to do but to make a few more holes in her belt and resignedly accept the inevitable?

"Herr August Kopisch was quite correct when he sang:

"'Oh! were it as in bygone days,

But the beautiful times will never come back,'

"Once the gnomes carried on the illicit trading in an unselfish manner, gratis, and out of pure goodness of heart and love of mankind. Today love of mankind is quoted at a very high figure, much above par."

French Supplies of Candy For Soldiers Running Low

French supplies of candy for our soldiers are running low. Heretofore 300 tons of chocolate for the red triangle huts have been manufactured monthly over there. In addition to this, there is being shipped every month from this side 200,000 two- and four-ounce cartons of candy.

A shipment of 10 tons of chocolate and 5 tons of hard candy goes monthly to England. Italy gets the same amount.

All this requires many pounds of sugar.

That the boys crave this candy and call for more is shown in an excerpt from the letter of a young college boy now serving as a private in France, who writes his mother: "If you have any chance to slip us some sweets, don't fail to do so. The triangle huts are fairly mobbed when a candy consignment arrives and I never yet have gotten there in time to get my share."

And we must remember that this craving is an indication that these lads need the sugar; they are better soldiers if they get it—not only happier but better fighters.

No man or woman wearing a service pin or displaying a service flag need be told the second time to keep well within his two-pound monthly sugar ration when once the reason for our sugar saving is well understood.

The Wounded Man Speaks.

(By Henry Oyen of The Vigilantes.)

I left an ear in a dug-out
When a shell-hit made us dance;
And at Belleau Wood where the mixing was good
I gave up a mitt for France.

I lay on a cot a-smoking
And thought I was getting well;
But the moon was bright on the boomplane's sight
And the Gothas gave us hell.

They certainly spoiled my beauty;
And my leg is a twisted curve;
They busted me up like a mangled pup,
But—THEY DID NOT BUST MY NERVE!

I'll step off ship at Hoboken
And I'll say: "Well, here I be.
Straight from Belleau Wood and it's understood
That nobody grieves for me."

And no pussy-footing sissy
Shall grab at my one good hand
And make me feel drunk with the good old bunk,
Just to make himself sound grand.

For I'm damned if I'll be a hero
And I ain't a helpless slob;
After what I've stood, what is left is good,
And all I want is—A JOB.

Attention,
County Councils

General Bulletin No. 197.

October 1, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

Owing to the necessity for saving labor and material in the manufacture and sale of Christmas gifts and to save the transportation and deliveries necessarily involved in the usual large volume of Christmas purchases, the Council of National Defense instructed the several State Councils of Defense to begin a campaign for the purpose of restricting Christmas buying during the coming fall.

It came to the knowledge of the Indiana State Council of Defense that the manufacture of goods for the coming holiday season had been substantially completed, that the transportation of goods to the points of sale was also largely done and that much of the material used for Christmas purchases, especially in the manufacture of toys, is the waste material derived from prior processes of manufacture.

The Council of National Defense, finding the conditions existing in Indiana identical with the conditions existing elsewhere in the nation, called a conference with the representatives of the leading industries and retail interests concerned.

The retail interests represented at this conference have pledged themselves to the following measures:

1. Not to increase their working force by reason of the holiday business over the average force employed by them throughout the year.
2. Not to increase the normal working hours of their force during the Christmas season over the normal hours observed throughout the year.
3. To use every effort to confine Christmas buying, except for young children, to useful articles.
4. To spread the period for holiday purchases over the months of October, November and December.
5. In order to relieve the transportation facilities of the country from a congestion in the latter half of December, to restrict deliveries and to induce their customers to carry their own packages whenever possible.
6. To make an announcement to the above substantial effect in their advertisement commencing early in September and repeating same weekly thereafter.

The State Council is relying upon the loyal and thorough co-operation of the merchants of the State in spirit and in letter and has instructed its Merchants Economy Committee to secure from every merchant in Indiana a pledge that the six measures above set out will be complied with.

The Merchants Economy Committee has been advised that the State Council has instructed the chairmen of the County Councils of Defense to co-operate with its district chairman in seeing that these rules are complied with in their localities. The Merchants Economy Committee will write direct to you, giving the name of its district chairman in your district and making suggestions regarding your co-operation.

To County Councils of Defense:

Attention is called to the fact that General Bulletin No. 195 places the power of recommending or disapproving new construction projects in the hands of the County Councils of Defense, as the local agents of the State Council of Defense, and not in the hands of the several chairmen thereof. The State Council has received numerous recommendations signed merely by the chairmen of the county councils as such. Hereafter, if it is the desire of any county council to place the matter of investigating and passing on new construction projects in the hands of any particular person or persons, such persons should be authorized to make the investigations and the recommendations in the name of the county council itself.

Attention is also called to the fact that the Construction Committee of the State Council of Defense meets each Tuesday morning at 9:30, and the county councils are requested to forward all requests for permits passed upon by them to the State Council to reach the State Council not later than Saturday morning of each week. The construction committee desires to have from Saturday until Tuesday to consider all questions it must pass upon at its weekly meeting.

Attention is called to the sample blanks attached to Bulletin No. 195. The county councils are expected to supply themselves with these blanks and hereafter no requests for construction permits will be considered by the State Council unless the procedure set out in Bulletin No. 195 is precisely followed.

Please bear in mind that it is important that the county council make its own investigation of the facts in each case and not rely upon the facts stated in the petition of the persons desiring a permit. It should itself try to justify fully its approval or disapproval of a petition by setting out itself all of the facts on which such action is based.

To County Councils of Defense:

Supplementing General Bulletin No. 195, will you please note the following additions and corrections:

Addition to paragraph 2 of the exceptions set out under the first heading, as follows:

... "and new construction, for farm purposes only, involving in the aggregate a cost not exceeding $1,000.00."

Exception No. 2 will now read as follows: "Repairs to or extensions of existing building involving in the aggregate a cost not exceeding $2,500.00, and new construction, for farm purposes only, involving in the aggregate a cost not exceeding $1,000.00."

Correction, as follows:

In the last paragraph, under the heading NO NEW CONSTRUCTION WITHOUT PERMIT, add the word "not" between "construction" and "falling."

This last paragraph will now read as follows:

"A permit is necessary for any proposed new construction not falling within the excepted classes, regardless of the size, cost or purpose of such construction."

The sacrifice of the American home, added to the efforts of the American farmer, have removed fear from the minds of our allies, for this year, at least.

Farmers Respond to Seed Corn Campaign

In Nearly Every County Steps Have Been Taken to Meet Demands for 1919 Planting.

An unprecedented response is being made by the farmers of Indiana to the call for early seed corn selection from the standing stalk, said C. Henry, state leader of the seed corn selection and storage campaign. In nearly every county some steps have been taken to meet the government request that seed corn for planting the 1919 crop be gathered before a killing frost.

Seed corn week has been set definitely by a number of counties, and in others certain days have been set aside on which the men are to make their drives. In the northern part of the State the seed corn has already been gathered and the results of the special campaign have shown that at least 75 per cent of the farmers have obtained their seed from the standing stalks and have it farmer knows that good seed is the first essential for a large crop, and a large crop in 1919 is necessary if we are to do our part in feeding the world.

The Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation is waging a campaign to have enough seed selected this fall to plant the entire crop next spring. I urge every farmer in Indiana, who has not done so, to heed the requests of this committee and of county agricultural agents, and gather enough seed corn by October 15th to plant the crop, not only next spring, but the following year as well, and thus meet any emergency which may arise.

(Signed) JAMES P. GOODRICH,
Governor of Indiana.

New Construction Order.

The War Industries Board announces that it is now unnecessary to secure permits from county councils of defense for necessary new farm buildings, where the aggregate cost is less than $1,000; also that other new construction permissible without official sanction, irrespective of the cost minimum of $2,500, includes only repairs and extensions.

The Best Seed Is None Too Good.

properly stored. With good weather, southern Indiana will complete her field selection work by October 15th, the final field selection date suggested by Governor Goodrich in a recent communication to the state food committee, and in his proclamation of October 1st addressed to the farmers of Indiana. Counties in southern Indiana without county agents have been organized by the agents of adjoining counties.

Special commendation is due the Liberty Loan workers in assisting with the seed corn work. Their co-operation has contributed much toward the success of the campaign to date. The initial step of the Liberty Loan workers in this connection was made in Laporte County under the leadership of County Agent J. D. Harper.

Indications are that more seed corn will be saved this year than ever before, as every community has been thoroughly aroused to the need for careful selection and storage of seed corn at a time when food is such an important factor in helping to win the war.

Proclamation.

October 1, 1918.

To the Farmers of Indiana:

There is no work of more importance now than the selection of seed corn, despite the fact that we are in the midst of wheat sowing.

Selection from the standing stalks before heavy frosts is the surest way to get good seed. Every

Committee on Construction

At its meeting October 1st, the Indiana State Council of Defense adopted the following report of the Committee on Proposed Construction:

To the Indiana State Council of Defense:

Your Committee on Proposed Construction begs leave to report as follows:

1. In the matter of the application of Harry Boegaholz for permit to construct a frame dwelling house in Bartholomew County, we recommend that the permit be granted.

2. In the matter of the public library building in Vevay, Switzerland County, the county council advises that the building is under construction and therefore the council has nothing further to say under Circular 21.

3. The matter of the application of the Appleman Threshing Company for permission to construct a shed to protect machinery in Adams County, the committee recommends that the permit be granted.

4. In the matter of the application of Edwin F. Mills for permit to construct a frame residence in Adams County, the county council acted favorably and the committee recommends that their action be confirmed.

5. In the matter of the application of the board of commissioners in Clinton County for a permit to construct a county asylum at a cost of $99,000, the committee understands the work is well under construction and therefore, under Circular 21, no approval is necessary, but it is the view of the committee that the work should be completed.

6. In the matter of the application of Loren H. Cornell for permit to construct a frame dwelling in Porter County, the county council of defense acted favorably upon the application, and this committee recommends confirmation of such action.

7. In the matter of the application of George W. New, township trustee in Boone County, for permit to construct a frame school building in that county to take the place of one destroyed by fire, the committee recommends that the permit be granted upon the completion of the papers technically by the Boone County Council of Defense.

8. In the matter of the application of the Gary Street Railway Company to construct an addition to a car barn at Gary, the application has been approved by the Lake County Council of Defense and this committee recommends that their action be confirmed.

9. In the matter of the application of D. F. Conwell for permit to construct a frame barn in Parke County, the Parke County Council of Defense has approved the application and this committee recommends confirmation and issuance of permit.

10. In the matter of the application of Emory May for permit to construct a frame dwelling, house and barn in Parke County, the county council of defense approved the application and this committee recommends that the permit be issued.

11. The application of the Ft. Wayne Y. M. C. A. for permit to complete extensive building, the estimated cost of which is $320,000, the committee understands the building is well under construction and that their approval is not necessary.

12. Regarding the completion of the library building at Warren in Huntington County, fresh facts have been brought before the committee in the light of which the committee recommends that the disapproval given at a recent meeting be withdrawn, the building being well under construction and there being only $200 worth of brick yet to be obtained.

13. An application was heard this morning in reference to extensive drainage in Scott County and other counties in the neighborhood, the estimated cost to be $128,000; the committee recommends that the action of the Scott County Council of Defense in approving the work be confirmed and the permit be issued.

14. In the matter of the application of August Gehlhauser for a permit to construct a $700 cottage at Evansville, this to be out of salvaged material, the committee recommends that the permit be granted, the county council having approved it.

Respectfully submitted,

ARTHUR W. BRADY,
CHARLES FOX,
J. L. KEACH,
E. M. WILSON,

Committee.

The council, by motion, indorsed the following matters approved by Chairman Foley, in the interim:

The construction of housing facilities at Indiana Harbor by the Inland Steel Company, engaged in war work.

The construction of a frame farm residence in Morgan County, near Mooresville, because of sanitary considerations.

The enlargement of the water supply at Plymouth, for which the municipal officials asked piping.

The addition of a building to the Nicholson File Works at Anderson, to be used for war work.

The approval of Washington officials for the Knights of Pythias building at Richmond was received.

The chairman was authorized to approve the proposed expenditure of $100,000 for the remodeling of the West Baden Hotel, which with the Sutton Hotel at West Baden has been leased by the government for hospital purposes.

Woman's Section

The Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense calls attention to the growing need for student nurses, and urges that recruiting still be carried on enthusiastically. The committee congratulates Indiana on the fine showing made in the enrollment of student nurses during the recent intensive drive, but states that a great many more will have to be enrolled throughout the country before the quota of each State is filled, and requests that the woman's committee in each locality make renewed effort to stimulate recruiting.

Interesting reports have been received at the Woman's Section of unusual service given by women in food conservation recently. When a canning factory near Anderson suffered a shortage of labor subsequent to the opening of schools, the woman member of the Madison County Council of Defense, along with sixteen other women, gave her services. They arrived at the factory at 6:30 a. m. the first day and by 4:30 p. m. all the corn in the factory was canned. Almost every day since, a company of women has helped in this work. They are paid 20 cents per hour and turn their wages into the treasury of the local canteen service.

Women of Frankfort, Clinton County, answered a call for help sent out by a canning factory September 24th, to assist in caring for foodstuffs that would otherwise have gone to waste. These volunteer workers were paid at the piece work rate, and the money thus earned will be used for purchasing equipment for comfort kits for soldiers. The management of the factory reports much accomplished by these workers. The first day they peeled 500 crates of tomatoes.

"Whose God Is the Belly"

In his letter to the Church of Philippi, the apostle Paul refers to certain persons "whose god is the belly." We fear the members of this cult are still alive and that some of them are among us today. We are in the midst of a great struggle for our dearly-bought liberties, the issue of which depends upon the endurance and self-sacrifice not only of our soldiers at the front but of every man and woman in the nation. We have been assured by competent men who have made an expert study of the question that we are threatened with a world famine by reason of the great number of men in all the belligerent countries who have been withdrawn from production since the beginning of the war, and that unless we practice the strictest economy, especially in the use of certain food products, such as wheat, meat, and sugar, there is grave danger that our soldiers may not receive a sufficient supply to keep up their strength.

And yet in the face of this peril and the sacrifices being made for them by our brave boys at the front, there are those among us who are apparently unwilling to deny themselves any luxury in the food line which they once enjoyed. The deprivation involved in a meatless or a wheatless meal or in giving up rich cake for a while, to conserve the supply of sugar, is so paltry in comparison to the sacrifices and sufferings of the men at the front that it brings the blush of shame to be compelled to acknowledge that there are any among us bearing the name which has come into such world-wide honor who are not willing to deny themselves even to this small extent. Our boys lying out in the trenches in the cold and mud and rain, enduring the unspeakable horrors of shell and poison gas, and liquid fire, in hourly peril of their lives, may go hungry, but these devotees of the belly-god must have their meat and wheat bread and cake as usual.—The Canadian Bulletin.

No Slackers Over There.

Charles L. Guard, in a hospital in France, writes home to his parents at Garrett that he has "only a fractured jaw and arm." And yet we've heard a few insects in this balliwick crab on the glassless Sunday request.—Bremen Enquirer.

Council Probes Into Delay of Highways

perintendent Ellis was informed that the chairman had asked the war department to extend the time and if possible assist in the enrollment of the required number of students, without which it was stated the school could not continue to operate. Superintendent Ellis was assured that the council will do all it can to assist in retaining to the State's educational system the Danville school.

Resolutions of a patriotic character adopted by the Pentecostal Church of the Nazarene, at its meeting in Alexandria, referred to the council, were reported by the chairman and upon motion ordered spread upon the official records of the council, and appropriate acknowledgment was authorized.

The report of the Committee on Proposed Construction, which with matters reported by Chairman Foley appears elsewhere in this Bulletin, was approved by the council.

Chairman Foley was authorized to approve the application of Lieut.-Col. Robert E. Noble, N. M. R. C., for a permit to spend approximately $100,000 for the improvement of West Baden Hotel, at West Baden, Ind., which with the Sutton Hotel at the same place has been leased by the federal government for use as a reconstruction hospital for some of the 40,000 incapacitated soldiers about to be returned from France. Chairman Foley was informed, he told the council, that the West Baden Hotel is to be remodeled for a soldiers' barracks and the Sutton Hotel is to be used for administration and officers' quarters.

The special committee nominated to make up the issues and plan for a hearing of the charge made by Frank W. Duffy that the Indianapolis school board is opposing industrial education and vocational training, reported that it had arranged to request Mr. Duffy to file a written statement with the committee not later than October 7th; the school board to be asked then to file an answer by October 12th, and that there be a hearing of all issues involved by the state council as a whole at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of October 15th. The report of the committee was approved.

Charles Fox was assured of the co-operation of the chairman in a further effort to secure the appointment of representatives of organized labor in county councils of defense, where judges of the circuit courts had failed to abide by the suggestion previously made that such representation be included in the council's membership. Mr. Fox referred specifically to Vigo County, he said.

A letter from the Clay County Council of Defense, setting out the difficulties being experienced in the transfer of clay workers from the clay products plants to coal mines due to labor troubles dating back two years, was referred to Mr. Fox. The county council reported that some of the clay workers who had been concerned in the settlement of a labor dispute two years ago had been asked and had paid $50 as a penalty to organized labor, but that in other instances they had not been permitted to pay this penalty and go to work in the mines.

On the recommendation of T. A. Coleman, acting director of the Committee on Food Production and Conservation, the council adopted the following resolution:

Whereas, There is a great demand for unedible fats in the manufacture of explosives; and

Whereas, The United States Department of Agriculture is endeavoring to conserve such fats by granting license only to those rendering plants that are equipped to reclaim at least ninety per cent of said fats; and

Whereas, There is a great loss of this material from the burying or burning of the bodies of dead animals in Indiana; therefore be it

Resolved, That the State Council of Defense urge the county councils of defense to request that all bodies of dead animals be disposed of through such rendering plants. Be it further

Resolved, That the state veterinarian be requested to give sufficient publicity to this conservation of fats.

"Fabricating" Farmers

By CARL VROOMAN,
Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, in American Review of Reviews.

Not long ago, a member of the Organization of Resources Committee of the Province of Ontario, Dominion of Canada, stated, in three sentences, the war-time problem of the farmer and then, in one sentence, gave the formula for solving the problem. The problem applies not to Ontario alone nor to Canada alone. It applies equally to the United States, and every state in the Union, and every community in every state. Here, substantially, is what he said:

1. In our cities, towns and villages there is sufficient supply of partly experienced and inexperienced help to meet any demand that may arise, and this help can be secured.

2. The demand for farm labor, as expressed in definite applications for help, does not fully express the need for farm help.

3. The farmers generally are aware that city help is being offered, and know where to apply for it, but they are not, as a rule, willing to make use of it.

4. These considerations being true, the resolution of our problem is to induce farmers to increase production by using to the fullest extent the labor available.

There they are, problem and solution, true as any theorem in geometry. Yet the conclusion may be stated in more direct terms.

The solution is to show the farmer that the city labor offered is worth using—and to make sure that it is available for him when he needs it. For the first time we are in position to make the demonstration, to chalk the whole thing on the blackboard and write "Q. E. D." beneath it. Briefly here it is:

Men and boys—and women, too—without previous farm experience can acquire, in a brief time, a rudimentary knowledge of ordinary farm tasks sufficient to make them serviceable as farm workers and to entitle them to be received by the farmer with, at least, an open and unprejudiced mind. This has been demonstrated at some scores of places, through and to some thousands of people, this spring and summer.

Ten days of hard, consistent work—just as hard and just as consistent as a soldier would be required to do in training camp—will convert a city boy of no previous farm training into a farm hand who can do fair work worth a fair wage at ordinary farm tasks.

Hitherto the farmer has not believed that this could be done. And there was nobody to convince him that it could be done. Some of us believed that it could be done, but the experiment had not been tried systematically and on anything like a large scale.

Now, this plan has been tried repeatedly and found to work. Some hundreds of instructors in agricultural colleges, high schools and elsewhere know how to make it work. Better still, several thousands of farmers have had satisfactory evidence of it on their own farms, and what a farmer has seen done on his own land, when his own crops were at stake, he believes and does not doubt.

Can the comparatively few thousand farmers who now know this fact be made to act as the little leaven that will leaven the whole lump? Can the experience of these men be imparted to the six million other farmers who have not yet learned how successful has been this method of solving the farm labor problem?

If the facts can be carried home to all, or even a very considerable part of the farmers of this country—yes.

If the press will disseminate the fact; if those who are officially charged with increasing crop production will recognize and utilize the fact—beyond doubt, yes.

Here, then, are the facts!

Making Farm Hands of City Boys.

With ten days' instruction, the Pennsylvania Agricultural College trained 390 city boys so that they have made good farm hands through this crop season. A class of 130 boys was trained for ten days and then sent out to work on farms, and the training of the second class of 130 boys was started. At the end of thirty days all of the members of all three of the classes were at work on farms. Their work has been checked up by the Office of Farm Management, United States Department of Agriculture, and found to be satisfactory to the farmers who employed the boys.

Purdue University, Indiana, began with a class of ninety boys for ten days, followed with a class of 120 boys for another ten days, and then with a class of 125 boys for a third ten days. Jobs for all of these boys were secured even before they had completed their ten days' course of training. They are at work and, as checked by the Office of Farm Management and other agencies, are giving satisfaction.

One of the high schools in Chicago trained a large number of boys for ten days in a livery stable in the heart of the city. The livery stable horses were used. A few cows were borrowed from a dairy. These boys who had never worked outside of the city a day in their lives, and who did not go outside of the city for their ten days' training, were put to work on farms in northern Illinois and adjacent portions of Indiana and Michigan, and have made good farm hands.

At College Park, Md., a large class of boys, principally from Washington City, were given a ten days' course in elementary farm practice. These boys are at work on Maryland farms and are doing work that is satisfactory to the farmers.

In Massachusetts a number of boys were given intensive agricultural instruction in connection with military instruction for ten days. These boys are doing satisfactory work for Massachusetts farmers.

On 600 dairy farms in New York State, city boys who never had any previous country experience are doing all the dairy work this summer while the farmers, with their regular help, are doing the rush work of the summer season. These boys were given one month's training in dairying at one of the agricultural high schools. When the crop season is over and the farmers are again able to do their dairy work with their regular help, these boys will return to school or to jobs in the city, but ready for work on the farm again when the farm needs them worse than the city does. They have given a measure of flexibility to the dairy farm labor supply in New York State.

In Oregon, 600 city women, without any previous country experience, did satisfactory work on fruit farms this summer. They had a short period of training at one of the high schools.

In Wisconsin, 5,000 farmers got satisfactory work out of boys whom they trained themselves, on Saturdays, for a couple of months before school was out last spring. These boys got about the same number of days' training as did the boys in other states who were trained at colleges and camps, but they have the advantage of being at work for the men who trained them. Those farmers, however, had to be persuaded very diligently by county agents and others before they would take the boys to train.

With slight differences and on varying scales, the same thing has been done in New Hampshire and Delaware. The system was basically the same everywhere. At some places the work was divided into twenty subjects, with a half day devoted to each; at others, into ten subjects, with a full day devoted to each.

The Purdue Plan—One Day for Each Subject.

The Purdue University plan is typical and interesting. The work was arranged under ten subjects and a day devoted to each. The boys were divided into groups, so that each one of the subjects was taken by some one of the groups the first day. Each group was taken through the entire range of subjects, under conditions as nearly as possible like those the boy would have to meet on the farm.

On the day devoted to horses, the boys reported at 5 o'clock in the morning, groomed the horses, cleaned stables, and were shown how to feed. Each boy was required to harness and unharness horses, to familiarize himself with the proper fitting of collars and other portions of the harness, to drive a team, to haul and spread manure, and to do general routine work that would give him experience in the handling of horses. He was given instructions as to the care of horses that were heated, and as to the methods of approaching horses that were not well broken or were ill-tempered.

In dairy work the boys were required to report for duty at 4:30 in the morning, taken to the barns where the university cattle were kept and required to prepare the stalls, this being necessary inasmuch as conditions at Purdue are not ideal for milk production, but are similar to conditions that exist on the average farm where milk production is one of a number of sources of income. During the day they were assigned to the feeding of cattle, brushing and cleaning cows and milking them, mixing feeds and looking after the general routine of a dairy barn. They were taught the principle of cooling, straining and separating milk, and were given the opportunity of seeing the milking machine in operation.

For the day's instruction in general live stock work the boys reported at 5 o'clock in the morning, were required to clean the stalls in the steer barn, to bed down the steers, to bring the beef cows and nurse cows from the pasture, assist in dividing the cattle into different lots and in distributing the steers. During the day they were assigned to the hog lots and required to feed pigs under the direction of the hog herdsman. At the time that one group of boys was assigned to the hog lots, another group was assigned to the sheep pastures, etc., giving them some degree of familiarity with all kinds of animals.

During the day's instruction in harvest work the boys were taken to the hay field and given some kind of work that would tend to make them efficient in handling a fork. Part of the time was spent in pulling weeds and clearing out fence rows. Special attention was given to instructing the boys in the identification of the various crop plants. If it was not possible to familiarize them in the fields with the plants they were likely to see on the farm, they were taken to the laboratory and there shown specimens of these plants.

On the day devoted to poultry work the boys reported at 7 o'clock, were taken on a general tour of the poultry farm, shown the proper method of feeding and housing, taught to clean and disinfect poultry houses, to dust and dip fowls, and other things commonly required in the farm poultry yard.

On the day devoted to the work of cultivating crops the boys reported at 7 o'clock, were taken to the field, required to hoe and plow corn and other crops, to pull weeds and to do general crop work. A part of the time was spent in identifying some of the more common weeds.

Another day was devoted to the orchard, the boys reporting at 7 o'clock and being kept busy throughout the day in pruning and cutting out blighted wood, disinfecting wounds and destroying the removed wood. They were taught to thin apples, to prop the heavily loaded trees, and to handle the sprayer. Some time was spent in picking fruit whenever there was any available.

A day was devoted to farm mechanics. In this work the boys were first taken into the laboratory and taught how to make some of the more common and necessary rope knots. They were then shown how to remove and replace plough shares and other parts of ploughs, and to make adjustments on other implements and machinery. They were also instructed in the methods of laying out a field for ploughing.

During the day devoted to garden work the boys were taught the principles of garden production, how to use handle hoes and wheel hoes, how to gather and prepare vegetables for market, how to sharpen garden tools and how to identify most of the common garden plants and seeds.

How Farmers Have Been Convinced.

All of that does not make a finished farmer—not by a thousand miles. But it does make a potential farmhand, who, while he may be green, knows enough not to be a nuisance, knows what a hoe is for, knows that it is his job to chop down the weed and not the cabbage, and knows which is the cabbage and which is the weed. If, then, he is fortunate enough to fall into the hands of a farmer who has good horse-sense and some patience, he will do worth-while work from the beginning and will round out into a good farmhand.

More and more while this war lasts, the farmer will have to depend upon these "fabricated" farmhands. Up to this time, the farmhands taken away to war have been between the ages of twenty-one and thirty-one. Now another ten-year group is to be taken—below twenty-one, perhaps, and certainly above thirty-one. The most promising reservoir from which to draw is that of the city boys. The sooner the general run of farmers realize that fact and act upon it, the sooner they are willing to use city labor, and the sooner they are willing to let their needs be definitely known, the better for everybody.

In the past the farmer has not been greatly to blame for his attitude on this matter. He has had some grounds for being suspicious of city labor. He has had grounds, too, for being wary of the agencies to which he had to apply in order to secure labor.

But, rapidly now, those grounds are being cut from under his feet. The agricultural colleges, the Federal and State Departments of Agriculture and various other agencies are becoming interested in the work of giving to city boys the sort of preliminary training that will make them of some use to farmers. Some of the most incisive minds in agricultural administration are convinced that this is one of the biggest and most important things to be done toward winning the war.

As yet, hardly more than a meager beginning has been made, but men with the character and energy necessary to success in so big an enterprise are interested in it. It seems probable that, instead of one training school for farmhands in each of a few states, there will be a considerable number of such schools in every state, each devoting its best energy to this task, and that, before next spring, they will be able to turn out an effective and fairly adequate force of "fabricated" farmhands from the cities.

But all of that will be labor lost unless the farmer will accept farmhands from the city after they have been given preliminary instruction sufficient to make them useful on the farm. The few thousand farmers who have tried briefly trained city boys on their farms this year may be relied upon as propagandists for the "fabricated" farmhand, relied upon to spread the gospel just as far as their influence reaches. That is going to be a tremendous help. In some communities it will be adequate. But unless it is directed and magnified by means other than the farmer's own voice, there will be whole states that it will not touch at all.

The fact that the thing works—that good, old conservative farmers have worked it—that bare fact must be taken home to all the farmers of the United States.

The means for doing it? All means that exist for the dissemination of truth. The press, the pulpit, the school; the lodge, where all ranks of men meet on one level; the casual word between men across the line fence or at the store—by every method, big and little, these truths should be driven home.

It is a fact that city boys, with brief training, can do good work on farms.

And it is a fact that, in order to maintain food production at the standard required to win the war, the farmer must make up his mind to use labor other than the kinds to which he was accustomed before the war.

County Exhibits at Fair.

The exhibit of Lawrence County war activities attracted much attention in the State Fair display of the State Council of Defense. The exhibit was composed of posters done in black and white recording the splendid results accomplished by the branches of the county's organization. Illustrative kodak pictures were mounted as a border around the assembled posters. A member of the executive board of the State Council of Defense suggested that this exhibit be placed permanently in the State offices at Indianapolis. Allen County sent an effective colored poster to the State Fair exhibit. It emphasized particularly the work of food production and food conservation, and bore the announcement of the county's rank as first in Indiana in prompt organization for patriotic service.

U. S. Food Administration for Indiana

Official Regulations and Penalties Imposed

B. F. Ransom, an Indianapolis attorney, has been made state director of United States food clubs among the colored population. He is appointing leaders in the colored communities of the State. His first appointment was Mrs. Emma Duval, 1217 Harlan street, Indianapolis, as city president.

Farmers who are selling their wheat at less than the guaranteed price on account of embargoes due to the lack of shipping facilities are asked to have patience. Prospects are good for an improved railroad situation within a few weeks.

For convenience in the 80-20 sales of wheat flour and substitutes, the Food Administration authorizes the sale of six pounds of substitutes with each 24½ pounds of wheat flour. This eliminates fractional considerations in the 4 to 1 ratio.

"Cash and carry" stores will be permitted a 5 cents per pound profit on butter; "credit and delivery" stores, 6 cents. An exhaustive inquiry is being made into the butter situation with a view to eliminating profiteering. The government's requisition of 25,000,000 pounds of stored butter is not regarded as sufficient justification for the sharp advances that have been made in prices during the past month.

Manufacturers of evaporated and condensed milk, alimentary pastes and table salt have agreed to standardize containers and restrict them to fixed quantities, in an effort to save tin. The change becomes effective upon the consumption of present supplies.

Housekeepers are urged to avail themselves of the glass and other substitutes for tin in canning and preserving. Salting and drying also are advocated for the sake of releasing to the federal government's requirements the metal needed for the business of winning the war. Commercial users of tin, including packers of tomatoes, beans, fruit, etc., have been forced to stringent regulations in their demands for cans.

Bessire & Company, Indianapolis wholesale bakers' supply house, admitted violating the food regulations in taking an excessive margin of profit and requested permission to pay $1,000 to the Red Cross. The privilege was granted and the firm promised stricter compliance with the regulations.

Holders of sugar certificates may use them only during the month of issue. Outstanding certificates are void after October 15th.

Emma Marsh, wife of a federal employe at Jeffersonville, bought 79 pounds of sugar for a family of four and was permitted to pay the Red Cross $25 as a penalty; Gus F. Richards purchased 16 pounds at one time and was allowed to pay the Red Cross $15. John S. McDonald, federal food administrator for Floyd County, handled both cases.

The food administration has announced a policy of co-operation with representatives of the dairy interests in supporting a reasonable level for butter prices. It is stated in a telegram from Washington that following a conference with leading dairymen, including members of the agricultural advisory board, that to prevent a collapse in the butter market, following the present apparent shortage due to Government purchases, which is said also to have stimulated margarine consumption to a point where permanent injury is threatened the dairy interests, the further purchases by the Government will be the means of supporting the market. In the meantime the official inquiry into the present high prices for butter will be continued with a view to eliminating a condition which the dairy interests regard as perilous, for the reason that ultimately it must mean a sharp decline of prices, a greatly reduced consumption of butter, and a permanent loss of market to the margarine trade. The food administration's chief interest is in maintaining the dairy herds which are essential to a proper feeding of the infant population of the United States and the allies engaged in the war against Germany and Austria.

The United States Food Administration is opposed to a general advance in the price of roasted coffee, to consumers. It will permit, however, where necessary, on bulk roasted coffee, an advance in price sufficient to insure roasters an amount equal in cents per pound to their pre-war profits. Owing to the elimination of the expense of packing and the saving also of time required for this handling, it is assumed that no advance is warranted. A full statement, satisfactory to the food administrator will be required where in any particular case the roaster proposes to advance his prices.

U. S. Food Clubs

Home Division

The U. S. Food Clubs will soon have an excellent opportunity to demonstrate their efficiency and prove their value as a war organization. A new home card is being prepared in Washington for distribution to all the homes in the country. In Indiana this distribution will be handled entirely by the U. S. Food Clubs. The county presidents have already been notified so that they may have their forces ready for prompt action as soon as the cards are printed. The township and club presidents should also be on the alert so that there may be no hitch. A home card should go into every home whether the home is represented in a Food Club or not. Washington's plan names the week of October 28th to November 2d, as the time in which this nation-wide distribution should take place. This is the first really big job that has been put up to the Food Clubs. Both Dr. Barnard in Indianapolis and Mr. Hoover in Washington will be interested in seeing whether or not the Food Clubs are equal to their task. Be ready.

Requests have been received from several county presidents for a list of the county presidents of the State. To meet this demand the following list is published. Through this column the clubs are to be introduced to each other and the Food Club spirit developed. After this month in all probability the various numbers of the monthly program will be published. Details of this plan will be sent to the clubs in the program which will be sent out the last of October. In the meantime watch this space for the Food Club news:

Support Promised Child Welfare Work

Council Hears Dr. Piexotte, Rev. Brown and Mrs. Carlisle on Year's Program.

Announcement was made by Chairman M. E. Foley, at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense October 8th, of the appointment of Judge Joseph G. Ibach as chairman of the Committee on Public Policy, and of Judge Will M. Sparks as chairman of the Legal Committee. Judge Ibach succeeds the late Charles W. Fairbanks, and Judge Sparks takes the place of Frank C. Dailey, who resigned from the council.

The council heard Dr. Maximilian P. E. Grossmann of New York explain the purposes of the organization known as the American Friends of German Democracy. Dr. Grossmann was to have toured Indiana under the auspices of the Indiana State Council of Defense, explaining his organization and enlisting members both from among those of German ancestry and of American birth interested in the liberation of the German people from the yoke of autocratic militarism, but because of the order of the Board of Health against public gatherings abandoned the plan.

Dr. A. C. Brown of Anderson described to the council his lecture, which has for its object the conservation of the physical and moral health of the American boy, whom he described as the country's most precious asset. His suggestions were referred to a special committee consisting of Dr. Charles P. Emerson, the Rev. Allen B. Philpott and Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle.

Dr. Jessie Piexotte of the Child Welfare Bureau of the United States Department of Labor described to the council the work that has been done over the country during the child-saving campaign. She urged a continuation of the support given this effort, the first toward reconstruction undertaken by the federal government.

Mrs. Carlisle told the council that between forty-five and fifty of the counties had reported the result of their child welfare work. She said figures tabulated by the Woman's Section showed that 94,861 children were weighed and measured by the county organizations during the year. She told of the plan adopted at the meeting of the Indiana State Conference of Charities and Corrections, at Evansville, whereby each county is to follow up the work thus started, with a view to realizing permanent benefits.

The council through Chairman Foley assured Dr. Piexotte and Mrs. Carlisle that it would continue in its support of the welfare movement.

Charles Fox reported some progress in his effort to effect a settlement of the differences between organized coal miners and former clay workers, who, having once been strikebreakers, had sought reinstatement into the good graces of the unionized men by paying a $50 fine for the privilege of returning to work in the mines of Clay County. Mr. Fox said some of the miners individually refused to work alongside the former clay workers, but that pressure is being brought to bear which may serve to relieve the situation and permit of a realization of increased coal production by the men who had been thrown out of employment when the clay products plants closed down as a war measure.

Chairmen of council committees were informed

Duty of County Councils.

County Councils of Defense are expected to extend to the local representative of the Merchants' Economy Committee the same measure of support in reference to the Christmas buying program as have been given the federal food and fuel administrators. Particularly is this support to be expected in making it known to all the people how much of the success of this patriotic movement depends upon universal co-operation as between merchant and shopper.

The Indiana State Council of Defense, acting on the direction of the Federal War Industries Board, has authorized the Merchants' Economy Committee to promulgate for the guidance of patriotic distributors a program of strict conservation in reference to what heretofore has been a wasteful congestion just prior to Christmas. This has been done. The program involves the elimination of the usually necessary increases in store help; it cuts off the hours of store service, thus saving light and fuel; it saves for other patriotic work the man and woman power usually dissipated by thoughtless eleventh-hour buying; and by instigating advertising during October and November enlarges the opportunities for the newspapers and for the public generally to be of greater service to the community. In return for the merchants' willingness to do without extra help and eliminate the longer hours for doing business, the councils should urge all patriotic people to do their Christmas buying during October and November; to buy sensible gifts with a reasonable allowance for toys; to ask for no delivery or other service that can be performed by the buyer without discomfort; to avoid charge and approval orders; to consign mail and express packages early, and maintain cheerfulness, patience and the assurance that it is all intended for the single purpose of helping to win the war.

that Chairman Foley will shortly request that they prepare statements of the work done, for publication in the Indiana Year Book, the official publication of the State reports, due about January 1st.

The report of the Committee on Proposed Construction, which appears elsewhere in this Bulletin, was read and approved. On motion of J. L. Keach, the action of the chairman during the interim in approving other proposed construction was approved.

3,000 Stenographers Needed.

Fifty thousand posters and printed bulletins have been prepared and distributed by the United States Employment Service of the Department of Labor in connection with the drive to provide the qualified women stenographers and typists now urgently needed for war work in Washington.

At least 3,000 more stenographers are needed to handle efficiently the mass of war business passing through the national capital. Every effort is now being made by the Government Housing Bureau, the Employment Service and local welfare organizations to insure comfortable living accommodations in Washington for this number of additional war workers.

Red Cross Chapters To Fight Influenza

Local Committees Named at Suggestion of Division Manager to Help Stop Epidemic.

To assure the maximum amount of Red Cross assistance to civilian populations that have been or may be stricken with the epidemic of influenza, Division Manager B. F. Bourne of Lake Division Red Cross headquarters organized a special Committee on Influenza, composed of his department heads, with James L. Fieser, division director of civilian relief, as chairman.

This is in addition to the work the division departments of military relief and nursing have been doing for the past week to meet emergencies in camps and cantonments in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

Mr. Fieser communicated with the 362 chapters in the division, instructing each to hasten the organization of a local Committee on Influenza. These chapters were urged to take immediate inventory of local conditions and resources and to make fullest use of their own resources before calling for outside assistance. Mr. Fieser's communication explained the relationship of the Red Cross with State Boards of Health with regard to this epidemic.

Chapters are to report to their local health officers what supplies and nursing personnel the chapter can furnish for local use at chapter expense. When the combined resources of the local health authorities and the local Red Cross chapter are insufficient to meet the local need, the local health officer is to appeal to his State Board of Health. When the State Board of Health can not meet his need, it may appeal to the Federal Public Health Service for needed nursing personnel, and to the manager of the Lake Division for needed supplies.

The Lake Division nursing department has instructions to refer all civilian requests for nursing personnel for any source except the Federal Public Health Service to the State Board of Health concerned.

Chapters are also informed that their local stores of supplies suitable for emergency hospital use may be used locally for that purpose during this epidemic, if so requested by the local health officer.

The special action taken at division headquarters to prepare for possible epidemic among civilians did not deter in any way the continuance of assistance to the military camps, where the epidemic is exacting heaviest toll.

Pull Together.

America's safety, America's ideals, America's rights are at stake. Democracy and liberty throughout the world depend upon America's valor, America's strength, America's fighting power. We can win and save the world from despotism and bondage only if we pull together. We cannot pull apart without ditching the train. Let us go forward with unshakable purpose to do our part superlatively. Then we shall save America, restore peace to a distracted world and gain for ourselves the coveted distinction and just reward of patriotic service nobly done.—William G. McAdoo, Director General of Railroads.

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—Food conservation in Adams County has received decided impetus under the leadership of Mrs. Mary E. Artman, secretary of the defense council and county president of the United States food clubs. The county now has thirteen clubs. St. Mary's Township was the first to organize, and recently this organization held a two days' cooking demonstration. The city of Decatur has seven clubs which are doing splendid work. Monroe and Kirkland townships each have a club, while Washington Township has three clubs under the presidency of Mrs. C. B. Poling.

Fayette County.—Every assistance has been given Fayette County farmers in securing help for sowing fall wheat by the county defense council and labor bureau. Both organizations have sounded this ringing appeal: that the wheat must be sown, that the full acreage may be attained, and that nothing must be permitted to lessen the total. The growing of a great wheat crop next year is the greatest single service Fayette County at home can do toward the winning of the war.

Henry County.—The October meeting of the county council of defense was largely given over to a discussion of labor conditions, and means of relieving the situation throughout the county. The action of the superintendent of schools in granting permission to high school pupils for leave of absence to assist in sowing wheat was indorsed by the council, and recommendation was made that school principals throughout the county follow this order; in some sections the school authorities have refused this permission, but the action of the council is expected to make it clear that this work is of such importance that the boys should be given the opportunity to aid the government in this way. . . . Another matter under discussion was the heavy withdrawal of war savings accounts. The withdrawal practice has been growing steadily, and while sales continue good, yet the total amount invested with the government is not what it should be. The emergency committee of the defense council has been called upon to devise means to stop this practice. . . . One of the most generous responses to the recent call for clothing for the needy in France and Belgium came from Stony Creek Township. Two automobiles and one trailer heavily laden with bundles and bales of good used clothing, amounting to more than a ton, were delivered to the headquarters of the county council of defense.

Huntington County.—The Huntington County Council of Defense is co-operating with the faculty of Huntington college in its plan to establish a military training unit in the county. Over the signature of the council a statement has been issued suggesting that every Huntington county young man avail himself of this opportunity. The letter of the council follows: "It is the desire of the government that all young men, especially those about the age of eighteen, avail themselves of opportunities to take military instructions. The Huntington County Council of Defense recommends very strongly to all young men that they carry out the wishes of the government in this matter. At Huntington we have special facilities in this line for young men, as the Huntington college has established such a course and is now enrolling young men whether students at the college or not. Any one enrolling need not enroll in the school for the other courses, as the military training has no connection with the other courses. Military training will be during the hours 4 to 6 every day, except Sundays. The college and all its facilities have been offered to the War Department for instructions in military training and the college makes no charge whatever for the course."

Lake County.—The attention of the county authorities has been called to a number of instances lately where Greeks have been sending varying amounts of money back to Greece. In ordinary times the matter would be of no special moment, but when right on the eve of the Fourth Liberty Loan Christian Stathakopoulos of Indiana Harbor wired $1,800 to the First National Bank of Athens to be placed to his credit the authorities decided to look into the matter and "ascertain why some of this money is not being put in Liberty Bonds to substantially support the government under whose flag these small fortunes have been made."

Laporte County.—The first instance of women in large numbers doing field work was probably furnished by Hudson Township, when ten "farmerettes" harvested the corn on a ten-acre farm owned by W. J. Smith, who reports the work was successfully and satisfactorily done. The farmerettes were young married women living in an around New Carlisle, and all are members of the Delta Theta Phi, who have undertaken to secure funds for destitute Belgian children.

Sullivan County.—The war mothers of Sullivan served a dinner in the court house to the Blue Jacket Band, fifty in number, when they visited the city in the interest of the Liberty Loan. . . . A county honor roll for all the soldiers and sailors in the service will be dedicated in a few weeks. It will be placed in the court house grounds.

Tippecanoe County.—The addition of several new members to the county defense council has been formally approved by Judge Caldwell of the circuit court, and this organization in its present form constitutes probably the largest personnel of any of the county councils. Present membership includes Thomas Bauer, chairman; J. O. Beck, Rev. C. H. Leeson, R. B. Sample, Mrs. Charles B. Stuart, J. T. Westfall, O. W. Campbell, C. V. Peterson, Mrs. C. Q. Erisman, W. V. Stuart, C. M. Murdock, Walter J. Ball,

Henry Marshall, Ralph Mayerstein, James Rae, John Wagner, H. B. Overesch, Henry Rosenthal, William C. Mitchell, Thomas J. Kemple and Otis Crane.

Vanderburgh County.—A committee composed of George S. Clifford, chairman of the county council of defense, President Hulseman of the Evansville Real Estate Board, and M. S. Sonntag are visiting all applications for the erection of houses. The committee will work in accordance with the government's plans governing building during the period of the war.

Vigo County.—From county funds $600 has been appropriated to the county council of defense, to be divided equally between the fuel and food administrators to cover the expenses of their particular departments.

White County.—White county now has a regiment of liberty guards. Twelve companies, grouped in three battalions, are thoroughly organized and drilling under commissioned officers. The regimental commander is Colonel Lon E. Nelson, and officers in charge of battalions, in order, are: Major Orval Harrington, Major Edward Davis and Major Ira Maxwell. H. L. Miller of Monticello has organized a regimental band, which will be a feature of the review to be held by the guards some time this month.

Red Cross Activities

Only one parcel will be accepted by the Shipping Department through the American Red Cross for each soldier overseas. Each soldier will be provided with one Christmas parcel label, which he will forward to the person in the United States from whom he wishes to receive his Christmas package. The packages that do not bear this label will not be accepted by Red Cross chapters and branches for delivery to postoffice authorities. Labels that are lost will not be duplicated.

Christmas parcels must be placed in cardboard boxes which are to be provided to holders of soldiers' labels by the American Red Cross. These boxes may be obtained from Red Cross chapters and branches after November 1.

Information given out at Lake Division headquarters was to the effect that a sufficient number of boxes to take care of all labels sent back to the States of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky would reach division headquarters for forwarding to chapters on or about October 25. Chapters have been ordered to place their requisition for boxes on or before that date.

Christmas parcels receiving stations are to be opened some time after November 1 in every city, town and village in the division. The parcels must be turned over to the Red Cross for shipment not later than November 15. Senders of the parcels will have to pay the postage, the Red Cross part in the plan being simply to provide the box, inspect its contents and co-operate with the Postoffice Department in getting the boxes promptly forwarded.

Instructions and materials for conducting a survey of the nursing resources of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky have been forwarded to all Red Cross chapters in these three States by Mrs. Alfred Brewster of Cleveland, whose appointment as director of the nursing survey in the Lake Division has just been announced by Division Manager B. F. Bourne.

The survey in the Lake Division States is part of a nation-wide undertaking on the part of the Red Cross to list the country's nursing personnel, a step made imperative by the greatly increased military program of the government.

The request for the survey comes from the surgeon general of the army with the approval of the secretary of war. Its importance is indicated by the fact that approximately 60 per cent of the 25,000 nurses requested in 1918 by the surgeon general have been supplied, and by the determination of the government and Red Cross that the health of the civilian population not be allowed to suffer unduly by enrolling so large a number of eligible nurses for military duty.

Seven classes of nursing personnel are to be listed—by a house-to-house canvass if necessary—by chapter committees in charge of the survey. These classes are:

1. Graduate nurses, both registered and non-registered.
2. Pupil nurses now receiving training in hospital training schools.

3. Undergraduate nurses who have had at least six months' training, but who have not completed their courses as graduate nurses.

4. Trained attendants who have been graduated from institutions giving trained attendants' courses.

5. Practical nurses who have in various ways equipped themselves for nursing service.

6. Midwives.

7. Women who have taken Red Cross courses.

Local chapter committees in charge of the survey are to be comprised of chapter chairmen, representatives of local nursing committees, Red Cross nurses, physicians, hospital officers, members of the Board of Health, representatives of organized charities and chambers of commerce, and druggists.

Registration stations are to be opened not only in chapter cities and towns, but in every branch and auxiliary town and village.

Lake Division Red Cross Department of Nursing announces that sixty-one Indiana nurses applied to the Red Cross for enrollment during September. Indianapolis outdistanced all cities in the State by furnishing applications from twenty-six nurses. Vincennes' contribution was nineteen, South Bend 11, Fort Wayne five.

The monthly report from Lake Division warehouse, American Red Cross, 342 Massachusetts avenue, Indianapolis, shows that in the month of September the women of Indiana knitted 35,492 pairs of soldiers' socks and 13,520 sweaters. The total of Red Cross articles received at the warehouse for the month is 399,480, all of which represents the handiwork of Hoosier women. The Red Cross shops over the State contributed 277,750 surgical dressings, 22,492 hospital garments, 5,899 hospital supplies, and 34,793 garments for the refugees of France, Belgium and Italy.

Healthy Mothers and Healthy Babies

Mrs. Max West's weekly article for mothers on The Care of Babies and Little Children.

Of the 100,000 babies who die every year in this country before they are a year old, nearly half die during their first month of life. In many tiny bodies the flame of life burns so feebly at birth that it is soon snuffed out, because mothers were ill or overworked or underfed during the momentous months before their babies were born. That is why the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor and the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense urge that as a part of the children's year campaign to save 100,000 babies, proper instruction and care be made available for all mothers during the critical months before their babies come.

That mothers themselves realize that the care of the baby must start before the baby is born is shown by their eagerness to avail themselves of information concerning the hygiene of maternity. The demand for the pamphlet on Prenatal Care, published by the children's bureau, is steadily increasing. In California, excerpts from that pamphlet as well as from the children's bureau pamphlet on infant care have been translated into Japanese for the benefit of the Japanese mothers of the Pacific coast. The prenatal centers that have been established during children's year in many towns throughout the country are eagerly sought by mothers who desire advice on how to make child bearing safe for themselves and for their children.

At least 15,000 mothers are lost to the United States each year from causes—most of them preventable—that are connected with child bearing. They die because they have not known how to protect themselves during pregnancy or because the surgeon is not within reach at the time of confinement or because the doctor or midwife who attends them is careless or ignorant. Many other mothers who survive in spite of improper care are left in a weakened condition, incapable of properly looking after the needs of their families.

This loss, coupled with the loss of thousands of babies, is one that no country can afford to ignore. In England, after four years of war, prenatal care for mothers has greatly increased. Only recently the king has put his signature to a bill that provides government aid for medical and nursing care for mothers and babies. A similar bill, destined to help the mothers of the United States—especially those in rural districts—has been presented in our own Congress.

What may be accomplished by making available for mothers advice and proper care is shown by the record of one prenatal center in the city of Philadelphia. Not one death in childbirth has occurred in three years among the mothers attending the center, and not a case of eclampsia (convulsions of pregnancy). Out of 99 full-time birth, 94 were living at the end of the first month. All but two were breast-fed.

In New York the milk committee has been in touch with more than 3,000 mothers. Only 5 of these mothers lost their lives from causes connected with childbirth and only 86 babies died in the first month of life. These figures show a reduction of 69 per cent in the death rate for mothers and of 28 per cent in the death rate for babies among the supervised cases as compared with the figures for New York in general. One of the largest insurance companies of the country has in the past few years been trying the experiment of sending a nurse to expectant mothers among its policy holders. In 1916 these nurses visited more than 7,000 cases, and the deaths in childbirth among the company's policy holders decreased from 70.1 per thousand in 1911 to 62.6 in 1916—a decrease of 10.7 per cent.

The provision of such care for all mothers would prevent a great waste to our country—a waste that makes itself felt not only in mothers and babies that actually die, but in invalid women and puny children destined for a lifetime of ill-health and inefficiency.

The Official Facts On War Food Prices

By Harvey O'Higgins, Associate Chairman,
Committee on Public Information.

Figures compiled by the Food Administration show that the farmer, going to market this summer to sell his produce, got $1.27 for every dollar that he received last summer; and the housewife, going to market to buy her supplies, paid 87 cents for every dollar that she paid last summer.

The difference has been saved out of the profits of the middleman.

For instance, the price of flour in the spring of 1917 was $16.75 a barrel wholesale in Minneapolis. This spring it was $9.80 a barrel. The difference between the selling price of a farmer's wheat and the selling price of the flour that was made from that wheat was $5.68 in May, 1917. In May, 1918, it was only 64 cents.

These reductions have been made despite the fact that we have taken out of our markets enough food to save our allies in Europe from famine. We have shipped 120 million bushels of wheat instead of the 20 million bushels that we thought would be our limit. We have exported 87 million pounds of beef a month instead of only 2 million pounds. And instead of only 50 million pounds of pork a month, we have shipped as much as 308 million pounds.

In a campaign to prevent profiteering and food wastage, the Food Administration in ten months imposed some 815 penalties on wholesale and retail dealers, commission men, millers, canners, bakers, cold storage companies, brokers, grocers, restaurant men, and so forth. About 150 companies and individuals have been ordered to abstain from business in licensed commodities either permanently or for stated periods. The others have been regulated by fines or minor penalties. In many more cases, the desired result has been obtained by means of warnings. And besides this work of the Washington headquarters, the federal food administrators in their respective States have disposed of a vast number of cases on their own authority.

There is still profiteering going on, and against it the government is making a broad campaign, but shortage of shipping has become one of the great causes of the high cost of living, and that difficulty can only be overcome by building ships.

The price of bananas has increased because half the banana boats have been taken as army transports. There is a huge crop of sugar in Cuba, Porto Rico and Hawaii, but there are not ships enough to move it. Ocean freight rates on rice and tea and tapioca from China, India and the straits settlements have become very high. On tea, for instance, the rate has risen from one cent to five cents a pound.

We used to import great quantities of hides from China, and we bring a tanning extract, called quelbracho, from South America. Ocean freight rates on hides have increased 500 per cent and on quelbracho 600 per cent. Our farmers use nitrate of soda from Chili for fertilizer. The rate on it has increased from $5 to $30 a ton. Equal increases have helped to raise the price of jute and hemp, rubber, tin and wool.

Those are part of the inevitable hardships of war. The gradual defeat of the submarine campaign and the gradual suppression of profiteering are working together to reduce food prices. Both take time. But in both success seems assured.

What Germany Aimed At

When the tide of war was flooding, German militarists revealed the true objects for which they started this war. In contrast to the avowed willingness to "negotiate" upon the fourteen points laid down by President Wilson, the following declaration by Count Roon, member of the Prussian upper house, and a Pan-German, is interesting:

Germany is entitled to the following terms because of its strength, and until they are realized there should be no armistice:

Annexation of Belgium. Annexation of the entire Flanders coast, including Calais. Annexation of the Briey and Longwy basins and the Toul, Belfort and Verdun regions eastward.

Restitution to Germany of all her colonies, including Kiaochow.

Great Britain must cede to Germany such naval bases and coaling stations as Germany designates.

Great Britain must give Gibraltar to Spain, cede its war fleet to Germany, give Egypt and the Suez Canal to Turkey.

Greece must be re-established under former King Constantine, with frontiers as before the war.

Austria and Bulgaria will divide Serbia and Montenegro.

Great Britain, France and the United States must pay all of Germany's war costs, the indemnity being a minimum of $45,000,000,000.

They must also agree to deliver raw materials immediately.

France and Belgium must remain occupied at their expense until these conditions are carried out.

Apostles of Economy.

The Council of National Defense has indorsed the work of the county and city home demonstration agents, the most direct teachers of food conservation and preservation, and conservation in clothing, according to word received October 4th by Miss Lella Gaddis of Purdue University, State leader of the thirty-five Indiana home demonstration agents.

"Get the home demonstration agents to talk to the people at meetings arranged by the county or community councils and tell them how to economize and how to keep well," reads a letter from the national to State councils. The council also recommends that the State and county councils get back to the home demonstration agents in instructing food conservation clubs, as the home demonstration agents are qualified for this work better perhaps than anyone in the county.

"They are not only experts in cooking, but have the latest word from the Food Administration and the United States Department of Agriculture concerning food regulations and the best methods of carrying them out."

Official Uniform of Reserve Is Approved

City and County Directors Advised of Action of War Industries Board in this Connection.

City and county directors of the United States Boys' Working Reserve have been notified that the national uniform of the reserve has been adopted and will be immediately available for purchase.

"The War Industries Board and the Quartermaster's Department have also approved the use of the material for these uniforms. If the War Department is to give military training below the S. A. T. C., we have been assured that this uniform will be officially recognized by them," it is announced by Isaac D. Straus, director of the reserve in Indiana.

"The Sigmund-Eisner Company of Red Bank, N. J., have been made the official outfitters for all uniforms of the Boys' Working Reserve. The price for the entire outfit is $9.75, the wool outfit to be furnished at $19.75. Prices subject to change after May, 1919. The complete outfit can be obtained at the nearest agency of the Sigmund-Eisner Company, but only upon official requisition signed by the federal state director and countersigned by the local reserve officer.

"It is hoped that each reserve officer will consider himself as a government inspector to see that uniforms are made according to specification.

"In order to be eligible to join the reserve and to wear the uniform a school boy must be sixteen years of age on or before June 1, 1919; a boy not in school must be sixteen years old at the time of his enrollment.

"This is an official uniform, and it rests with reserve officers to protect it and to keep the ideas for which it stands constantly before the boys themselves and the people of their respective communities."

Notice to Public Schools.

On account of the order of the State Board of Health to close schools, in an effort to prevent the spread of influenza, the census of live stock on Indiana farms will not be taken until later. No definite time has been fixed, but Dr. Harry E. Barnard, federal food administrator, expresses the opinion that it may be during the month of November. In the meantime the printed matter has been distributed and instructions have gone forward, so that the work may proceed uniformly throughout the State, when the word is given. It is requested that nothing be done in the way of preparing even a partial census, in order that the entire task may be performed without risk of confusion or omission.

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of patriotic information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the Federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation and its prosecution of the war with Germany, particularly as pertains to the production and conservation of food.

Private Jacob Golub, Rochester.

Attention, County Councils

General Bulletin No. 200.

October 3, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

The Bureau of War Risk Insurance requests the assistance of the State Councils of Defense in its efforts to stamp out frauds in connection with claims for allotments and allowances under the war risk insurance act. Where persons not entitled to relief nevertheless receive either allotments or allowances, their tendency is to drift into idleness and delinquency, their example corrupts the morale of the community, and obviously their frauds waste the war funds of the government.

The commonest cases of improper allotments are those paid to women fraudulently represented as being wives of soldiers or sailors. The commonest cases of improper allowances are those paid to relatives not actually in need of government assistance.

The Bureau of War Risk Insurance is rapidly developing an extensive organization to perform the delicate task of investigating all allotments and allowances. It is looking to the State Councils of Defense to report to it for investigation all such cases as come to the alert attention of the members of these extensive organizations.

No wholesale campaign will be undertaken by the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, nor should any general investigation be started by the county councils. The official attitude should be that allotments and allowances, all being based upon statements of soldiers or sailors, or affidavits of citizens, are presumptively correct. It is entirely in accord with the policy of the government and the intent of the law for soldiers' or sailors' families who need assistance to receive it. There is great danger that a too vigorous search for fraud will spread into a general attack upon the generous system of government relief, with an inevitable result of depression of both civilian and military morale. It might easily lead soldiers and sailors to feel that their families were the recipients of a grudging charity that bestowed its benefits only upon those who in exchange gave up their self-respect and became objects of suspicion and investigation. No such stigma must attach to the receipt by the families of our fighters of payments from the government for which these men are risking their lives.

The members of the county council organization are active in all communities of the State and perform work that brings them into intimate contact with the people. In various branches of this work, especially in the solicitation of funds, the giving of legal advice to soldiers, sailors and their families, and the assistance of boards of instruction, allegations or direct information as to undeserved allotments and allowances are likely to come to their notice.

You are requested to arrange to report all such cases to the State Council. The procedure for this should be as follows:

Report in typewriting the name and address of the person to whom an undeserved payment has been made; the name, address and reputation in the community of the informant; and in full detail the alleged nature of the violation of the law and the evidence upon which it is based.

Take every precaution to prevent any intimation getting abroad that the case is being thus reported, for the reasons given above and in order that no possible injustice may be done to persons who are the subject of neighborhood hearsay, but who are actually legitimate recipients of the government payments.

Make no general investigations, nor any investigations at all, except on the specific assignment of a case by the State Council.

Please note that you are not expected to investigate upon your own initiative, but only to report suspicious cases. It will often happen that the person reported is either not in receipt of government relief or has already been investigated.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

How the Mighty Have Fallen!

Before.

Remember that you are the chosen people! The spirit of the Lord has descended upon me because I am the German Emperor!

I am the instrument of the Almighty. I am His sword, His agent. Woe and death to those who do not believe in my mission! Woe and death to the cowards!

Let them perish, all the enemies of the German people! God demands their destruction; God, who by my mouth bids you to do His will.—Kaiser Wilhelm to victorious armies of the East.

After.

For months past the enemy with enormous exertions and almost without pause in the fighting has stormed against your lines. In weeks of the struggle, often without repose, you have had to persevere and resist a numerically far superior enemy. Therein lies the greatness of the task that has been set for you and which you are fulfilling. Troops of all the German States are doing their part and are heroically defending the fatherland on foreign soil. Hard is the task.

The hour is grave, but trusting in your strength and in God's precious help, we feel ourselves to be strong enough to defend our beloved fatherland.—Kaiser Wilhelm to the defeated armies of the West.

Committee on Construction

At its meeting October 8th, the Indiana State Council of Defense adopted the following report of the Committee on Proposed Construction:

To the Indiana State Council of Defense:

Your Committee on Proposed Construction reports as follows:

1. In the matter of the application of Maurice Winn for a permit to construct a stock barn on his farm in Lucerne, Cass County, to cost $3,500, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the Cass County Council of Defense favoring the construction be confirmed.
2. In the matter of the application of Graves-Wood Auto Company for a permit to construct an addition to garage and workroom in New Albany, estimated to cost $4,500, the Floyd County Council of Defense having made no recommendation in the premises, the committee recommends that the application be disapproved.
3. In the matter of the application of the Louisville Cement Company for a permit to construct a warehouse at Milltown, Crawford County, estimated to cost $4,000, the committee recommends that the recommendations of the Crawford County Council of Defense favoring construction be confirmed.
4. In the matter of the application of the Dodge Manufacturing Company for a permit to construct a structural runway for a crane at Mishawaka, estimated to cost $9,000, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the St. Joseph County Council of Defense approving construction be confirmed. The committee, however, calls attention to the fact that this construction probably does not fall within the class of non-war construction, and does not therefore require action by either the county or the State council, but should go directly to the War Facilities Division of the War Industries Board, Samuel P.

Bush, director. The committee recommends action as stated merely to economize time.

5. In the matter of the application of Henry E. Iseman for a permit to construct a two-story, four-apartment flat building at South Bend, estimated to cost $10,500, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the St. Joseph County Council of Defense favoring construction be confirmed.

6. In the matter of the application of T. M. Weaver, trustee of Perry Township, Clay County, for a permit to construct a high school building at Cory, estimated to cost $31,500, it appearing from the recommendations of the Clay County Council of Defense that the building was partially constructed prior to the recent action of the War Industries Board, evidenced by Circular No. 21, the committee finds that no action is required by the State council.

7. In the matter of the application of Carl Hildebrand for a permit to construct a one-story dwelling at Burrows, estimated to cost $1,800 to $2,000, the committee finds, it appearing from the affidavits that the work was under construction prior to the recent action of the War Industries Board, evidenced by Circular No. 21, that action by the State council is not required.

8. In the matter of the application of George T. Durham for a permit to construct a dwelling house on a 260-acre farm in Madison Township, Montgomery County, estimated to cost $2,000, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the Montgomery County Council of Defense favoring construction be confirmed.

9. In the matter of the application of the Fred Eckert Packing Company for a permit to construct an extension to their packing plant at Fort Wayne, estimated to cost $2,500, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the Allen County Council of Defense favoring construction be confirmed.

10. In the matter of the application of the George R. Carter Company for a permit to construct a factory building at Connorsville, estimated to cost $18,000 to $20,000, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the Fayette County Council of Defense favoring construction be confirmed. The committee calls attention to the fact that this construction apparently does not require action by the county council or the State council, but should go directly to the War Facilities Division of the War Industries Board, Samuel P. Bush, director. The committee recommends action as stated merely to economize time.

11. In the matter of the application of G. W. B. Sink for a permit to construct a wagon and machine shed on a farm near Burrows in Carroll County, estimated to cost $200, the committee finds that, this being farm construction costing less than $1,000, no action by the county council or State council is necessary.

12. In the matter of the survey of construction of a Masonic lodge hall at Milford, Decatur County, estimated to cost $10,798, the committee finds that, the construction having progressed to an advanced stage before the action of the War Industries Board evidenced by Circular No. 21, no action is required on the part of either the county or State council.

13. In the matter of the application of Frank Hamilton for a permit to construct a four-room farm dwelling house in Decatur County, estimated to cost $1,170, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the Decatur County Council of Defense favoring construction be confirmed.

14. In the matter of a survey of a farm residence building in Decatur County, by Mrs. Leander Logan, estimated to cost $3,500, the committee finds that the work had proceeded to an advanced stage before the recent action of the War Industries Board evidenced by Circular No. 21, and that no action on the part of either the county or State council is required.

15. In the matter of the application of John W. Lee for a permit to construct a barn on a farm in Decatur County, estimated to cost $2,000 to $2,500, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the Decatur County Council of Defense favoring construction be confirmed.

16. In the matter of the application of Mary Agnew for a permit to construct a farm dwelling house on a farm in Union Township, Montgomery County, estimated to cost $2,000, the committee finds that the construction was begun prior to the recent action of the War Industries Board evidenced by Circular No. 21, and that no action by either the county or State council is required.

17. In the matter of the application of Clinton M. Florey for a permit to construct a stock shelter in Fountain County, estimated to cost $300, the committee finds that, the cost of construction being less than $1,000, no action is necessary by either the county or State council.

18. In the matter of the application of T. G. McKnight for a permit to construct a stock barn in Richland Township, Fountain County, estimated to cost $2,500, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the Fountain County Council of Defense favoring construction be confirmed.

19. In the matter of the application of Omer Hamblen for a permit to construct a tile roof on a new house already constructed in Converse, Miami County, estimated to cost $775, the committee finds that construction had progressed to an advanced stage prior to the recent action of the War Industries Board evidenced by Circular No. 21, and that no action by either the county or State council is necessary.

20. In the matter of the application of the city of Whiting for a permit to construct a sewage pumping station, estimated to cost $108,482, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the Lake County Council of Defense be confirmed.

21. In the matter of the application of Rollo C. Speer for a permit to construct a community house at East Hammond, Lake County, estimated to cost $16,000, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the Lake County Council of Defense be confirmed.

22. In the matter of the application of Rollo C. Speer for a permit to construct a community house at Indiana Harbor, Lake County, estimated to cost $16,000, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the Lake County Council of Defense be confirmed.

23. In the matter of the application of the Steel Car Forge Company for a permit to construct a factory building at Hammond in Lake County, estimated to cost $9,500, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the Lake County Council of Defense approving construction be confirmed. The committee, however, calls attention to the fact that the construction probably does not fall within the class of the Non-War Facilities Board.

24. In the matter of the application of the Steel Car Forge Company for a permit to construct two buildings for women employees at Hammond in Lake County, estimated to cost $8,500, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the Lake County Council of Defense approving construction be confirmed. The committee, however, calls attention to the fact that the construction probably does not fall within the class of the Non-War Facilities Board.

25. In the matter of the application of the Board of Commissioners of St. Joseph County for a permit to make additions to and reconstruct a part of the St. Joseph County Tuberculosis Hospital, estimated to cost $87,000, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the St. Joseph County Council of Defense favoring construction be confirmed.

26. In the matter of the application of the Nordyke & Marmon Company for a permit to construct an addition to boiler house at Indianapolis, estimated to cost $10,000, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the Marion County Council of Defense favoring the construction be confirmed.

27. In the matter of the application of Butler College for a permit to construct a barracks, mess hall and bath house in Marion County, at an estimated cost of $20,000, the committee recommends that the recommendation of the Marion County Council of Defense favoring the construction be confirmed.

On motion of Mr. Keach, the action of the chairman in approving the following matters was approved by the council:

Date	County	City	Nature of Construction	Cost
10-1	Adams	Decatur	Construct farm building for Edwin F. Miller	$1,000
10-7	Boone	Zionsville	Construct public school	3,500
10-7	Huntington	Bippus	Construct grain elevator by G. Gandy & Company	25,000
10-7	Clinton		Construct county asylum	90,000

Counties Pledging Acreage of Wheat

Reports Being Received by State Leader Show Gain of 53,655 in Nine Counties.

Results of the wheat campaign from county wheat leaders and county agricultural agents are coming in this week, reports D. S. Myer, State leader of the wheat campaign. At present nine counties have reported, showing an increase of 53,655 acres, which is approximately the increase asked for by the federal government.

Miami County was asked to sow 48,010 acres, and reports 54,375, or an increase of 12,000 acres. Marshall County, in a district which suffered severely from smut, reports that 20,000 bushels of seed were treated to prevent this disease.

The nine counties average 2,211 bushels of inspected seed sown, with 341 more tons of fertilizer used than last year, and with 4,481 bushels of seed treated for smut.

Indications are that the State will more than sow her quota of wheat, and in addition greater care than ever before has been given to the seed bed preparation and to the use of fertilizers and to good seed.

Select Seed for Two Years.

Instead of enough seed for next year only, select enough for two years, is the suggestion from Governor Goodrich to the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation. A good crop, the first essential of which is good seed, means greater returns for the preparation of the ground, planting, cultivation and harvesting.

"The best farmer will not make seed-gathering a merely incidental operation connected with harvesting or shucking, but will devote his whole attention to selecting the best ears as they grow in the field under conditions with which the crops have to contend. By thus using a few hours this fall he will save the labor of many men all next season."

To Arrest Influenza.

In view of the spreading epidemic of influenza, Lake Division Red Cross headquarters has sent to all its chapters in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky a list of precautionary rules for the avoidance and lessening of the intensity of the epidemic.

"It is felt that proper publicity on ways to prevent colds and gripe will do much to prevent the spread of the epidemic and incidentally greatly reduce the necessity of moving Red Cross nurses from one community to another except in extreme situations," says a letter from Division Manager B. F. Bourne to all chapters in this territory.

Rules and suggestions being sent to chapters were prepared by Dr. Wm. R. Lincoln, Lake Division medical advisor. They are as follows:

1. All colds, however slight, should be treated as possible attacks of influenza. Patients affected by colds should stay at home and sterilize discharges from the nose and throat.
2. Avoid feeling or spreading of the disease.
3. Avoid crowds.
4. Regulate bodily functions and keep them so.
5. Avoid the breath or expelled secretions from people suffering from colds.
6. Wash out the nose and throat two or three times daily by a nasal spray or douche and by a gargle with a "normal salt solution" (one-half teaspoonful salt to one glass (eight ounces) clean water).
7. All those in attendance on patients with influenza should wear masks such as are provided by the Red Cross Nursing Bureau.
8. Clothing should be warm and dry, food simple and easily digested. Drink water freely.

Letter from Governor Goodrich

To the Members of United States Food Clubs:

When the United States accepted Germany's insolent challenge to battle for civilization no State in the Union responded more wholeheartedly than did Indiana. There was no argument or discussion. Indiana without question stood for a straightforward, aggressive war until the issue should be settled beyond a doubt. After eighteen months we, the citizens of Indiana, have no need to feel ashamed, but we may well be proud of the record our State has made. Our boys at the front have conducted themselves as true Hoosiers of whom we are all proud. The citizens of Indiana at home have stood solidly back of the fighters in every possible way. No task has been too large for our people, no effort too great. The only question asked has been, "Will it help win the war?" When that question has been answered in the affirmative, the movement to which it referred has been accomplished gloriously.

This same question was considered before the organization of United States Food Clubs was undertaken by the Indiana Division of the United States Food Administration. Would such an organization help win the war? Undoubtedly, yes. Those who have supported the food club movement have shown that they appreciated the unlimited opportunities for patriotic service offered by this organization. They have understood that unless the people of America willingly accepted government guidance in the handling of our staple foods the war would be lost before we could ever make our weight felt. I extend to you, the members of the United States Food Clubs, my heartiest congratulations on the good work you are doing. Your part, if you but grasp it, is a large one in helping shatter the gigantic machine so painstakingly planned by the Teutonic powers for the subjugation of the world.

Sincerely yours,
JAMES P. GOODRICH,
Governor.

Woman's Section

Union County sends a remarkably fine report of Red Cross work done in that county, the surgical dressings totalling 9,077 for the county, with a great number of socks and sweaters.

Jefferson County reports that all but one of its ten townships have registered children under six years and mailed the cards to Washington. This county is to have a public health nurse. The State Anti-Tuberculosis Society sent them a nurse for two weeks, and she became so interested in the city's need that she promised them a district nurse soon. Defective children have been reported, and a number are to be sent to the Fort Wayne School for the Feeble-minded as vacancies occur there. The committee is very enthusiastic over the weighing and measuring campaign. Attention is called to the fact that, contrary to the general impression, the children on the farms have, as a rule, measured up to the standard.

Mrs. A. T. Cox of Indianapolis, who was named by Governor James P. Goodrich to represent the women of Indiana on the advisory committee of the United States Employment Service, attended the recent conference in Washington, where the enlarged program of the service, anticipatory of the war needs, were explained and discussed. It was announced that the women members would have full voting power on the committee and that in addition two women will be added to each of the community war labor boards. One of the chief duties of these women will be to see to it that no woman is allowed to take work for which she is not fitted physically, or to accept any employment under conditions not suitable for her.

The report of the women of Decatur County is so fine that it deserves to be set forth in full.

Woman's Section organized August 4, 1917.

Number of women registered at last registration .....	2,249
Number babies examined .....	1,689
Amount collected by women for Liberty Loan .....	$213,950.00
Amount collected by women and children for W. S. S. campaign .....	$3,194.39
Number speeches made by Fourteen-Minute Women .....	51
Number food and canning demonstrations .....	23
Approximate number in attendance .....	634
Number of talks and conferences with clubs .....	26
Attendance .....	698
Number cook books and leaflets distributed .....	9,242
Number of home and vacant lot gardens .....	2,500
Number books sent to soldiers and sailors .....	1,140
Number magazines sent to soldiers and sailors .....	100
Number food clubs .....	47

Tipton County reports that all child welfare work was completed by June 6th and the cards forwarded to Washington. This county is also trying to establish a public health nurse. The drive was felt to be of unusual benefit to the county, and it is hoped that it will be the means of establishing medical inspection in the schools. The most interesting part of this report is the statement that the response of those called on to help in the child welfare drive was wonderfully gratifying. "Not one of the helpers refused," writes the chairman. "All worked arduously and gladly."

Apples may be kept in the storage room in the basement of the dwelling, in outdoor storage cellars, and in banks or pits. Conditions suitable for the keeping of potatoes answer fairly well for apples. Under some conditions it will be an advantage to store part of the crop in the cellar and the late-keeping varieties suitable for spring use in outdoor banks or pits.

Women Are Not Using Substitutes, She Says

"Women of the United States are not doing all they can in the matter of using cereal substitutes, judging from my observations and reports that come to me from over the country," says Ida C. B. Allen, national authority on home economics, author and lecturer for the United States Food Administration, now on a speaking tour. "From points as widely separated as Michigan and Vermont I learn that flours of grains other than wheat are being fed to chickens or hogs and not baked into bread as Mr. Hoover contemplates. If you cannot make good bread with the substitutes, you owe it to yourself, your country and our allies to buy your bread, for the baker must use the substitutes, and experience has shown that he can make a fine, palatable loaf with them."

"There are, in round numbers, ten billion pounds of bread baked annually in the United States. Of this, twenty per cent must be substitute. I have reports of cities where as much as eighty per cent of the substitutes were being wasted. But suppose only half of the women misapply them, and that these only misapply half of their supply, we still have the appalling figure of five hundred millions of pounds of flour wasted, enough to supply bread to an army of two million men for almost a year. This wastage operates to increase the cost of mill feeds, which is one of the reasons why milk is higher all over the United States than it ever has been before. If you can't bake properly, buy; it is more patriotic."

Indiana Wheat Growers Certain of a Fair Price

In order to clear up the confusion that exists in some quarters relative to the possibility of the guaranteed price for wheat being revised downward after a survey next spring, the federal food administrator for Indiana, Dr. Harry E. Barnard, authorizes the publication of the following memorandum, promulgated by President Wilson, which makes clear the purpose of the government to maintain a minimum of $2.26 for No. 1 wheat at the Chicago market:

In issuing today the government's guaranty of the same price for the 1919 wheat crop that was guaranteed for the 1918 crop, I wish it to be understood that in the spring of 1919 I will appoint a disinterested commission, who will secure for me the facts by that time disclosed as to the increased cost of farm labor and supplies, using the three-year prewar average prices of wheat, of labor, and of supply costs as a basis, and that from this information I shall determine whether there should be an increase in price above the present level, and, if so, what advance in order to maintain for the farmer a good return. Should it then appear that an increase is deserved over the present guaranty, however, it will be applied only to those who have by next harvest already marketed their 1918 wheat.

It is the desire and intention of all departments of the administration to give to the wheat grower a fair and stimulative return in order that the present acreage in wheat may be maintained.

I find a great conflict of opinion among various sections of the country as to the price that should be named as a minimum guaranty. It must be obvious to all, however, that the factors which will make for increased or decreased cost of production of next year's harvest cannot be determined until the near approach to the harvest.

In giving a guaranteed price for wheat one year in advance (the only industry guaranteed by the government) there is involved a considerable national risk. If there should be peace or increased shipping available before the middle of 1920, Europe will naturally supply itself from the large stores of much cheaper wheat now in the southern hemisphere, and therefore the government is undertaking a risk which might in such an event result in a national loss of as much as $500,000,000 through an unsalable surplus; or, in any event, in maintaining a high level of price to our own people for a long period subsequent to freedom in the world's markets.

Despite this, the desirability of assuring a supply to the world of prime breadstuffs by insuring the farmer against the fluctuations in prices that would result from the uncertainties of the present situation and from the speculation those uncertainties entail seems to me to make the continuation of the guarantee for another year desirable. On the other hand, it is clear that before increasing this liability by large sums with the risks set forth above, and before increasing the burden of the consumer, the matter should be subjected to searching inquiry at the appropriate time—the time when the pertinent facts will be known.

I feel confident that with this preliminary fixed guarantee, and with the assurance that justice will in any event be done to the grower, he will continue the fine patriotic effort by which he has served the country hitherto, that the government will have acted prudently, and that the consumer will be satisfied that his interests are not unduly sacrificed, but just and exhaustive consideration given to every element of the matter at the proper time.

Soft drink manufacturers will be permitted a 50 per cent sugar supply, as compared with their 1917 consumption, after November 1. The Food Administration intends to conserve materials used in the bottling business other than sugar, and will limit the latter very radically.

Helps in the Conservation of Foods

This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration, and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.

USING THE LEGUMES IN PLACE OF MEAT.

The Food Administration says that "the allied civilians and armies, the American armies, the Belgian relief and certain neutrals who are dependent upon the United States will require 2,600,000 tons of meats and fats during the year beginning July 1st." There will be no food rationing in this country so long as the people continue to conserve as in the past, nor will it be necessary, Mr. Hoover hopes, to resort to meatless or wheatless days.

Meat is classed as a protein food and is used principally in the body for building and repairing tissue, and is therefore of great importance as a food. In leaving meat out of the day's menu some other food belonging to the protein group must be substituted. The legumes, namely, dried beans, dried peas, lentils, soy beans, cow peas and peanuts, contain protein and may be used in place of meat in meatless meals.

There are certain general rules that should be followed in cooking legumes:

1. All legumes should be thoroughly cooked. If boiled in hard water a small amount of soda should be added to the water—about one-fourth teaspoonful of soda to one quart of water.

2. The dried legumes are soaked usually eight to ten hours before cooking, so that they may absorb their original content of moisture and thereby save time in cooking. The water in which they are cooked contains some mineral matter and should not be thrown out unless it has a bitter taste, which makes this necessary.

3. Removing the skins from the dried legumes makes them more easily digested. This can be done in the case of soups where the pulp is extracted by running them through a sieve or ricer. Dried lima beans can be peeled after boiling if necessary.

4. Dried legumes have a flat taste that should be overcome by combining with highly flavored foods, such as onions or tomatoes or pork, or by seasonings of various kinds, such as molasses.

The following recipes have been tested out in the home economics laboratories at Purdue University and have been found good.

Baked Bean Croquettes:

One cup baked bean pulp.
One teaspoonful onion juice.
Two tablespoonfuls flour.
One-half cup milk.

Salt and pepper to taste. Make a paste of the fat and flour. Heat the milk to scalding point and thicken with the paste by placing the paste on the end of a spoon and stirring until thoroughly mixed in the milk. Cook twenty minutes in a double boiler. Combine this with the beans, to which the seasoning and onion juice has been added. Let stand for two or three hours, then shape as for croquettes. Roll in bread crumbs, then in beaten egg, then in bread crumbs again. Place them in deep fat and cook until nicely browned. Tomato sauce may be served with these croquettes.

Tomato Sauce:

One cup tomato juice.
Two tablespoonfuls flour.
One slice onion.
One tablespoonful fat.

Salt and pepper to taste. Boil the tomato juice and onion for five minutes. Mix the flour and fat to a paste and place on the end of a spoon. Stir into the tomato juice and boil for five minutes.

Bean or Pea Timbales:

One can peas, or
Two cups cooked beans.
Two beaten eggs.
Two tablespoonfuls melted butter.
Two-thirds teaspoonful salt.
One-eighth teaspoonful pepper.

Mash the beans or peas and add the other ingredients. Turn into buttered moulds, set in a pan of water, cover with oil paper and bake until firm. These may be served with tomato sauce.

Lentil Meat Loaf:

One-half pound round steak.
Three-fourths cup dried lentils.
One egg.
One-fourth cup milk.
Four tablespoonfuls fat.
One-fourth cup peanuts.
One-fourth cup bread crumbs.
One-half onion.

Soak the lentils over night. Then boil in water until lentils are tender. Drain. Grind the meat and peanuts, and add to the lentils. Add other ingredients. Cover with bread crumbs and bake. This may be served with tomato sauce.

Peanut Roast:

One and one-half cups bread crumbs.
One and one-half cups shelled peanuts.
Four teaspoonfuls baking powder.
One egg.
Milk.
Salt and pepper.

Soak the crumbs in milk until well softened. Mix with other ingredients. Place in baking dish in oven for forty-five minutes. Serve with tomato sauce.

Baked Cow Peas and Cheese:

One tablespoonful butter.
One tablespoonful chopped onion.
One tablespoonful chopped green pepper.
Two cups cooked cow peas.
One-half cup grated cheese.

Pass the cow peas through a ricer to remove the skins. Mix the pulp with the cheese. Sauté the onion in the butter and add to the cheese and peas. Form into a loaf and bake in a moderate oven until the loaf is heated through thoroughly.

Stewed Lentils:

One cup lentils.
One-fourth pound bacon.
One-fourth cup vinegar.
One-half medium-sized onion.

Wash the lentils and soak over night. Drain. Cover with fresh water, add bacon and onion, and boil until lentils are tender. Drain, reserving one cup of the liquid. Thicken this liquid with two tablespoonfuls of flour that has been browned, and boil five minutes. Add the vinegar and reheat the lentils in this sauce. Season with salt and pepper.

Soy Beans or Cow Peas:

Soy beans or cow peas can be substituted in any of these recipes. They require a very long period of soaking—twenty-four hours being better than ten or twelve hours. They must be boiled for four to six hours before becoming tender. In baking, a longer time is required than for ordinary beans.

The Hog Is a Food-Producing Machine.

The hog should be considered as a machine for turning foodstuffs into pork. The more quickly this result can be accomplished the more profitable it is for the owner. It is a common belief that if the grain fed to hogs on pasture is limited, more forage will be eaten and cheaper gains produced. This belief is not substantiated by the feeding tests that have been conducted at several agricultural experiment stations. A full feed of grain to hogs on good pasture not only produces the most rapid gains, but usually gives the most profitable results. When account is taken of the saving of labor and the reducing of loss from disease by marketing animals at seven to nine months of age instead of keeping them for a year or more, the advantage is almost always with the more rapid growth. The self-feeder system which permits hogs to eat grain at will either in pastures or dry lots is becoming more and more popular in the corn-belt States, and there seems to be no valid reason why self-feeders should not prove equally successful in all parts of the country.

Jack Frost Is Coming—Prepare for His Visit

If you have been puzzled about how to store your war garden products so as to insure them most effectively against decay, the following suggestions will help:

The cellar is the best place for potatoes, beets, turnips, carrots, parsnips and salsify, but they should be protected from dry air and furnace heat. To provide this protection a storage room should be made and both sides of the partition covered with felt paper. The material in the cellar floor is important. If it is cement occasional moistening of the sand covering the vegetables is desirable. An earth floor is usually damp enough to make this unnecessary, but if the floor is very damp it is better to provide a slatted floor about two inches from the earth. Excessively damp air can be reduced through ventilation.

A few hooks in the ceiling of the storeroom will be found useful, also some built-in bins. A load of builder's sand to cover roots like carrots and beets and a few slat boxes and old bags—and you are ready to store any time.

What vegetables will you store in your cellar? Potatoes, turnips, carrots, parsnips and salsify are the best for such a place. Squash, pumpkin and onions should be stored in the attic. Cabbage is better stored outside in a straw-lined, well ventilated pit. As the weather grows colder add more coverings of straw and earth.

Potatoes should be dug, left in the ground a short time and then stored in a dark place. The ideal temperature is 33 degrees to 35 degrees F.

Celery may be kept outside in trenches or inside in boxes with the roots covered with soil. When kept inside, it is important to keep the roots moist and the leaves dry. Take up the celery before it is injured by frost. Darkness is desirable. In outside storage, trenches are made about the depth of the celery and a foot to sixteen inches wide. The trenches should be made on a side hill or a well-drained spot. Stand the plants upright in the trench and leave until the leaves are touched by an early frost. This reduces their moisture content. Then cover with leaves. One end of the trench should be left open in order to get at the celery as it is required for use. When brought into the house place in cold water to bring out the frost. It will then freshen up.

Beets, turnips, carrots may be stored like potatoes, but keep in better condition if they are covered with sand. Conditions of the place of storage and of the roots themselves should determine whether to use the sand dry or slightly moist. If they start to shrink, moisten the sand.

Parsnips and salsify may be left in the ground. Freezing does not hurt.

When boxes are used a little damp sand should be placed in the bottom of the boxes, then alternate layers of vegetables and sand. When piled on the floor a covering with sand is generally sufficient. In drying beets the tops should be twisted off and not cut off with a knife, as this will cause "bleeding," loss of color and very often decay.

Onions before being stored in the attic should be dry and thoroughly well cured outside. Dampness causes decay. They will keep well in slat boxes or shallow trays.

Squash and pumpkin require a slightly warmer temperature. Placed in barrels or boxes and packed in straw or excelsior and in a part of the cellar near to the furnace, they may keep for some time. They should be carefully handled so as to avoid bruising. Sort over frequently for spoiled ones. Others may be laid out separately and placed in the attic as a temperature of about 50 degrees is better for them.

One of the best and most recent methods of ripening green tomatoes in the late autumn is to wrap each vegetable in paper and place in a closed box or drawer located in a warm room. Another method is to pull the vine before any signs of injury from frost and suspend from the ceiling of a warm room or the cellar. In some cases, if conditions are suitable, the fruit will go on ripening until Christmas. A dark place is preferable with a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees.

Official Regulations and Penalties Imposed

Bulletin No. 177.

October 3, 1918.

MILLING DIVISION.

Rule M. S. 20. (As amended September 20, 1918.)

Custom and Exchange Grinding.

The wheat miller who receives wheat from farmers' wagons and grinds such wheat on a toll basis, or exchanges such wheat for flour and feed, shall charge not to exceed thirty-five cents per bushel for each sixty pounds of cleaned wheat so received, and on such basis he shall return to the farmer flour and feed in accordance with the following schedule:

Test weight of wheat per bushel.	Number lbs. flour returnable.	Number lbs. hard wheat feed returnable.	Number lbs. soft wheat feed returnable.
58 lbs. or heavier.	44 lbs.	15 lbs.	14 lbs.
57 lbs.	43½ lbs.	15½ lbs.	14½ lbs.
56 lbs.	42½ lbs.	16½ lbs.	15½ lbs.
55 lbs.	42 lbs.	17 lbs.	16 lbs.
54 lbs.	41½ lbs.	17½ lbs.	16½ lbs.
53 lbs.	40½ lbs.	18½ lbs.	17½ lbs.
52 lbs.	39½ lbs.	19½ lbs.	18½ lbs.
51 lbs.	39 lbs.	20 lbs.	19 lbs.

Millers Shall Continue Custom and Exchange Grinding.

The wheat miller who prior to July 1, 1918, had customarily ground wheat for farmers on a toll or exchange basis shall continue to operate upon such a basis when the farmer offers wheat, grown on his own farm, to the mill for grinding or exchange, and where the farmer takes in exchange flour of the character made from his own wheat.

Note 1. Nothing in the above rule prevents a farmer selling some portion of his wheat to the miller at an agreed price and using the purchase price to cancel the charge per bushel made for milling.

Note 2. Size of Exchange Transactions. There is no limitation on the quantity of wheat that may be exchanged if the substitute rules are complied with, and if the farmer does not take more than a permitted supply for his household or establishment.

Note 3. Where the flour or feed given in exchange is in mill packages, an additional charge may be made to cover the cost of the sacks.

Note 4. This rule applies only to mills in actual operation and does not cover exchange operations by elevators or feed dealers.

Note 5. Mills cannot accept any part of the flour or feed as payment or part payment of the milling charge of thirty-five cents.

Wheat Mill Feed to Be Sold for Certain Purposes Only.

Wheat mill feed shall not be sold for any other purpose than the feeding of dairy cattle, poultry, or of pigs under three months old, young calves under three months old, or the preparation of a weekly bran mash for work animals.

Retailer Must Require a Pledge.

Before selling wheat mill feeds to the consumer, the retailer must require a pledge in the following form:

"In order to assist the Food Administration in the equitable distribution of wheat mill feeds, I hereby undertake on honor not to use wheat mill feeds for any other purpose than the feeding of dairy cattle, poultry, young pigs or young calves, or the preparation of a weekly bran mash for work animals. I will not feed any more wheat mill feeds than is customarily fed to such animals, and I further agree not to have at any one time more than a sixty-day supply of wheat feeds on hand.

(Signed)....."

Note.—The above pledge when signed must be kept on file by the retailer. It will not be necessary to secure the pledge on each sale, but the dealer must see that each customer is pledged.

Certification.

Certification by the consumer, when purchasing wheat flour, that he has on hands, has contracted for, or will purchase the necessary amount of substitutes is not permitted. The substitute requirement is so reasonable that it is no hardship to purchase substitutes when purchasing flour. The only modification of this regulation that is permitted is where the purchaser takes corn to the mill and has it ground into meal suitable for human consumption. When it is desired to use corn thus ground as a substitute, the miller must furnish the customer with the following statement:

Certificate to Be Made by Individuals Having Corn Ground Into Meal for Wheat Substitute.

This is to certify that I.....
(Name of miller)

ground for.....
(Name of customer)

on.....
(Date of grinding)

.....pounds of cornmeal, and it is in condition to be used for human consumption.

Signed.....
Address.....

I,....., hereby certify that there has been delivered to me on the above certificate by.....
(Name of dealer)

at.....
(Address)

.....pounds of wheat flour.

I further certify that the amount of meal which I have certified as substitute will not be sold, loaned or delivered to anyone else, nor will I permit such meal to be used for any purpose except human consumption in my household or establishment. I also state that I desire to co-operate with the government in winning the war, and hereby pledge myself to cut down the use of flour in my household or establishment in every possible way and to use a pound of wheat flour substitutes for every four pounds of wheat flour used.

Signed.....
Address.....

(This certificate to be filed weekly with county federal food administrator, to be forwarded to United States Food Administration, Indianapolis.)

Memoranda.

Retailers are no longer required to keep a record of flour and substitute sales.

Retailers cannot sell pure wheat flour except on the 80/20 basis, but are not required to furnish a statement that they have the required amount of substitutes on hand when purchasing flour.

Substitutes must be sold concurrently with sale of flour to consumers, including public eating places, clubs and institutions, whether they hold baker's license or not.

Edible corn starch actually purchased by dealers on or before September 16th may be sold to bakers and used by bakers as a substitute.

All flour contracts must provide for delivery within thirty days.

No dealer shall have in store, or contract for an amount of wheat flour in excess of his reasonable requirements for sixty days.

Flour may not be advertised in a manner calculated to increase its consumption. It is permissible for dealers to keep the name of their flour brand before the public.

County administrators are requested to enforce the general regulations and to make no rules for their county without first submitting them to the State Food Administration for approval. We desire to have the regulations uniform throughout the State.

Sincerely yours,

H. E. BARNARD,

Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

CARL W. SIMS,

Chief Milling Division.

The United States Food Administration has not announced any definite margins of profit for wholesalers on corn sugars, but reasonable profit rule should govern as to margins.

Beet sugar growers should have a higher price for their product, based upon prevailing sugar quotations, the Food Administration believes. The administration will endeavor to secure a fair price for beets in order to maintain production.

Enlarged demands from General Pershing for material, resulting from the progress of the American and allied forces on the western front in France, has necessitated the temporary withdrawal of many ships from the grain-carrying trade. This has caused a corresponding curtailment of shipments from interior points and has filled the seaboard warehouses and terminal elevators, checking the entire grain movement, yet the Food Administration is positively announcing that there is no occasion for farmers accepting less than the guaranteed price of wheat. They are urged to have patience, as the situation is expected to clear up in a short time.

Green straw stacks are proof of wasteful thrashing. Where stacks have started to turn green it is an indication that the wheat, which should have gone to the flour barrel, is sprouting and has been wasted. County food administrators are requested to report all green stacks in their jurisdiction in order that the "slacker" machine may be located and repaired before it is responsible for still greater waste. Many farmers have reported their great satisfaction at the saving effected by the execution of the program of the Grain Thrashing Division, which called for improved machinery and greater care to prevent wasted grain in the wagons and about the separators.

Official announcement has been made of the continuing policy of the Food Administration to support a $15.50 per hundredweight for hogs in packers' droves at the Chicago market. The packers have agreed to stand by the policy which is intended to guarantee pork producers of a fair return, corn and feed prices considered.

Fair price lists have been reported from thirty-three counties, and the organization is being perfected in other counties of the State. On eight staples the variation has been from fifty per cent in the retail prices of milk—from ten cents to fifteen cents; to a twenty per cent difference in the prices of a sixteen-ounce loaf of bread, which range from eight to ten cents. In other instances there were variations, usually explained by difference in freight rates. The fair price publication is the method adopted by the Food Administration to indicate to the consumer about what should be paid for staples, which may be the subject of profiteering in unlicensed retail stores.

There will be published October 14th a new official card for the regulation of public eating houses. The new regulations will differ from the old ones in that many are to be mandatory and will be enforced through sources of supply. In the meantime every county administrator has been asked to nominate an active hotel and restaurant chairman to assist in the enforcement of the regulations.

Sale of Powdered Sugar.

Wholesale and retail dealers have been instructed that powdered sugar may not be sold except for commercial manufacturing purposes and for commercial baking. Its sale for domestic consumption and to retailers for distribution among domestic consumers is prohibited. The foregoing becomes effective October 10, 1918, but federal food administrators may permit wholesale and retail dealers to dispose of stocks then on hand if satisfied they were purchased in good faith.

The nations associated against Germany cannot be expected to agree to a cessation of arms while acts of inhumanity, spoliation and desolation are being continued, which they justly look upon with horror and with burning hearts.

Problems to Follow In Wake of Epidemic

General Deterioration of Health Likely as an Aftermath of Influenza.

A resolution asking employers to set aside four hours of the morning of election day for the convenience of their employes in casting their ballots, was presented to the Indiana State Council of Defense at its regular meeting October 15th by E. M. Stewart, Adolph Fritz, Frank Aukenbach, Charles E. McKee, John E. Smith and William Landgraf. The resolution was referred to the Labor Committee, headed by Charles Fox, and the Employers' Co-operation Committee, of which Frank Wampler is chairman.

L. H. Wright, who was delegated to ascertain the progress being made on the Pendleton pike and the Fort Benjamin Harrison road, reported that assurances of adequate car service for transporting materials had been secured, and that there is every reason to believe that these roads will be completed within twenty days.

A communication from John Shillady, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, asking that the council use its offices in securing the withdrawal from the state of the motion picture "The Birth of a Nation," which is declared prejudicial and unfair, and likely to incite race feeling, was referred to the Publicity Committee's Motion Picture Film Division, George Ade, chairman.

The following resolution, presented by George Harney of the Protection Committee, was adopted by the council:

October 15, 1918.

WHEREAS, There was organized under the Woman's Section of the State Council of Defense of Indiana "The Indiana Motor Corps," officers in which organization were commissioned by the Governor;

WHEREAS, It was deemed advisable on the part of the Indiana Motor Corps to transfer its activities and become a part of the American Red Cross Society, and such transfer is in the process of being effected;

WHEREAS, There was donated by Mr. Harry Stutz, of this city, one ambulance for the use of the Motor Corps of Indiana;

Now the Indiana State Council of Defense hereby releases the use of said ambulance, insofar as it may have rights to the use of the same, to the Indiana Motor Corps, until the first day of April, 1919, following which and at which time the Woman's Section of the Indiana State Council of Defense proposes to use said ambulance for demonstration and educational work. The said ambulance is accepted by the Red Cross Society and the Indiana Motor Corps in full understanding of this provision.

Dr. Charles P. Emerson informed the council that a meeting of the Medical Section, of which he is chairman, had been called to undertake a more effective coordination of the administration of affairs pertaining to the profession and that of nursing, in connection with the epidemic of influenza now prevalent. Dr. Emerson said calls are being received by the section from many sources to an extent that threatens serious consequences in the state. He said Indiana has been "hardest hit" of all the states, and that although

Home Card Week Later.

On account of the nation-wide epidemic of influenza, Home Card week, planned by the United States Food administration for the week of October 27th, has been postponed until the week of December 1st. This will make available for distributing the food cards in addition to the Food club membership, the services of the schools, churches and other patriotic auxiliaries.

the number of new cases apparently is declining, the long continued deterioration of the public health as a consequence makes it certain that the possible aftermath justifies the greatest concern. "The public must understand that influenza is a disease of crowds," Dr. Emerson said, in explanation of the preventive measures that have been taken in the large cities. He added that mortality from the epidemic had been 4 per cent, and from pneumonia, which has followed in its wake, has been from 19 to 33 per cent. "It is one of the most destructive diseases we have ever had in this country," concluded Dr. Emerson.

The report of the Committee on Proposed Construction, which included an unusually large number of matters, was approved by the council. In this connection the chairman stated that apparently the policy of the War Industries Board at Washington is to eliminate entirely, if possible, all kinds of construction during the period of the war. Arthur W. Brady, chairman of this committee, will attend a conference with the board, in order that its policy may be made more effective in Indiana, in Washington October 17th.

On motion of Will G. Irwin, the council approved solicitation for funds in Indiana by the society known as The Fatherless Children of France.

Increase in Food Prices During Year

Figures Show Actual Decreases or No Added Cost for Commodities in Some Places.

The Food Administration has received inquiries from many quarters as to the actual increase in cost of food during the past year. These increases have been greatly over-estimated by laying too much emphasis on special cases. The attached table is a computation of the national food bill for each three months, beginning with the second quarter of 1917, down to the second quarter of 1918. It is based on taking the total food consumed by the nation, divided into items of breadstuffs, vegetables, meat, dairy products, etc., at the average wholesale price for the quarter, and thus arriving at what the nation as a whole actually expended. The figures show that during the last twelve months there has been an increase in the national food bill per quarter from $2,563,600,904 to $2,693,751,871, or 3½ per cent. While this is the whole nation's expenditure at the wholesale prices and thus clearly indicates the national trend, it does not follow that there are no local variations. In those sections where there has been a great local increase in population there has been a disturbance of distribution and prices have increased to a larger per cent. On the other hand, there are corresponding sections of the community where actual decreases or no increase have taken place. The cost of rent, clothing, transportation and other

The Plain Duties Ahead of Us!

With the hearty approval and the unqualified endorsement of Governor James P. Goodrich, the Indiana State Council of Defense says to the people of Indiana that until the war is brought to a successful conclusion there can be no division of sentiment regarding the plain duties ahead of us. The State Council backs up President Wilson's message of October 14th in reply to Germany's peace proffer. It is the evident will of our people that we shall not discuss terms of compromise with violent criminals who are still intent upon crime. We ask the people of Indiana to be guided in their judgments at this time by the opinions of our trusted soldiers who are at close quarters with the enemy, by the unanimous expressions of our best military experts and by the deliberate pronouncements of our most prudent statesmen. Be guided by them and do not be misled by the plausible promises of those who break their promises.

Let the verdict of the American people be that peace can not come until all the evil forces we combat are made helpless. The enemy of civilization must not be allowed to appeal to the laws which he is trying to destroy. Let us not be duped into believing that peace can come before the just objects of the war have been accomplished. To think or act in peaceful mood at present is friendly help to the enemy and discouragement to all of our forces organized to win the war.

The State Council of Defense joins with the people of Indiana in declaring that the war spirit, which now carries us to victory, is not to be chilled and destroyed by deceptive and carefully-timed peace propositions.

To secure the only peace under which the world can live in safety, we must drive on, with no let-up of speed or energy or stubborn determination. There must be no slowing down of war activities. It is more than ever important that the Fourth Liberty Loan shall be fully subscribed.

The State Council of Defense calls upon the County Councils and all of the Community Councils to support the Liberty Loan with the utmost zeal and continue all other war activities with hard and earnest persistence. The kind of peace that we and our Allies must secure, in justice to the millions who have died, will not come soon if we relax our efforts. A desperate foe, even at bay, will not be overcome by half-hearted opposition. Throw in every reserve force that will help to win the war and win it speedily. Also remember that the agents of justice and not the criminals still at large must dictate the final verdict.

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—The county commissioners of Adams County established a precedent when they took action in the case of Adam Bieberstine, superintendent of the Bieberstine macadam road, in Hartford Township. The unpatriotic actions of Bieberstine and his refusal to buy Liberty Bonds brought a protest from the chairman of the county council of defense to the board of commissioners, who promptly removed Bieberstine as road superintendent and appointed a patriotic American to fill the vacancy.

Clay County.—On the afternoon of October 5th, residents of Brazil were treated to a surprise when National avenue for two blocks was cleared for a parade of twelve decorated automobiles filled with loyal women of Jackson Township, who brought their pillows, numbering 263, to the Red Cross headquarters. The machines were decorated with flags and bunting and signs bearing the club names. . . . Mrs. Louis McNutt, chairman of the township food clubs in Jackson Township, has accomplished much in organizing that community for various kinds of war work. With a number of assistants to help her, Mrs. McNutt canvassed the entire township in an effort to interest each individual family in the important work of food conservation, and so great has been the response that the people are now thoroughly alive to this phase of war work, and are eager to do their full part. Jackson Township now has ten organized food clubs.

Elkhart County.—W. C. Peters, secretary of the county council of defense, has established a record as city chairman in the Goshen Liberty Loan drive. Subscriptions total $450,000, with no initial payment under 10 per cent, and many of the sales showing a full 100 per cent payment. Mr. Peters attributes this excellent showing to an intelligent handling of the direct assessment plan.

Fayette County.—Fayette County has a roll of dishonor on which will be written the names of all unpatriotic citizens acting as intentional obstructionists of the war program. The county council of defense was reluctant to give its O. K. to this step, but the strength of public opinion and the pronounced lagging of the Fourth Liberty Loan induced the council to give its approval to the move. A black tablet will be erected on the court house lawn, with the words "Fayette County's Roll of Dishonor" written in glaring letters, and on this tablet will be inscribed in red letters the name of any proven anti-American within the county boundaries. No name will be inscribed there without first giving full warning to the person accused, but where warnings do not avail, the name of the disloyal citizen will be written on the tablet as a mark of lasting dishonor. Public spirited citizens realize that any real American would rather not leave such a disgraceful heritage.

Floyd County.—Miss Edith Butler Gwin and Samuel E. Simonson have been appointed by Judge John M. Paris, of the Floyd County circuit court, to fill vacancies on the county council of defense, occasioned by the resignation of Mrs. J. Frederick Kurfess and John L. Scott, both of whom have been removed from the county.

Porter County.—County Agent S. B. Sink reports Porter County already over the top with an increase in wheat acreage of about 25 per cent, and this in the face of the greatest labor shortage that has ever confronted the farmer. Porter County was asked for an increase of 4,000 acres, and topped this figure by at least 2,000 acres.

Shelby County.—The call of the county council of defense and the Red Cross for the collection of clothing for the French and Belgians met a generous response in Shelby County. At the close of the drive sixteen large boxes were ready for shipment. Among the articles listed were 200 coats for women, 100 coats for men, 125 men's suits, 150 women's suits and 20 sweaters, besides an immense quantity of underwear, stockings, shoes, caps, shawls, etc. One large box contained nothing but tiny baby apparel, soft and fine enough to bring joy to the heart of the mother as well as comfort to the baby. Conditions across the water are understood here, and the appeal quickly brought forth offers of time as well as cars for transportation. One loyal citizen loaned his wareroom. The newspapers gave their labor and generous space for advertisements; boxes, nails and twine were contributed, and the citizens of the county feel they have done their utmost to relieve some of the destitution among our deserving allies.

St. Joseph County.—An arch of triumph and memorial tablet commemorating the sacrifice of the heroes of this war who have gone from St. Joseph County will probably be erected at the east entrance of the county court house if plans of the Woman's Dining Club of South Bend materialize. County commissioners have given their consent, provided the funds are raised by popular subscription. At the next meeting of the club a definite program in support of this public-spirited movement will be mapped out. . . . Mrs. K. C. DeRhodes has issued notice that all who wish to send Christmas gifts to Indiana sailor boys should bring them to the women's section of the council of defense, on the fourth floor of the Oliver hotel annex in South Bend, before October 22d. The gifts preferred are cretonne comfort bags 10 x 18 inches, knitted socks and mittens, small towels, wash cloths, roll toilet kits, stationery, fountain pens, cash donations and home-made and hard candies.

Union County.—A summary of the year's work of the women's section of the Union County Council of Defense illustrates the value of concerted and well directed effort.

The record shows 3,000 women registered for war service; 325 babies registered and examined; 150 speeches by the fourteen-minute women; a thousand cookbooks and leaflets distributed; 475 books sent to soldiers and sailors, and eight nurses enrolled in the student nurses' reserve. In addition, 90 food clubs have been organized, and the women of the county have over-subscribed their quota of the Fourth Liberty Loan by 20 per cent.

Vigo County.—Mrs. M. C. Hamill, chairman of the committee on Christmas parcels, has secured a centrally located storeroom on the main street of Terre Haute, where this work will be handled. . . . Some of the members of the motor corps are taking advantage of the instructions at Rose Poly training camp, where a special course is being given in motor car construction, operation and repairs.

Red Cross Activities

Christmas parcels for the fighting men will not be accepted by the postal authorities for mailing after November 20.

The following are the regulations to be observed in sending parcels to sailors in home waters and abroad:

Packages forwarded by parcel post for men in the Navy must comply with the postal regulations and should be enclosed in substantial boxes with hinged or screw top covers to facilitate opening and inspecting.

All boxes shipped by express are limited to twenty pounds in weight, should measure not more than two cubic feet in volume, be of wood, well strapped and have hinged or screw top.

All mail matter should be addressed as now prescribed by the postal regulations. All express packages should be forwarded in care of Supply Officer, Fleet Supply Base, 29th street and Third avenue, South Brooklyn, N. Y.

No perishable food product other than those enclosed in cans or glass jars should be packed in parcel post or express shipments.

All packages must be plainly marked with the name and address of the sender together with a notation indicating the nature of the contents, such as "Christmas box" or "Christmas present."

The Supply Officer at New York will cause each express package to be opened and carefully examined to see that nothing of an explosive or other dangerous character is forwarded.

On account of the epidemic of influenza, annual meetings and elections of Red Cross chapters in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky will be postponed from October 23 to November 20, if chapters carry out the recommendation to this effect sent them by Division Manager, B. F. Bourne.

In another communication to chapters Mr. Bourne says: "Your committee on influenza should prepare a list of all women in your jurisdiction who have had nursing experience. This should include those who have taken a course in first aid, home care of the sick or similar educational courses. This list is especially necessary in communities in which colleges or other collecting points for any number of people are located. The local resources should then be at the service of such institutions. This will help save delay and will probably save lives."

In Indiana, Red Cross Home Service Workers dealt with 2,974 families during September through the chapter Home Service Sections. $6,205.17—to be exact—was expended in loans and needed aid to families of soldiers and sailors. Members of 1,059 families came or wrote for needed information to straighten out war-time difficulties. In 2,020 instances it was possible to render definite assistance. This report, just issued by James L. Fieser, director, Department of Civilian Relief, Lake Division, mentions also the need for trained Home Service workers. Efforts to supply this need are being made through Home Service Institutes held in various cities. The Indianapolis Institute, which opened September 16, is attended by eighteen students.

Red Cross work in Russia, Siberia, the Balkans and the Near East goes on vigorously, according to the report contained in the latest statement issued by the War Council of the American Red Cross concerning the use made of the War Fund.

For relief work in Russia, $2,807,919 has been spent to provide milk for the babies, relief for refugees and destitute families of soldiers, for railway employees at the northern terminus of the Murmansk railroad and for returned Russian prisoners and for medical and surgical supplies and motor ambulances.

In Siberia, $4,273,200 has been spent for warm winter clothing for refugees and soldiers, to establish a hospital and to carry on general refugee relief work.

For food, clothing, medical supplies and administration expenses in Roumania $2,676,369 was spent between September, 1917, and March, 1918.

Seed and agricultural implements, food and clothing for prisoners in Siberia and for refugees, a hospital at Voden, a dental contingent to serve the Serbian army required $1,244,197 for work in Siberia. An additional $50,000 was given to the Serbian Red Cross.

In Greece there is a great deal of suffering due to the mobilization of troops, so a Red Cross commission sailed last month to administer an appropriation of $375,000 made for this purpose.

An aggregate of $3,000,000 was contributed to the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief. Much work is also being done in the camps of Armenian refugees at Port Said and Jaffa, and elsewhere.

Red Cross work rooms will not be closed on account of the epidemic of influenza unless so ordered by local boards of health, according to instructions sent to all Lake Division chapters. These instructions, signed by James L. Fieser, chairman of the division committee on influenza, says "The question has arisen as to whether or not the Red Cross work rooms should close where the influenza epidemic is severe. While the final answer should rest with your local Board of Health, it must be remembered that the Red Cross work rooms is an essential war enterprise and must be kept producing wherever possible. Instruct your workers to send home any one who has a cold or is not feeling well. Keep work rooms well ventilated. Comply with Board of Health regulations."

Protecting Children from Illness

Mrs. Max West's weekly article for mothers on The Care of Babies and Little Children.

The Children's Year campaign to save 100,000 babies is demonstrating the wisdom of the proverbial "ounce of prevention" as a means of protecting children from disease. The Weighing and Measuring Test has revealed to many parents that a child, while apparently not sick, may still be suffering from some latent illness or defect which is likely to affect his health in after life. "Well-baby clinics" where mothers may obtain advice on how to feed and care for their children in order to keep them well report that more mothers are bringing well children to them for advice. Many of the communities that are working to save their quota of the infant lives that are to be saved during Children's Year report the establishment of new baby clinics.

Every mother, of course, desires to protect her child from illness, and now, when every ounce of human strength as well as every available dollar is needed to win the war, it is particularly necessary to keep children well. A mother who keeps her children well can save not only the stress of illness upon the children, but the time of a doctor and perhaps a nurse, and the expense in fees, drugs, special food and extra service which serious illness entails.

And the prevention of illness among children generally requires no more than the intelligent application of simple rules of health. To suggest to mothers ways of conserving health and preventing disease, the Federal Government has published a number of helpful bulletins. Among these are bulletins of the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor on the care of the child. Of these, "Prenatal Care" shows the prospective mother how to apply the simple rules of hygiene to her own case; "Infant Care" sets forth the plain rules of health for the baby, and "Child Care" describes the care of older children. Any mother in the United States may have these three bulletins if she will write and ask for them.

A recent publication of the U. S. Public Health Service on "Prevention of Disease and Care of the Sick," by W. G. Stimpson, M. D., also should be in the hands of every mother engaged in the work of keeping her family in good health. This bulletin gives a very clear statement of the practical means by which families may avoid needless illness. It should prove particularly valuable to mothers in rural districts. One chapter deals with the prevention of the spread of contagious diseases, and the care of patients suffering from them. Great care is necessary, with contagious disease in the house, to prevent its spread to every member of the family. To many mothers, such painstaking care will seem hard perhaps, and even unnecessary. "Children's diseases" especially, are too often regarded as a necessary evil, to be "got over with" as soon as possible. Yet such diseases—measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough, and other common illnesses of childhood—often have disastrous after-effects that result in permanent ill-health.

Until every mother accepts her share of the responsibility for keeping disease under strict control and is willing to aid the health authorities in carrying out the necessary quarantine our country must bear the drain of these epidemics of contagious disease which now sweep through almost every community in the United States at some season of the year, leaving behind them a trail of death and ill-health. "The health of the child is the power of the Nation." The most important war-work mothers can do is to rear strong men and women to carry on the work of the future.

America Again Drawn To Home of Discoverer

After Lapse of 426 Years Two Nations Make Common Cause Against the Enemy of World Freedom.

Italy gave to the world the discoverer of this great country. America now gives the land of Columbus food and fighting men to aid in the common battle against arrogance and autocracy.

During the 426 years which marks the lapse of time between the discovery of America and the sailing of the first transport of American soldiers for the European battlefields, many changes have been recorded by history for these countries. Italy has her Mazzini and her Garibaldi, America her Washington and Lincoln.

But today we find these two countries drawn together to fight a common foe, a foe that threatens the future not only of the allied nations but of all civilization.

The courageous rally of the Italian army after temporary disaster will always stand as one of the dramatic incidents in the history of the world. The other allies, has become wars and extensions had to summon all her moral and physical resources to keep in the fight. She needed the aid of the enforcement.

How keenly she appreciated it when it came and how quickly she has responded to it is shown in the following words of welcome to our boys: "A cause which by force of its ideals has succeeded in drawing to itself the aid of so great a people cannot fail to triumph."

"We shall triumph! We shall conquer!" is Italy's rejuvenated resolve.

America's responsibility in fostering and maintaining this resolve does not end with the sending of her soldiers. There is the further responsibility of sharing her food with Italy.

Contrast for a moment the following food conditions:

America is being asked just now to confine her beef consumption to the lighter cuts of beef; otherwise there are no special meat restrictions.

A weekly meat report in a Milan paper during July reads: "Meat is so scarce that it will either have to be limited to sick people or be sold but two days in the week. There is a great scarcity of pork."

In Genoa the new meat regulations as published in July contain the following items:

"The quantity is limited to 100 grm. (This is about three and one-half ounces.)

"The butcher must write down all meat sold daily, as well as the number of the meat card or license, and the name of the buyer.

"The Turin meat ration is 200 grm. (about seven ounces) per person per week as decreed by the mayor. Offal will be subject to rationing, and requires meat coupons, the same as meat."

Take the sugar situation. Italy's sugar ration is but one pound per person per month, just half our own. The Corriere d'Italia of July 6 says: "The total lack of sugar in Viterbo continues. Only a very small quantity is allotted to the city. Even hospitals and sick people have none."

The use of sugar beets for any industrial purpose other than the manufacture of sugar is forbidden.

Nowhere is the need of sugar as a fuel and energy-giving food greater than among the Italian soldiers, where the war is being carried on in the cold of the hazardous Alpine regions.

The menus of all public eating places in Italy are sharply censored and regulated. A stamped copy of the bill of fare must be posted conspicuously in the restaurant, and the prices charged for food must not exceed those posted. It is also forbidden to serve any dish which does not appear upon the bill of fare.

America has already sent her fighters to the Italian front. The American people must now save food in order to share with these and with the soldiers and civilians of that country of Columbus.

My War Creed.

By Thomas F. Moran.

I

I believe that all men are created free and equal, and have an inalienable right to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

I believe in the ultimate self-determination of all nations, both small and large, without the dictation of any outside power whatever, whether benevolent or sinister.

I believe that the ultimate sovereignty in all government should rightfully rest with the people themselves and not with hereditary royal houses.

I believe in government with "the consent of the governed," and not subject to the whim or the caprice of any man or "super-man."

I believe that the STATE is a human agency designed to SERVE the people, not to OPPRESS them.

I prefer self-government to the "divine right of kings," culture to KULTUR, and civilization to scientific savagery.

(To Be Continued.)

Huns Pay $2,000 For Dutch Horses

According to the U. S. Government reports from Holland, the German government is paying from $500 to $2,000 per head for sound horses, and $200 to $300 for lame ones. Even at this price, the Huns have bought so many that the Netherlands government has been compelled to call a halt on exportation to avoid a serious horse shortage at home. In Sweden the Hun military commission paid an average of 3,400 crowns, or $1,740.21 in good American dollars for 250 horses and only objected because more could not be obtained at this price.

It was suggested that the Germans intended using them to make a speedier exit from Belgium and try to outrun the allied cavalymen, who are at their heels. Whether or not this is the case, the horse shortage and consequent high prices will present an excellent opportunity to Indiana farmers and all others who have some horses for sale after the war. They will be at a premium then as now.

Blood Drawn There— We Bleed Also

By E. T. Meredith in THE NATION'S BUSINESS.

In England and France I have seen things which I wish could be burned into the conscience of every business man in the United States. I have seen factories in ruins, office buildings blown to bits, commercial districts, miles in extent, lying deserted and silent, grass growing in the streets like places of the dead—everything that years, perhaps hundreds of years of patient industry had built up and passed on as a heritage from father to son—all vanished.

We in America have known nothing like this. We can know nothing like it. Thanks to our allies, these experiences will be kept from us. That factory of yours in New England, that mine of your neighbor's in Michigan, that farm I own in Iowa—they are being protected today by the untold sacrifices of the soldiers, the business men, the women of England and France.

Why then should we complain? Why should we protest that our business is ruined? Why should we bewail lessened profits, cavil at high prices, inconveniences, hard conditions? Why should we rage at the disaster that overtakes our business?

Our business! Let me tell you something more of what "our business" means in England and France—as I have seen it. I talked with business executives, past their prime, men so old and weary that they would be glad to stop a bit and rest before they die. Yet they carry on. They, like those famed old legionaries of France, "have no time to die." They battle with conditions which in a month, a week, a day, may sweep everything out of existence. I saw a great ship-builder, a fine old Briton, at his work—all three of his sons gone. At his side stood the grandfather, now in his eightieth year, doing what he could. I talked to a barber—the sole survivor of four brothers. I was chauffeured by a one-time British capitalist—it was his own car—and one of his legs, a soldier's reward, was made in the United States!

These business men overseas, our allies, are war weary. The strain is great, the enemy strong. Bitter is their lot. But do they protest? Do they despair? No! Grimly they carry on. Again and again they send their sons to the battle front. Their daughters—they see them rise at six in the morning to search the casualty lists for the name of a brother or sweetheart, then depart for a long day's work in factory, field or office. They themselves—even their nights are not given them for rest. When evening comes they report for special duties. In the British capital 30,000 of them—bankers, lawyers, lords and sirs, the shopkeepers of London, men too old, too crippled, too sick to serve at the front—police the darkened city streets.

I was in London when sons of these men gave their lives to plug up the neck of Zeebrugge harbor. I felt then, as I know now, that by their heroic deed they defended not only the Thames and the coast of Kent, but the harbors of Boston, New York, Charleston. Those lads over there stand on guard before our mills, our stores, our homes. Their spirit—their will to win at any cost—is emulated by their business elders at home.

Our business? Our profits? Our lives? Good God, will we ever open our eyes to see the truth? Can we ever repay the debt we owe? The time has come for us, the commercial men of this country, to relieve our French and British allies overseas of their appalling burden. Their soldiers are now our soldiers, as truly as if they wore our uniform; and our boys are theirs. Business over there, too, is American business. It is fighting the battle that will save us, along with the people of England and France, from destruction. A British or French plant wiped out is an American plant wiped out. A French town bombed is an American town bombed. Blood drawn there—we bleed also. We are one allied people in this fight. And united we stand—on both sides of the sea!

Don't let up; keep on saving food.

General Bulletin No. 202.

October 11, 1918.

To Chairmen County Councils of Defense:

Enclosed is a letter instructing the Merchants' Economy Committee, the State Council of Dealers are bringing in its district chairmen certain Many of the coding the response of the mercantile the the provisions of the agreement regarding Christmas shopping entered into by the War Industries Board and representatives of the merchants of the nation.

It is very important that every merchant in the state comply fully with the provisions of that agreement, and you are urged to take an active interest in this matter and to co-operate with the district chairmen of the Merchants' Economy Committee in bringing all merchants into line and securing the information requested.

The terms of the agreement mentioned above are set out in our General Bulletin No. 197.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

October 11, 1918.

W. E. BALCH, Secretary,
Merchants' Economy Committee,
News Building,
Indianapolis, Ind.

Dear Sir:

The State Council of Defense has pledged every merchant of Indiana to full compliance with the provisions of the agreement regarding the Christmas season entered into by the War Industries Board and representatives of merchants of the nation.

We are sure that every merchant in Indiana is informed regarding these provisions and is making every effort to comply therewith. In order, however, that the record in this matter may be kept complete for future reference to Washington, you are requested to instruct your district chairman to:

1. Report to you, for transmittal to us, the names of all merchants who refuse to comply with the provisions of the agreement, and

2. Secure from all merchants within their district a list of all employees on their payrolls on October 15, on November 15 and on December 24.

A copy of this letter is being sent today to chairmen of the County Councils of Defense, and they are instructed to co-operate with your district chairmen in securing this information.

Very truly yours,

JOHN VAJEN WILSON,
Secretary.

General Bulletin No. 203.

To County Councils of Defense:

We enclose copy of a letter just received from the War Industries Board regarding the delivery of material by dealers for repairs and extensions where the cost does not exceed $2,500.

Will you kindly assume the responsibility of bringing this letter to the attention of the dealers in building material in your county?

We suggest that, if the dealers are reluctant to deliver material merely on the word of the purchasers that the construction they contemplate comes within this exception, you require such purchasers to make application in the regular form to you for a permit, investigate the facts set out in such application, and furnish the applicants a letter which may be used by them to assure the dealers that the facts as stated are true.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

WAR INDUSTRIES BOARD.

WASHINGTON.

B. M. BARUCH, In reply
Chairman. refer to D. R. M.

File 2238. October 9, 1918.

From: Non War Construction Section, Priorities Division.

To: M. E. Foley, Chairman, Indiana State Council of Defense, Indianapolis, Ind.

Subject: Delivery of material for repairs and extension where cost does not exceed $2,500. Reference your letter of September 26th.

(1) I quote below letter of October 7th from Richard L. Humphrey, Chief, Building Material Section, War Industries Board, which is self-explanatory. You may make such use of this as necessary to accomplish what you want.

"In reference to the communication from Mr. M. E. Foley of the Indiana State Council of Defense, which I am returning herewith, I beg to advise you that all dealers have been instructed to furnish materials for repairs and extensions whose cost does not exceed $2,500, and there should be no difficulty, therefore, in securing the needed material."

D. R. MCLENNAN,
Chief, Non War Construction Section.

General Bulletin No. 204, referring to the pronouncement appearing on Page 1 of this number of the Bulletin, addresses County Councils of Defense as follows:

"Enclosed is a statement, issued by the State Council of Defense at its regular meeting today, warning the people of Indiana not to be misled by the present German peace campaign. Will you please assume the responsibility of bringing this statement to the attention of all persons in your county through the public press and your township councils? It is vitally important that there be no relaxation in war work and in the present efforts in regard to the Fourth Liberty Loan.

"STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE."

Submarines and Sugar

DON'T DRINK SHIPS!

U. S. Food Administration.

Are you shocked to see the lady drinking ships? You drink ships every time you use sugar unnecessarily, in a beverage.

Seventy-five per cent. of the sugar used in this country has to be brought here in ships. Every possible ship is needed for the transportation of troops and supplies to the other side.

Eliminate sugar as a luxury, and you release many ships for war purposes.

Teach your appetite to remember this—
DON'T DRINK SHIPS.

Successful convoy of our troop ships has meant much to all of us. But Americans must not overlook the fact that Germany has now another plan in mind. If she cannot get our boys, she will use every effort to sink the supply ships carrying food. And food from America is vital to success.

In every sinking we must realize the double loss of ship and supplies. Our answer to that loss must always be in terms of more ships, more supplies.

This means briefly that the food must be ready, piled on the docks to be pushed across as fast as losses occur. It means that we must eat perishables to save staples for this continuous shipping. It means that we must produce food intensively, that all who are in no other work should be on the farms.

It means that we must be sending as few ships as possible out after supplies for ourselves and this is where sugar comes in. We can do with less imported sugar. We have other foods which we can grow at home. Deflection of ships to Java or the Argentine will subtract from the eagle's answer to the submarine.

U. S. Boys' Working Reserve

High schools of the state have been requested to nominate a suitable member of the reserve to become publicity agent for its activities during the school year. High school publications should be requested to devote special attention to this important activity, and the local newspapers will cheerfully accord space in their high school columns for any messages that are of interest and benefit to the reserve.

The adoption of a standard uniform for members of the reserve, putting the organization on a semi-military basis, is expected to add much to its popularity and significance, especially in the agricultural communities, where the worth of the reserve has been demonstrated.

The Department of Labor has received a report on the work of 144 high school boys, members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve in Sioux Falls, S. D., which indicates that these boys earned during the past summer $23,702. A normal boy under normal conditions will produce in food value twice the amount of his wages. A conservative estimate places the value of the food added to the country's store by these boys at something over $47,000.

It is proposed that a record of four months' continuous service in the same occupation and under the same management will be a requisite for a bronze service badge. Farm craft lessons in high schools are advocated by the national director, and the speeding up of classroom work to enable boys who may be available to engage in farm work during the planting season, when their services are most imperatively needed. Credits for successful and satisfactory farm work are urged for the consideration of the educational authorities.

National Director William E. Hall of the United States Boys' Working Reserve has received the following cablegram from General J. J. Pershing, commander-in-chief of the American forces fighting in France:

"The achievements of the Boys' Working Reserve during the past year are beyond praise. The American Expeditionary Forces thank one and all for the support which you are giving us. "PERSHING."

Over a quarter of a million American boys enrolled in the reserve this year have done wonderful work upon the farms of the country. Every boy of reserve age should be in the uniform of the organization and feel that he is one of the gallant army deserving the thanks of General Pershing and the men in the trenches "over there."

Figures have been compiled showing that approximately 83 per cent of the boys who enrolled in the reserve in Indiana last year are in school this year. In Indiana 3,835 boys are reported to have worked five months on farms, producing, according to the estimate of an agricultural specialist, an average of $1,000 worth of foodstuffs each, or adding $3,835,000 to the potential wealth of the state, aside from patriotic considerations.

With the increased demands for foodstuffs, the reduction in available manpower and the obligations of this country to prevent the starvation of the world during the next two years, the place of the Boys' Reserve is one of magnified responsibility in the American war organization. The Indiana organization must arouse itself to the size of the task and be prepared to "go to it."

Woman's Section

The Whitley County Motor Corps has done good work during the month. They report the use of thirty-six cars with a mileage of 657 miles and time spent as thirty-five hours. They have commenced the military drills and will take up first aid and motor mechanics in the near future. There are now about fifty members in the county, with three branches.

Splendid reports from the Education Committee of Fayette County should prove suggestive to the rest of the State. This is one of the most important committees in the section. The Fayette County Committee, under Miss Torr, in addition to daily discussion in the schools of facts concerning the great war, and the use of the Literary Digest as a text in English and History classes, has given some excellent entertainments. One of the Girls' Literary Clubs in the Connersville High School recently gave a patriotic program, consisting of a play entitled "The Girls Over Here," and ending with patriotic songs. A small admission fee was charged, the proceeds to be used to buy stars for the service flag, which the same club presented to the High School last year. This same program was presented before the Federation of Clubs October 12. All the High School Literary Clubs are having programs of a patriotic nature. The Boys' Debating and Science Club discusses war topics. All pupils, from the Fifth Grade to High School Seniors, wrote a composition on the Fourth Liberty Loan.

The Child Welfare Committee of Fayette County, under Miss Stoops, is engaged in taking the weights and measurements of all the school children. All of them are being subjected to the ear, eye, nose and throat test, and they all also are having their teeth examined. Glasses have been bought for five. Under this department, one mother was brought into the Juvenile Court for neglect of her children.

From the Fayette County Motor Corps, six applicants have responded to the call for women ambulance drivers for France, and are now awaiting further orders.

The work of the Publicity Committee of Washington County is to be especially commended. Local papers are provided with full accounts of the work of the Woman's Section and the weekly News Letter sent out from the State office is printed each week in the Salem Democrat.

Food clubs have been organized in Washington County and reported, meetings held regularly, and interest growing.

Duffy vs. School Board.

After hearing evidence and testimony from both sides of the controversy between Frank W. Duffy and the Indianapolis Board of School Commissioners, on Tuesday October 15th, the Indiana State Council of Defense adopted the following resolution:

Whereas, the Indiana State Council of Defense has conducted a public hearing of the charges filed against the Board of School Commissioners of Indianapolis, Indiana, chiefly concerning an alleged discrimination against vocational education in the public schools, and has listened to testimony and arguments relative to the same:

Resolved, that the State Council recognizes the good faith of all parties connected with the controversy, but must decide that no facts established properly come within the province of the State Council of Defense. The Council has no reason to doubt the statement made by the Board that it is not indifferent to the merits of vocational training, but legal restrictions and the necessity of financial retrenchment have compelled it to withhold from vocational education a support which it would otherwise be disposed to give. The charge of disloyalty against the school commissioners and their employees was not sustained and, upon reconsideration was not seriously pressed. It is the sense of the State Council of Defense that the entire subject of vocational education should be taken up by the state director of vocational education and the school authorities of Indianapolis, with a view to the removal of the legal and other restrictions which now hamper this important department of our educational system.

War Books Recently Received by the State Library

(Any of the books mentioned below may be borrowed for a short time from the Indiana State Library by any citizen of the State. Persons living in towns where there is a public library should apply through the librarian. Those living on rural routes or in towns having no public library may obtain blanks for registration from the State Library on request. The only expense is that of transportation.)

Brown, H.—The A. E. F.

Well-written account of the first American force in France, their ideas and adventures.

Dawson, C.—Out to Win.

The story of American achievement in France told by the author of "The Glory of the Trenches."

Kahn, O. H.—Right Above Race.

Mr. Kahn is a German-born American, but he is none the less a good American. Part of the book is addressed to Germans, or Americans of German origin.

Osborn, E. B.—The Muse in Arms.

A collection of war poems, differing from other anthologies, in that the poems are written by British soldiers and sailors who are serving or have served in the field.

Redier, A.—Comrades in Courage.

Written by a French lieutenant. One of the reflective books of the war, giving spiritual reactions rather than a story of personal adventure.

Waddington, M. K.—My War Diary.

Covers about the first eighteen months of the war. The author has been a resident of France for a long time and her account of conditions is made more interesting because of her understanding of the French people.

Every bit of food unwisely bought, wastefully cooked, or carelessly eaten is that much taken from the Allied table.

The Fair Price List

In your paper is a Fair Price List for your vicinity? Are you reading it, noting what it says, making use of it in the right way? For it is your friend if you will use it.

It gives you in very concise form the latest food news—what vegetables and fruits are abundant in the markets and which are scarce. It tells you every day what the retailer pays for his materials and what he should expect you to pay.

Note is made that the fair prices given on the list cover those to be charged by both "cash and carry" and "credit and delivery" retailers, since the first named should sell near the lowest figure given.

But the Fair Price List is a daily friend—it cannot help you if you consult it only once a month when the bills come in. It must go with you when you go to market and be your ever present adviser if it is to live up to its best possibilities. If your dealer refuses to sell to you at the prices quoted on that list, you should at once report the fact to your local Food Administrator.

Surely anything which helps you to deal with your grocer on a perfectly fair and square basis is a thing to be taken advantage of. Use the Fair Price List.

Increase in Food Prices During Year

items of living have advanced several times as much as the aggregate increase in the cost of foodstuffs. There has been more than a 35 per cent increase in prices paid to the farmer, but also a reduction of speculation and profiteering and narrowed margins between farmers and wholesale prices under food regulations.

A Gas Masque

Oyez! Oyez! Clubs, fraternities and dramatic societies!

Lend your wits!

Our troops need millions of gas masks, and your government is calling for fruit pits and nut shells to convert into carbon. Can you help furnish carbon for masks to protect our men from the deadly mustard gas of the Hun?

Here is your cue. Why not arrange a gay masque done in the Elizabethan style—admission a measure of nut shells or fruit pits? Call it "A Gas Masque" and let the town crier advertise it so loudly that every fruit pit and nut shell will be turned in. For such a masque fruits and nuts and the season give the setting. A quarrel between the Perishables (Peaches, Nutty Nuts, etc.) and the Staples (Wheat, Meat, Fat, Sugar) suggest the argument. Perishables, claiming unjust discriminations at the hands of War Industries, and Shipping Boards, and the Food Administrations, lay their case before Jupiter. He is impressed with the beauty of the Fruits and the wit of the Nuts, but knows only too well that the Sons of Mars fight on meat and bread. In the midst of the Olympian clamor Mercury arrives with an imperative call for nutshells and pits, and the Fruits and Nuts are vindicated as War Essentials.

For the arrangement of masques and harvest festivals consult Master William Shakespeare's "Tempest" and "As You Like It." This is only a suggestion to start your wits working. The subject naturally lends itself to masques, harvest festivals, rustic dances and pageants.

Remember that only the pits of peaches, prunes, plums, apricots, olives, cherries, dates, and the shells of Brazil nuts, walnuts, butternuts and hickory nuts are wanted by the government for gas mask material.

Deferred Classes for Skilled Farm Hands

Maurice Douglass Plans Survey to Prevent Stripping State of Food Producers.

Steps were taken, to obtain deferred classification for more skilled farm hands of draft age, at a conference of county agents in the State House, October 9th, called by Maurice Douglass of Flat Rock, Agricultural Adviser of the Third District Exemption Board. It was decided to make surveys in each county to determine how many men are needed for farm operations, and who should not be left to uphold the second line of defense. The county agents were asked by Mr. Douglass to make the surveys in co-operation with the County Councils of Defense, Better Farming Associations, and Drafted Men's Organizations. Results of the surveys will form the basis for his recommendations to the district board.

Under this new plan, if a surplus of skilled farm hands exists in one county they will be sent to another county where there is a shortage. Although a man does not claim exemption on agricultural grounds, and the facts show that he is best fitted to remain on the farm, Mr. Douglass will recommend that he be exempted.

Those attending the conference, besides Mr. Douglas, were G. W. Rosencrans, Assistant County Agent Leader; Lucius B. Swift, Chairman of the Third District Exemption Board; W. Q. Fitch, Assistant Secretary of the State Food Committee; P. J. Lux, a Shelby County farmer; and the following county agents: R. M. Gilbert, Indianapolis; R. G. East, Shelbyville; C. E. McClure, Lebanon; C. C. Madison; R. S. Fouts, Greencastle; B. B. Adams, Rockville; G. A. Ellis, Franklin; P. D. Brown, Greensburg; E. L. Shoemaker, Versailles; M. E. Cromer, Greenfield; and H. B. Randolph, Noblesville.

Following Foch's Example

Do you ever stop to think that you in your kitchen have been an important factor in making possible this wonderful advance of the allies on the western front? You have sent the soldiers the wheat, meat, fats and sugar, without which of a certainty they must have been forced to witness the triumphant march of the Hun through the streets of Paris.

The food you sent them not only put new strength into the allied soldiers but new courage into their hearts. It was a visible symbol of your loyalty to their cause.

Now, with the help of our boys, they are pushing the gray horde back and back and back. Each day sees more ground recovered. But we must never forget in our absorbing delight in watching our lines swing ever nearer to the boundaries of Germany that we have a tremendously important work to do here. Every step of progress they make over there depends on the progress we make over here. The more steadily the allies advance the more steadily we must send them food.

We must also follow the wise example of Foch and be always prepared for an emergency. The only safe way to meet success is to be prepared for disaster. This is the philosophy of the greatest general in the world. If Foch thinks it worth while to take such care and pains to be prepared for any emergency, surely we cannot fail to do our part by conserving food more rigorously than ever before, so that reserves may be built up against famine.

To do this the housewife must take the following rules as notches by which to measure her kitchen patriotism:

No bread should be made at home without at least 20 per cent of substitute flour. All bakers are conforming to this rule. It is wrong if the housewife does not.

Corn bread should still be a frequent visitor to every table.

Have meat only once a day and preferably less frequently. Learn to make the delightful dishes that originate from left-over scraps of meat. Buy the cheaper and lighter cuts in preference to the heavier ones, and use such by-products as liver, kidney, sweetbreads and tripe.

Use all fats sparingly.

Every effort should be made to conserve sugar. Don't put the sugar bowl on the table. Use sirups and honey in cooking as much as possible.

A Pious Profiteer

A dear old lady who thought she was patriotic, always took a little white candy box into the hotel dining-room. She did not seem like a person who would eat candy for breakfast. One day we saw what it was. It was her own private sugar supply from home, which she made her family send her.

She added some to the amount the hotel allowed for her cereal and her coffee, and sprinkled her fruit with it.

We counted carefully one day, and figured that she was using twelve teaspoonfuls a day—four times her allowance. That would be eight pounds a month, instead of two pounds.

One morning we read to her a story in the paper about a man who was trying to make the government pay him $16,000 for his house that was worth only $4,000. Our old lady was scandalized and said:

"I'd like to see all those horrid profiteers put into jail."

She was a profiteer herself. She was selfishly breaking the rules of the Food Administration; she was actually stealing sugar by taking someone else's share!

If she had stopped to think she could have seen that if everyone quadrupled his sugar rations, the American per capita annual allowance of 24 pounds would go up to 96 pounds a year—higher than the largest amounts we in the United States used to consume in our days of plenty before the war.

Every time you are tempted to double your portion of sugar; to fail to mix substitutes with your wheat flour; or to waste food of any kind, ask yourself this question: Would it be the best thing for the nation if everyone did what I am doing now?

What other answer is there than a loud, emphatic NO?

The Gas Mask Drive.

(APOLOGIES TO KIPLING.)

"What makes you save your olive stones?" the Thoughtless Waster cried.

"The Government has asked for them," the Patriot replied.

"I don't see what it wants of them," the Thoughtless Waster cried.

"It wants the carbon that they make," the Patriot replied.

"So we're gathering up the cherry pits, the peach stones and the shell

Of walnuts and Brazil nuts and of hickory nuts as well.

And the youngsters hunt for butternuts in every dale and dell

To furnish the materials for carbon."

"What do they want the carbon for?" the Thoughtless Waster cried.

"To manufacture gas masks," the Patriot replied.

"And a carbon respirator in a gas mask over there

Will save our boys from gas attacks. Come on and do your share!

"We dare not waste one single stone—let's give them all they ask!

It takes two hundred peach pits to equip a single mask.

And they've given you and me and everybody else the task

Of furnishing materials for carbon."

"Victory means more to those who earn their bread in the sweat of their brow than any other class."—Lloyd George.

THE SPIRIT OF AMERICA.

(C. V. STAINSBY.)

America's contribution to the progress of the war includes more than men, food, money and munitions. Our entry into the war guaranteed these things just as the entry of any other nation with similar resources would have guaranteed them. But we have added another element, at least as potent as any one of those previously mentioned. We have infused a spirit of good cheer into the forces of civilization by the manner in which as individuals we have taken up the struggle.

An officer in the National Army recently said: "Our privates have a way of grinning when they salute that shows a higher morale than a dozen ordinary salutes." German war reports have spoken in wonderment of the enthusiasm and good nature of the American fighters. Irvin Cobb comments on the same characteristic of our soldiers: "Always our fellows are smiling. They smile when they enter the trenches, they smile when they charge, and when they return for rest from the heat of battle, still they smile."

There is a close and direct connection between the Yank's smile and his success in battle. Every ounce of energy he possesses is conserved for his one great task—beating the Hun. He wastes neither time nor strength in worrying or quibbling. Personal inconvenience, hardship and danger are mere incidentals, and are swallowed up in the one big, actuating idea. Difficulties are met without complaint as being part of the natural order of the day. The soldier is interested in the struggle in which he is engaged. His big-hearted, whole-souled nature overrides incidental obstacles and presses on to the ultimate victory—and he smiles.

There is another side to the story. Plainly it is this: Do we meet the trifling inconveniences that are ours with the same cheerful smile as that which our boys are wearing in the inferno of death in Europe? The American soldier smiles in the face of a deluge of German bullets, a wave of German gas, a period in the front line trenches. Do we smile when asked to reduce our consumption of sugar, mix substitutes with our flour, use vegetable oils instead of animal fats?

In a recent speech on America's spirit in the war, Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur quotes France and England as saying to Germany: "The nation that has sent the type of men that America has sent to France will never go back on them or on the soldiers and people fighting with them. Europe knows that we will stand back of our soldiers. More than that, she expects us to do it with the same irrepressible good nature that they manifest. Europe is judging the spirit of America by the spirit of America's soldiers. They are establishing a reputation which we are expected to measure up to. The manner in which we support every war activity is as important as the support itself. Let quibbling and complaining adjourn. If our hearts are in the war, we will accept all the necessary restrictions and observe all government requests as we press on toward victory—with a smile."

Loyal Americans are eating at a common table with 120,000,000 Allies.

If we save sugar by spoonfuls we can send it by shipfuls to "our boys."

Indiana Again to Fore.

The War Garden Association of Marion, Ind., claims the championship of North America on the strength of its report to the National War Garden commission, showing 14,000 gardens in a population of 27,000, or a little over one garden to every two people. The claim is contested by St. Cloud, Minn., which reports 2,500 gardens in a population of 16,000. According to the commission's records, 5,285,000 home food producing plots were planted this year.

U. S. Food Administration for Indiana

Official Regulations and Penalties Imposed

Shooting matches or turkey raffles are inconsistent with the policy of the food administration. Any game of chance or skill that may result in food getting into the hands of persons who do not have any genuine need for same except for purposes of trade is considered a wasteful practice.

Indiana millers may well prepare for the manufacture of Victory flour. They have reasonable assurances that the revenue tax will be removed as an inducement for the production of the Victory mixture of 80 per cent wheat and 20 per cent substitutes. It is expected the demand from housewives for ready mixed flour will grow. The food administration has decreed that this mixture will stand in the United States so long as it is necessary that our European Allies are forced to a similar formula in order to make the available wheat supply go round.

The Hughes Lumber and Grain Company of Brooklyn, Ind., was found to have been guilty of irregular practices in the handling of grain and as a consequence its license was revoked. It will not be permitted to engage in any business involving food, for the remaining period of the war.

Andrew Kleckner, of Plymouth, was found by George Vinnall, federal food administrator, to have hoarded 73 1-2 pounds of sugar, unlawfully. The sugar was seized and Kleckner will be permitted to pay a penalty to the Red Cross.

Mrs. Arch Wolfington, who with her husband owns 120 acres of Pike county land, and bought no Liberty bonds or saving stamps were found to have purchased sugar unlawfully and they will be permitted to contribute to the Red Cross as a penalty.

There is still enough sugar in Indiana to meet the canning requirements and housewives are to be encouraged to can all they can without sugar, but to can even if sugar is needed. The sugar distributor estimates that there is a very considerable supply of "invisible sugar"—that which has been secreted irregularly by Indiana housewives.

The food administration's policy to support an increased price for sugar beets applies only to 1919 and 1920 crops. The 1918 crop price was fixed by agreement last spring. An effort is being made to induce an unusually large acreage of beets for next year's sugar requirements.

For Public Eating Houses

New general orders have been issued by the United States Food Administration, governing the operations of all public eating places (hotels, restaurants, dining cars, steamships, clubs, and other places where food is sold to be consumed on the premises), effective October 21st, 1918. Failure to conform to any of these orders will be regarded as a wasteful practice forbidden by Section 4 of the Food Control Act of August 10, 1917.

General Order 1. No public eating-place shall serve or permit to be served any bread or other bakery product which does not contain at least 20 per cent of wheat flour substitutes, nor shall it serve or permit to be served more than 2 ounces of this bread, known as Victory Bread, or if no Victory Bread is served, more than 4 ounces of other breads (such as corn bread, muffins, Boston brown bread, etc). Sandwiches or bread served at boarding camps, and rye bread containing 50 per cent or more of pure rye flour, are excepted.

General Order 2. No public eating-place shall serve or permit to be served bread or toast as a garniture or under meat.

General Order 3. No public eating-place shall allow any bread to be brought to the table until after the first course is served.

General Order 4. No public eating-place shall serve or permit to be served to one patron at any one meal more than one kind of meat. For the purpose of this rule meat shall be considered as including beef, mutton, pork, poultry and any by-products thereof.

General Order 5. No public eating-place shall serve or permit to be served any bacon as a garniture.

General Order 6. No public eating-place shall serve or permit to be served to any person at any one meal more than one-half ounce of butter.

General Order 7. No public eating-place shall serve or permit to be served to any person at any one meal more than one-half ounce of Cheddar, commonly called American cheese.

General Order 8. No public eating-place shall use or permit the use of the sugar bowl on the table or lunch counter. Nor shall any public eating-place serve sugar or permit it to be served unless the guest so requests and in no event shall the amount served to any one person at any one meal exceed one teaspoonful or its equivalent.

General Order 9. No public eating-place shall use or permit the use of an amount of sugar in excess of two pounds for every ninety meals served, including all uses of sugar on the table and in cooking, excepting such sugar as may be allotted by the Federal Food Administrators to hotels holding a bakery license. No sugar allotted for this special baking purpose shall be used for any other purpose.

General Order 10. No public eating-place shall burn any food or permit and food to be burned and all waste shall be saved to feed animals or reduced to obtain fats.

General Order 11. No public eating-place shall display or permit to be displayed food on its premises in any such manner as may cause its deterioration so that it can not be used for human consumption.

General Order 12. No public eating-place shall serve or permit to be served what is known as double cream or cream de luxe; and in any event, no cream containing over 20 per cent of butter fat shall be served.

The Hotel Division of the Federal food administration in Indiana calls attention to requests that accompany the orders. These requests must receive as full observation as are the orders, or it will be necessary to incorporate them in the list of requirements.

Request No. 1. Trim and save all coarse fats from meat before cooking. Munition and soap manufacturers need waste fats. Make soap.

Request No. 2. Eliminate icing made with cane or beet sugar, from all cakes.

Request No. 3. Hotels and restaurants must economize in the use of coffee by every possible care.

Request No. 4. Avoid the service of cheese with cooked dishes, such as macaroni, Welsh rarebits, etc., when American cheese is used in the preparation.

Request No. 5. Suppers, teas, lunches and banquets are looked upon with disfavor by the Food Administration. They are considered unnecessary and unpatriotic.

Request No. 6. Use local and seasonable supplies.

The United States Food Administration appeals three times daily to the individual responsibility of 105,000,000 intelligent people to continue the greatest voluntary effort at food control ever made by a nation.

America must literally feed the world during the war and at the same time prepare to rebuild the world's food supplies when victory brings peace.

Church Suppers.

Church suppers can be very good things from a food conservation standpoint. Perhaps the least waste of food is accomplished by the cafeteria system where each helps himself to the food which he desires. By this time most people are pretty well trained not to take things which they will not eat. These menus come from the United States Food Administration and may be helpful.

Put Leaves on Gardens.

Leaves of all sorts should be saved this fall and not burned as is usually the custom. They make excellent fertilizer for gardens and flower beds and older gardeners use them every fall. The leaves not only enrich the soil but give to it a fine, loose texture which is ideal for plant growth. Garden soils of the rawest and poorest conditions will show much improvement next spring if a quantity of leaves is spaded in this fall.

When the leaves are raked this fall, they should be spread on the ground or put in a pile with manure. This will form a compost of the richest kind after the leaves have rotted. This compost is spread thinly in the rows when planting spring crops. Leaves along the street should be raked up and used by gardeners in the neighborhood.

We must send the Allies and our own forces overseas 50 per cent more food this year than we sent them last year. To do this we must eat no more at home than is necessary for health and strength.

We carried the 1918 objectives—wheat, meat, fat and sugar—and now we are settling down to a steady push all along the line.

Indiana Leads in Wheat Increase.

Indiana has set the pace for other States again in the matter of wheat production for the last year, according to the report of George C. Bryant, federal crop reporter for this State. The yield last year was 33,392,000 bushels, and this year 54,999,000 bushels, representing an increase of 64 per cent. This was due to the 25 per cent increase in acreage and better methods, and favorable season. The increase for the rest of the States is 33 per cent, just half that shown by Indiana.

Indications are that the State will go over the top again this fall with the increased acreage, from 10 to 17 per cent, which the government has asked. The campaign for a greater wheat acreage, waged under the direction of the State Food Committee, has met with response in nearly every county.

War Council Sends Report to Chapters

Annual Message of Work Done During Past Year on Occasion of 3,854 Meetings.

The 3,854 chapters of the Red Cross held their annual meetings October 23 to elect officers and make reports. To be read at all these meetings throughout the United States, the Red Cross War Council has sent the following annual message covering the work of the Red Cross for the past year:

To the Chapters of the American Red Cross:

The War Council sends greetings to the chapters of the American Red Cross on the occasion of their annual meetings of 1918.

With these greetings go congratulations on the great work of the chapters during the past year and, above all things, on the wonderful spirit of sacrifice and patriotism which has pervaded that work.

The strength of the Red Cross rests upon its chapters. They are its bone and sinew. They supply its funds, they supply its men and women, they supply its enthusiasm. Let us, then, review together the Red Cross story of the past year.

Some idea of the size to which your Red Cross family has grown may be gathered from the following facts:

On May 1, 1917, just before the appointment of the War Council, the American Red Cross had 486,194 members working through 562 chapters.

On July 31, 1918, the organization numbered 20,648,103 annual members, besides 8,000,000 members of the Junior Red Cross—a total enrollment of over one-fourth the population of the United States.

These members now carry on their Red Cross work through 3,854 chapters, which divide themselves into some 30,000 branches and auxiliaries.

Since the beginning of the war, you of the chapters have co-operated with the War Council in conducting two war fund drives and one membership drive, in addition to the campaign on behalf of the Junior Red Cross.

The total actual collections to date from the first war fund have amounted to more than $115,000,000. The subscriptions to the second war fund amounted to upwards of $176,000,000.

From membership dues the collections have amounted to approximately $24,500,000.

To the foregoing must be added that very large contribution of materials and time given by the millions of women throughout the country in surgical dressings, in knitted articles, in hospital and refugee garments, in canteen work, and the other activities the chapters have been called upon to perform.

It is estimated that approximately 8,000,000 women are engaged in canteen work and the production of relief supplies through the chapters.

For the period up to July 1, 1918, American Red Cross chapters through their workrooms had produced:

490,120 refugee garments,
7,123,621 hospital supplies,
10,786,489 hospital garments,
10,134,501 knitted articles,
192,748,107 surgical dressings.

A total of 221,282,838 articles—of an estimated value of at least $44,000,000.

These articles were largely the product of women's hands, and, by the same token, infinitely more precious than could have been the output of factories or machines. These articles going to the operating rooms of the hospitals, to homeless or needy refugees, and carrying comfort to our own boys in the field, convey a message of love from the women of this country entirely distinct from the great money value attaching to their handiwork.

By the terms under which the first Red Cross war fund was raised, the chapters were entitled to retain 25 per cent of the amount collected, in order to defray local expenses, to carry on their home service work, to purchase materials to be utilized in chapter production, and otherwise to meet the numerous calls made upon them. The chapters were thus entitled to retain nearly $29,000,000. As a matter of fact, their actual retentions amounted to only about $22,000,000.

Out of collections from annual memberships, the chapters have retained about $11,000,000.

From this total sum, therefore, of $33,000,000 retained by the chapters, they have met all the oftentimes very heavy local demands upon them, and in addition have provided for use by national headquarters products valued, as stated above, at upwards of $44,000,000.

The chapters have in effect returned to the War Council not alone the $33,000,000 retained out of the war fund and membership dues, but, in value of actual produce, an additional contribution of at least $11,000,000.

It will thus be seen that during the eighteen months which have elapsed since the United States entered the war, the American people will have either paid in or pledged to the American Red Cross for its work of relief throughout the world, in money or in material values, a net total of at least $325,000,000.

This outpouring of generosity in material things has been accompanied by a spontaneity in the giving, by an enthusiasm and a devotion in the doing, which, after all, are greater and bigger than could be anything measured in terms of time or dollars.

It has been because of this spirit, which has pervaded all American Red Cross effort in this war, that the aged governor of one of the stricken and battered provinces of France stated, not long since, that, though France had long known of America's greatness, strength and enterprise, it remained for the American Red Cross in this war to reveal America's heart.

In this country, at this moment, the workers of the Red Cross, through its chapters, are helping to add to the comfort and health of the millions of our soldiers in 102 camps and cantonments, as well as of those traveling on railroad trains or embarking on ships for duty overseas.

The Home Service of the Red Cross, with its now more than 40,000 workers, is extending its ministrations of sympathy and counsel each month to upwards of 100,000 families left behind by soldiers at the front—a number ever growing with the increase of our men under arms.

But, of course, the heart of the Red Cross and its money and attention always move toward and focus themselves in Europe, where the American Red Cross, as truly "the greatest mother in the world," is seeking to draw "a vast net of mercy through an ocean of unspeakable pain."

Nothing is withheld that can be given over there to supplement the efforts of our army and

Marked Shortages of Labor and Materials

Necessitate Curtailment of All Expenditures for Improvements, Brady Reports.

Following the adoption of the report of the Committee on Proposed Construction, A. W. Brady related his experiences in conference with the officers of the Priorities Division of the War Industries Board, at Washington, to the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, October 22.

Mr. Brady conveyed the information to the council that the division has evidence to prove the absolute necessity of curtailing where possible every expenditure for improvements. He said figures show a dearth of material and a lack of labor, "which present a situation that will be difficult to meet." The labor shortage is estimated at 130,000 skilled and 60,000 unskilled in plants engaged in war work, and estimates say it is likely to be between 1,000,000 and 1,200,000. Attention was called to the action of the educational officials of the city of New York, where a $5,000,000 school building extension was deferred until the close of the war.

Mr. Brady said the division had approved of the Indiana State Council of Defense's indorsement of the Little Blue River and Scott County ditch drainage projects insofar as they will reclaim land that will be available for increased crop production next year. Beyond this point further authorization will be necessary, he said. Buildings under way may be continued.

"The division is making an effort," Mr. Brady concluded, "to avoid being unreasonable, but it is determined to prevent interference with the war program that isn't vitally necessary."

The council was informed by the chairman that the Christian Union College at Merom, Ind., had continued its building project until the close of the war.

The Council adopted a report from George Ade on the further display of the motion picture "The Birth of a Nation," and also a resolution felicitating the Fourth Liberty Loan organization on its success in Indiana. These appear elsewhere in the Bulletin.

After discussing a resolution which urged employers to extend four hours to employees for voting, on the approaching day, the council declined to adopt the recommendation made, and authorized the chairman to issue a proclamation calling attention to the state law which grants employees such period of time, if necessary, for voting, and urging that every citizen exercise his right to vote, and that employers co-operate with employees in securing to everyone protection in this right.

A number of reports indicating an effort on the part of the Connorsville Furniture Company to force the return to their service of all persons employed there at any time, who are not now engaged in "war work," was presented to the council by Charles Fox of the Labor Committee. On motion of J. L. Keach, Mr. Fox was authorized to take up the matter with the federal labor director for Indiana, L. C. Heusman, and report back to the council. The complaint was made also that unwarranted efforts are being made to induce Rushville workmen to leave their places to take work in the Connorsville plant.

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—A defensive economic boycott was instituted against a well known Adams County farmer who refused to buy Liberty Bonds. He brought a wagon load of fine apples to Decatur, but his reputation had preceded him and he couldn't find a customer. . . . John Rohrer, a grocer of Berne, sold wheat flour without substitutes and as a penalty Food Administrator S. E. Hite ordered him to close his place of business for a month, or, if he preferred, to make a voluntary contribution of $300 to the Red Cross.

Brown County.—Benjamin Douglas, county food administrator, has refused permits for sugar for making apple butter, a Brown County staple. He says a very satisfactory quality of apple butter can be made without sugar, and in view of the shortage patriotic people will modify their formula, if necessary, and make butter of apples without sugar.

Decatur County.—Miss Ida Wilhite, county food administrator, has planned a milk and cottage cheese campaign for the week beginning October 29th, to continue for several weeks. She will be assisted by Miss Miriam Bell, of Purdue University. They will demonstrate the various uses and food values of milk and especially of the importance of cottage cheese in a well balanced diet.

Elkhart County.—A new enterprise in the form of a monthly publication, "News from Home," will in the future be sent to the soldiers and sailors of Elkhart County whose addresses are furnished William H. Charnley of Goshen, secretary of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Welfare League. This league is composed of men of the southern exemption district No. 1, who, realizing how eager the boys in service are to receive news from home, decided to furnish this little paper as a connecting link between the boys and home and among the boys themselves. It is a happy thought, and will serve to keep the boys thoroughly in touch with home events.

Elkhart County.—Because Michigan sugar regulations were not promulgated as soon as those of Indiana, many Michigan citizens are alleged to have tried to secure sugar from across the state line. It is said a sugar famine exists in certain sections of Michigan and the Indiana border county food administrators have warned retailers that they must restrict their service to the established trade under prospective penalty of being deprived of a further sugar supply.

Jackson County.—County School Superintendent Harry B. Henderson and A. D. Cobb, county agricultural agent, have made all arrangements for a census of live stock in the county, when the food administration gives authorization for such proceeding. The printed forms have been distributed among the district schools and every section of the county will be covered by children residing thereon or by neighboring residents. It has been made clear that this census has no relation to the tax assessment reports and that it is essential for the success of the food administration's program to feed our armies and allies in Europe.

Marion County.—To give first aid to soldiers in emergency cases the Indianapolis Red Cross canteen has installed a tent and equipment, with two cots, at the Union Station. Mrs. Harry Griffith is in charge of the work. It is the plan of the Indianapolis Union Railway Company to build a room under the tracks, when the elevated work has progressed far enough, where canteen service will be carried on this winter. The room will house the outdoor booth used by the canteen squads during the summer. Winter uniforms will be provided the seventy-five young women who are doing canteen work. Members of the canteen corps must conform with Red Cross regulations by wearing horizon blue chambray aprons with white pique collars and cuffs.

Morgan County.—Morgan County had more rats and mice than it wanted, so it planned a "rat week." The purpose was to start a concerted attack on the rats and mice in the week previous to the storing of grain. The county agent advertised in the papers and enlisted the members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve. Reports are incomplete, but the county agent believes the number of rats had been greatly reduced and consequently a large quantity of grain has been saved. One boy reported that he killed 97 rats and 393 mice. Another killed 84 rats, a third 37, and a fourth 28.

Noble County.—County Food Administrator Case has ruled that corn flour is not an acceptable wheat flour substitute and that farmers who have been bringing in their corn expecting to have it ground into a substitute will be disappointed. He says corn flour will not keep and that farmers will be tempted to feed it to their hogs. It costs more, he says, to have corn ground into flour than it does to have it made into meal, but that corn shall not be considered a wheat flour substitute in any form.

Randolph County.—Mrs. Kyle S. Gard, of Winchester, Ind., president of United States Food Club No. 573, reports that members of her organization canned 9,396 quarts of vegetables, fruits, pickles, etc., 4,511 glasses of jelly and preserves and 740 pints of catsup—a record of which the organization is proud.

Vermillion County.—Many Hoosiers who have been in the habit of trading in Danville have been warned that they must buy their sugar at home. The State's allotment is made out on a per capita basis and on complaint from Illinois, notice is given that Indiana consumers must buy their sugar of Indiana distributors.

Who Am I?

By Louis Varnum Woulfe.

I am the symbol of independence, righteousness and freedom; a product of the loom, an evolution of the handiwork of a woman, the outgrowth of an American need.

I am on the high seas, on the housetops, in the home, and dear to the heart of every citizen of the United States. But whether on land, fluttering to the breeze, or on sea, the safeguard of humanity, I ever awaken a love of country.

I have stood in times past, and will always stand, for deeds of heroism, for sacrifices of life, for perpetuating all that is highest and noblest in republican government.

I am the cause for preparedness, the source of national pride, and the emblem of a united people forever.

I will never cease to be just what men and women of patriotic thought and action make me—the standard of a mighty country, the banner that has inspired the greatest of songs and the best of prose and poetry.

To some I am Old Glory—the Star Spangled Banner. To others I am the Stars and Stripes—the Red, White and Blue. To everyone I am the guarantee of personal liberty everywhere—

I AM THE AMERICAN FLAG.

Red Cross Activities

The National Nursing Committee has decided to enroll, provisionally for the period of the war, certain nurses who do not entirely fulfill conditions for enrollment with the Red Cross, it is announced by Miss Anna Gladwin, acting director, Lake Division, Department of Nursing.

Those who are to be provisionally enrolled are as follows:

1. Graduates of schools not accredited, but with recommendations from local Red Cross chapter.
2. Graduates of schools accredited, but with small daily average and recommended by the local chapter.
3. Graduates of special hospitals, such as tuberculosis and psychiatric, without general training.
4. Graduates of foreign schools, the standing of which is not known and from which it is difficult to secure information.

The surgeon general of the army has asked the Red Cross for 1,500 nurses' aids between the ages of 35 and 45 for immediate service overseas. These aids must be women who have taken courses in home care of the sick and who have had at least one month's practical hospital experience. They will be paid $30 a month and receive board, room, etc., or be given an allowance to cover such expenses.

"Send your soldier a cheerful letter tonight and keep them going," is the subject of a new window card being issued by the Lake Division of the Red Cross for distribution by chapter Home Service Sections throughout Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

The card carries a reproduction of Charles Dana Gibson's drawing "No Letter." On the card it also says:

"If you can't write cheerful letters, talk things over with the Home Service Section of the American Red Cross; they will give you information and help."

A Friendly Enemy—Sauerkraut

Lena, who had cooked for two generations of Johnsons, could certainly make sauerkraut. Crisp, white and to just the right degree briny, it would have tickled the palates of her ancestors in Saxony. It could not have been improved upon by her old grandmother, who had brought her to America fifty years before. Also it was one of the prides of the Johnsons' menus—until some over-zealous patriot sniffed at the once popular dish and refused it. Besides, she told a neighbor, there must be something very queer about a family named Johnson that doted on such a German dish!

Then the young Johnsons rose up. "No more sauerkraut," said they. "Lena is using German propaganda on us."

So sauerkraut was interned as a dangerous alien enemy for a week.

Then Mrs. Johnson began to think it over. She looked up the origin of the dish. She read the suggestions of the Food Administration on the subject and the next evening announced her stand to the family.

"In the first place," she said, "I have found that, historically, sauerkraut is of Dutch origin rather than German. Also, I am firmly convinced that it is patriotic to eat it, and foolish not to. Cabbage is now fresh from the garden we have been cultivating all summer. It is exactly the kind of food that the Food Administration asks us to eat, because it is home-grown, perishable, and not one of the staples that we have to send abroad."

So the next day Lena began to make sauerkraut again. She first cut the heads of cabbage into long, fine shreds and put them into a big jar in layers, with salt sprinkled thickly between. She mashed each layer down with a hardwood weight.

After twenty days she took the jar out of the cellar, where she had put it because she wanted the temperature of about sixty degrees for it, and she saw that the process of curing was complete, because bubbles had ceased to rise at the edges of the jar.

That night the youngest Johnson helped himself to a generous portion of sauerkraut to eat with his cold meat, and said:

"Well, I guess old Lena and her sauerkraut are all right, after all. And besides, wasn't it silly to call cabbage German when it grows right in our own yard?"

The Fourth Loan a Success

On motion of William M. Sparks, the Indiana State Council of Defense at its meeting October 22 adopted the following resolution:

Hoosier patriotism has gone through the crucible of another Liberty Loan campaign and has been found free from adulteration. Notwithstanding the unprecedented sum asked of our people by the United States Treasury as our proportion of the fourth bond distribution and the intervening difficulties, the state has rolled up a generous oversubscription, answering more eloquently than any recorded words, overtures for an inconclusive peace. In recognition of this splendid demonstration of love of country, of determined championship of our national ideals and recognition of our international duties, the Indiana State Council of Defense desires herewith to record its genuine appreciation of the noble spirit which made the performance an actuality.

WHEREAS, Such action attests the sincerity of purpose and the unflinching determination of the people of Indiana to support the cause of right as against might to the last measure of our reserves, as well as with the blood of our brave sons engaged in battle on land and sea; be it

Resolved, That the Indiana State Council of Defense does herewith express its most sincere thanks to those who have been more directly responsible for such splendid showing, and to the earnest men and women who have placed their means unreservedly at the disposal of the federal government; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be made a part of the permanent records of the council, and a copy forwarded to the State Liberty Loan Committees and to the press of the state.

The man who would like to burn coal because it is easier and handier, but who thinks enough of his country and the boys over there to shoulder his ax, brave the winter wind, and go out to cut wood in order to save coal, is helping to win the war.

Greater Importance of Conserving Food

Each Advance of Armies Adds to National Obligation Without Increasing Supplies.

Because of the epidemic of influenza throughout the country, the United States Food Administration has postponed the opening of its new conservation campaign until December 1. The original plans contemplated the opening of this campaign October 27. The change was made imperative by health conditions and advised by the food administrators of the different states throughout the country. Because of the forbidding of gatherings of people on account of the epidemic, the aid of the churches, the schools, the four-minute speakers, libraries, lodges and gatherings of patriotic workers could not be secured for the strenuous campaign, in the planning of which they were an essential part. It is hoped that by December 1 necessity for quarantine conditions will have disappeared.

In this campaign the home card is to be placed in the twenty million kitchens throughout America to emphasize the need for continued and increased food conservation for the benefit of the stricken peoples of Europe, and as an inspiration to continuing the sacrifice which has enabled the allied nations to maintain the war and allowed the transportation of our own troops to France and their maintenance there.

The home card will be a direct personal message to each home, from the government at Washington, pointing out the part for every individual to render practical assistance three times a day in the winning of the war.

The Food Administration wishes again to emphasize the absolute necessity for increased conservation and the total elimination of waste in foods. This is a national war obligation that continually grows greater. With a crop production for 1918 having a nourishment value about the same as that of last year, our food obligations to the allied nations have increased 50 per cent as a minimum, and the willing assumption of this extra burden by our people makes it possible to provide ships for the continuous transportation and sustenance of our fighting men in Europe. Recent events abroad are justification of the program and should be effective inspiration to our patriotic people.

It should not be forgotten that with each advance of our armed forces abroad immediate necessity arises to make food provision for the people of the recovered territories. The coming of peace—if it should come soon—will not add one pound of food to the present supply, nor release us from our moral obligations to assist the allied nations. On the contrary, it would add materially to America's opportunity to assist humanity, as it would afford opportunity to get food to the hungry millions of Poland, Serbia, Roumania, Armenia and other peoples who cannot now be reached.

"The Birth of a Nation"

At its meeting October 22 the Indiana State Council of Defense adopted the following report submitted by George Ade, chairman of the Publicity Committee:

To the Indiana State Council of Defense:

There has been referred to me a letter from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, requesting that this council give support to a proposed exclusion from the state, during the period of the war, of such motion picture plays as "The Birth of a Nation." The colored people, or rather their white advisers, contend that the picture play mentioned tends to engender and prolong racial hatreds. They believe it to be a disturbing and dividing influence at a time when there should be no bitterness between races, and they feel that the negroes, who have shown a full willingness to do their part in winning the war, should not be singled out for attack in any public exhibition of motion pictures.

I suggest to the State Council that it will be difficult and risky for us to define any kind of picture play which should be excluded from Indiana during the war. Of course, we are not in favor of arousing or accentuating race hatreds among our own people, but to lay down any rules of censorship which would apply in all cases seems to be a problem which we had better not try to solve.

The principal grievance of the colored people concerns "The Birth of a Nation," an enormously successful picture play, produced on a gigantic scale and dealing largely with the reconstruction period just following the Civil War. It is supposed to be an adaptation of Thomas Dixon's book "The Clansman," but does not follow it closely. It is extremely bitter in its treatment of several Northern statesmen, notably Thaddeus Stevens. The carpet-baggers are execrated and the Ku-Klux are depicted as chivalrous gentlemen. Mr. David Griffith, who produced the play, is an extremely able director of large, spectacular effects, and the pictures are among the best that have been made. In this play and also in another feature play called "Intolerance," he permitted his emotions and his prejudices and his overheated passion for extreme theatrical effects to supplant all sense of proportion and fairness. He is a Southerner and became so wrought up in his desire to justify his own section and right all wrongs done it that he overlooked the minor point of historical accuracy. This play, "The Birth of a Nation," is certainly a cruel attack on the negroes who wished to exercise the right of suffrage. It is equally harsh in its treatment of the Republican party as organized in the North during the reconstruction period. It might be advisable to make the Republicans a party to the protest. According to this play, all the perfect specimens of God's handiwork bear the Dixie trademark.

"The Birth of a Nation" is so partisan and sectional and hysterical that it never has been taken seriously by most persons, except as an example of good photography. It was produced fully six years ago and has been shown in large and small towns and probably has about run its course. The necessity of excluding it now is not apparent. I suggest that it would be proper for our chairman to assure the Association for the Advancement of Colored People that we are not in favor of picture plays which divide our people into racial groups during the war. If it can be shown that "The Birth of a Nation" is now being extensively exhibited or booked in Indiana, I think it would be proper for this council to confer with the Governor regarding the advisability of discouraging the exhibitions during the war. At the same time I do not think we should become excited and concern ourselves with an issue which is already in the past tense.

Bread As a Convenience

Wheat is not so plentiful that bread can be used as a mere convenience or ornament to a dish. If there is the faintest belief that it is not necessary in the diet at any time, do not eat it. At meals where other starchy foods are served, bread is usually on the table just because it is traditional to put it there.

Whether we have victorious peace or war during the next year, a great reserve must be created. Do not let the ample wheat harvest of 1918 convince you that you can settle back and eat all the bread you want. A great many people have the habit of thoughtlessly eating up the bread that is on the table before the meal is served. Eating bread to them is just something to do till the meal comes. Remember that every piece of bread served is a part of a self-imposed bread ration. Eating "just for something to do" is wasting valuable food.

To eat corn bread and muffins is still a patriotic duty in America, although to many it has become a privilege. It is a part of our war program to use even a bit more corn meal and corn flour than we usually do, in addition to Victory Mixed Flours.

We sit with our associates in the war "at a common table". A careless use of the food meant for all is an aid to the enemy, an unforgivable failure to back up those who are fighting our battles.

Modified Diet Aid To Physical Health

Food Administration's Assertion an Answer to Assertion as to Spread of Influenza.

The United States Food Administration authorizes the following, which constitutes a refutation of the assertion that a modified diet in a way has been responsible for a reduced physical resistance, thus making for a greater spread of the influenza epidemic among the American people:

"We are all cutting down our meals and eating smaller portions of the foods that must be saved. We are not doing this for better health, but in this case good health is one of the by-products of patriotism. It is true already that a better national health is coming as a result of our voluntary restrictions in diet in order to 'eat at a common table' with the allies.

It goes around in a circle—patriotism, less food, better health, more patriotism.

This cutting down of food is not going to make us thin and weak. Perhaps the majority of Americans have always eaten too much. Doing without rich desserts to save sugar will cure many cases of indigestion, as will also the giving up of frequent afternoon teas.

Cutting down on meat has had a beneficial effect on many people. It has meant fewer dull headaches and fewer diseases caused by a system overloaded with protein foods.

Get that patriotic feeling that for your country you must cut down your diet. Then naturally will come a new feeling of alertness and physical well-being, and you will find that you have enough new energy to be a better patriot and work harder in whatever you are doing to help bring about an early victory.

Peace: A Child's Parable.

Once upon a time a burglar entered a house. He stole some money. The woman of the house heard a noise and got up to see what had caused it. The burglar shot her and escaped. The shot awakened the husband, and he pursued the burglar down the street. During his fight, the burglar emptied every chamber of his revolver shooting at the man, but missed him. Finally, the burglar was overtaken; and the men fought. They fought a long time, blow for blow. The burglar was getting the worst of it. He said to the man, "Look here, be sensible. What's the use of this fighting going on any longer? Let us have peace. You go your way and I'll go mine."

The man replied, "You stole into my house. You shot my wife. You've got my money in your pocket."

The burglar said, "Your wife should have kept out of my way. I won't give back the money. It's mine. It's in my possession. You can't take it from me. Therefore, what's the use of us beating each other up? Be sensible. Let us have peace between us."

The man swung a terrific blow over the burglar's heart, and the burglar fell dead.

Moral: If Germany can quit now and keep a tenth of what she has stolen, she has won the war. In dealing with moral idiots, the fist is mightier than philosophy.

MAX EHRMANN.

More Conservation.

Survey of the food resources of 220,000,000 people fighting against Germany shows that to maintain enough supplies and necessary reserves to guard against disaster there must be conservation of wheat flour in all countries throughout the coming year. Patriotic Americans should use Victory mixed flour in baking; eat other cereals also, and save food in all ways.

It is impossible to over-produce any line of essential food.—U. S. Food Administration.

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of patriotic information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the Federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation and its prosecution of the war with Germany, particularly as pertains to the production and conservation of food.

Speakers' Bureau

During the months of August and September, the Speakers' Bureau aided by the Speaking Division of the Committee of Public Information at Washington, supplied out-of-state speakers to fifty-three Indiana Teachers' Institute meetings. Representatives of the Belgian, French, British, Canadian and Italian armies were sent to Indiana by the Committee on Public Information which furnished ten of the eighteen out-of-state speakers used during these two months. Among the interesting men brought to the state during this time were:

Private John Scott, a Canadian soldier who spent two years in captivity in Germany, and Lieut. George M. Sauvage.

Major Jules Bellot and Lieut. Robert Renard, French officers who had taken active part in the terrible first months of the war, and witnessed the arrival of American forces.

Chief Justice S. Harrison White, of Colorado, and President Elwood C. Perisho of North Dakota State Agricultural University.

Lieutenant Bruno Roselli, Italian officer and attache of the Italian Embassy, who besides addressing teachers' institute meetings and other patriotic gatherings, was one of the speakers at the Indiana State Fair.

Captain Walter Kilroy Harris, an Australian author and lecturer, officer in the British Army, Major L. Gordon Sanford, and Captain E. Lucas Guest, British officers.

Hon. John J. Lentz of Ohio, formerly a member of Congress, whose trip to the battle front during the spring and early summer made his addresses interesting.

Private George Montegut, French poilu, who came to Indianapolis for residence after his wounds had caused his discharge from the French Army.

The only meetings now being held, since all public gatherings have been forbidden on account of the influenza epidemic, are in the factories, where the workmen gather at the lunch hour, or when the shifts are changing for brief talks by soldiers and other speakers. The Muncie factory meetings are being held regularly four days each week, in this way.

The Speakers' Bureau was in close co-operation with the Liberty Loan Speakers' Bureau, and supplied speakers for meetings during the first week in October when the epidemic made cancellations necessary. It expects to co-operate with the United War Workers in their coming campaign after the ban is lifted.

France Looks to U. S.

Proof that the allied peoples look upon the United States as their saviour from starvation is shown by the fact that even upon the bread cards of France there is a message from the United States Food Administrator. The Ministre De L'Agriculture Et Du Ravitaillement—corresponding to our Food Administrator—recently asked the United States Food Administrator for a message which could be distributed to the people of France, and this now appears on their bread card issued by the European republic.

Mr. Hoover's message reads: "Every coupon in France is mute proof of the resolution of the French people to deprive themselves of everything to one issue—the winning of this war. To win now rests on the number of tons of men and munitions that America can ship in, and on the magnificent French army. And with this daily economy in food there will be enough ships—and there will be enough food to maintain health and strength.—HERBERT HOOVER."

Food Production to Go on Indefinitely

No Difference if Peace Is Declared Tomorrow, Prof. Christie Informs State Workers.

"No difference if peace is declared tomorrow, the food production program for Indiana and for the entire United States must be carried out for at least two years," said Prof. G. I. Christie, assistant secretary of agriculture, speaking to the agricultural extension forces of Purdue University.

"For at least two years after the peace pact is signed, production of food in this country must be maintained at the height which it has attained. It will take that long for the stricken European countries to produce any appreciable amount of food in excess of the meager supply they are now producing," he said.

In speaking of demobilization which must follow the signing of a peace treaty, Prof. Christie urged that organization be perfected in every township and in every community in Indiana to get the soldiers to come back to their homes. He told of certain plans to get the men to settle cut-over timber sections, irrigated land, or other undeveloped country. "To let these men go there would be a distinct loss to Indiana and to other states from which they have come," said the speaker. "Their sisters, mothers, grandparents and others are working hard with the fathers now to take the place of these boys on the farms. If they are lost to the farms upon their return to America, they are lost to their families, their communities, towns and counties as well.

"Canada is preparing now for the return of her soldiers, and the country is being organized down to the smallest community to interest these men, who have had wonderful experiences and wide diversions overseas, in their own home country and town. We must do the same thing right here in Indiana."

A definite agricultural program for Indiana during the coming year was to have been shaped at the extension workers' conference, but because of the influenza situation the conference was called off. A definite program, however, will be formulated within the next week, following advice from the United States Department of Agriculture and conferences with representative farmers and stockmen from over the state.

U. S. Employment Service

Men and women of the state who have had experience in making caskets or burial goods, not now engaged in such work, are asked to communicate at once with Federal Labor Director L. C. Huesman, State House, Indianapolis. They are needed to relieve the very acute situation that has resulted from the influenza epidemic. Cloth casket cabinet makers, hardwood close fitters, bench woodworkers, cutoff sawyers, rip sawyers, jointer men, gluers, shapers, finishers, cloth coverers and trimmers are needed for a most imperative public duty and should lose no time in making their whereabouts known. It is the duty of every patriotic worker to report immediately the facts to any such persons and appeal to them to get in touch with the state labor director at once.

U. S. Boys' Working Reserve

National headquarters of the United States Boys' Working Reserve has announced that 7,000,000 pounds of sugar was saved for the country this season by members of the reserve.

Michigan farmers were on the point of plowing under their sugar beet crops on account of lack of labor when United States Boys' Working Reserve boys volunteered to go into the fields and save the harvest.

Clean up the home pantry before calling on the national pantry.

Helps in the Conservation of Foods

This column is planned with the idea of giving help to housekeepers who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration, and is being conducted by the Home Economics Committee of the State Council of Defense.

CREAM SOUPS.

As the cool days arrive the housekeeper's mind turns to cream soup as a useful dish with which to vary the luncheon or supper menu. Cream soups made of whole milk or skim milk are rich in food value and may constitute the main part of the menu. A cream soup served with a salad composed principally of green vegetables, with possibly a dessert added, constitutes a meal that should be satisfying.

Cream soups are composed usually of a white sauce flavored and perhaps thickened with vegetables. The white sauce may be made entirely of milk or part meat stock or water in which vegetables are cooked, thickened with corn starch or flour. Leftover vegetables may often be utilized—two or three kinds may be used in one soup provided they are well blended. Meat trimmings, bones and leftover bits of meat should find their way into the "soup kettle" as the stock thus produced may be used in many types of soup.

Soups should always be served in warmed dishes and it should not be allowed to stand after the soup is ready for the table.

Many of the following receipts were taken from the "Cook Book for Kitchen Patriots" prepared by the St. Joseph County Council of Defense.

Cream of Corn.

Heat 1 pint of corn with enough water to cover. Press through a puree strainer or vegetable press. Add enough milk to make 1 quart. Thicken with 1 tablespoon of flour. Season to taste. Serve very hot. A tablespoonful of whipped cream may be put in the bottom of the soup dish and the soup poured over it, which makes it extremely good.

Potato Soup.

- 3 potatoes.
- 1 quart milk.
- 2 slices onion.
- 3 tablespoons butter or substitute.
- 1 1-2 teaspoon salt.
- 2 tablespoons flour.
- 1-4 teaspoon celery salt.
- 1-8 teaspoon pepper. Few grains cayenne.
- 1 teaspoon chopped parsley.

Cook potatoes in boiling salted water; when soft, rub through a strainer. Scald milk with onion, remove onion, and add milk slowly to potatoes. Melt half the butter, add dry ingredients, stir until well mixed, then stir into boiling soup; cook one minute, strain, add remaining butter, and sprinkle with parsley.

Tomato Soup.

- 1-2 can tomatoes.
- 1 slice onion.
- 2 teaspoons sugar.
- 1-4 teaspoon soda.
- 1 quart milk.
- 4 tablespoons flour.
- 1 teaspoon salt.
- 1-8 teaspoon pepper.
- 4 tablespoons butter substitute.

Scald milk with onion, remove onion, and thicken milk with flour and butter cooked together as for white sauce. Cook tomatoes with sugar fifteen minutes, add soda and rub through a sieve; combine mixture and strain.

Celery Soup.

- 3 cups celery (in 1-2 inch pieces).
- 1 pint boiling water.
- 2 1-2 cups milk.
- 1 slice onion.
- 3 tablespoons butter or substitute.
- 1-4 cup flour.
- Salt and pepper.

Wash and scrape celery before cutting in pieces, cook in boiling water until soft, rub through a sieve. Scald milk with the onion, remove onion, and add milk to celery. Bind with butter and flour cooked together. Season with salt and pepper. Outer and old stalks of celery may be utilized for soups.

Pea Soup.

- 1 can peas.
- 2 teaspoons sugar.
- 1 pint cold water.
- 1 pint milk.
- 1 slice onion.
- 2 tablespoons butter or substitute.
- 2 tablespoons flour.
- 1 teaspoon salt.
- 1-8 teaspoon pepper.

Drain peas from their liquor, add sugar and cold water, and simmer twenty minutes. Rub through a sieve, reheat and thicken with butter and flour cooked together. Scald milk with onion, remove onion, add milk to pea mixture, season with salt and pepper.

Baked Bean Soup.

- 3 cups cold baked beans.
- 2 stalks celery.
- 2 slices onion.
- 3 pints water.
- 1 tablespoon chili sauce.
- 1 1-2 cup stewed and strained tomatoes.
- 2 tablespoons butter or substitute.
- 2 tablespoons flour. Salt and pepper.

Put the first four ingredients in sauce pan; simmer thirty minutes. Rub through a sieve, add tomato and chili sauce, season to taste with salt and pepper, and bind with the butter and flour cooked together.

Oatmeal and Tomato Soup.

- 1 1-2 cup tomatoes.
- 1 1-2 teaspoon sugar.
- 2 teaspoons salt.
- 5 cups water.
- 1 teaspoon chopped onion.
- 3-4 cup rolled oats.
- 1 bay leaf.

Boil all together for forty-five minutes and serve. Soup may be strained if desired but much food value is lost if this is done.

Registered Men's Association Assists Seed Corn Survey

Every farmer of Whitley County has been interviewed on the question of seed corn and the proposed corn acreage for 1919, by the Registered Men's Association. The farmers have pledged to plant 32,963½ acres of corn. To date 4,311 bushels of seed have been gathered, with definite pledges for the gathering of 7,128 bushels, which will mean a total of 11,139 bushels of fall-gathered seed for use in Whitley County next spring. This amount is sufficient to plant the spring acreage of Whitley County two and one-half times.

Food Hoarder Fined.

Fritz Wahl of Portland, Ore., has been fined $50 by the United States District Court for violating the food control act. Wahl was indicted for hoarding and upon investigation by the Food Administration was found to have stored in his home 160 pounds of sugar, five unopened sacks of flour, and other food commodities in excessive quantities.

Huns Show No Signs of Starving

Herewith are reproduced photographs of Hun soldiers taken in the recent allied offensive on the French front. The photos are from a Hoosier engaged in war work abroad and are authentic. They give an emphatic denial to any assertion that the Huns are wasting from lack of nourishing food.

The prisoner holds a banner inscribed "Viva la France, l'Alsace et Lorraine." One can easily imagine his relief at being out of action.

The war is over for them, and they do not appear distressed because of the fact.

Resolved to Save More Than Asked

American People Are in the Food Saving Game to Win Judging from Actions.

That the American people are in the Food Saving game to win is evidenced by the numerous resolutions which come to the United States Food Administration from all manner of organizations in every corner of the country. Co-operation to the last degree, even to the point of doing more than is asked of them, is the tone of those resolutions received during the last month.

Horse meat as a substitute for beef was urged by a Veterinary Medical association. Beef shortage apparently held no dread for these men who were in a position to know the utility of horse flesh.

To prohibit the manufacture of candy containing sugar was the plea of a labor council in the far west. The resolve to strenuously save sugar has been made by many Americans individually, but this organization desired to advocate publicly a big step in the right direction.

Perhaps the group who sent in one resolution did not know what smokes mean to the soldier boys, for the theme of the letter was to use money spent for soldiers' tobacco for "more important" purposes. Perhaps food was what the signers of the resolution had in mind.

From poultry federations, women's clubs, livestock exchanges, religious associations, city merchants, and many more, come resolutions of hearty co-operation in every step the United States Food Administration takes.

"We're doing our best. Publish the guilt of our co-workers who are slackers," is the tone of one resolution asking for the publication of the names of those millers who commit food offenses in the operation of their business.

Complete government control of certain kinds of staple foods is even suggested by associations which perhaps would be adversely affected by the very change which they urged. Food for our fighters first, and money for our pockets last—that is the content of many individual resolutions in the American mind.

Questions of prohibition, transportation, enforcement of food regulations and many other subjects which show that the American people are thinking deeply on the problem of food supply are included in resolutions from all sorts of organizations, many of them small and remote, but willing and sincere withal.

"We are behind the government in saving every possible bit of food. Resolved: that we do more than we are asked to do." This is the tone of willingness publicly expressed all over the United States.

Woman's Section

Many county chairmen of the Department of Child Welfare are striving to bring to completion the examination of every child under six years of age in each community, while the follow-up work of the weighing and measuring tests continue with the most practical results.

Jackson County reports a total of 1,200 children weighed and measured. Huntington County reports 2,260 examinations to date. The welfare workers of the same county have placed a child in the School for the Blind. In Jefferson County the committee made twelve visits during the last month and succeeded in locating one child in an industrial school, another in a correctional school, and a third child in an institution for the care of the feeble-minded.

"In the United States 5,000,000 people are unable to read, write or speak the English language," was a statement made at the Woman's War Work Conference recently held in Philadelphia. The Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense sees a big work for its Americanization Department, especially among women in industry. The Advisory Council of the United States Bureau of Education proposed to the conference a plan under consideration which provides for a special teacher to go daily into the homes of foreign-born inhabitants for half-hour lessons in English. These lessons would begin with the individual foreign-born woman and perhaps develop into group meetings of from twenty to thirty women.

"Wash the babies' faces" and "Put the dinner on the table" are illustrative expressions to be used as a basis for the vocabulary.

Such a plan has been successfully pursued in San Francisco for several years.

War Books Recently Received by the State Library

(Any of the books mentioned below may be borrowed for a short time from the Indiana State Library by any citizen of the State. Persons living in towns where there is a public library should apply through the librarian. Those living on rural routes or in towns having no public library may obtain blanks for registration from the State Library on request. The only expense is that of transportation.)

Dagget, M. P. Women Wanted.

What women have accomplished in various fields of work during the war. Examples are drawn from several countries.

Dawson, W. J. The Father of a Soldier.

A very beautifully written book by the father of Conynsby Dawson. The book was written at the son's request for other fathers who have sons in the war.

O'Brien, Pat. Outwitting the Hun.

The adventures of an American aviator in his escape from German hands. The account reads like fiction.

Peat, H. R. Private Peat.

Private Peat enlisted with the Canadians in 1914. He tells many interesting things, among them the first gas attack made at Ypres.

Ward, Mrs. H. Towards the Goal.

Letters addressed to Colonel Roosevelt by the famous English novelist, telling something of England's great effort and of conditions in France.

Laying in Supplies for Winter

Squirrels, ants and men stock up their houses with winter food. No regulations can interfere with the few nuts and crumbs which the squirrels and ants put in their store-houses, but man must be very discriminating about the food he puts away. To lay in supplies of certain foods makes him a patriot; to stock up in others makes him a criminal and liable to arrest.

A basement filled with canned and dried fruits and vegetables, bins of root vegetables, and kegs of preserved fish and sauerkraut is the only kind of store house that should be found beneath an American home. Barrels of flour, sacks of sugar, and more fat than is needed turns an American into a German.

The person who hoards food for fear there will be a shortage and he will not get his share has come to be as despicable as a traitor in the eyes of patriots, and so it behooves everyone to see that the instinct for laying in winter supplies does not bridge the gap which separates savers from hoarders—patriots from criminals.

This is a year of general thrift and economy. All the food that is not eaten in the homes will go to our ever increasing army or to the allies. Just enough of the staple foods on hand to run a family for a short time is the best means of securing drastic saving on all sides. Plenty in sight tends to promote waste. It may seem thrifty to the householder to buy food ahead. But there is a great difference between food economy and pocketbook economy, and of the two, food economy is the most important in time of war.

Army Cooks Are Trained To Prevent Food Waste

Food wastage is usually the fault of the cook. If the meals are badly cooked, they cannot be eaten, even by those who are followers of the slogan "Clean your plate."

This fact has been recognized by the government, and that is why the army training camp for overseas cooks was established at Fort Worth, Texas. Nine hundred skilled cooks have been graduated in classes of 300 each.

One of the principal things they are taught is conservation. Army cooks are taught to throw all scraps of meat and bone into a twenty-gallon pot, where the mixture is boiled and the fat rendered. The stock is then used for gravies and soups.

They save flour, too. A record of food conservation was kept at Camp Bowie, which is the name of the cooking camp at Fort Worth. Of the 72,179 pounds allowed the camp in fourteen days, only 36,165 pounds were used, and yet every man had all the bread he desired.

The army cooks are given lectures and instructions in rations, bills of fare, preparation, sanitation, temperatures, mess management, stock sheets, field cooking, etc. They learn food values as applied to army conditions.

Women in their homes ought to take an added interest in their own duties—which are just like those of the army cook, only on a smaller scale—when they contemplate this wholesale housekeeping that is being done so scientifically for their sons. The part of feeding the home army is just as important.

Just Thoughtlessness—That's All

He wore a service pin upon his coat. Every day at the office he told them proudly how glad he was that his son could be in the fight even if he himself was too old to go. Then one day he mentioned carelessly that the sugar shortage was surely bringing the war home to us. "The restaurants, you know, have been cut down so that they only serve you a teaspoonful for your coffee and about the same amount for your oatmeal. I like mine sweeter, so I've taken to buying it myself. Then I carry it with me in an envelope."

There was silence in the office for a minute. Then one of the older men spoke up:

"My son's wife and the two children have come to live with us since John went to war. Their mother's preached to them, I guess. This morning little John took just a half-teaspoonful of sugar on his cereal. I asked him why he did that, for he loves sweets. What do you suppose he said? 'Why, grandpa, we must feed the world.'"

Again there was a silence in the office. But the first man was a good American.

"I guess you meant that for me, Stanley. I'm not angry, but I think you know that I have been behind every move our government has made."

"I know you have. That's just why I couldn't understand you on this thing. It isn't as if there weren't a reason for it. It isn't as if the whole thing wasn't tied up with getting men overseas and sending them food after they get there. It takes ships to get sugar into the country. It's just as if you were holding back your boy because you wanted the ship which might take him over to go down to Cuba first and get you some sugar."

"I see."

"I know your heart's in the right place, I know you're proud that your son has gone and that you're able yourself to get in a few good licks at home. But we've all of us got to learn to think in international terms—or else the autocratic empire over there will teach us how to think nothing but German. I know you're not consciously with the enemy. You're just thoughtless—that's all. But have any of us any right to be thoughtless any more?"

"I guess you're right, all right. It has been thoughtlessness. But—well, you're right, no one has a right to be thoughtless now. I don't like my coffee with only one teaspoonful of sugar or my oatmeal either—but I guess I can learn if the rest of you and even the children can."

County Agent An Important Factor

Records Show They Made Large Contributions to State's Record in Food Production.

"The agricultural county agents have been an important factor in helping to meet the government's demands for an increased food production," said Prof. G. I. Christie, director of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation. "Their normal plan of work," he said, "has been readjusted and speeded up in order that the greatest results might be obtained in the shortest possible time. In their effort to organize and federate the productive forces within their counties, they have perfected 273 organizations, fifty of which were Better Farming Associations and twenty-five registered men's organizations. Through the various organizations, every farmer in Indiana can be reached on short notice.

"The hearty co-operation of the State Council of Defense, Commercial Clubs, Chambers of Commerce, Rotary Clubs, banks and similar organizations with the State Food Committee and the agricultural extension agencies of Purdue University, has aided much in promoting the war program for a greater food production. Especially trained men from the United States Department of Agriculture and the different departments of Purdue, who are specialists in their respective lines, have assisted county agents materially in carrying their projects forward."

The summary of the county agent work, which follows, shows in a very tangible way the real value of the county agent to Indiana agriculture. This summary is taken in part from the annual report for the year ending June 30, 1918, prepared under the direction of T. A. Coleman, state leader of county agents.

Crop Improvement.

Co-operating in the state-wide seed corn campaign, county agents established and superintended 1,568 community testing stations, which tested 101,226 bushels of seed. County Agent Marshall of Gibson County maintained a community tester with a capacity of 500 bushels. A total of 604,973 bushels were tested under the general direction of the county agents throughout the state.

The Indiana agents assisted in obtaining the 25 per cent increase in the wheat acreage asked by the federal government. Over 7,356 farmers followed their suggestions in the growing of 159,137 acres. This work included the selection and treatment of the seed wheat, fertilization and preparation of the seed bed, and insect control. During May and June of 1918 every county was organized for the saving of grain and to prepare for an increased production of 1919. More than 400 fields of wheat were approved for seed under the supervision of county agents, which will help to furnish pure seed for the 1919 crop.

Following the drive to eradicate oats smut, in which the county agents took a leading part, 32,789 farmers treated seed oats for 495,411 acres. The acreage sown with treated seed was approximately one-third the total acreage sown to oats in 1918. This work meant a saving of approximately $1,000,000 to the Indiana farmers, or ten times the cost of maintaining county agent work in the state for one year.

Valuable service was rendered in the control of insects damaging crops. The south and central section of the state was badly infested with grasshoppers, which were doing millions of dollars' worth of damage to clover and corn. Demonstrations were held showing how to apply poison bran bait and showing the proper use of the hopper dozer.

Other work accomplished under the direction of county agents during the year includes the planning of 324 crop rotations and the planning and adopting of 118 drainage systems embracing 3,786 acres. Acid and rock phosphate were used extensively in reinforcing manures. The agents report this practice on 5,631 farms.

Soils were tested for acidity on 2,505 farms, leading to the purchase of 45,265 tons of ground limestone.

Livestock Improvement.

The State Food Committee fostered a campaign for a 20 per cent increase in pork production upon the request of the government. Demonstrations were planned by the Animal Husbandry Department of Purdue and carried out by the county agents to show the proper utilization of feeds at hand and to increase the interest in better livestock.

In Shelby County, County Agent R. G. East directed an importation into the county of 2,247 hogs, and 33,000 bushels of soft corn was fed to these hogs. The farmers made a good profit on this corn, which otherwise would have been a great loss.

County Agent T. S. McCulloch conducted a feeder hog exchange through which 2,751 hogs were exchanged within the county and 2,000 head shipped in from other counties.

Thirty-eight livestock breeders' associations were organized during the year with a membership of 1,263. Some of these associations include all lines of pure-bred stock, while others are restricted to one breed.

A pure-bred livestock breeders' association was formed in Jasper County as part of their Better Farming Association under the leadership of County Agent Leaming, 1917. This association brought 45 head of pure-bred Shorthorn calves into the county, to be distributed to boys and girls. On the day these calves were distributed a pure-bred show was held and a Shorthorn Breeders' Association was perfected. The Junior Shorthorn Breeders' Association was organized among the boys in the Calf Club, and within a short time the Hereford breeders of the county organized. These associations have a membership of seventy-three. Twelve pure-bred sires and seven pure-bred cows have been purchased within the year, in addition to the forty-five pure-bred Shorthorn heifers.

County agents have been instrumental in bringing into their respective counties ten registered stallions, 174 registered bulls, 463 registered cows, fifty-four registered rams and 370 registered boars. County agents assisted in starting eight cow testing associations, which tested 2,687 cows; of the number tested 247 were discarded because they were "boarders." In addition 1,985 cows were tested by individuals, and approximately 2,000 balanced rations were figured and adopted to local conditions.

A silo drive was launched by the State Food Committee in 1917 and continued throughout the year, and as a result 3,071 silos were erected previous to June 30, 1918. County agents assisted effectively in this work.

During the year, 196 hog cholera control clubs were organized. Through community co-operation and by aiding these organizations the agents have done much to control hog cholera. Mr. Coleman's report shows that 39,860 hogs were vaccinated upon the suggestion of county agents.

Farm Management.

Farm analysis records help the individual farmer and county agent to size up the farm business as a whole, and enables the farmer to eliminate the leaks. The farm business was analyzed on 550 farms, and the management of 165 farms has been altered as a result, in addition to 3,254 farmers keeping partial or complete farm accounts.

The labor shortage on farms during the past year has been a serious problem. The problem has been handled through community co-operation, the organization of the city forces and through the labor exchange handled in the county agent's office. In this way 3,195 farms were supplied with a total of 5,868 laborers. In addition to this work, "shock troops" were organized during the harvest season, consisting of town men who have done farm work, to assist in the fields either all day or in the evenings from five o'clock until dark.

Because of the diminishing of the herds, Europe will face serious food shortages for years after peace is achieved.—U. S. Food Administration.

War Council Sends Report to Chapters

navy in caring for our own boys. The Red Cross does not pretend to do the work of the Medical Corps of the army or the navy; its purpose is to help and to supplement.

Nor does the Red Cross seek to glorify what it does or those who do it; our satisfaction is in the result, which, we are assured by Secretary Baker, General Pershing, General Ireland and all our leaders, is of inestimable value and of indispensable importance.

By the first of January your Red Cross will have working in France upwards of 5,000 Americans—a vivid contrast to the little group of eighteen men and women which, as the first Red Cross commission to France, sailed about June 1, 1917, to initiate our efforts in Europe.

Under your commission to France the work has been carefully organized, facilities have been provided, and effective efforts made to so co-operate with the army as to carry out the determination of the American people, and especially of the members of the Red Cross, that our boys "over there" shall lack for nothing which may add to their safety, comfort and happiness.

Your Red Cross now has active, operating commissions in France, in England, in Italy, in Belgium, in Palestine and in Greece. You have sent a shipload of relief supplies and a group of devoted workers to northern Russia; you have dispatched a commission to work behind our armies in eastern Siberia; you have sent special representatives to Denmark, to Serbia and the island of Madeira.

Your Red Cross is thus extending relief to the armies and navies of our allies, and you are carrying a practical message of hope and relief to the friendly peoples of afflicted Europe and Asia.

Indeed, we are told by those best informed in the countries of our allies that the efforts of your Red Cross to aid the soldiers and to sustain the morale of the civilian populations left at home, especially in France and Italy, have constituted a very real factor in winning the war.

The veil has already begun to lift.

The defection of Bulgaria, which by the time this message can be read may have been followed by events still more portentous, may point the way to yet greater Red Cross opportunity and obligation. "The cry from Macedonia" to come and help will probably prove one of the most appealing messages to which the world has ever listened.

What the Red Cross may be called upon to do in the further course of the war, or with the coming of victory, peace and reconstruction, it would be idle to attempt to prophesy.

But your great organization, in very truth "the people," has shown itself equal to any call, ready to respond to any emergency.

The American Red Cross has become not so much an organization as a great movement, seeking to embody in organized form the spirit of service, the spirit of sacrifice—in short, all that is best and highest in the ideals and aspirations of our country.

Indeed we cannot but believe that this wonderful spirit, which service in and for the Red Cross has invoked in this war, is destined to become in our national life an element of permanent value.

At Christmas time we shall ask the whole American people to answer the Red Cross Christmas roll call. It will constitute a unique appeal to every man, woman and child in this great land of ours to become enrolled in our army of mercy.

It is the hope of the War Council that this Christmas membership roll call shall constitute a reconstruction of the whole American people, an inspiring reassertion to mankind that in this hour of world tragedy not to conquer but to serve is America's supreme aim.

THE WAR COUNCIL OF THE AMERICAN RED CROSS.

HENRY P. DAVISON, Chairman.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 10, 1918.

Saving food is necessary to winning the war.

U. S. Food Administration for Indiana

Official Regulations and Penalties Imposed

Mrs. Frances Fender, of Centerville, Ind., a wealthy woman, was found by Harry W. Gilbert, federal food administrator for Wayne county, to have hoarded more than seventy pounds of sugar. Mrs. Fender was permitted to pay into the Red Cross $250 as a penalty for thus violating the food regulations.

D. A. Epperson, of Princeton was found to have gone away from home and purchased sugar in violation of the official regulations. As a penalty he was permitted to pay $10 into the local chapter of the Red Cross.

Effective October 15th the food administration will expect consumers to purchase his allotment semi-monthly. This will eliminate irregularities in the distribution and the exact apportionment on a basis of two pounds per persons per month, saving approximately 200,000,000 pounds of sugar annually, it is estimated.

Because he was found to have hoarded sugar Clarence Cook, a farmer living near North Manchester was reclassified by his local draft board and from a deferred class put into Class A-1 and certified for service. His father-in-law John Mennecker was permitted to make a contribution of $25 to the Red Cross for the same offense.

Every woman in Switzerland county is expected to join a United States Food club. Mrs. E. P. Downey, county president, has planned a house-to-house canvass for membership.

Manufacturers of gelatine preparations who will agree to supply hospitals and similar institutions will be accorded sugar, as essential industries.

No licenses for the importation of coffee into the United States will be issued by the United States food administration, except to the United States Sugar equalization board. Outstanding licenses have been revoked after October 18th. The food administration urges a universal policy of economy in the use of coffee in order that shipping requirements may be reduced to a minimum. Annual importations of coffee into the United States exceed 500,000 tons, and strictest conservation is regarded as necessary to avoid enforced rationing.

Practice These Rules and Be Patriotic.

Use cereals (meal, cereal breakfast foods, etc.) freely, taking pains to prepare them with great care and to vary the kind used from day to day if necessary to keep people from tiring of them.

Remember that a quart of whole milk a day for each child, to be used as a beverage and in cooking, is not too much.

Try to make the dishes served of such size that there will be enough to satisfy the appetite of the family and no unnecessary table and plate waste.

Do not be above noticing whether anything usable is thrown away with the garbage, which always shows how thriftily food is used in a household.

Many inexpensive materials can be made attractive and the diet can be pleasantly varied by a wise use of different flavorings.

"Finicky" tastes in food often prevent the use of many valuable materials.

Good food habits are an important part of personal hygiene and thrift. Children get such habits by having suitable amounts of suitable foods served to them and then being expected to eat what is set before them.

True economy and patriotism lie not only in buying wisely, but also in making the fullest possible use of what is bought.

U. S. Food Administration.
'Sides savin' fats en wheat, we got ter save sugar. De bes' way ter save sugar is ter use syrups en honey.

A nice 1 1/2 pitcher full er 'lasses conveyed by a fleet er buckwheat cakes is one er de bes' ways to 'get crosst' wid de sugar projick,— en it saves wheat flour too.

Food Questions Answered

Members of United States Food Clubs and others interested in the success of the conservation program are urged to familiarize themselves with the following facts:

Why restrict wheat when we have such a big harvest?

The program is calculated to supply home consumption, to send what we ought to furnish the allies, to reserve enough to carry us over the end of the year—and that's all. Unrestricted wheat consumption would not meet the program.

Why let down the wheat rule to 80-20?

We can use more wheat because we have more. This is not so much a let-down as it might seem. The old rule covered bread and all cereals; this applies to bread, cereal use otherwise to be encouraged. So far as it does let down the enforcement of substitutes, it is because we shall be poorer this year in feed for cattle than in food for people.

Why must we use substitutes?

In addition to economic reasons, the United States and the allies have agreed on a universal victory bread. The least we can do is to share equally with those whose burden is greater than ours.

Why not ship corn?

We do, we will; but armies can be better fed with raised bread, and, where there is no proper kitchen outfit for baking, some wheat is needed for bread.

Why is sugar restricted?

To win the war by sending men on ships borrowed from Asiatic sources, set free by furnishing sugar from American sources.

How long will the sugar restriction continue?

There is no probability of relaxing the program within the next six months.

Why doesn't Canada conserve sugar?

The allowance in Canada is 1 1/2 pounds per person per month.

Why not close the candy shops?

Their sugar supply has been cut down 50 per cent. That's enough until further measures are feasible.

Why make us save when the breweries and distilleries waste grain?

They don't; they are going out of business as fast as their present stocks are exhausted.

Why doesn't the government do something about prices?

The law gives no authority to fix any price to the producer, except wheat. The Food Administration provides against profiteering by manufacturers, wholesalers or jobbers; provides against waste and speculation in the main channels of trade; the administration points out a method of fixing fair prices by local communities. The community itself must police retail prices, and nobody else can.

Why doesn't the government lay down a schedule of rations to follow?

There is no schedule of rations that will suit all people. There is one necessary portion for a coal heaver and another for a retired clergyman; one for a boy with hollow legs, another for a young salesman, another for a middle-aged accountant. The mother who feeds four children, sweeps, cooks, sews, scrubs, and works in the garden cannot live on what will suffice the dear old lady with folded hands. What is abundance on a Florida piazza would be famine for a lumberjack where it's twenty below.

The ration changes every few weeks and every few miles to agree with what's in the market.

You could find an average, but you can't eat an average.

The ration must be set by every household and by every individual according to age, occupation, activity and residence.

Finding the ration for each home and person requires intelligent study of food values and intelligent advice from those who know how much nutrition is in each sort of food and how much it takes to keep going.

Why not compulsory rations?
The success of America's great experiment in democracy—the volunteer basis—as compared with partial failure of all compulsory schemes is the best answer.

Food Club Notes Home Division

The postponement of Home Card Week until the first week in December will give the food clubs an opportunity to prepare for more efficient work in distributing the new home program. The time should also be spent in getting ready for a double task, as a new Food Administration window card is to be distributed at the same time. Specifications for the new window card have been received from Washington. The cards will be distributed among the county presidents during November.

The organization of colored food clubs is progressing rapidly. City presidents have been appointed in Indianapolis, Terre Haute, Anderson, Marion and Brazil. In these centers the formation of food clubs among the colored people is making good progress.

Mrs. John R. Martin, Newton, has resigned as county president of United States food clubs for Fountain County. Miss Helen Martin of Veedsburg has been appointed as her successor.

Mrs. Gwendolyn M. Heath, county president of United States food clubs, has offered two Thrift Stamps for the best slogan for Fulton County food clubs. Rivalry has been promoted among the townships for the honor of turning in the winning slogan.

No Government Publication.

Agents in many places are canvassing from door to door with publications purporting to be issued by the government, representing that they have official sanction. They are charging as high as $4.75 for the publication. The Food Administration has been requested to warn people in Indiana that no such publications have been authorized by the government. The publications issued by the government are always given away or sold at cost, or sold under contract with the publisher. Anyone who engages in a scheme such as above described is guilty of false representation if no more. All such cases should be reported to the Department of Justice for action.

The Food Administration does not ask you to stop eating any particular food; it asks you to use less of all food.

Nov 8

America will not quit until the war is won. To win we must practice thrift.
Mere possession of means does not justify waste. Be frugal.

Council Will Probe Reconstruction Plans

Survey Requested of Unused or Unoccupied Farm Lands for Settlement by Returning Soldiers.

A report from Charles A. Kelso, chairman of the Floyd County Council of Defense, on the matter of the allegation of C. F. Williamson that there had been discrimination against negro children in excluding them from the presentation of a patriotic moving picture in New Albany, was read to the Indiana State Council of Defense at its regular meeting October 29th. The statement declared that there had been no discourtesy to negroes, as charged, and that only in one instance had admittance been denied, to a moving picture show operated entirely apart from the council of defense, and as an individual and private enterprise. Statements to prove the loyalty of the owner of the picture show, and denying an intimation of his disloyalty, also were included in the letter. On motion of Frank Wampler, the report of Chairman Kelso was placed on file and the incident closed.

A telegram from Franklin K. Lane, chairman of the field division of the Council of National Defense, who also is Secretary of the Interior in the President's cabinet, was read by Chairman Foley, to the council. The telegram set forth the purpose of the reclamation service to make a survey of the unused and unoccupied farm lands of the country for settlement by returning soldiers. In this connection T. A. Coleman, acting director of the Committee on Food Production and Conservation, stated that while there is no unused or unoccupied tillable land in the State, he believed there would be found a place on the farm for every returned soldier who comes back to Indiana upon a declaration of peace. He added that the problem anticipated is one of keeping the ex-soldiers content upon the farms, after the entertainment and new social conditions experienced in the training camps and in the field of action. Chairman Foley's announcement that he would name a committee to investigate the subject fully, which committee would include Isaac D. Straus, who represents farm interests on the council, met with approval.

The report of the Committee on Proposed Construction was approved. The committee was authorized to act in behalf of the entire council on urgent matters, so that its sessions would least interfere with the regularity and punctuality of future council sessions. Full approval of its reports will be made at later meetings, as the records are made up.

Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, reported upon the activities of his organization during the year of its existence. The report, which appears elsewhere in this Bulletin, was given a vote of emphatic approval by the council.

Charles Fox reported that the extraordinary activity of "Lieutenant Burns" of the Ordnance Department of the United States Army, in connection with the Connorsville Furniture Company, by addressing letters to citizens of Rushville "demanding" that "unless at present engaged in essential war work," they return to the furniture plant where they were said to have been "formerly employed," was due entirely to "misrepresentations" and that the entire matter had been referred to the Department of Labor at Washington.

A letter from Chairman John C. Stevens, of the Warren County Council of Defense, asking the good offices of the state council in securing thirty-day furloughs of boys from training camps for helping during the corn harvest, was read by the chairman. It was announced in this connection that an order had been promulgated against all furloughs from training camps, because of the influenza epidemic. With the consent of the council, the chairman agreed to take up the proposal later with the adjutant general.

The council voted to make a part of its record a letter of appreciation from Will H. Wade, federal reserve sales director, for the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign in Indiana. This letter appears elsewhere in this Bulletin.

Charles Fox read a telegram from the National Association of Railway Expressmen, asking the council to intervene in their behalf in an effort to secure a hearing of their wage grievance before the War Labor Board or the director general of railroads. On motion of A. W. Brady, the council agreed to call the matter to the attention of the federal officials, with a request that they give it proper attention promptly.

Dr. Charles P. Emerson, chairman of the medical section, stated that apparently the "peak" of the influenza epidemic has been reached in Indiana, except in the southwestern part. Dr. Emerson said there has been no spread of the influenza through the air, but that its further spread has been due wholly to personal contact. He said the spread had been in three directions, "east to west, camp centrifugally and from Chicago southward." The State is suffering from a want of nurses, and the medical section is planning still further stimulation of the campaign for nurses, Dr. Emerson declared. He said a rule to enforce a proper wearing of masks would quickly bring the disease under control, and that people will help prevent serious consequences if they will cough and sneeze into their own handkerchiefs. Dr. Emerson described the national situation as "very serious."

On the recommendation of the special committee to investigate the plans of the Rev. Brown of Anderson, for a work of conservation among boys, the council will await the results of an experiment planned by the county council of defense in Madison County.

On motion of Frank Wampler, and upon an explanation by the director of publicity, that Miss Harvey had prepared, without pay, a poster for distribution in the campaign to encourage thrift, and the saving of man-power, the council adopted the following:

Whereas, Miss Jeanette Harvey has prepared for the use of the Indiana State Council of Defense a poster of rare merit and great value in the encouragement of thrift, and the conservation of man-power; and

Whereas, Miss Harvey has made this work entirely gratuitous, in recognition and appreciation both of its artistic merit and intrinsic value, be it

Resolved, That the Council does herewith record its satisfaction with the enterprise so generously volunteered, and its sincere gratitude to the author thereof; that a copy of this resolution be addressed to Miss Harvey and that this action become a part of the official record of the council.

The council adjourned to meet Wednesday, November 6th, Tuesday, November 5th, the regular meeting date, being election day.

Our Duty to Aliens Is Clearly Outlined

Americanization Work Suggested by State Council of Defense Committee to Each County.

Calling upon County Americanization committees to secure at once a survey of the foreign born population in their communities, and to arrange wherever possible to secure their attendance at such course of instruction as will qualify them for intelligent and effective citizenship, the committee of the Indiana State Council of Defense, in a special communication on the subject, says:

As you have heretofore been advised, the Council of National Defense and the Indiana State Council of Defense have pledged full support to the call of the Government of the United States for immediate action to equip the foreign-born with a knowledge of the English language, American ideals of liberty and of the free institutions by which that liberty is attained and safe-guarded; so that those who come here to enjoy these blessings may realize their hopes to the fullest extent and may become strong, active, right-thinking Americans.

The Bureau of Naturalization of the United States Department of Labor, which is in direct touch with declarants and applicants for citizenship throughout the process of naturalization has for some years co-operated with the public schools of the United States, through its general and field officers, in a campaign of Americanization. These activities of the Bureau of Naturalization are recognized and have been extended by the Act of Congress of May 9, 1918, which provides, among other things, for the publication and distribution of a student's textbook to declarants and applicants for citizenship in attendance upon evening courses in language and citizenship in our public schools, and a corresponding teachers' manual. The public schools have shown a laudable spirit of co-operation in this work; have offered instruction to those who have presented themselves at these evening courses, and have co-operated through lists of declarants and applicants received from the Bureau of Naturalization, and by mass meetings of such declarants, in securing an increased attendance at these courses.

For the full realization of the desire of the Government for adequate instruction of all such persons who require it in a knowledge of our language, traditions and institutions, as contemplated in the legislation above referred to, the Bureau of Naturalization of the Department of Labor now comes to the State Council of Defense, and, relying upon their appreciation of the immediate urgency of this work and upon their faithful support of the needs of the Government, presents a concrete program of certain things to be carried out in a general systematic plan to secure the attendance upon the courses above referred to of all persons who can profit by such instruction. The essence of this plan is to bring to bear upon such persons all the weight of the Government's expressed desire, the approval of employers and every sanction which will determine them to attend the courses and secure the instruction they require. ## Patriotism in Indiana

Allen County.—J. R. McCulloch, treasurer of the County Council of Defense, has received the following wire from Art Smith, Fort Wayne's famous aviator, now stationed at Dayton as an instructor of U. S. aviation students: "To be serviceable for all types of planes, present and future, a landing field should have two pathways smooth and level, lying east and west, north and south. Such a landing will not be used extensively at present, but it would be well to have the tract reserved." This wire was in response to a letter sent to Mr. Smith from one of the members of the council inquiring about the kind of a field needed. According to Smith's idea, the runways would cross, forming a large cross which would permit the aviators to land in either direction. A committee was appointed by the council to co-operate with the Chamber of Commerce to formulate plans to provide such a field, as it is thought possible that Fort Wayne could be put on an air postal route if the proper landing could be provided.

Clark County.—After a discussion of the menace of dogs to the sheep industry, the Clark County Council of Defense adopted the following resolution: "That all owners of dogs are urged to strictly obey the law in regard to keeping or harboring dogs; and to keep their dogs tied or confined at night in order to reduce the killing or maiming of sheep and fowls; and that all citizens report to the proper authorities all dogs unlawfully kept or permitted to run at large, and that all officers make special efforts to enforce all laws against dogs. That economy conservation be strictly practiced in feeding dogs."

Elkhart County.—The county chairman for the Fourth Liberty Loan states that over one-fifth of the rural subscriptions in Elkhart County were due entirely to the work of the County Council of Defense. A number of recalcitrants were brought before the council, which held sessions daily for a week. In one instance a $5,000 subscription was secured, and the total for the week amounted to about $125,000. One "conscientious objector," in lieu of taking Liberty Bonds, gave $500 to the Red Cross.

Fayette County.—To promote interest in the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign the women's committee, through its chairman, Mrs. Elizabeth Claypool Earl, offered a prize essay contest on the "Fourth Liberty Loan" in the Connersville schools, from 5-B in the grades up through the high school. The winners will each receive a handsomely engraved certificate when the ban lifts and schools are reopened.

Lake County.—The drain made by the military draft has brought the first elevator girl to Gary, and hereafter the elevator in the Gary Theatre Building will be run by a young woman.... The county wheat crop will average 25.8 bushels to the acre, according to figures compiled by County Agent V. A. Place. Formaldehyde is being used quite extensively in the treatment of wheat. Records show that 640 pints of the fluid have been disposed of in the county. In preparing the solution for the treatment of the wheat seed, one quart of formaldehyde is required for a half barrel of water. The wheat seed is then sprayed with the solution and some of the finest crops are said to be the result. Although the general average for the county is 25.8 bushels per acre, some yields are recorded as high as 42 bushels.

Laporte County.—Saturday, October 5th, was appointed by Secretary McAdoo as a day of celebration for the women war workers of America, and in accordance with that fact 325 women of Laporte County gathered at the Masonic Temple in Laporte for lunch, entertainment, good fellowship and greetings. Lunch was served at 12:30, following an address of welcome by Mrs. McGill. Talks were given by Mrs. Francis Parker, of Chicago, who has spent many months in France, and by Rev. Dr. Titus, of Mishawaka, who related a number of personal experiences with the men "over there." A splendid musical program completed the day. Practically every woman's organization and club in the county was represented, and the general sentiment was that similar community gatherings at stated times would bring the various organizations in closer touch and assist in the large plan of women in war work.

Marion County.—All ground crossings of the Pennsylvania lines within the city limits of Indianapolis will be guarded by women hereafter as a result of a test made by the office of Captain James Hussey, chief special agent. Captain Hussey put seven women to work as crossing tenders about a month ago. The experiment has proved a success, and it is now planned to replace men with women on what is known as the "first trick" of the day—a 7 a. m. to 3 p. m. shift. Women are now devising at four crossings in Irvington, Audubon Road and Ritter, Downey and Butler avenues. Others are at Davidson street, Terrace avenue and Raymond street. There are about twenty crossings in the city that will require women. The age limit has been set at forty-five years. Women under twenty-five are not eligible. Preference will be given those who have husbands in military service. All must pass a medical examination and have especially good eyesight and hearing. The women are to receive $75 a month.

Ohio County.—At the last meeting of the Ohio County Council of Defense it was decided to have a War Chest for the purpose of creating a county fund to take care of the various war relief calls for this and the coming year. The council appointed an executive board, which in turn, will have the power of selecting a board of directors to handle the matter.

Perry County.—The county chairman of the War Mothers, Mrs. Philip Schlemmer, co-operating with the director of the women's work of the county Red Cross Chapter, will have charge of the distribution of brassards to the parents and wives of men who make the supreme sacrifice in the service of their country.... In this time of suffering from the influenza epidemic the officers and women workers of the Perry County Red Cross Chapter at Tell City proved the splendid practical service of their organization at home as well as in the field. Quietly and systematically they went to work, lending help wherever possible, making masks for nurses and patients, supplying food for the sick, and furnishing day and night nurses in homes where entire families were stricken.

Shelby County.—Active work in the Boys' Pig Club is now under way. Russell G. East, county agent, purchased fourteen young Poland China gilts, which have been placed in the care of one boy from each township. Each boy who accepts a pig must make two agreements. One is that he must give a note for the price of the pig, this note to be due in one year. At the end of one year, if he is successful, he shall return two pigs of his litter and the rest are his. At the end of the first year 28 pigs will be returned to Mr. East and in turn each of these will be given to 28 boys who will give $6 in return at the end of the year. In 1920 the 56 pigs resulting from the contest will be sold and the profits will be divided among each of the contestants of each year's club.

Wabash County.—Through the patriotic efforts of Mrs. Mary Curless, who is in her eightieth year, the Red Cross of Wabash County is richer by $76.30, the proceeds from a sale and dinner held on the Curless farm.

Red Cross Activities

Red Cross chapters throughout Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, the Lake Division Red Cross States, are instructed to avoid making any appeal for funds or membership in connection with the United War Work Campaign to be carried on the week of November 11.

The Red Cross the week of December 16 will conduct a national campaign for membership, to be known as the Christmas Roll Call. The next campaign for Red Cross war funds will be held sometime next spring.

At the request of Surgeon General Ireland, the American Red Cross has begun work recruiting fifteen hundred nurses' aids to be sent to France immediately to help care for the sick and wounded soldiers in our military establishments. Heretofore the army has not used nurses' aids in hospitals, but the splendid work done by these volunteer workers during the present epidemic of Spanish influenza has proven their work to be valuable. They have been serving in French military hospitals for some time and also rendering great service to convalescent and children's hospitals in France which are maintained by the American Red Cross.

Application for overseas service should be made at once to division officers of the American Red Cross. Information on this subject can be obtained at Red Cross chapters.

Women between the ages of thirty-five and forty-five who have completed the American Red Cross course in Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick or who have had an equal amount of experience in the sick room, are eligible for enrollment. The service is for the duration of the war with a salary allowance of $30 a month plus maintenance, laundering of uniforms and traveling expenses.

Women with brothers in service and married women with husbands not in service and beyond the draft age will be accepted. A plan to permit mothers with sons in service to serve in this capacity is under consideration. Classes to provide instruction for women desirous of serving overseas in this capacity are now being organized by American Red Cross chapters.

Red Cross activity, designated as military relief to distinguish it from the work done for the families of the soldiers by the home service branch of the organization, cost $2,110,686 up to the end of June, and calls for an appropriation of $3,475,000 for the remainder of the year.

Most of the 1,750,000 men now overseas and the 1,000,000 camps here have received knitted articles from the Red Cross. At the end of last July the organization had distributed 2,240,514 sweaters, 776,615 mufflers, 1,054,814 wristlets, 645,961 helmets, 2,143,921 pairs of socks and 419,822 comfort kits to soldiers in the United States and its territories. This is exclusive of the large quantities of similar articles distributed in the war zone. The women volunteer workers of the Red Cross produced these comforts which are intended to supplement the equipment provided by the army.

The department of military relief of the Red Cross has established 700 canteens on the railway lines of the country and at embarkation points, 55,000 women workers volunteering their services for this work to the end that our fighting men may be refreshed when traveling.

President Wilson's Approval

"I am very glad to hear of the creation of the Field Division of the Council of National Defense, which, by amalgamating the executive functions of the State Councils Section and the Woman's Committee of the council has become the single connecting link between the council and the other federal departments and administrations on the one hand and the state councils of defense and state divisions of the Woman's Committee on the other. I have already had occasion more than once to express my warm appreciation of the accomplishments of the state councils and the national organization of the Woman's Committee. It seems to me that the action which you have now taken, recognizing as it does the policy of joint action and common effort on the part of men and women, is sound in principle and serves the interests of efficiency. It is gratifying to know that this policy has already been followed in a large number of States, and I am sure that you will agree with me that it is worthy of adoption generally throughout the country."—Extract from letter from President Wilson to Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior and chairman of the Field Division of the Council of National Defense.

Indiana in the Fourth Loan

The following letter was read to the Indiana State Council of Defense at its meeting October 29th, and upon motion, ordered spread upon the official records:

Treasury Department
LIBERTY LOAN ORGANIZATION
Federal Reserve District Number Seven
106 East Market Street

Indianapolis, Ind., October 21, 1918.

Hon. Michael E. Foley, Chairman, Indiana State Council of Defense, State House, Indianapolis, Indiana.

My Dear Mr. Foley—The people of the State of Indiana have lived up fully to the best traditions of Hoosier life in making the Fourth Liberty Loan the complete success, which now is recorded. The record of the State will be second to none when all phases of the results are known.

Without the wholly patriotic atmosphere which pervades every county and which has been made possible, in large degree, by the work of the INDIANA STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE, no such financial effort as has just been completed, could have been successful.

It has been the solid sentiment of the people of Indiana, determined to win the war at any cost, that has carried Indiana through in this Fourth Liberty Loan campaign. The thanks of all of the citizens of Indiana are due the State Council of Defense for its co-operation with the Liberty Loan organization, which has benefited greatly from the council's constant efforts towards the development of the spirit of war sacrifice in the citizens of every county.

We are glad to add our own personal appreciation for the efforts of yourself and your organization.

Very truly yours,
WILL H. WADE,
Federal Reserve Director of Sales for Indiana.

War Has Laid a Heavy Hand On Children of United States

The following "Outline for the Fourteen-Minute Women on Child Welfare" constitutes Bulletin No. 106, signed by Mrs. Albion Fellows Bacon, Indiana state chairman of Child Welfare work, the first great reconstruction program promulgated by the Federal Government:

War has laid a heavy hand on the children of the United States. As much as our hearts bleed for the children of devastated France and Belgium and Serbia, as much as we ought to do for them, let us not forget the children of our own nation, and their sufferings. The loss or absence of the father, the drawing of the mother into industry, the high price of food, clothing and scarcity of fuel will pinch the children of the working people. It will crush the poor. One hundred thousand children under six die needless deaths in the United States annually. Many, many more suffer preventable illness and afflictions. Thousands who do not die grow up to a sickly existence, bringing more sickly children into the world, unable to do their part as citizens, often a burden on the community.

Think what the nation has lost in man power by the preventable deaths of our children in the last twenty-one years! Think what it has lost in military power by those who have been allowed to grow up with defects that unfit them for military service!

This is the one great reason the Government has established the "Children's Year." The year is already more than half gone. The task assigned us for that year is to save the 100,000 children from needless deaths. Indiana's quota is 2,594. How many are we going to save?

It depends on the public intelligence and the public interest, and that is why the Fourteen-Minute speakers are asked to present it. The county and township Child Welfare chairman have the task assigned to them, but they cannot do it without public help. The mothers must help. The Parent Teachers Clubs must help. The church societies must help. Doctors and nurses must help, for we cannot save the babies without them. Legislators must help, because we cannot maintain public health as it should be without health officers on the job every minute—and that means the all-time health officer. In no community that has not an all-time health officer can all of our health laws be properly enforced. In many communities the enforcement is a joke. So please be sure to tell your State representative and senator that you expect him to vote for the all-time health officer, as a Child Welfare measure. Tell him, too, that you want him to help strengthen the school attendance law.

Now, the whole State of Indiana has been stirred to get the babies to the clinics where they were weighed, measured and registered. Some counties made wonderful records. Others had a bad start, and many backsets, and did not make so good a showing. The cards were so slow coming that it made the work doubly hard. But the national department has removed the time limit, because they are so anxious to have the work done as thoroughly as possible, and it is hoped that the counties that have not brought up all their districts will take those districts now, as they can, and begin the clinics again. You see, it is your own community that suffers, if the defective children, or the diseased children are overlooked. Besides, Indiana suffers in two ways. First, we lose more of our children. Second, we lose our standing with the other States. Indiana started out well in the lead, but some of the other States are now going far ahead of us, because they are raising funds for State work and local work, and putting more and more energy into it.

We must remember, too, that some of the counties of Indiana are actually losing population! This means only one thing—that babies and mothers are not getting the right care. It is part of the work of the Children's Year to see that proper care is given both babies and mothers. This means one thing—medical care and nursing. With our doctors and nurses going, and our quota not yet filled, what are we to do? We must call out our retired nurses, that are past the draft age, for government service. Is there not such a nurse in this community, who will take charge of a babies' clinic or welfare station for the rest of the Children's Year? Another thing we must do is to teach nursing in the schools, as part of our vocational training. The State Board of Education will direct you how to do it. Get the best baby doctor and the best baby (trained) nurse in your district to give a course of lectures and demonstrations to your older pupils, and to a class of women, on the simple points of nursing, sanitation and hygiene. It is one of the biggest things you can do for Indiana. And see that that doctor and nurse are on the school pay roll.

The most important thing to do, to save the babies, is to get the duplicate cards showing the children's weight, defects, etc. Every child needing a tonsil or adenoid operation should have it. Every cripple should have hospital care. Every undernourished child should have milk provided, if necessary. Eyes, teeth, ears, spines—all the organs that need care should have them. If the child's parents can do it, see that they are impressed with the necessity. If they are too poor, get some club or church or wealthy person to undertake it. This is the only way we can save our quota.

Wherever a welfare station can be established, for regular care of sick babies, that should be done. And wherever a nurse is available to do community welfare work, get her, by all means.

Now, of course, it is not enough to save babies' lives, or even to save them from defects. If they are to be valuable to the nation they must grow up strong and vigorous. This is the reason that the National Child Welfare Department launched a second drive, for recreation. It came too late to help much in the summer vacation, but it got a start, and took root. Some of the counties appointed a recreation director. That is what we want all of them to do. Every community has its special needs. Some provide well for their children, with supervised playgrounds, swimming and wading pools, libraries, and so on. Some have almost nothing.

The same is true of the schools. Some have splendid physical culture, under a trained director. Many have nothing. Some are giving up what they had. This is a great mistake. The Child Welfare Department is anxious that every child shall try for the bronze medal offered by the National Playground Association, to all that pass its physical efficiency tests. They are very simple athletic tests, and require running, jumping, ball throwing, "chinning" on a bar, and so on. The girls' test is not so strenuous as the boys'. In some cities physical standards of children have been made 30 per cent higher by these tests. Any child can do the work alone, but it is hoped they will be taken up by the physical directors in schools, along with other work; or, where there is no such work, the children will form athletic clubs. By writing to the National Playgrounds Association of America, 1 Madison avenue, New York City, you can get a pamphlet explaining all about the tests.

The State committee of Child Welfare has many other recreation plans. They are anxious that the childhood of Indiana shall have a chance for its best development, and all authorities agree that this means that the child shall have plenty of play, in the right surroundings.

One more thing the Government is concerned about: That is, that every child shall have an education. Indiana has fine educational advantages, and fine laws, but that does not prevent children from being kept out of school. In many communities the attendance law is not enforced. The national committee is now starting a "Back to School" drive, for this very reason. They want to make sure that no child is employed in a mill or factory, and that every child of school age is in school. What they ask you to do is to appoint a committee, in each school district, that shall co-operate with the school authorities to see that all children are kept in school, when possible. A group of mothers, near the school house, are to be given the job of keeping in touch with the teacher and getting the names of truants or absentees. If the attendance officer fails to keep them in school, this group is to visit the families and find out whether any real trouble keeps the child away, then they are to give all possible help to get the child back. This means co-operation with the township trustee, perhaps. It will be a splendid thing for the teacher, the child and the parent. Where there is a Parent-Teachers Club the problem will be easily solved.

Now this, in a nutshell, is the work Indiana is expected to do for the Children's Year. Some of the States are raising large sums of money, and doing splendid things. Connecticut, for instance, has a "Special" car, an auto-truck, containing a nurse, and a demonstration and clinic outfit, that goes from town to town, holds baby clinics, and gives a movie show on child welfare. Some States are spending $25,000.

We have not spent a penny in State work, but now we have come to the place where we are falling behind for lack of money. It has been all that the State chairman of Child Welfare could do to stay in her office and answer letters, write bulletins, and mail out literature. This takes all of her time and strength, and she has not been able to visit any of the counties, or to make any talks, or help with demonstrations. All that has been done has been by the splendid work of the women, working alone. This will do in some counties, but others have fewer doctors and nurses, and the women are overburdened with farm work, and must have help. So it has been decided to get a field secretary to help with the work, who can go to the counties, on call, and help Indiana really do some big things, that will bring us up to the line with the other States. So, each county is asked to raise $20 to pay for this field worker, in any way it sees best. It may be done by selling the Women War Worker's buttons, if desired. If more money is raised, it will help cure a crippled child, or start a welfare station.

When the boys come back they are going to look with a different vision upon some of the things they left behind. They will not be so tolerant of the public neglect of the home, the family and the child. They will expect of us that we have, at least, taken care of the children in their absence. And those that never come back will need strong, vigorous, well trained youths, growing up to take their places. It is our part to see to it.

Austria Advertises Food Needs.

There is fool propaganda that is super-propaganda; no missionaries are needed to spread it. The American assurance to the Allies of a bigger and better loaf traveled like light and warmed like sunshine. Headlines and billboards were unnecessary, for it was super-propaganda.

There is super-propaganda, too, that chills like November rain; and in spite of German skill in the art of concealment this kind of propaganda is traveling through the enemy country. Here are some want-ads from a Trieste newspaper which tell the story that will not down:

"Iron bed, pair of black trousers, and coat offered in exchange for foodstuffs."

"New novels, large collection, in exchange for five pounds of food."

"Finest stockings, lady's colored, in exchange for sugar or fats."

"Linen sheet wanted to make into a dress, for cash or maize meal."

"Yellow canary in exchange for a rabbit, Japanese vases for fats or beans."

"A business suit offered in exchange for one pound of fat."

The appropriate answer from America is redoubled effort to make the preponderance of food among the Allies become greater and greater as that of the enemy wanes.

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of patriotic information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the Federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation and its prosecution of the war with Germany, particularly as pertains to the production and conservation of food

Private Hobart G. Beach, New Albany.
Private Omar Carl Hedeon, Indiana Harbor.
Private Howard Price, Terre Haute.

October 25:

Private Hershel Arend, Saratoga.

U. S. Employment Service

The policy of the United States Employment Service is to discourage all children under sixteen years of age from leaving school to enter industry. No representative of the service has any authority to interpret or modify existing statutes which govern the employment of children in industries. In placing the children the Federal regulations, as well as the protective State laws, must be observed, according to advices received by the Federal labor director for Indiana, by N. A. Smyth, assistant director general of the employment service. Where standards prescribed by State laws are higher than the Federal regulations, the State laws will govern. Suitable positions and surroundings are first essentials to the admission of child workers in any industry, under the Federal ruling. The Smyth order states that in any case where it appears that a temporary modification of a State law is needed, the facts should be reported to the department at Washington for appropriate action. Contracts approved by the War Labor Policies Board require that work be done in compliance with State laws, regulating hours or work, night work for women, conditions of health of workers, safety devices and similar matters.

U. S. Boys' Working Reserve

Members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve who have given their services in such patriotic manner upon the farms of the country during the past summer helped in such large degree to increase the food production of the United States that they must be included in the expression of gratitude contained in the following cablegram from King Albert to Food Administrator Herbert Hoover:

"On this the fourth anniversary of the foundation of the commission for the relief of Belgium my heart prompts me to thank you once more in the name of all my compatriots for having during four years saved the Belgian nation from starvation."

That there must be no slackening of effort on the part of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, which has done such remarkable work in the harvest fields this year, is made clearly evident in a statement issued by United States Food Administrator, Herbert Hoover, in which he says: "We are pledged to deliver to the allies in Europe next year 17,000,000 tons of food-stuffs a tremendous output, 50% greater than our total food contribution this year."

The civil populations of countries rescued from the Huns must be fed by America for some time to come and, in order that America may produce the required supply, renewed and sustained effort on the part of the United States Boys' Working Reserve will be required.

My War Creed.

By Thomas F. Moran.

II.

I believe that treaties represent the solemn pledges of nations and that national honor demands that their stipulations be scrupulously carried out, without regard to the military or material advantage of the nations involved. The acceptance of a disadvantage incident to a treaty obligation is but the price which sincerity pays to honor. The honest man and the upright nation will hew to the line, let the chips fall where they will.

I believe that the so-called "law of military necessity" has no place where honor and decency prevail and that it belongs to the code of ethics of a highway robber rather than to that of a civilized and self-respecting nation.

I believe that "righteousness exalteth a nation" and that morals cannot be successfully divorced either from statesmanship or from democracy.

I believe that right makes might, and that, in harmony with the general law of human progress, the right will ultimately prevail.

In Our Keeping.

One hundred and twenty million Allies must be fed.
One hundred and five million Americans must be fed.
Peace will add millions to these millions.
They look to us—their lives are in our keeping.
This is America's grave responsibility and splendid opportunity.

Poultry Culling Succeeds.

According to reports received by the food committee, more than 170 poultry culling demonstrations have been given in Indiana in the last ten weeks by county agricultural agents and specialists from the Purdue University extension staff. A total of 1,700 persons agreed to cull their flocks, which represented 130,000 hens. The average percentage of birds discarded in the demonstrations was 30 per cent, as this many were found to be unprofitable. Actual figures kept by the owners of the flocks on the culls and those left as good layers show that many times after a third of the poor birds had been discarded, the remainder of the flock produced as many eggs as the entire flock did before. It was found that many farmers were selling their good layers instead of the poor ones, picking out the nice "yellow legs" to leave at home, and selling those with rough plumage, pale shanks and beaks, the real layers. If all the farmers in the State had culled their flocks, totaling 10,000,000 birds, in the right way, there would have been a saving in feed and profit in prices paid for culls now of $7,870,000.

War Books Recently Received by the State Library

(Any of the books mentioned below may be borrowed for a short time from the Indiana State Library by any citizen of the State. Persons living in towns where there is a public library should apply through the librarian. Those living on rural routes or in towns having no public library may obtain blanks for registration from the State Library on request. The only expense is that of transportation.)

Clark, J. M. et al. Readings in the Economics of War.

Selections from numerous sources on the economic phases of the war—the economic background, the present situation regarding food, finance, labor, etc., with some consideration of after-the-war problems.

Malherbe, H. The Flame That is France.

"To the soldiers standing guard at night appear three figures: Memory, Love and Death, to offer him strength and consolation and a new interpretation of life's values. The remainder of the work is given up to short sketches." This book was awarded the Goncourt prize for 1917.

Nicholas, R. Campaign Diary of a French Officer. Verbatim translation of a diary kept in the field by a young French officer. Shows the unconquerable spirit of the French, under hardship and discouragement.

Proper Feeding of Cattle Profitable

Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation Points to Record on Jones Farm.

The Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation commends the work done by William H. Jones, Jr., of Merom, Indiana, in connection with a cattle feeding demonstration conducted on his farm. County Agent A. S. Benson co-operated with Mr. Jones in keeping exact records on his feeding business for the season. P. S. Richey of Purdue university assisted in the demonstration. Mr. Jones's net profit was $26.29 per steer, on 310 head of steers, which he fed over a period of 167 days.

He put the steers on feed November 13, 1917, buying them on the Chicago market then at $10.25 a hundred, a total cost of $31,775. Their average weight was 1,000 pounds then, and when sold April 29th it was 1,234, representing a daily gain of 1.40 pounds, on a ration of wheat straw, corn silage, cottonseed meal and alfalfa hay.

Here is what they ate: 28.7 tons of cottonseed meal worth $58 a ton, total $1,664.60; 1,286.5 tons of corn silage worth $7 a ton, a total of $9,005.50; 22.78 tons of alfalfa hay worth $25 a ton, a total of $569.50; 30.25 tons of wheat straw worth $8 a ton, a total of $242; making the total costs of feed $11,481.60.

This added to the original cost of the steers and $3,092 for taxes and interest, also shipping expense (the manure obtained paid for the labor of feed, Mr. Jones figured), made the grand total $47,149.50. The selling price ranged from $13.25 a hundred to $16.00, while the complete cost per pound was $12.11, thus showing a substantial profit.

Farmers who depend largely on corn silage, cottonseed meal and straw or hay will feed their cattle at a profit this winter as the figures for last season's work shows. While Mr. Jones was one of the largest cattle feeders in the State, the same plan be followed on a large scale can be followed equally as well by the man who feeds but one or two carloads of steers.

Helps for the Patriotic Housekeeper

Containing suggestions for those who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration and is being conducted by Mary L. Matthews, Home Economics Director for Indiana.

"MAKE A LITTLE MEAT GO A LONG WAY."

The Food Administration is still urging every household to use less meat. "Meatless days" will not have to be observed if each housekeeper is careful in planning the week's menus.

Meat may be saved by

1. Using meat less frequently.
2. Serving smaller portions.
3. Using all the cuts and organs possible.
4. Serving meat substitute dishes.
5. Combining meat with foods which will extend the flavor of the meat.
6. Saving all scraps, bones and trimmings for use in soups or left-over dishes.

The following is an account of the use of two pounds of round steak in a family of two. There was at the first meal on Tuesday a guest, and the meat was served as Swiss steak. This family never serves meat more than once a day. On Wednesday the steak was reheated in a casserole with a few onions and carrots. On Thursday one-half of what was left was made into croquettes, while on Friday the other half was used for hash with potatoes, onions and carrots added. A small amount of this hash was left, so this was used in stuffing green peppers which were baked on Saturday.

The extended use of this small amount of meat was made possible by the addition of vegetables, white sauce and bread crumbs. The meat after the first day was largely used as a flavoring agent. The following are the recipes for making the various dishes:

Swiss Steak.

Use round steak that is cut at least one inch thick. With a dull edged saucer or small plate pound flour into the steak until the tissues seems well filled. Brown the steak on both sides in a small amount of hot fat in a frying pan. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Add a few slices of onion if desired. Pour boiling water into the pan until the meat is about half covered. Place a lid on the frying pan and set it in a very slow oven and cook about two hours, keeping the water at simmering point. Serve with the gravy that is formed during the cooking. This may be thickened with white sauce if desired. A fireless cooker is an excellent thing to use in the preparation of this steak.

Croquettes.

- $\frac{1}{2}$  cup ground meat.
- $\frac{1}{4}$  cup peas (cooked).
- $\frac{1}{4}$  cup mashed potatoes.

Enough No. 4 white sauce to hold together. To make the white sauce the following proportions should be used: To each one cup of milk or meat stock add 1 tablespoon fat and four of flour or two and one-half of cornstarch and cook until thick and smooth. Cornstarch should always be mixed with a little cold water before adding to the warm liquid. Flour may be mixed with the fat and stirred gradually into the hot liquid.

Add enough of this white sauce to the ingredients to hold together. Allow to cool. When cool shape into croquettes, roll in slightly beaten eggs and bread crumbs to which a little melted fat has been added, bake in a well greased pan in a hot oven. Serve with a sauce if desired.

Tomato Sauce.

- 2 tablespoons fat.
- 1 cup strained tomatoes.
- $\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoon salt.
- 2 tablespoons flour.
- $\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoon pepper.

Make in same manner as white sauce described above. Tomatoes are prepared by cooking with onion fifteen minutes, then, rubbing through a strainer.

White Sauce with Parsley.

This sauce to serve with the croquettes may be made when the white sauce for making the croquettes is being prepared, providing milk is used. When ready to use reheat the white sauce that is left from the croquettes in the double boiler, add more milk until desired thickness. Beat with egg beater until smooth. Season with salt and pepper and chopped parsley.

Beef Hash.

- $\frac{3}{4}$  cup meat chopped into small pieces.
- 3 small onions sliced.
- 3 medium sized potatoes diced.
- 1 small carrot diced.

Mix the ingredients, add any left over sauce or gravy and enough water to about cover. Season to taste. Cook until vegetables are done.

Stuffed Baked Peppers.

Remove the tops and seeds from sweet peppers. Wash thoroughly. Fill with left-over hash. Cover top with bread crumbs. Place in baking dish and put about one-half inch of water in dish. Bake 45 minutes in a slow oven.

To Fight Influenza.

The Red Cross Committee on Influenza asks the public:

1. To put automobiles at the service of the Red Cross in order that they can minister to a larger number of cases.
2. To give nurses all the help they can and to leave to them only the direction of caring for influenza cases.
3. To refuse to permit one patient or even several to absorb all the time of a skilled nurse.
4. To make full use of all strong women who have had even the briefest nursing course or experience.

No Shortage of Seed Corn in 1919 Planting

"There will be no shortage of seed corn in Indiana next spring as there was last, judging from the amount of seed corn gathered and stored properly this fall," declared C. Henry of Purdue University, State leader of the fall selection campaign. "Reports from nearly all the counties show that a great majority of the farmers went into the fields before corn cutting and selected the best samples for seed purposes. Those who practiced field selection in most cases stored it properly, so that it is dry enough that freezing weather will not hurt it."

Advices from some counties show that 90 per cent of the farmers have their seed gathered, while a number of others indicate that 75 per cent or more have their seed selected and stored. Those who haven't their seed yet are planning to get it husking time, the second best time for selection.

"Under the direction of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, and through the work of the county agricultural agents and their supporters this fall, and the memory of the high prices last spring because of the shortage, Indiana farmers have gone over the top on this drive and taken care to prevent a repetition of last winter's worries," concluded Mr. Henry.

Unconditional Surrender

(By Peter W. Goebel, President of the Commercial National Bank of Kansas City, Mo.)

When the time comes for drawing up a compact of peace between nations, I hope and trust America will never permit that compact to be signed by any member of the Hohenzollern family.

If Germany desires to have another chance amongst the nations her people must rise up and select somebody that represents the German people as they were half a century ago. And she must be taken in on probation only.

My cradle stood in Germany. Conditions there drove me away when I was a boy. I have watched events ever since, and I know that this system of kultur, as they call it—which means that nothing is wrong for the state to do—could not have developed in fifty years as it has developed, had it not been for the teachers and preachers of Germany.

They have fooled almost everybody. They fooled us with their exchange of professors, and we thought we were making quite an achievement by getting them to come over here and inoculate us with the virus of "kultur."

The most grievous mistake German rulers ever made was in believing they could build a permanent, strong citizenship upon a foundation of cruelty and oppression. The German soldier has been efficient just as long as things were going his way, but the minute things turn, and he sees that his superiors have lied to him about all they were going to accomplish, that minute he is ready to come over into our hands.

So we have got to blast them out and then everlastingly put the finishing touches on them before we can even give them a chance to talk to us.

And let no man say to you that peace can be made and made safely until German militarism and the Hohenzollern family is annihilated.

To Designate "Victory Farms."

Iowa farms which put in their quota of the Liberty wheat crop are to be designated as "Victory Farms," according to announcement by the county farm bureaus of the State. Posters with the legend "Victory Farm" will be given to the farmers by the school district co-operators late this fall. Those who sow spring wheat will be given their posters next spring. The wheat quota is one acre out of every eight. Allowances will be made on farms having an unusually large amount of untillable land.

Your grocer is pledged to full co-operation in the Food Administration program. Are you helping him to keep that pledge?

Woman's Section

St. Joseph County is planning extension work in Americanization with Mrs. Homer Miller as chairman.

The Tipton County Fourteen-Minute Women made nine talks in September.

Tipton County has a complete organization of Food Clubs. As an extra part of their work, the Food Clubs of Prairie Township have adopted a French orphan.

During the summer five cheese markets were held, yielding a profit of $29.50. The cheese sold readily and saved several pounds of meat.

Mrs. George H. Gifford, a Fourteen-Minute woman, gave a very interesting talk on Liberty Extension Work at the monthly meeting held at the Council of Defense headquarters in the court house in October.

Jennings County sends in an interesting registration report. 3,620 women registered, 1,686 of whom are reported as trained in more than one occupation. 181 women in this county are engaged in dairying, 57 farming, 4 fruit raising, 481 gardening, 665 are poultry raisers, 8 are engaged in stock raising. In the list of clerical occupations there are 2 accountants, 34 bookkeepers, 7 cashiers, 22 clerical workers, 2 engaged in filing, 5 office assistants, 6 typewriters, 1 shipping clerk, 13 stenographers. The county has 160 seamstresses and 1,764 who wrote themselves down as trained housekeepers and 415 untrained.

Among the miscellaneous occupations are found 1 paperhanger, 1 embalmer, 1 chemist, 1 tailor, 2 artists, 2 journalists, 11 musicians, 2 mail carriers, 14 club executives, 2 district nurses, 2 Sunday school workers.

Xmas for Embarking Men.

The War Department has arranged to distribute Christmas parcel labels to men now embarking for service overseas. Men abroad have been given one Christmas parcel label to be returned to friends or relatives in this country. Friends and relatives who receive the labels are to secure from the Red Cross, after November 1, small cartons in which to ship Christmas parcels abroad. The Red Cross has also been designated to inspect the contents of all such parcels and to assist the postoffice in getting the shipments ready to go overseas.

Never Too Young to Save

No children who can talk are too young to know something about the saving of food, which is necessary now. Their hearts are easily reached too. They will listen with real sympathy to stories about hungry children in France, and how the boys and girls in America must send things to them to eat, and take care of them until their fathers come home from the war, and their mothers from the factories, and all live peacefully in their little cottages again.

Junior must know that his pennies must not be spent for candy, and he will eagerly save up for Thrift Stamps. Marjorie never used to eat crusts, but now she knows that nothing must be sent back to the kitchen. Bobby is going without sugar on his cereal, and in two weeks will earn a Thrift Stamp for his sacrifice, and in that two weeks he has formed the habit of sugarless cereal and does not know it.

Children can help enormously in saving in little ways, and there is every reason why they should be taught to do so. Mothers or fathers are only 50 per cent patriots who do not teach their little ones what great results come from food sacrifice in this country now. They see the soldiers marching along their street. They all can sing "America" lustily. In school they pledge allegiance to their flag, and they have learned to knit. Now is the psychological moment for instruction in conservation and sacrifice. Do not let them miss it.

Boys' Working Reserve Makes Splendid Record

Reports Received by Federal State Director Indicate Tremendous Volume of Results on Farms of Indiana, in Factories and Elsewhere, to Total Value of More Than a Million Dollars

Reports received by Isaac D. Straus, federal state director, from 6,055 of the 23,316 members enrolled in the United States Boys' Working Reserve, in Indiana, show a total earnings of $1,111,722. These reports cover work done over a period of three months and in every instance were verified by employers.

Would Feed 13,500 Soldiers One Year.

It has been estimated by authorities that an able-bodied boy of sixteen or older, employed 100 days on an average Indiana farm, will produce food to the value of $1,000. On this basis the 4,323 boys, who were employed a total of 492,490 days on farms, produced enough food to feed 13,500 soldiers for one year. These boys worked on an average of 114 days each at an average wage of $1.51 per day, exclusive of board; 3,549 boys pledged themselves to render the same service next year. Of the 2,572 high school boys working on farms 80 per cent pledged themselves to return to school.

Industrial Unite Earns $365,834.

From the reserve 1,732 boys were employed in essential industries for a total of 180,617 days, earning a total of $365,834, at an average wage of $2.02 per day; 1,384 pledged themselves for service next year; 1,040 were high school boys, and of this number 75 per cent pledged themselves to return to school; 427 boys were reported as having joined the army or navy; 6 boys died from various causes, and 18 boys were incapacitated for work due to injuries received while engaged in industrial employment. Only one farm boy was in the casualty list, he having lost a finger in a feed grinder.

Reports Incomplete.

If reports could be had of the remaining 17,261 boys, the totals contained in this report would be swelled proportionately, it is believed. The record does not include earnings of boys who were employed intermittently for brief periods of time, such as the 175 Indianapolis, Shelbyville, Fort Wayne, South Bend and Gary boys who saved hundreds of acres of sugar beets when no other labor was available; the hundreds of boys from Vincennes, Terre Haute, Evansville, Marion, Kokomo, Indianapolis, Bloomington, Franklin, Muncie and other cities who worked so industriously in harvesting tomato and melon crops, nor the service rendered by boys who have been filling silos during the past two months. In addition, many thousands of bushels of corn will be harvested by members of the reserve this fall.

Boys' Reserve Proves Economic Worth

Earns $1,111,722.00 During Vacation Period This Year Producing Food and Manufacturing Munitions of War—Reports Verified by Employers Indicate That 4,323 Grew Enough Food to Feed 13,500 Soldiers for One Year—6,055 Work a Total of 673,107 Days

Judging of Contests On Five Acres of Corn

Intensive Cultivation and Effort to Secure More Bushels per Acre
the Objects.

A conference of the judges of the five-acre corn contest held at Purdue was for the purpose of laying plans and discussing the details of the judging work which is to be done over the State during the next three weeks. This contest is directed and financed by the Indiana Corn Growers' Association. It has the unqualified support of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation. It is carried on for the purpose of stimulating interest in a more economical corn production.

Intensive cultivation and more bushels per acre, is the slogan of Indiana contestants. In previous years the results of this contest have shown that where the yield of corn has been 75 to 85 bushels per acre, the cost of production was much less than where the yield was 30 to 40 bushels per acre. In fact it has been demonstrated in this contest that it is almost as profitable to raise one acre of corn yielding 105 bushels per acre as three acres yielding 40 bushels per acre.

The contestants are in both a state and county competition. Each person producing as much as 75 bushels per acre, and less than 85, is given a bronze medal; 85 to 100 bushels receives a silver medal; and the man raising more than 100 bushels per acre is presented with a gold medal. These medals are all properly engraved and presented by the Indiana Corn Growers' Association, and are put out on the basis of production only.

Each county gives $50 or its equivalent in prizes to be awarded on the basis of yield and cost of production; 70 per cent to the former, and 30 per cent to the latter. This county rating will be made not later than January 1, 1919.

This year there are 672 contestants representing 32 counties over the State. This is practically double the enrollment of last year and, regardless of the extreme weather conditions this past summer and the poor seed corn last spring, high yields are expected.

The following men are the judges assigned to the various counties:

L. L. Adamson, Williams, Ind., Bartholomew and Shelby counties.

W. T. Martindale, Wilkinson, Ind., Fountain, Tippecanoe, and Clinton.

J. S. Helms, Richmond, Ind., Carroll, White, Spencer, Posey, and Lawrence.

R. L. Thompson, Topeka, Ind., Hancock, Fayette, and Marion.

C. E. Troyer, Lafontaine, Ind., Dearborn and Franklin.

Geo. Kirklín, Franklin, Ind., Randolph, Jay, Wells, Huntington, and Porter.

S. W. Taylor, Boonville, Ind., Wayne County.

E. C. Martindale, Wilkinson, Ind., Hamilton,

Rush, and Madison.

Earnest Thornburg, Shelbyville, Ind., Johnson and Morgan.

Grant Johnson, Dale, Ind., Greene, Daviess,

Sullivan, and Monroe counties.

Our Duty to Aliens Is Clearly Outlined

tion Committee of the Indiana State Council of Defense here following presents to you the concrete program above referred to with the suggestion that its details are subject to modification as the needs of different communities vary, and that, subject to such modifications as may in your judgment seem desirable, you take steps as promptly as may be to effect its systematic execution.

1. Your committee should appoint the best available man who is alive to and enthusiastic in this movement and upon whom you can depend to get results. This man may or may not be a member of your committee as now constituted.

2. This representative should secure from each employer of foreign-born labor covering all branches of industry or business, a list in the following form of the names of all foreign-born employees:

FOR THE INFORMATION OF THE STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE AND THE BUREAU OF NATURALIZATION, U. S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR.

Herewith is submitted a list of foreign-born employees of this concern showing by check-mark their familiarity with the English language and their citizenship status.

Superintendent.

Head of Concern.

Name	Address	Illiterate	Unable to speak English	Unable to write English	Is a citizen	Has first papers
------	---------	------------	-------------------------	-------------------------	--------------	------------------

3. Immediately upon receipt of these lists, the representative should inform the local school authorities that this indicates the number of men eligible for this instruction.

4. The representatives should forthwith secure the attendance of all of these persons in the English and citizenship courses of the public schools. The following campaign to secure their attendance should be carried out:

(a) He should arrange for noon meetings of employees at their places of employment. The best speaker available, representing the Council of Defense should give a brief talk. The superintendent or other officer of the concern should also say a few words to show interest and desire of the employer in their attendance upon these courses.

(b) At the same time have the motto, "English Spoken Here," bearing the insignia of the State Council of Defense placed in various conspicuous places about the works.

(c) Assist the school authorities in securing the attendance of all declarants and petitioners for naturalization living in the community, whose names are being furnished to the school authorities by the Bureau of Naturalization.

(d) A follow-up system, covering those not in attendance should be carried out by calling upon them at their places of employment or at their homes.

The Americanization Committee of the Indiana State Council of Defense is well aware that this program in its entirety is applicable only to industrial communities or those where there are considerable settlements of aliens; but some part of it—especially the outline for a census of foreign-born and some educational propaganda—should prove valuable even where the number of aliens is small. This committee should be kept informed of any activity along the line of Americanization in the respective counties of the State, and it stands ready at any time to assist to the extent of its ability in any Americanization work where its assistance is desired.

JOHN H. HOLLIDAY,
Chairman.
GEORGE C. CALVERT,
Secretary.

U. S. Food Administration for Indiana

Official Regulations and Penalties Imposed

Now, when we have need for every ounce of food that can be put into form for human consumption, it is the soundest economy to let young turkeys live through the fall bug-and-seed-hunting season. A young gobble that weighs ten pounds in October will weigh twelve or thirteen pounds sixty days later if given a little extra feed along toward the end of that period. A hen in the same time will fill out from seven pounds to nine or ten. Such satisfactory gains can be made at no other time. The U. S. Food Administration suggests that in order to take advantage of this favorable season, no young turkey hens weighing less than six pounds dressed, be marketed. Young gobblers should be of sufficient size to dress at least eight pounds before being sold.

Radically altered conditions have influenced the food administration to approve the recommendation of the live stock sub-committee of the Agricultural Advisory Board, including representative growers, which has for its object an agreed minimum price of $17.50 per hundred pounds on average of packers' droves at the Chicago market for the month of November. This price is not to include throw-outs, which are defined as pigs weighing less than 130 pounds, stags, boars, thins, sows and skips; and no hogs of any kind except throw-outs, at less than $16.50 per hundred pounds.

The facts upon which this recommendation was based include the following:

Peace talk depressed the corn market 25 to 40 cents a bushel.

Cheap corn abroad threatened a similar reduction for live hogs if prices continue on a 13 to 1 ratio.

Overshipments and excessive receipts have weighed heavily on current quotations.

Influenza has curtailed consumption and decreased packers' labor supply, adding to the congested market.

Exports and demands continue sufficient to take up increased hog production. Increased production is far short of present and prospective demand.

Swine producers of the country will contribute to their own interests by not now flooding the market.

The Eagle restaurant of Ft. Wayne was permitted to pay a penalty of $50 to the United War Work fund in Allen county, for an excessive sugar service. The restaurant violated the regulation fixing a level teaspoonful as the maximum sugar allowance for one meal.

All grain handlers and grain dealers who hold licenses from the United States Food Administration are advised that it is the purpose of the cereal division to call on such licensees on January 1, 1919, for a report, (on blanks to be furnished by us), of their three months' operations, October 1, 1918 to December 31, 1918—such report to show gross proceeds from sales, total expense, and amount of net profit earned during the period, also per cent of profit on total sales. In figuring the net profits, interest on capital cannot be considered as an item of expense, but interest actually paid on loans is recognized as a legitimate expense item. No item is to be included in expense account which is not allowed by the Treasury Department in returns for income tax or excess profits taxes.

Owing to a misunderstanding of the resolution relative to the preferred classification of agricultural lime, the following statement of R. S. Baker, assistant priorities commissioner, is made public: "The State official having supervision of agricultural production or soil conservation, in Indiana the director of extension, Purdue University, may supervise without direction or permit from this division the distribution of burned lime and ground limestone for agricultural purposes, and any manufacturer, producer, or dealer in burned lime or ground limestone may supply such products for agricultural purposes under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by such director."

The usual fall decline in market prices of poultry, due to large receipts of immature and poorly fleshed chickens, scarcity of labor and inadequate refrigerating space. A heavy marketing of moulting hens also has a depressing effect on the market. Producers may assist in stabilizing the poultry market by withholding immature chickens and moulting hens and by extending the normal period of fall marketing well into the winter. This will result also in actual increase in food from poultry.

Food Club Notes

Home Division, U. S. Food Administration

County Presidents U. S. Food Clubs:

The postponement of Home Card week will give us time to lay our plans more carefully so that there will be no necessity for delay because of inadequate preparation. In another sense, however, the situation is rendered more difficult. We were all "set" for the drive next week. The sudden realization of more time is bound to result in a relaxing of interest unless we keep a close hand on ourselves. Try to forestall any such reaction in your county if possible. Impress upon all your workers their responsibility in emphasizing the urgent need of the most careful conservation during this interval. There is no danger of the war being over before the Home Card is out. Even though the peace treaties were actually signed war conditions will prevail for a long time to come. Conservation must still be our watchword.

Sincerely yours,

H. E. BARNARD,
Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

Benjamin W. Douglass, federal food administrator for Brown County, has addressed from his

U. S. Food Administration.

OBEY ORDERS!

office in Trévlac, the following circular to all dealers in food:

There have been a number of requests for the formula for making apple butter without the use of sugar.

There are a number of ways in which this may be done, but the easiest and best is to use sweet cider. Take equal parts (by measure) of peeled apples and sweet cider. Start cooking over a slow fire and cook until stiff enough. I have made this in a large copper kettle over an open fire with very great success. It is usually best when making on a large scale to boil the cider down about one-half before adding the apples. It takes about eight hours to make a large batch in the open. We have found that one barrel of cider and one barrel of apples will make about twelve gallons of very fine butter. Apple butter made in this way will keep indefinitely, it tastes better than the butter made with sugar and spice, it is more wholesome and it SAVES SUGAR.

If cider is not available you can substitute corn syrup and use slightly more than you would use of sugar. Some people tell me they make apple butter with sorghum, but I have been unable to learn any of the details. It ought to work.

Ice Dealers Represented in U. S. Food Administration

H. B. DePrez, of Shelbyville, who has become an assistant to Dr. Harry E. Barnard, federal food administrator for Indiana, will assist in the adjustment of ice problems in the State. Mr. DePrez is a former president of the State Ice Dealers' Association and is a director of the national organization. He will attend a conference called by the United States Food Administration, at Philadelphia, Nov. 7-8, at which time conservation policies affecting the industry will be discussed. He states that 60 per cent of the membership of the Indiana association have pledged to cooperate with the administration in the execution of its policies, the most radical of which, perhaps, is the closing of all "unnecessary" plants.

America can ship 50 per cent more food this year if we are all 50 per cent better Americans.

The nations of the world do not and cannot trust the world to those who have hitherto been the masters of German policy.—PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON.

Reconstruction Plan Will Be Investigated

Council of Defense Will Probe Question of a Survey of Unused and Unoccupied Land.

For the purpose of investigating the proposed survey of unused and unoccupied lands of the State that might be made available for colonization and cultivation by returning soldiers, a reconstruction suggestion that came from the field division of the Council of National Defense, Chairman M. E. Foley, at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense November 6th, named the following special committee: Isaac D. Straus and William G. Irwin, of the Council; Warren T. McCray, chairman of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation; A. T. Wiancko, of the division of soils, Purdue university; T. A. Coleman, acting director of the Food Production and Conservation Committee, and Luke H. Wright, president of the Indiana Grange. This committee is authorized to make a thorough investigation of the proposal and report back to the Council.

Arthur W. Brady, chairman of the Committee on Proposed Construction, interpreted a modification of Circular No. 21, which deals with the application of men, money and materials for use other than by the federal government in its war program. Mr. Brady stated that the committee is without jurisdiction in all construction matters undertaken as a result of contracts entered into by the war facilities division of the Priorities Board. It also passed jurisdiction on hospital and barracks construction to the same agency. Building projects in cities, towns and villages, of an aggregate cost not to exceed $500, are to be passed upon finally by the State Council or its authorized agents. Farm construction is limited to $1,000 without permits, repairs or alterations to a cost of $2,500, but no extensions may proceed without reference to the priorities division. Following the conference in Washington November 11th and 12th, which will be attended by Mr. Brady and Chairman Foley, there will be printed a revision of the rules governing construction matters.

On the recommendation of Chairman Irwin of the Solicitations Committee, the Council indorsed the American Jewish Relief Committee, which will solicit funds in the State for war purposes. In this connection the following resolution was adopted:

The American Jewish Relief Committee has requested the sanction of the State Council of Defense to its solicitation of funds for the use of sufferers from the war. This committee is composed of the most prominent Jews of the country and is entitled to the full consideration of those contemplating gifts to the various war activities; therefore be it Resolved by the State Council of Defense, That full approval be given to the solicitation of funds in this State by the American Jewish Relief Committee.

The recommendation of the Connecticut State Council of Defense that the daylight saving plan be recommended by the State Council as an established national time-keeping method was referred to the Committee on Scientific Research. The Connecticut State Council would have semiannual changes made in the position of the hands of the ### Attention, Nurses.

More than ten thousand additional nurses will be needed for the army nurse corps by January 1st. Another twenty-five thousand will be needed by June 1st. An impression that no more nurses are needed in military hospitals has gone out. This is not true. The need was never more urgent than now. Eligible young women are asked to offer their services at once, as an imperative patriotic duty.

clock, the first Sunday in April and the first Sunday in November.

The Council was extended an invitation to attend the Indiana Apple Show at Columbus, November 6, 7 and 8, by Mr. Irwin, whose message was accompanied by a basket of prize fruit.

The Council approved the report of the Committee on Proposed Construction, covering a large number of applications for permits to proceed with improvements.

To suit the convenience of Messrs. Brady and Foley, who will be in Washington the early part of the week, the Council adjourned to meet at 10:30 o'clock Thursday, November 14th.

The Bullet or the Ax.

I do not know what fashions of art, science, and philosophy may be in vogue in future times. But this I know: Nowhere will a nation cringe before a madman, such as the Kaiser, who has made of the earth a graveyard and a funeral pall of the soul. He is the last of his kind. He is incomprehensible. He was born of a good woman, and nursed at her breast. He was playful in childhood, and he had brothers and sisters. He had all good things given him, as if the earth were a fairyland. He grew to manhood, loved, and had children of his own. He had many beautiful gardens and stately palaces. He had every wish gratified by seventy million souls. Such a man should have become a very god of love and gratitude. Instead, he turned and cut the breasts where children drink. He often sat in a quiet woodland palace, and by a signature or a word sent hundreds of thousands of men to unspeakable agony and terrible death, yet he always spared his own sons. He murdered little children, and cut off the hands of little boys. He tortured innocent young women by tearing them from their homes and transporting them like cattle to distant lands. He wantonly burned cities that held centuries of accumulated treasures dear to the art and learning of the whole world. He dragged labor-weary old men and women from their homes and shot them. He shot thousands of prisoners because an ounce of steel cost him less than a piece of bread. In history he will consort with Nero, Tamerlane, and Ivan the Terrible—human monstrosities! I do not know what men may think in future times, but this I know: They will demand to read that he, too, felt the quick, sharp agony of violent death. And if there be made a peace that does not shed his blood, it will be a damned peace! For this America has clinched her fist. The living, the soldiers dead, posterity—all demand for him the bullet or the ax!

MAX EHLMANN.

Hogging Off Corn Is Measure of Economy

Labor and Food Situations Cited as Evidence of Wisdom of Such Procedure.

Labor is an expensive item in harvesting the corn crop. This is realized by farmers who are forced to pay a high price for husking, cutting and shocking of their corn, and any practical and profitable methods that can be employed to eliminate the expense of labor are welcomed by corn growers. With this in mind the animal husbandry department of Purdue has made a study of "hogging off" corn, both at the Purdue farm and on a large number of farms in the State; the results of which are contained in Purdue leaflet No. 102.

P. S. Richey, author of this publication, says that farmers who have practiced this method of harvesting a part of their corn are agreed that "hogging off" should be followed on every well managed corn and hog farm.

The State Food Committee wishes to call attention to this publication, as it contains information of especial importance in view of the labor and food situation.

"Hogging off corn is followed with profit by many of Indiana's best hog men. Practical co-operative farm demonstrations in many counties of the State have proven that more pork can be produced per acre of corn when fed in this way than in any other. Gains are more rapid and economical than when hogs are fed by hand, and the labor of harvesting and feeding the corn is saved. This is a big item, especially now when labor is so scarce, costly and difficult to secure.

How Many Hogs Are Required Per Acre?

"The number of hogs required per acre depends largely upon their size and the yield of the corn. Enough hogs ought to be fed to clean the area up in ten to fifteen days. This means that 20 to 30 shoats weighing 125 pounds each are required per acre of 40 to 50 bushels of corn.

A Supplementary Feed Should Be Fed.

"The use of a supplementary protein feed like soybeans increases the rate of gain and the total gain per acre and reduces the cost of production according to farm demonstration results.

"If soybeans are not grown in the corn, and no other home grown protein crop is available for grazing, it may be profitable to feed tankage or linseed oilmeal in a self-feeder. This is especially advisable with light, thin shoats weighing 75 to 100 pounds. It is doubtful whether feeding tankage or linseed meal will be profitable after the hogs average 150 to 175 pounds.

What Are the Advantages of Hogging Off Corn?

"1. Labor and expense of harvesting and feeding corn are saved.

"2. Crb space is saved.

"3. The corn stalks are in better condition for next year's crop.

"4. The corn crop is fed in the field where grown, thus returning a large portion of the plant food to the soil."

The 1918-19 food program is both a national and a personal obligation. The nation has never failed to meet all obligations and the individual must not.

Patriotism in Indiana

Allen County.—At a meeting of food club members at the home of President Mrs. A. C. Eward in St. Joseph Township, Mrs. Frank Belot gave a talk on bread making, and also a conservation spice cake recipe using 100 per cent barley flour and the old-fashioned sorghum for sweetening. ...Fort Wayne employees of the Edison Lamp Works have as a body pledged to send to every boy in the service of the United States army who formerly was employed at the plant a Christmas gift of the sum of $5. This will not call for more than a 25-cent subscription from present employees of the company, who number about 700. ...W. H. Scheiman, chairman of the county council of defense, reported at the last meeting of the council that he had received a letter concerning the new film "America's Answer," which has been released by the U. S. Division of Films, and which will be shown for the first time in Indiana at Fort Wayne, stating that the scenes were made on the battlefields and not from theatrical stagings of fake battles. The council indorsed the exhibit.

Elkhart County.—Mrs. W. E. Wider, one of the members of the local motor corps, has presented the organization with a number of printed signs bearing the words "Motor Corps" in gold letters on a background of black. These cards will be placed on the autos when on duty. Permanent non-coms for the corps were selected by Captain Ellen Barney, as follows: Corporals Mere Dinehart, Elizabeth Thomas and Una Marian Kepler.

Jefferson County.—The steady antagonism of L. A. Thomas, grocer, toward the food administration program, culminating in the sale of two barrels of flour without substitute, has called forth an order from Nicholas Harper, county food administrator, prohibiting Thomas from selling or handling flour or sugar for the period of the war.

Lake County.—Under the auspices of the Federal Commission on Home Foods has been placed in the windows of one of the Hammond stores and is attracting the attention of hundreds of housewives, men and children, and has resulted in many a Hammond family becoming better food soldiers.

Madison County.—The initial meeting of the Americanization Committee of the county council of defense was held on October 21st, with Prof. O. H. Day of the public schools, E. F. Greager, Joseph B. Kennedy, H. H. Ramsey, Miss Hoppes, Mrs. Leafy Palmer and Mrs. Jessie Croan present. Short talks were given by the various members in attendance, and tentative plans made for a program which will be completed at the next meeting. This committee, which is under the auspices of the county council of defense, is working in co-operation with the public schools of the county.

Montgomery County.—A certain Montgomery County farmer, through the instrumentality of Food Administrator Endicott, recently made his first purchase of Liberty Bonds. The farmer, who lives northeast of Crawfordville, grew a successful crop of sorghum which he converted into syrup and sold at such a good price that the matter of profiteering was brought to the attention of the food administration. The farmer admitted the profiteering, and also admitted he had purchased neither Liberty Bonds nor War Savings Stamps. After a thorough investigation, in view of the fact that it was the man's first offense, Administrator Endicott suggested the purchase of the bonds, and explained the purpose of the food administration so effectively that the farmer viewed the war from an entirely different angle, and promised henceforward to be a steady customer of Liberty Bonds, and to follow the rules of the food administration to the letter.

St. Joseph County.—The county council of defense headquarters at South Bend received from Mishawaka as their contribution to the Christmas gift campaign for the members of the crew of the battleship "Indiana" twenty-four comfort bags, which were made and donated by the Tri Kappa sorority girls and members of the Dorcas society. Each bag was supplied with toilet articles which were purchased with subscriptions obtained by six of the senior class of high school girls. Many additional gifts of candy, cigarettes, pencils, etc., were turned over to Mrs. G. B. Williams, local chairman, and forwarded to South Bend.

Red Cross Activities

Despite the serious effect of the influenza epidemic upon the State's nursing resources the Lake Division Department of Nursing announced today that twenty-eight Indiana nurses applied during October for active Red Cross service overseas.

Applications from Indiana cities were as follows:

Indianapolis, 14; South Bend, 7; Vincennes, 4; Ft. Wayne, 3.

The new requirements permit provisional enrollment of the following new classes:

1. Graduates of schools not accredited, but with recommendations from local Red Cross chapters.

2. Graduates of schools accredited but with a small daily average of patients, recommended by local chapters.

3. Graduates of special hospitals without general training.

4. Graduates of foreign schools.

Peace talk has not caused the Gas Defense Division of the Chemical Warfare Service to permit the Red Cross to lessen its activities on the collection of nut shells and fruit pits.

Lake Division Red Cross Headquarters is issuing a new appeal to its junior members in Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky to push the collection of shells and pits for use in combating German poison gas.

The Government, through the Gas Defense Division, bears the transportation charges of shipments of shells and pits from Red Cross chapters, branches and auxiliaries to their nearest collection center.

Red Cross chapters at Louisville, Lexington, Indianapolis, Evansville, Fort Wayne, Toledo, Columbus, Cincinnati and Cleveland have opened collection centers at the request of the Bureau of Conservation at Lake Division Headquarters.

Receipts at the Indiana warehouse of the Lake Division, American Red Cross, show that the Hoosier State has responded generously to the "linen shower" for France. The report for the month of October shows that nearly 100,000 pieces of linen were donated through its different chapters.

For October the number of surgical dressings turned out was 195,976, as against 277,750 the previous month. This decrease is accounted for in the fact that Red Cross women are now engaged in making larger and more elaborate dressings which require more patience and time. The Lake Division, it is announced, has a surplus of several million "wipes," which the former dressings were called and which were more simply made. During October 6,813 hospital garments were made by the Red Cross shops, comprising such articles as pajamas, bath robes, bed shirts, bed socks and trench foot and bandaged foot slippers. The number of hospital supplies, such as sheets, pillowcases, etc., was 12,458. The number of refugee garments received at the warehouse aggregated 13,754.

Articles for soldiers, composed of socks, sweaters, mufflers, wristlets and comfort bags, numbered 34,345. Of these receipts there were 18,840 pairs of socks and 5,038 sweaters.

"Back-to-School!"

"The school is your training camp. Don't be a deserter." This is what the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor is saying to the thousands of children who are leaving the schools for industry, dazzled by the present high wages offered. Jobs that offer very little training and less hope of a future are being taken unquestioningly by the youngsters who "don't like school anyway" and think they are "old enough to work," or who feel the urge of home necessity.

The Children's Bureau has just announced a back-to-school drive whose object may be stated in the President's words, "That no child may have less opportunity for education because of the war." The drive will attempt two things: to return to the schools and keep there the children who have deserted them for industry, and to keep the children now in school from leaving prematurely. The actual work of the drive will be done through the Child Conservation Section of the Council of National Defense, which is organized into state, county, and local units. In each school community committees are being formed whose first duty will be to study child labor and school attendance laws. After that they will go to the county superintendent, the school principals, and teachers to get accurate lists of the children who have not returned to school. Then begins the real work of getting the children back. Parents will be called upon, and the committee members will talk over with them why it is important not only to the child but to the country that he be well prepared for work before attempting it. Where the reasons for leaving were pecuniary an adjustment will be attempted so that the child can return. The bureau urges that the adjustment take the form of a scholarship similar to those in practically all of the colleges, and in certain city school systems. The average amount of school scholarships is $120 a year, and it is hoped that as a result of the drive an average of at least one will be founded for each of the 281,000 schoolhouses in the United States. The Red Cross will help to keep in school those children who have a father or brother in the service.

The refusal of the Federal Government to employ children in essential industries gives point to the bureau's contention that they should not be allowed to be employed to furnish a cheap source of labor for non-essentials. The War Labor Policies Board, which is composed of representatives of all the departments directly concerned in the prosecution of the war, has made a definite ruling that children under fourteen shall not be employed on war work and that children between fourteen and sixteen shall not be employed on war work for more than eight hours a day or six days a week, or between 7:00 p. m. and 6:00 a. m.

This action has been followed by a general order to all branch offices from the Director of the United States Employment Service. The order states that the policy of the service is to discourage all children under sixteen from leaving school. If a child under sixteen is placed, federal standards of child labor will be followed unless the standards of the particular State in which he works happen to be higher. In that case the state standards will be observed. An effort to put the children in suitable and "developing" positions will be made, and so far as possible the conditions under which they work will be investigated.

The United States Boys' Working Reserve refuses to give federal recognition to boys under sixteen who are employed on farms or in industry. It maintains that children under sixteen should be kept in school by all the pressure that can be brought to bear, on the ground that the future welfare of the Nation depends on the educational training of its youth.

The opening of the schools for the fall term gave the Children's Bureau an opportunity to find out to just what extent children were leaving school prematurely, whether those who had worked on vacation permits were returning, and, in general, the conditions among working children. A series of inquiries were made in typical industrial and commercial centers to throw light on these and other questions. The cities studied include New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Washington, Wilmington, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Louisville, and several smaller cities. In Washington it was found that this year 1,095 permits to work either outside school hours or full time had been granted under the law which permits children of twelve or thirteen to work, if, in the opinion of the juvenile court, the poverty of the family justifies it. In 1916-17 only 277 such permits were issued. There is a gain of 295 per cent. The number of children from fourteen to sixteen who were granted regular working permits rose from 727 in 1916-17 to 1,917 this year—an increase of 164 per cent. In Wilmington 61 per cent more children have taken out permits this year than last. Practically all of this 61 per cent have definitely left school to enter industry on full time.

Reports of greatly increased shifting from job to job seem to indicate that the child is not finding in his work a steadily progressing training. The figures do not show that children are staying at their jobs more steadily because of higher wages, or that they are staying long enough to gain from their industrial training experience which will make them increasingly useful.

The Bureau emphasizes the fact that the success of the drive depends largely on an educated and intelligent public opinion which will insist upon the complete enforcement of child labor and school attendance laws, and demand that each community shall see to it that its children are not deprived of schooling because of poverty. The school welfare committees are urged to secure for their communities the visiting teachers, vocational advisors, and similar means of guarding the school child's well-being which have proved their value in other localities.

War Service Educational Work Taken Up with Renewed Zeal

Katherine Merrill Graydon, state chairman, Department of Education, Woman's Section, Indiana State Council of Defense, in Bulletin No. 109, dated November 1, 1918, addresses county chairmen, Department of Education, as follows:

The work of the educational department has been more or less disarranged for the past two months. Illness caused me to resign my chairmanship. As no successor has been appointed, I have, at last, consented to try to carry on the work. Pardon this personal reference, but I have wished you to understand the cause in the break of the continuity of the work.

Now, let us take up this war service with renewed energy and zeal. I shall need your help, your resourceful planning, and urge you to take the initiative in your community wherever you see it desirable.

The work will not be of a character entirely different from last year—it is not desirable that it should be—but it will be more and more the meeting of the demands of the time in spreading educational propaganda. I can only make suggestions; it is your place to carry out these suggestions, modified as you see best, according to the needs of your community. Let me repeat what I have heretofore said:

1. See that every township is organized, with a good working chairman, alive to her patriotic opportunity.

2. Have every township chairman send you a report of her work and of the conditions and needs of her section, once a month. You, as county chairman, tabulate these reports into a form that reaches me, the state chairman, the first of every month. Send it, as all other communications, to my residence, 303 Downey avenue, Indianapolis. These reports I shall compile into a form which I shall monthly hand to Mrs. Carlisle. This request is authoritative. If any other officer of your county asks for a report, give it to him; but that has nothing to do with my report or with my request. It is imperative that I have a report from every county chairman of the Department of Education the first day of every month. Will you be kind enough to place your report on paper of the size (or near it) of this paper, type-written when possible, otherwise with ink, and folded as few times as possible. Some of the reports sent in are pencilled on scraps of paper and difficult to read. This seems unworthy of the character of the work we have undertaken.

Our work will continue to lie with the schools, the clubs and classes, and the libraries.

(1) The schools are so well organized in some places that there is little to suggest by way of improvement. But it is necessary that you know the conditions, whatever they are. The reports which came in last summer revealed the fact that there were schools in the State that had done little, and no war work. Every township chairman should know just what every school in her section is doing, should praise it when good, should try to improve it when faulty. Do not let this spirit for war work lag. There should be even a deeper enthusiasm this year than last year, as we near, we pray, the victory won by glorious fighting. There is so much beautiful literature for today. Is it being used in the schools? Patriotic programs should be arranged just as often and just as appealingly as last year, their object being not so much to arouse enthusiasm as to spread intelligence. Community singing should be one of the strong assets of this department.

(2) I hope the clubs are giving a large amount of time to the consideration of war topics. How they can be deeply interested in other things is difficult to understand.

(3) I have suggested before the formation of classes. I fear I present my plea inadequately, for I do not hear a loud response. It seems to me absolutely necessary to know this war—not to know the headlines of the daily paper, not to gain a knowledge from general conversation, not from a smattering of club papers, but a deep and searching intelligence concerning the struggle of today. Such a study is equal to a college education. It will transform a woman intellectually and spiritually. She owes it to herself, she owes it to her family, she owes it to her heroes across the water. These boys of ours are not going to be satisfied with us just as they left us. They have grown so tremendously in what they have lived through, their eyes have been so opened to the eternal verities, that it becomes us to cultivate what in us lies of mind, heart and soul to be worthy of them upon their return. Therefore I urge you with all my might to form classes of ten or a dozen women under an able leader, or led by each other in turns, and to do genuine, high-minded study. During such meeting knitting and sewing, etc., could be indulged in.

(4) There is little to suggest for the libraries; they seem to be doing fine work, in the main, in arousing interest in the young in the war reading, and in presenting to adults desirable literature. But if your libraries are insufficient, see to them.

(5) Keep in close touch with your county papers. Let some of your work find place in them. Publicity often helps.

Some publications I mean to issue soon. Will each chairman of the county let me know in her first report the number she will need? I shall mail to her and she will address to her township women.

As I have said before, I think it a mistake for one woman to be chairman of several departments in her county. I do not know about the work of other sections, but I do know that if the work of the educational department is brought to a successful issue it will require all the strength and time, all the thought and resource of every woman who undertakes it.

I mentioned in the summer the fact that we would have in the fall a state meeting. For patent reasons this has not yet been, though I hope it may be when various conditions improve.

I bring my long letter to a close with an appeal that you enter into this winter's work with a renewed and deepened earnestness. Indiana's educational work is said to have stood well in the councils of the wise at Washington. Let us go "over the top" this season, holding for our own personal slogan Browning's words, "Tis God's voice calls; how could I stay?"

Eating At Hotels Abroad

In view of the recent regulations issued by the United States Food Administration for hotels and restaurants it is interesting to review some of the restrictions to which the public eating places of France and Great Britain have been subject for some time, and to see how much worse their patrons fare than we do.

In French hotels and restaurants, the meat portion of any meal is limited to seven ounces with bone, and five ounces without. Moreover it is not possible there, as it is here, to make up for a small serving of meat with plenty of other things, for any meal which exceeds six francs in price (and with the prices existing in France today, few meals cost less) is limited to two main dishes, in addition to a soup, a hors-d'oeuvre and a dessert. The dessert, by the way, may consist of fresh or cooked fruit or ice cream—provided the latter contains no sugar, no milk, no eggs and no flour.

In England the amount of meat served in a public eating place is restricted indirectly but effectively by the general scheme of meat rationing. The Britisher has four meat coupons a week, which if used altogether, would secure him a little less than one pound of meat per week. This means meat as it comes from the butchers with all the bones and waste weighed in with it.

By the time it has been trimmed and cooked, the portion for which he must give up one of his coupons is tiny indeed—and he can get no meat in a public place without forfeiting the necessary coupons.

As a matter of fact, most people in England prefer to use their coupons for the meals they eat at home, where the coupons of the entire family can be combined to greater advantage. So the amount of meat served in English hotels and restaurants is actually very small.

General Order Number 6 of the United States Food Administration limits each patron to one-half ounce of butter per meal. In England only one-fifth of an ounce of butter may be served—and in France none at all. Public eating places here are allowed to serve only one-half ounce of Cheddar cheese per person per meal. In France no cheese of any sort may be served unless it contains less than 36 per cent of fat; and with meals costing more than six francs it is forbidden to serve any cheese whatsoever.

In this country we are limited by General Order No. 8 to one teaspoonful of sugar per meal. In France and Great Britain, if you want sugar in your coffee or tea, you are allowed to bring it with you, but absolutely no sugar is served in the hotels and restaurants in these countries. There is a slight exception to this in Great Britain. Public eating places may use one-seventh of an ounce of sugar in the preparation of each luncheon and dinner which they serve.

And finally we come down to General Order No. 12 of the United States Food Administration which forbids the serving of double cream or cream de luxe. A year ago, the British food controller forbade the sale of cream, except for butter or for use in feeding young children—and since then cream of any sort has been almost an unknown quantity in England. So they don't have to forbid its use in public eating places. But they do forbid the serving of milk, except to children under ten, or with tea and coffee. In France, it is the same. The serving of milk in any form is forbidden and cream is practically unheard of.

There are very few Americans who will suffer from the new hotel regulations. If there is any one in the United States who really cannot get a square meal under the present restrictions, he will be able to sympathize with the American who returned to this country last spring, looking lean and hungry after a winter spent in one of the big hotels of London. When asked what the real state of affairs was over there, he replied with feeling, "My God, England's starving!"

With the Movies Open Again.

The committee on public information at Washington has announced the following hints for Four-Minute Men:

Stick to your time allowance. Five minutes means a guess; four minutes makes a promise.

Begin with a positive, concrete statement. Tell them something at the start.

Use short sentences. The man who can't make one word do the work of two is no four-minute speaker.

Avoid fine phrases. You aren't there to give them an ear full, but a mind full.

Talk to the back row of your audience; you'll hit everything closer in.

Talk to the simplest intelligence in your audience; you'll hit everything higher up.

Be natural and direct. Sincerity wears no frills.

Give your words time. A jumbled sentence is a wasted sentence. You can't afford waste on a four-minute allowance.

Don't fear to be colloquial. Slang that your hearers understand is better than Latin that they don't.

Don't figure the importance of your job on a time basis. Four hours of thinking may go into four minutes of speaking.

You represent the United States of America. Don't forget it. And don't give your audience occasion to forget it.

Finish strong and sharp. The butterfly is forgotten as soon as he departs, but you recall the hornet because he ends with a point.

Finally, and always—

Stick to your pledge and the four-minute limit.

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of patriotic information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the Federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation and its prosecution of the war with Germany, particularly as pertains to the production and conservation of food.

To County Councils of Defense:

The Committee on the Control of Solicitation of War Funds submitted the following report regarding the organization known as the "Fatherless Children of France." The report was accepted and approved by the State Council.

"The organization 'Fatherless Children of France' has submitted its annual report and asked the approval of the State Council of Defense for the solicitation of funds in Indiana. The report is a most excellent one, showing a very low operating cost and good management. It is recommended that the council give its approval to this request."

To County Councils of Defense:

A number of conflicting reports have been circulated concerning the regulations governing the sending of Christmas packages to soldiers, sailors and marines overseas. You are urged to give wide publicity to the attached authoritative information on this subject.

The utmost care should be taken to warn newspapers to whom you release this article as to the necessity of utilizing it in accurate form, using the material entirely if possible.

Christmas Packages for Soldiers.

The following rules for sending Christmas packages to soldiers of the American Expeditionary Force have been promulgated after a series of conferences by the Adjutant General of the War Department, the Post Office Department and the American Red Cross:

1. The War Department authorizes relatives of officers and soldiers in France to send Christmas packages, which will be of standard size and weight, one to each individual in the American Expeditionary Force.

2. In order to insure the limitation of one package per man, which in itself will consume a very large amount of tonnage, a plan has been worked out by which General Pershing is distributing to members of his command coupons on which are inscribed the correct names and addresses of the members of the American Expeditionary Force. These labels will serve as address labels for the packages. The coupons or labels will be mailed by the members of the American Expeditionary Force direct to the persons they wish to designate as senders of packages and no package will be forwarded without such a coupon. It is expected that the labels will be received in this country by November 1.

3. On receiving a Christmas package label the person to whom it has been sent should present it at the nearest Chapter, Branch or Auxiliary headquarters of the Red Cross where he will receive a pasteboard carton 8x4x9 inches in size. The Red Cross is to allot boxes to its Chapters, based on the number of men in service from each community. It is expected that these will be ready for distribution by November 1.

4. Boxes may be filled with any combination of articles except those on the list barred by postal officials. Prohibited articles are all intoxicating liquors, all inflammable material, including friction matches and any composition likely to ignite or explode (cigarette lighters come under this classification), liquids and fragile articles improperly packed. Under postal regulations no note or message or written matter of any kind will be permitted to remain in the boxes. In addition to the list of prohibited articles, relatives and friends of the soldiers are urged to bear these facts in mind when preparing Christmas parcels:

Do not put anything in the package which will not keep fresh until Christmas.

Pack dried fruits and other food products in small tin or wooden boxes. Give preference to hard candy over chocolates unless the latter are enclosed in heavy wrappers. Soft chocolates are easily crushed and may spoil other contents.

Do not put articles packed in glass in the package.

Gifts should be wrapped in khaki colored handkerchiefs 27 inches square.

5. The weight wrapped should not exceed three pounds; unwrapped the weight may be approximately two pounds fifteen ounces. Parcels may bear inscriptions such as "Please do not open until Christmas," "Merry Christmas," "Happy New Year," "With Best Wishes," and the like.

6. When the box is packed it should be taken unwrapped and unsealed to the nearest collection center indicated by the Red Cross, together with the address label and sufficient stamps to carry it by parcel post to Hoboken, New Jersey. After the package has passed the inspection of Red Cross representatives as to contents and weight and has been wrapped in stout paper, the Christmas label bearing the address of the man for whom it is intended is placed on it. The person sending the package in the presence of the Red Cross worker is required to affix the stamps which will carry it to Hoboken. A label certifying that inspection has been completed by the Red Cross is placed on the package which is left in the custody of the Red Cross until delivery to the postal authorities.

7. No package will be accepted for transmission after November 20.

A question has been raised concerning the sending of Christmas packages to men in the service who have no relatives or friends to whom they wish to send these coupons. It was suggested that such men send their coupons to the Red Cross, which in turn would give American citizens without relatives overseas an opportunity to contribute to Christmas boxes. In this matter the Red Cross has ruled as follows with the concurrence of the War Department:

"This has been discussed with a member of the War Council and very carefully considered from all points of view and it is believed that it would be impracticable to undertake the collection and distribution of these parcels. In the first place, there is no way of estimating the number of such parcels that would be required. It has been suggested that the parcels contributed by the Red Cross members for general distribution might be sent only to those soldiers who would turn back their mailing labels to the Red Cross, but this again would leave a number of men without the Christmas package because many of them would not care to use their label in this way when, in the first place, they had no family or friend to whom to send it. We have also the feeling that a Christmas packet containing little of intrinsic value would lose much of its significance if received from the Red Cross or from some unknown person rather than from the family or friends.

"There are some further complications introduced in organizing for the collection and distribution of the parcels which would tend to complicate what is already a rather difficult act of operations to get accomplished within the time available.

"The Red Cross abroad is preparing to make a general distribution of tobacco to all of the A. E. F. If possible, we shall have cigarettes in special packages of fifty for this distribution, although it is somewhat difficult, as may be imagined, to get the large quantity required put up in special packages.

"Our general conclusion is that we would rather not attempt to cover the men who will not get packages from their families or friends by a special distribution of packages collected by others or made up at some central point by the Red Cross because the difficulties introduced seem too clearly to outweigh any benefit to the men through this special distribution.

"I should like to add one further thought, and that is our desire in all that we do to make no distribution of things that is not general to all alike and this suggestion runs counter to this policy in a way we believe would be somewhat serious."

Christmas Packages for Sailors.

The following instructions regarding the manner of packing and shipping Christmas packages for men in the naval service both in home waters and abroad, have been prepared by the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts of the Navy Department:

1. Packages forwarded by parcels post must comply with the postal regulations and should be inclosed in substantial boxes with hinged or screw-top cover to facilitate opening and inspecting.

2. All boxes shipped by express are limited to 20 pounds in weight, should measure not more than 2 cubic feet in volume, be of wood, well strapped, and have a hinged or screw top to facilitate opening and inspecting.

3. No perishable food products other than those inclosed in cans or glass jars should be packed in parcels post or express shipments.

4. All mail matter should be addressed as now prescribed by the postal regulations. All express packages should be forwarded in care of Supply Officer, Fleet Supply Base, Twenty-ninth Street and Third Avenue, South Brooklyn, N. Y.

5. All packages must be plainly marked with the name and address of the sender together with a notation indicating the nature of the contents, such as "Christmas box," or "Christmas present."

6. The supply officer at New York will cause each express package to be opened and carefully examined to see that nothing of an explosive or other dangerous character is forwarded.

7. The shipment of Christmas packages for vessels abroad should be made so as to reach New York as early as possible and not later than November 15.

Christmas Packages for Marines.

The War Department regulations for Christmas parcels for soldiers overseas will be observed in the case of every marine whose address is American Expeditionary Force. This indicates that the marine is serving overseas in an army capacity and temporarily detached from the navy.

For all other marines, whether in training or serving actively in this country, at naval posts and stations, at home and abroad, or on ship duty, navy regulations will govern.

SOLICITATION OF FUNDS FOR THE AMERICAN RED CROSS.

To the Several State Councils of Defense:

In order that the national campaigns for funds for war purposes may be confined and separated by proper intervals, the American Red Cross informs us that it will conduct its next campaign for funds in the spring, and that it expects to make only one annual appeal for funds. At the same time the American Red Cross feels that it is essential to the strength of its organization as well as to the successful conduct of its solicitation, that this campaign should be conducted throughout the nation on a unified basis, by solicitors operating directly under Red Cross campaign management and soliciting on behalf of the Red Cross exclusively. Any effort of war chests or similar bodies to collect funds for general war purposes including the Red Cross, and thus to provide for a lump community contribution to the Red Cross fund, breaks up this national campaign and seriously interferes with the development of the "Red Cross morale," which is quite as essential to the work of the Red Cross as the procurement of funds. The Council of National Defense believes that the American Red Cross is justified in its desire to conduct its campaign upon this national basis and that interference therewith is detrimental to the public welfare in the conduct of the war. The Council of National Defense therefore unites with the American Red Cross in requesting each State Council of Defense not to undertake and to prevent on the part of its local councils or other local bodies any solicitation of funds, all or part of which are to be turned over to the American Red Cross, except solicitation by accredited Red Cross agents in the annual Red Cross campaign.

If any war chest or other plan for joint community collection and contribution is undertaken within your State, we ask you to exercise your influence to make sure that it is clearly announced that the collection is for war purposes other than the American Red Cross.

It should not be inferred from this that the American Red Cross does not desire the assistance of the State Council in its annual campaign. The Red Cross welcomes this aid, which has proved so valuable to it in the past, and sincerely hopes that the State Councils will arrange with the Red Cross campaign managers to render similar assistance in the next campaign.

Very truly yours,
GROSVENOR B. CLARKSON,
Director of the Field Division and Secretary of the Council.

U. S. Boys' Working Reserve

Farmers Appreciate the Services of B. W. R. Members.

The following letter of appreciation of the work of a member of the reserve is typical of the communications coming into the office of Federal Director Isaac D. Straus from all parts of Indiana:

Goodland, Ind., October 30, 1918.

To Whom It May Concern:

Albert Bedel has done extra well for us in helping farm, and feed our pure-bred hogs. We could not have had our $3,000 first sale of Big Type Poland Chinas without his help in their feeding and care. SAGE BROS.

Accompanying the above letter is a request for another reserve boy to take Albert's place since he is returning to high school.

A Greater Need for Boy Power.

That there will be a greater demand than ever for aid from the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve in production of food during 1919 is indicated in the following statements by Herbert Hoover:

The boys of France and England have been mobilized for the war just as seriously as their fathers and big brothers, and some are assisting the armies as message bearers and camp helpers. Perhaps the greatest service, however, that boys can perform in this war and one at which they can do as much here in America as in France or England is the work in the fields and gardens to produce more food for the fighting forces. The large numbers of men which have been withdrawn from agricultural pursuits must be replaced in some way, if the armies are to be fed and the millions of women, children, and old people behind the lines maintained in health. Therefore, every boy who pitches into agricultural work with complete vigor is worth just as much to his country as the man he relieves. "Boy power" is thus translatable directly into man power, and man power is the predominant factor on the front today. HERBERT HOOVER.

In Terms of Human Lives.

In the face of this situation we cannot but measure foodstuffs in terms of human lives, and only in terms of human lives.

The person who is responsible for the waste of food is guilty of murder. The person who can produce food, and does not, withholds his hand from saving human lives.—Herbert C. Hoover.

U. S. Employment Service

Notice has been received that the United States Employment Service will take over and direct all recruiting of women for war work on and after November 15th. Notice to this effect was received today by L. C. Huesmann, federal labor director, who was informed further that the same rules governing the recruiting of male labor effective August 1, 1918, will apply to the further induction of women into war industries. This implies a cessation of all individual or private recruiting on the part of firms employing one hundred or more persons.

All federal directors of employment service have been instructed by the director general to write to all mayors in their State asking them to issue a proclamation calling on all employers of labor in their respective cities, to obtain this labor only through the United States Employment Service.

A report of the activities of the U. S. Employment Service offices in Indiana for the first two weeks in October follows:

	Men's Division	Women's Division

Reports from many employers indicate a lessened turnover in their labor force.

My War Creed.

By Thomas F. Moran.

III.

I do not believe that war is a "biological necessity," or that it is a part of the "divine order." I believe in "peace on earth and good will to men," and I prefer the Golden Rule to the law of "blood and iron."

I prefer the God of infinite mercy and love to a Frankenstein's monster, who delights in burnt offerings and who revels in the blood of his innocent and defenseless victims.

I believe that to be merciful is to be strong, and to be cruel is to be weak.

I prefer the humility of the beatitudes to the egotistical vaporings of the self-styled "superman"; the Ten Commandments to the law of license; and the Sermon on the Mount to that philosophy of self-sufficiency which rides roughshod over all moral considerations.

I prefer the "Star-Spangled Banner" to "Deutschland Ueber Alles"; the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" to "The Watch on the Rhine," and "Love Divine All Love Excelling" to the Prussian "Song of Hate."

I prefer the wooden Cross of Calvary to the Iron Cross of Prussia.

Timely Production Hints.

Hogs harvesting a corn and soybean crop will make faster and cheaper gains than if fed the same feed by hand.

The county agent is the captain of America's soldiers of the soil.

From 100 pounds of skim milk, 15 pounds of cottage cheese may be made. This is equal in food value to 22.5 pounds of pork.

Store seed corn in a dry, well ventilated room. As a rule cellars are too moist, attics too damp.

If food will win the war, it must first be produced. That is the farmers' big job.

Make "Selective Service" the watchword for the kitchen.

Rats destroy $200,000,000 worth of food and property every year. Destroy the rat.

Plow or spade that garden plot this fall. It will be better next year.

Farmers! remember last spring! Get your seed corn now and store it properly.

Woman's Section

Bulletin No. 107.

To the Chairman of the Woman's Section and the Chairman of Educational Propaganda Committee of the County Council of Defense.

My Dear County Chairman:

During my recent visit to Indianapolis I had a conference with Miss Katherine Merrill Graydon and found that her health was much improved, in fact so much so that with persuasion on my part she has consented to remain as State chairman of the Educational Propaganda Committee. I trust that up to this time the county chairmen of this committee have continued the work as Miss Graydon requested until informed of some change in our program. You will undoubtedly hear from her very soon in regard to the plans for the winter's work. Please remember that the State chairman can do a great deal of this work, but the success of the committee at large depends upon the county chairmen, and the support and assistance they give the State chairman. I am sure you will be glad to relieve Miss Graydon of as much work as possible and help her to accomplish even greater results than had last year.

If you have not filled in the questionnaire which Miss Graydon sent you last spring, we trust you will do this at the earliest possible date. If your county chairman desires a copy of this questionnaire please see that one goes to her and one to Miss Graydon, that both may have the facts before them and refer to them if necessary.

Thanking you for your kindness in the past, I remain,

Very truly yours,
ANNE STUDEBAKER CARLISLE,
Chairman Woman's Section, State Council of Defense.

A fine report comes from Huntington County. The county chairman attended two township meetings in September, one a food conservation meeting with the home demonstration agent selected by the woman's section giving a valuable talk. Much interest was shown in this meeting. The other township meeting was for the dedication of a service flag to the thirty boys of the county in the service. It was an autoless Sunday, but two or three hundred people were present. Two splendid addresses were given; there were some local features and the flag service. "Our township women," runs the report, "are responding to every call."

The Enrollment of Women Committee has given valuable assistance in this county, as in others, in locating girls for student nurses. All the high school teachers in this county are members of the Home Economics Committee and do valuable work. In September they distributed and demonstrated the "sugar program" sent out by the food administration. "We feel this to be one of the most effective ways of reaching the greatest number of homes in the shortest time," says the county chairman.

In one township (Jackson) in Huntington County the report of the Food Production Committee runs thus:

Potatoes, 1,996 bushels; sweet corn, 895 quarts; onion sets, 1,616 quarts; onion seed, 34 pints; beans, 331 quarts; peas, 168 quarts; cabbage plants, 67,700; tomato plants, 45,020.

Huntington County's generous citizens sent thousands and thousands of magazines to the city library to be held for distribution to soldiers on troop trains passing through or delayed in Huntington. During a lull in the transportation of troops 2,000 magazines were shipped to Camp Shelby. Over 500 gift books were shipped to a port of embarkation in July.

The registration report of Miami County shows 8,485 registered. In this county there are 346 practical nurses and 27 trained nurses. Seven hundred and three women are engaged in the dairying business, 915 in farming, 439 in fruit raising, 1,166 in gardening, 1,511 in poultry raising, 316 in stock raising. One woman in this county offered to contribute an ambulance; ten, to contribute drivers for cars; 19 offered funds; one offered her home for a convalescent hospital; 13 offered to share their homes with convalescent soldiers. This county sent 25 boxes to Belgian relief.

Miami County has a historian who keeps clippings, etc.

Miss Riley King, chairman of home economics in Miami County, arranged an exhibit at the Converse fair and went herself to give demonstrations. The county agent reported this one of the most attractive exhibits at the fair.

Bank Buys Dairy Cattle.

A very promising calf club has been organized in Starke County, according to a report received by the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, from County Agricultural Agent C. A. Buechner.

With increasing demands at home and abroad for all kinds of dairy products, and with the demand which is sure to come when the war ends, for dairy cattle to replenish the herds of the old world and for breeding stock, Starke County has determined to organize dairy calf clubs. The project at present is being financed by the North Judson Bank, and directed by County Agent Buechner.

As a result of this movement, forty-one head of high-grade Holstein cattle were purchased last week in Waukesha County, Wisconsin, and brought to Starke County. These animals were purchased from well-bred herds and were purchased at a very reasonable price considering their breeding. The two carloads of cattle consisted of three cows, sixteen two-year-old heifers, twenty-one head of calves between the ages of ten to fifteen months old, and one pure-bred sire. Twelve of the calves will be placed with twelve boys in Wayne Township, who are given these animals on a promissory note basis. The North Judson Bank will take their notes at six per cent for one year, and under the terms of the contract the boys are to breed these animals to the pure-bred sire, which will be kept by Ben. Weninger. These animals will be brought in at the North Judson jubilee next year and sold at auction to the highest bidder. The boy, under the terms of the contract, must bring in his heifer and put her up for sale. He reserves the right to be a by-bidder and in case he does not wish to sell his animal it only becomes necessary for him to pay the original cost of the calf.

Helps for the Patriotic Housekeeper

Containing suggestions for those who wish to meet the requests of the Food Administration and is being conducted by Mary L. Matthews, Home Economics Director for Indiana.

Patriotic Pies.

The old American habit of eating pie in such quantities has had to be curtailed somewhat by the patriotic housewife who has followed wheat and sugar conservation rules. It is more difficult to make good pie crust from the substitutes than from pastry flour, and many housewives have been discouraged by failures, while the men of the household have had to go "pieless."

Pie should never be served at the end of a meal in which plenty of food value has already been supplied. Pie crust contains cereal and fat—both of high food value. The fillings vary—fruit pies being of less food value than those with custard or chocolate fillings.

Use one crust pies, since they require less cereal and fat in the making. Do not serve pie every day. Use puddings instead occasionally or abolish dessert on certain days. Never serve pie more than once a day. This is a good time to break old habits in regard to food. Pie twice or three times a day is too often. Be sure that pie crusts are thoroughly baked and not soggy or tough, for a well made crust is always easier digested.

The following pies carry out conservation rules and may be used by the patriotic housewife:

BARLEY FLOUR PASTRY.

Two cups barley flour.
One-half teaspoon baking powder.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One-third cup shortening.
Water to make a stiff dough.

Combine as for other pastry. This crust is particularly good for mince, apple, squash and pumpkin pie.

WHEATLESS PASTRY.

One-half lb. cornstarch.
One-half lb. white corn flour.
Three-eighths lb. rye or barley flour.
One-fourth oz. salt.
Three-fourth lb. shortening.
Water (cold).

If mixture seems sticky to handle, let stand a few minutes and add just enough wheat flour to bind for rolling.

PLAIN PASTRY.

Use any of these combinations in equal proportions in place of wheat flour:

Cornstarch and ground oatmeal.
Corn flour and ground oatmeal.
Cornmeal and ground oatmeal.
Cornmeal and barley.

To one cup of any of the two combinations, use three tablespoons fat and one-fourth teaspoon salt. Add just enough liquid to hold together.

HONEY LEMON PIE.

One-half cup honey.
One and one-fourth cups boiling water or scalded milk.
Grated rind of 1 lemon.
Three tablespoons cornstarch.
One egg.
One teaspoon fat.

Combine honey, liquid, lemon rind and fat. Heat and thicken with cornstarch dissolved in cold water. Cook in double boiler 15 minutes. Pour this over well beaten egg. Return to double boiler and cook 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Stir in lemon juice. Pour in baked shell.

PUMPKIN PIE.

Two cups pumpkin (stewed and strained).
One-half cup light molasses.
One teaspoon ginger.
One teaspoon cinnamon.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Two eggs.
Two cups rich milk.

Mix the pumpkin, molasses, cinnamon, ginger and salt. Beat the eggs slightly and add them and the milk to the mixture. Bake the mixture in one crust until it is firm.

CUSTARD PIE.

One and one-half cups milk.
One-half cup corn syrup.
Three eggs.
One teaspoon salt.
Vanilla.

Cook as any custard. Place in baked crust.

APPLE AND RAISIN PIE.

Two cups apples.
One-half cup raisins.
One-fourth cup syrup.
One teaspoon rice flour.

Pare and slice apples. Place in pie pan lined with pastry. Add raisins, syrup and rice flour. Bake until apples are done and crust is tender.

DATE PIE.

Two cups milk.
One-third lb. dates.
Nutmeg.
Two eggs.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.

Cook dates with milk twenty minutes in double boiler. Strain and rub through sieve, then add egg and salt. Bake as custard pie.

Unconditional Surrender

(By H. R. Spencer, of The Viligantes.)

To the Germans the letters "U. S." mean UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER.

The insignia "U. S." on the uniform of every American soldier, marine, and sailor is notice to the Hun that Unconditional Surrender is the only thing that will procure a cessation of hostilities.

When General Washington defeated Cornwallis at Yorktown, the British general sent a messenger asking the commander of the American forces for a conference to determine terms of capitulation; General Washington, by the same messenger, replied that only unconditional surrender would be accepted.

At Appomattox, General Grant demanded, and received, the unconditional surrender of the confederate forces under General Lee.

In the Spanish-American war, the Spanish general at Santiago requested permission to withdraw his army from the beleaguered down. President McKinley ordered his generals in the field to demand instant and unconditional surrender, at the same time instructing them that anything less than that would create the necessity of fighting at some other time and place, under conditions less favorable. The Spanish army surrendered.

In view of American history, it may very well be said that the United States has contracted the habit of demanding, and obtaining, the unconditional surrender of its enemies.

When Cuba was wrested from Spanish domination the United States took possession of the entire country, and held it while the Cuban people perfected a form of government adapted to their special requirements. When the island government was in full operation the United States withdrew, and Cuba has since continued to govern itself, mostly with success.

A similar procedure must be insisted upon with Germany. This means that every gun, fort, arsenal, munition factory, battleship, harbor, and municipality of Germany be turned over to the allies to be dealt with until the Germans themselves have perfected, and have in operation, a form of government responsive to the people, who must be taught that nations, as well as individuals, have a moral responsibility; that righteousness, honesty, regard for human rights, and respect for law is the only basis on which any nation can long endure; that treaties must be kept; and that the family of nations will not permit one of its members to terrorize the rest of the world.

That peace can only be obtained by the absolute surrender of the German army is clear from an analysis of the German type of mind. That there is no moral force, or standard of national right and wrong, in Germany is manifest from what it has done during and prior to the present war.

All classes of Germans—professors, students, statesmen, and preachers—have approved of every act of cruelty ordered or sanctioned by the military authorities. From the sinking of the Lusitania to the impaling of babes in Belgium; from the desolation of Poland to the massacres in Armenia, there has been only open applause and encouragement by the German people. Nothing of fiendish cruelty has been omitted.

No word of condemnation has come from these people when medals have been struck, holidays proclaimed, and hymns written in celebration of acts memorable only for their excessive brutality. The hot iron of retributive justice must sink deep into the German soul—a new soul must be born before the world can again take into its confidence a people who have forfeited every right to its respect.

It is not enough that Alsace and Lorraine be restored to France, and that Belgium be paid for its wanton destruction. Loss of territory may be quietly endured by the German, even though it touch his pride, but when, as must be, a load of debt is piled so high that Germany will be poor for a hundred years, her citizens will curse the day that Wilhelm the Second was born. Loss of territory will be humiliating, but an annual pay day, when every German must reach deep into his pocket to pay his share of five years of bloodshed, will be the best teacher of morals the allies can put at the task.

Is such a program too severe to be employed by the allies? Nothing short will make the world a safe and decent place to live in.

Unless the surgeon with steady hand and firm cuts out the ulcer that has eaten to the heart of Germany, the sacrifices of the world will have been made in vain.

In the language of our great Emancipator:

"With malice toward none, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to do all that may be done to create a lasting peace with all nations henceforth."

Public Eating House Rules

Attention is called by the United States Food Administration to the following modifications and interpretations of General Orders for Public Eating Places.

General Order Four: The intention in framing this rule was to cut down the consumption of meats in general without at the same time causing waste or eliminating from the daily menu certain combinations of scrap meats or certain varieties of meat by-products generally eaten in combination with what might be called outside meat.

The food administration has decided to make a liberal interpretation of General Order Four, after a careful consideration of requests that have reached it from all parts of the country, and you will note that mince pie, larded sweetbreads, larded filet of beef, hash, goulash, meat cakes, meat pies and similar dishes containing two or more kinds of meats (scraps and trimmings) may be served without violating the order; also that liver and bacon, mixed grill, assorted cold meats, chicken and Virginia ham, club sandwiches and a variety of sandwiches containing different meats may be sold at one time.

In connection with General Orders One and Two, while toast as a garniture is forbidden, toast may be used under poached eggs, chipped beef, chicken hash, etc., without affecting the service of two ounces of Victory bread or four ounces of quick breads which may be served at the same meal. Wheat cakes, griddle cakes, buckwheat cakes and waffles may also be served in addition to the regular bread allowance, as may pies, pastry, etc. Crackers containing ten per cent of wheat flour substitutes may be served.

You will note that the Law Department of the Food Administration has amended General Order One to read as follows.

General Order One: (As amended October 25, 1918.) No public eating place shall serve or permit to be served any bread or other bakery product which does not contain at least twenty per cent of wheat flour substitutes; provided, however, that crackers containing at least ten per cent of wheat flour substitutes may be served. Nor shall any public eating place serve or permit to be served more than 2 ounces of such bread, known as Victory bread, or if no Victory bread is served, more than 4 ounces of other bread (such as corn bread, muffins, Boston brown bread, etc.). This order does not apply to sandwiches, bread served at boarding camps, or to rye bread containing 50 per cent or more pure rye flour.

With reference to General Order Twelve: This applies only to service of cream on table, including whipped cream, but according to an amendment to Rule One of Special License Regulations 22, hotels as well as other manufacturers may purchase heavy cream.

General Order Six: While it is insisted that no more than one-half ounce of butter shall be served at the table to any one person at any one meal, this order does not affect buttered toast or any butter sauces, which are commonly used in all first class hotel and restaurant kitchens. It is requested, however, that hotels and restaurants use the least possible quantity of butter in cooking and making sauces.

General Order Seven: Your attention is called to the need for enforcing the rule against the service of more than one-half ounce of cheddar, commonly called American cheese. Strict observance of this general order will necessitate giving up the service of Welsh rarebits.

Big Window Display Week for Food Conservation—November 21-28.

Thanksgiving week this year is set aside for food conservation, not for feasting. The United States Food Administration asks the stores on every business street in the United States to picture, in their display windows, the prodigious task of feeding the Allied world through 1919.

Posters and window cards of special design have been issued by the U. S. Food Administration at Washington. They are available to every retailer through his State merchant representative, or the local merchant deputy of the food administration.

Plans and illustrations of food conservation for window display, suggestions for the use of posters in merchandising displays, designs for decorative backgrounds, and window cards which will be helpful to window dressers everywhere, are included in the new window display flyer, which the merchant representatives of the food administration will distribute before the big window week of November 21 to 28.

A One Hundred Per Cent Display.

Don't half do this work for the food administration. The food window must have "punch." Not seventy-five people out of a hundred who see it, but every single one of the hundred, must feel that crumpling of the heart and that tightening of the jaw which means a resolution to go home and SAVE MORE FOOD.

Big stores with elaborate facilities for building window displays, will want to attempt a dramatic presentation of the nation's task in saving seventeen and one-half million tons of food. Small stores can be just as effective in a simpler way.

Clear out the display space during Thanksgiving week and make the food conservation appeal with all the enthusiasm you have in you. Make every passerby realize that we must save 50 per cent more food this year than we did last, out of a total supply no longer than we had then.

The store windows on our business streets can make that picture so real that nobody can escape it. Clear the decks for the big food window during Thanksgiving week. Speed the message of sacrifice and service. Give our people that war conscience which will develop an individual responsibility for that seventeen and one-half million tons of food. Tell them to EAT LESS and be thankful we have enough to share with the soldiers of freedom.

$10.00 or Less

(Indiana W. S. S. Bulletin)

Get this!

There actually are counties in Indiana that to date have only sold $10.00 or less per capita in War Savings.

With five-sixths of the year gone these have only half—or less than half—of their quotas.

Think what a pace those counties must go to get "over the top!" And, think of the shame on the county, or counties, that fail—a blot on the war record.

So that there may be no misunderstanding of the situation, here is a list of the counties which have $10.00 or less records:

Brown, Jasper, Lawrence, Pike, Starke, Clay, Lake, Parke, Spencer, Vigo, Warren.

Some are large and some are small—there is no distinction on that score. No, the chances are that in these counties War Savings have not been pushed—this is speaking plainly, but certainly now is the time to look at facts squarely.

What are these counties going to do about it? The record will rest against the county—the black mark of failure would stand long after the names of the ones responsible had been forgotten. There is still time to get by—but nothing less than a smashing Victory Drive will do it.

Volunteer for victory!

U. S. Food Administration for Indiana

Official Regulations and Penalties Imposed

Herbert Hoover wires the Indiana Food Administration as follows:

The rapid manufacture of the new crop beet sugar in the West and new crop Louisiana cane sugar in the South, together with the freer railway transportation conditions, the reductions that we have made in the consumption of sugar in the manufacture trades and the patriotic conservation in the past four months, enables us to increase the household allowance of sugar from two pounds per person per month to three pounds per person per month, with the same ratio to public eating places, as from November 1st. This makes good our promise to increase the household allowance of sugar at the earliest possible moment that our supplies would justify and make it possible for the householder to more freely use the apple, cranberry and grapefruit products and to use the fruits canned during the summer without sugar. The regulations are also revised to the extent that any person may purchase his whole monthly allowance at one time if he so desires, that is, any family may purchase a month's supply for the entire family in one purchase from the retail trades. The temporary cessation of the cereal movement of the country due to stoppage of exports to secure army tonnage, has caused a greater ability for internal transportation than would otherwise be the case, and we do not feel that with ability to make distribution we have any right to hold supplies for the householders. We are confident that we can continue on this basis for some months to come from the supplies which we have in prospect. Cuba's crop is promised transportation, so that with these conditions we should be able to maintain allied supplies. Make no changes in classes A, B and D. (These include manufacturers of food products, bottlers, etc.)

Purchases of sugar for family use may be made monthly hereafter upon the basis of the three-pound-per-person ration. This regulation succeeds that for bi-monthly purchases on the two-pound-per-person-per-month basis.

Hotels and restaurants are subject to an interpretation of the three-pounds-per-ninety-meals sugar ration by the following: "In no event shall the amount of sugar served to any person at any one meal exceed one-half an ounce." One teaspoonful of sugar or its equivalent may be served for tea or coffee, plus one teaspoonful for fruit or cereal (not for both) and one small lump for demi tasse.

Bean packers throughout the country will be allowed to operate at normal capacity for the three months beginning today. The food administration announces that it is assured of sufficient tinplate to permit the packing of beans in normal quantities.

Canners will be allowed to use up all odd-sized tins now on hand, but additional purchases of tins smaller than the number two size will not be permitted. The canners will not be allowed to contract for more than a three months' supply of either cans or beans, nor will shippers be allowed to sell beans to canners without first securing food administration permits.

Carr & Crosby, proprietors of the Centilever hotel in Ft. Wayne, have been permitted to contribute $50 to the United War Work campaign, in Allen County, for using double their allotment of sugar during the month of October.

At best the Allied table will be less than ours, for the Allied peoples are denying themselves more in order to transport soldiers.

We cannot administer the food problem on the basis of the present food shortage. We must prepare for long continuance of this shortage.

I SOLOMONLY SWARE
THAT I WONT EAT NO MORE ICE CREAM WHAT'S MAID WITH SUGER NOR NO MORE CANDY WHAT'S MAID WITH SUGER.
HONEST AM TROO.
CROSS MY HART.
AMEN!

AN HEROIC SACRIFICE.

Our Test.

(C. V. Stainsby.)

For more than a year and a half we have been estimating the value of our activities by their relationship to the winning of the war. Until Germany definitely accepts the peace terms of the nations against which she has opposed herself we must continue to use this same standard. It is not too soon, however, to do a little thinking about conditions after the war—be that time near or distant. By what standard must our actions be governed then? Or shall we throw all unselfish ideas to the winds and revert to our pre-war habits of buying, selling, eating and drinking without regard to world conditions and world needs? When the war is over our gauge will be different but exactly the same principle will prevail. The inspiring slogan, "Help win the war," will no longer be heard, but a new one, a bigger one, a more unselfish and more insistent one will take its place. "Help feed the world" must be our slogan in the years succeeding the signing of peace. The millions of under-fed world citizens now engaged in strife will then turn to us for the nourishment which has been denied them during recent years. Our food program may be altered in some respects but in others it must inevitably be stiffer than ever. From this very day—if we have not already started—we should commence to think of the tremendous amount of work to be taken up after the war. This will be our test. We must turn from the achievements of today in which we are inspired to a great extent by our personal interest in individuals involved in the struggle and thrilled by the patriotic appeals that are heard on every side, to the tasks of tomorrow in which our inspiration will come from an unselfish interest in the needs of people whom we never saw, but who yet are dependent upon us for the necessary things of life. We must grow from national patriotism to world patriotism.

The growing food club organization in Indianapolis has necessitated additional appointments to take proper care of the work. Mrs. Ancil T.

Brown has been appointed assistant city president. In addition to this appointment provision is being made for twelve district presidents in various parts of the city. More thorough organization and closer co-ordination of the food club and home economics divisions is aimed at by this arrangement.

Soup for the Chilly Night.

What is better than a big bowl of hot, nourishing soup on a chilly night? Clear soups are excellent stimulants to appetite, but cream soups made of vegetables and milk are not only appetizing but nutritious, and are a good means of introducing more milk into the family diet.

A great variety of vegetables which have been canned, stored or dried from the war garden will be on hand for delicious cream soups this winter. Tomatoes, corn, peas, beans, celery, potatoes, all make meat-saving dishes especially attractive on a chilly night.

Soup does not hold an important place in the diet of most American families now, and is usually served in very small quantities as a start-off to an otherwise adequate meal. Vegetable cream soups are so nourishing that if a large helping is served the rest of a meal may be lighter.

There are two types of thick soup—the cream soups made of succulent vegetables such as asparagus, celery, spinach, tomato; and the puree, a thick soup made with starchy vegetables, such as corn, peas, beans, potatoes.

Some good standard purees are:

Corn Soup.

Heat one pint of corn with three cups of milk in a double boiler. Simmer one minced onion in two tablespoonfuls of fat. Cream one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour with the butter and onion. Blend this with the corn and milk in the double boiler, cook until thickened and add salt and pepper.

Potato Soup.

Heat one quart of milk in which an onion has been placed, then strain and add to six boiled potatoes mashed while hot. Mix well with two tablespoonfuls of fat creamed with one tablespoon of flour, one teaspoon of salt, some minced parsley and a few grains of paprika. Simmer ten minutes.

Farmers' Short Course At Purdue in January

Dean J. H. Skinner Announces That Labor Shortage Will Not Prevent Large Attendance.

The annual farmers' short course will be held at Purdue University, January 13 to 18, 1919. This announcement is made by Dean J. H. Skinner, of the Purdue College of Agriculture. In spite of the fact that Indiana farmers are short of labor, the largest attendance in the history of short courses in this State is expected. The best program ever arranged for such an event is promised.

In connection with the short course, a Liberty corn show will be held. This will last throughout the week and will be under the auspices of the Indiana Corn Growers' Association, which will hold its annual meeting one day of the show. In addition to the corn show, meetings of the Indiana Home Economics' Association, Indiana Live Stock Breeders' Association, Indiana State Dairy Association, Indiana Sheep Breeders' and Feeders' Association, Indiana Angus Breeders' Association, Indiana Hereford Breeders' Association, Indiana Shorthorn Breeders' Association, Indiana Guernsey Breeders' Association, Indiana Holstein Friesian Association, and Indiana Jersey Cattle Club, will be held sometime during short course week.

A big change in the corn show plans provide for awarding of no cash prizes this year. Ribbons will be given for class winners, medals for sweepstakes and usual trophies for grand sweepstakes.

The big theme in the show this year will be food production and conservation and the more efficient handling of farms to meet the labor shortage, which will be relieved but little next year, even though peace is established this fall. The State Food Committee urges that food production must continue at top speed for at least two years after peace pacts are signed, and this is one of the big problems before the farmers.

Wheat Campaign Success.

Indiana farmers have gone over the top in the wheat production campaign and sowed over 20 per cent more wheat this fall than last, showing that they are 120% American. They were asked to increase the acreage only 17 per cent, but they went the Government request several degrees better, according to reports recently made by D. S. Myer to the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation.

The total increase asked of Indiana was 455,000 acres. Reports from 55 counties show an increase of 371,222 acres, or 23 per cent, and figured on this basis, the total increase for the State will be 630,000.

"However, half of the counties that have not reported have no county agents and their acreage will not be as large as in those with agents," said Mr. Myer. "This is because organized effort could not be made to meet the Government request."

Additional details of the report show that 38 of the counties received all the fertilizer ordered as the result of the efforts made to get every man to order his supply early. In the rest of them, nearly all that was ordered was received in time. A total of 18,853 tons more of fertilizer was used this fall than ever before in the history of the State, and the farmers thus are known to have

Notice to Readers.

Having performed its mission to a point where there is no further apparent need, the INDIANA BULLETIN with this number ceases publication.

Indiana's war record is written. The State has no reason to apologize for the part it has taken in the prosecution of the war, or its support of the Federal Government.

In this task the BULLETIN has purposed to help. The value of this service it leaves to the judgment of those who have so faithfully devoted themselves to the tasks prescribed, to the regulations imposed and to the results recorded.

made a big effort to increase production as well as acreage.

In the 55 counties, 505,964 bushels of seed wheat were treated with formaldehyde to prevent smut. This was enough to sow 400,000 acres of wheat. Another means to increase yield was the selection of seed wheat fields and 123,821 bushels of seed, inspected by wheat specialists, was used for seeding purposes this fall.

"Given an even break with the weather, Indiana's wheat crop next year should far exceed that of this," said Mr. Myer. Some of the banner counties were Benton, which increased its acreage 451 per cent; Hancock, 108 per cent; Lake, 110 per cent; Jasper, 120 per cent; St. Joseph, 126 per cent. Many other counties have shown increases of more than 50 per cent.

Shorthorn Bull in War Work Drive.

The Laporte County United War Work Committee has accepted the donation of a $2,000 Shorthorn bull, Prairie King by name, from D. S. Myers, owner of Prairie Valley Stock Farm, at LaCrosse. This bull is on exhibition in a fine 8x10 covered stall directly in front of the court house, on the lawn, and is one of the most attractive features of the whirlwind campaign now being waged for the purpose of raising the full quota of $98,639 for the County War Work Fund, according to a statement made by County Agent J. D. Harper to the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation.

C. W. Bagnall, manager of Prairie Valley Stock Farm, and breeder of Prairie King, stated that this bull is one of the choicest animals from Mr. Myers' herd of nearly a hundred Scotch-bred Shorthorns. Prairie King is the great-grandson of Whitehall Sultan on both his sire and dam side, a line of breeding which Shorthorn men recognize relates him very closely to the greatest Shorthorn in American history. The bull, as an individual, possesses all of the excellent points to be expected from a pedigree of such merit.

The committee in charge of this War Work Campaign is selling stock shares in the bull, at $1.00 per share. At the close of the drive every shareholder will be a candidate to receive the animal, which is to be turned over to some member by the committee. The various townships are each making an effort to subscribe a large amount of stock so as to meet with the greatest favor in the eyes of the committee. Much enthusiasm has been aroused, and it is anticipated that this $2,000 Shorthorn will net at least $10,000 to the War Work fund.

Council Terminates Detailed Activities

Chairman Foley Authorized to Curtail Expenditures at Last Regular Session.

On motion of Joseph G. Ibach, the following statement by Chairman M. E. Foley was approved and adopted at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, November 14th:

"The Federal Government has not announced its reconstruction policy at the present time. What it may desire the various state councils to do to enforce this policy I am not now able to state.

"The Indiana State Council of Defense has been in existence for seventeen months and during that time has spent approximately $82,000.00. These expenditures have been properly vouchered and have the O. K. of the State Board of Accounts. Other States in the Union have spent much larger sums than Indiana, to wit:

Massachusetts, $694,321.38.

Illinois, $200,000.00.

Ohio, $150,000.00.

California, $100,000.00 (to August 15, 1918).

New Mexico, $225,000.00 (to June 1, 1918).

Maryland, $550,000.00 (to April 1, 1918).

Michigan, $3,500,000.00 (to August 15, 1918).

Connecticut, $220,000.00.

Pennsylvania, $500,000.00.

Indiana, $82,000.00.

"The expenditures of the Indiana State Council of Defense ought to be reduced promptly to a minimum, and it is my intention, if it meets with the approval of the State Council of Defense, to proceed at once to close up the work of the following departments of our organization, to wit:

"The Speakers' Bureau, the Boys' Working Reserve, the Telephone Department, the Department of Investigation, the Publicity Department, which will include the suspension of the publication of the Bulletin, and the Mailing Department. It is my idea to reduce the working force to a Secretary and probably not to exceed one stenographer. The Woman's Section also ought to be reduced in conformity with the above suggestion. It is my idea that the work of this division can be handled by employing for the present a single clerk. The entire work of the organization can be handled in the future at the expense of a few hundred dollars per month and, in my judgment, the Secretary ought to be in full charge of all the activities of the organization.

"The Indiana State Council and the local county councils cannot be dissolved at this time. We have two campaigns in Indiana that we must conclude in the near future: The United War Work Campaign and the War Savings Stamp Campaign. I think, however we can close both of these campaigns between now and November 30th.

"Arrangements must be made to handle the non-construction permits that will come to the State Council. My judgment is that this can be handled either by the chairman or through a small committee, meeting whenever occasion demands it.

"The State Council of Defense and the local county councils ought to maintain their organizations for the present and be dissolved whenever the Governor, James P. Goodrich, indicates that it is for the public good. It is my judgment that we ought to make every effort to re-

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of patriotic information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the Federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation and its prosecution of the war with Germany, particularly as pertains to the production and conservation of food.

Attention,
County Councils

General Bulletin No. 211.

November 13, 1918.

Subject: Removal of restrictions on non-war construction. Supplementing Bulletins No. 195 and No. 203.

To County Councils of Defense:

The Non-war Construction Section of the War Industries Board has made important modifications to take immediate effect in the restrictions imposed by their circular No. 21 on non-war construction. No permits are now required for any of the following:

1. Farm buildings, structures, or improvements, without regard to kind or cost.
2. The construction, maintenance, improvement, or development, by municipal or other public authorities, of highways, roads, boulevards, bridges, streets, parks, and playgrounds, without regard to cost.
3. The construction, extension, improvement, maintenance or repair of any public utility, including water supply systems, sewer systems, light and power facilities, and street and interurban railways, without regard to cost.
4. The construction, extension, or repair of irrigation or drainage projects, without regard to cost.
5. Construction projects connected with the extension, expansion, or development of mines of every character whatsoever, or connected with the production and refining of mineral oils and of natural gas, without regard to cost.
6. The construction, alteration, extension or repair of or addition to plants engaged principally in producing, milling, refining, preserving, refrigerating, or storing foods and feeds, without regard to cost.
7. The construction of new or the alteration or extension of existing schoolhouses, churches, hospitals and state or municipal buildings, involving in the aggregate a cost not exceeding $25,000.
8. The construction of new buildings or structures not embraced in any of the foregoing classifications, or the repairs or additions to, or alterations or extensions of existing buildings and structures, involving in any case an aggregate cost not exceeding $10,000.
9. The construction of new buildings or structures not embraced in any of the foregoing classifications, or the repair of or addition to, or alteration or extension of existing buildings or structures, involving in any case an aggregate cost of not exceeding $25,000, when approved in writing by the State Council of Defense.
10. Buildings begun prior to September 3, 1918, where a substantial portion of the building has already been constructed, without regard to cost.

All limitations on the production of building materials, including brick, cement, lime, hollow tile, and lumber are removed and such materials may be sold and delivered for use in connection with any building project for which no permit or license is required, or for which permit or license is issued, as above.

PROJECTS REQUIRING PERMITS.

You will note that in addition to those classified projects which may proceed without permit, regardless of cost, no permit is required for any building or structure costing not more than $10,000, and that final action may be taken by the State Council upon all projects costing over $10,000, but not more than $25,000, but that a permit from the Non-war Construction Section is still required for projects not otherwise provided for and costing more than $25,000.

In the case of projects requiring permits application should be made to and acted on by the county councils and forwarded to the State Council as heretofore.

NOTICE IN THE CASE OF PROJECTS
HERETOFORE DISAPPROVED.

In the case of all farm building and other projects heretofore disapproved by the county council or State Council or the Non-war Construction Section of the War Industries Board, or which remain unacted on, but which, in accordance with the modified restrictions set forth above, may proceed without permit, the county council should immediately notify the applicants that restrictions have been removed and that construction may proceed.

FURTHER REMOVAL OF RESTRICTIONS.

The Non-war Construction Section is giving careful consideration to the question of further removal of restrictions on construction and action may be expected as soon as the situation warrants.

CO-OPERATION APPRECIATED.

The War Industries Board expresses its hearty appreciation, in which the State Council joins, of the manner in which the county councils and the people of Indiana have co-operated in carrying out the program for the elimination of unnecessary non-war construction.

M. E. FOLEY,
Chairman.

General Bulletin No. 210.

November 8, 1918.

To County Councils of Defense:

The War Industries Board has worked out with shoe manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, a plan whereby shoes are grouped in four classes and are to be retailed at prices which have been assigned to each class with the approval of the War Industries Board.

An important part of this plan is that each retail shoe dealer shall sign a pledge to the War Industries Board and shall then be furnished a window display card, stating he is selling shoes on the basis approved by the Government.

Your assistance is asked in carrying out the above part of the plan. As the first step, please find out the number of retailers within your territory who deal in shoes, either exclusively or partly, and then fill out the attached mimeographed form, indicating the territory which you cover and the number of retailers in that territory. Please send this form within ten days after receipt to the Boot and Shoe Section, War Industries Board, using the addressed franked envelope which is attached.

Upon receipt of the above information, the War Industries Board will send you a supply of pledge forms and window cards, together with detailed instructions regarding their distribution.

If necessary, constitute a committee on Boots and Shoes to do this work. The distribution of the pledges and window cards is probably the first of a series of jobs which you will be asked to do in connection with boots and shoes.

In any case, please see that the information concerning the number of retailers in your county is supplied as promptly as possible, in order that the actual distribution of the pledge forms and window cards may be begun.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.
Form and addressed envelope attached.

Freedom faces but one more enemy—famine. Civilization halts in its progress when starvation threatens. Food is the weapon with which to make secure the fruits of victory and guarantee the peace of man.

U. S. Boys' Working Reserve

Isaac D. Straus, federal state director of the reserve, has addressed a letter to each of the county enrolling agents, and directors of the reserve, in which he says:

"A foe still lurks on the fields of Europe; a foe more terrible than the Hun, more powerful than the combined forces of all the Central Powers. Famine, following in the wake of war, threatens all Europe. Today in Russia alone there are 180,000,000 people without sufficient food to carry them through the winter before them; today in other territories once overrun by the Germans there are millions of human beings facing starvation and a death more horrible than that on the battlefield; today, even among our allies, thousands and thousands must hunger if we hasten not with the products of field and mill.

"W. E. Hall, national director of the reserve, says: 'With autocracy crushed, democracy faces one more enemy—famine. Food is the weapon to make secure the fruits of victory and guarantee the peace of mankind. Boys of the reserve must continue to help relieve farm-labor shortage.' M. E. Foley, chairman of the Indiana Council of Defense, says: 'The final settlement of the great problems are still in the future. We are bound to keep faith with our faithful allies, who need all the food we can furnish them. * * * Carry on!'

"Let a new motto of the United States Boys' Working Reserve in Indiana be those two words: Carry on! We cannot, we dare not relax our efforts at this critical time; we must remain faithful to our trust until relieved from duty. Carry on!"

Fifty-three members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve who were camped last summer at historical Valley Forge in Pennsylvania and who worked on farms in the immediate vicinity of General Washington's old headquarters, earned $4,419.05 for themselves besides saving valuable crops which would have been lost but for their work.

A series of Farm Craft Lessons for use in high schools has been prepared under the direction of the United States Boys' Working Reserve and will soon be available for use during the winter school term.

The course consists of about thirty lessons prepared by the leading agricultural specialists of the country and will be of particular value to those institutions which are giving attention to the important questions of agricultural training.

Woman's Section

The names and addresses of nine schools which are offering courses of training for teachers of occupational therapy were enclosed in a recent letter from the War Department to Mrs. Arthur B. Grover. The nearest school is in Chicago; one is in Portland, Oregon, and the others are in the northeastern part of the country. All graduates of these schools are not assured of government service, their appointments being determined by definite restrictions as to age—twenty-five to forty—weight, etc. Those who are chosen to teach bedside occupations or to render similar service to sick or wounded soldiers are known as Reconstruction Aides in Occupational Therapy. About one thousand such instructors are needed overseas and many will be employed in hospitals in the United States.

Next month, when those foreign born men of Wayne County who are so qualified, receive their citizenship papers, they and their families are to be given a public reception at the court house as an expression of welcome into the community.

This is one of the provisions of the plans of Mrs. Arthur M. Charles, state chairman of Americanization. She suggests to her county chairmen that members of the local Chamber of Commerce in almost any community would be glad to help with such a proposition.

The secretary of United States Employment Service of the section in which Wayne County is located, is making a survey of the homes and factory conditions of foreign-born women in industry preparatory to movements for the improvement of their home life and working surroundings.

Mrs. Charles recommends the fullest possible use of continuation and vocational schools as a means of teaching the English language and American standards of living to foreign women.

Mrs. Mary B. Perkins of Ohio County, has appointed a committee consisting of the chairmen of Child Welfare, Food, etc., to report to her of their work that she may in turn send in to the State Publicity Chairman a complete account of the work in that county.

In response to the call for clothing for the French and Belgians, Ohio County sent thirteen boxes, consisting of comforts, coats, underwear and clothing of all kinds.

In response to the call for hospital supplies, Ohio County sent seven boxes of sheets, bath towels, face towels, napkins, handkerchiefs, etc.

Ohio County has also sent two barrels of nut shells.

Patriotism in Indiana

Cass County.—The County Council of Defense is proceeding to collect the money due the War Chest in order that Cass County may be spared another drive for the war charities campaign. Cass County's assessment is $68,000, outside the Red Cross, and public sentiment strongly inclines to the belief that if the War Chest is paid as stipulated at the outset there will be sufficient money to meet this demand. Members of the County Council of Defense feel that in justice to those who have paid and are paying their War Chest assessments, it should make an effort to secure like help from those who are not supporting the War Chest.

Decatur County.—The second shipment of nuts and nut shells, to be used in manufacturing gas masks for soldiers, has been shipped from Greensburg. The shipment weighed 1,375 pounds.

Delaware County.—A subscription of $500 was unanimously voted to the United War Work campaign by the Delaware County war mothers. This amount represents every dollar in their treasury.

Elkhart County.—A. H. Beardsley of Elkhart, chairman of the Fourth Liberty Loan Committee, in his final report states there were but seven people who did not make satisfactory subscriptions or make an explanation which was accepted by the committee as satisfactory. The report shows that the city of Elkhart proved to be 99.99 per cent patriotic, and the final returns give undisputed evidence of the patriotism of the people.

Fayette County.—The Victory Boys and Girls of Connersville have formed a brigade to help in the United War Charities drive. Each township throughout the county has an organization and a quota, and it is stipulated that the members must earn the money expected of them. They can not take it as a gift.

Greene County.—The treasurer of the Worthington chapter of the Red Cross received a check from the VanCamp Packing Company of Indianapolis for $529, the receipts from three carloads of pumpkins which were given some time ago by the patriotic farmers of this community to the local Red Cross.

Huntington County.—The civilian relief committee of the Red Cross and the entertainment committee of the Commercial Association furnished fifty wounded or sick soldiers, on their way from Atlantic ports to base hospitals in the west, with milk, fruit and hot cakes at the Erie station in Huntington.

Lake County.—Many of the employees of industrial plants in Gary are giving one day's pay to the United War Work drive, and on November 6 five fifteen girls began collecting the checks, which are stamped "United War Drive—Seven in One." Each employee received in return for his check a button and a receipt. The canteen girls got an early start—5:30 in the morning—and the team, which is made up of Miss Evelyn Humphrey, Miss Kitty Oakes, Miss Bessie Hardenbrook, Miss Mary Hanlan and Miss Margaret Hanlan, expect to make a good showing, as they collected $50,000 in this manner during the last Red Cross drive....The Lake County Council of Defense has passed a resolution declaring war against the Liberty Bond brokers in the county and stating it is not good citizenship to buy Liberty Bonds at a discount where the holders are compelled to sell. The council urges that the newspapers of the county should not publish any advertisements relative to the buying of Liberty Bonds by brokers, and should also publish the market price of bonds, and urge the people, if they are compelled to dispose of them on account of sickness or financial reverses, to sell them to the banks who will pay the market price, or through some other reputable channel.

Lawrence County.—A permanent roster, containing the names of every Lawrence County soldier, his company, regiment and date of enlistment, also names and address of his parents, will be kept by Mrs. Harry Askew, who has been appointed historian and custodian of war records by the County Council of Defense.

Marion County.—The Indianapolis War Chest will contribute $936,000 to the United War Work campaign as Marion County's share of the $5,000,000 quota which has been assigned to Indiana....Special classes for a course in motor mechanics for women were started by the Y. M. C. A. This is the first time the association has opened its classes to women. Also, special classes in telegraphy for women will be opened by the association on November 21. The courses are to equip young women to take the places of men who have joined the service.

Miami County.—At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the Woman's Section of the County Council of Defense, it was decided to hold a contest under the auspices of the Home Economics Department in connection with the apple show which was staged in Liberty Hall, Peru, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. A Purdue expert was secured to assist and give demonstrations and act as judge. The contest was open to anyone in Miami County. The rules provided that a complete formula accompany each product exhibited, and the exhibits must be only from products that boys and girls helped to produce. Only one member in each family was entitled to an exhibit. Cash prizes were awarded for the best corn bread, victory bread, rolls, liberty cake, loyalty sweets, canned fruit and vegetables, and glasses of jelly. In the boys' and girls' agricultural department prizes were awarded for white, yellow and speckled corn, wheat, oats, barley, buckwheat, rye, soy beans, turnips, carrots, sugar beets, potatoes, pumpkins and squashes.

Shelby County.—A meeting of truck owners, shippers and receivers of Shelby County was scheduled for Shelbyville on the 13th, for the purpose of organizing a Return Loads Bureau. A delegation from the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce was to attend the meeting.

As to Industrial Readjustment

On motion of Charles Fox, the Indiana State Council of Defense adopted the following resolution at its meeting, November 14th:

It is of first importance that there be no dissolution of the public morale, now that the actual fighting of the great war appears to be at an end. The problems before us are of a nature to call for the sanest thought, the most intensive effort and the fullest co-operation of all our people. Now as never before comes the test upon those who have constituted the second line of defense in this great enterprise.

Recognizing the tremendous responsibilities that still weigh upon all our people, and desiring to maintain the splendid record that has been written by the citizenship of Indiana during the past two years, the Indiana State Council of Defense herewith records the following resolution:

Whereas, The American people are now entering upon a period of readjustment that calls for the exercise of great patience, tolerance, and patriotism; and

Whereas, In the era of peace, into which we seem about to embark, there is and will continue to be an appropriate place for every one honestly desirous of contributing his part to the restoration of normal conditions; be it

Resolved, That the Indiana State Council of Defense herewith calls upon every worker and every employer to continue the same high-minded relationship that has characterized their conduct during the period of the war, to the end that there may be no injustice worked through untimely or radical reductions either in numbers or volume of payrolls, and that there be the fullest co-operation as between employer and employee, to preserve, as nearly as possible, an amicable, peaceable, and economic condition, thus guaranteeing the integrity of the State and the maintenance of a war record of which we may all be justly proud. Be it further

Resolved, That we commend to the able leadership of duly constituted authorities in federal and state leadership, President Woodrow Wilson and Governor James P. Goodrich, the proper solution of such problems as may arise in connection with a restoration of normal conditions, and that we renew our confidence in their ability properly to solve all such questions promptly, equitably, and patriotically.

U. S. Food Administration for Indiana

Official Regulations

Our work is not finished. During the unusual conditions which will inevitably follow the conclusion of an armistice we must not lose sight of the fact that the burden of the U. S. Food Administration will continue heavy and its work will stand out among all war activities as vital to the welfare of the hungry people of the world. The close of the war does not mean a return to pre-war conditions in the food industries.

We cannot now prophesy what steps will be taken to continue the regulatory work in which we are now engaged. We should, however, be prepared to enforce the conservation idea as vigorously as ever. Caution your deputies and workers in every line that they are still officers of the Food Administration and that until Mr. Hoover disbands our organization we must continue to fight with food.

Sincerely yours,

H. E. BARNARD,
Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

Every dish served in American hotels, restaurants, clubs and other public eating places on Thanksgiving Day will be made from home-grown products, if recommendations of the Food Administration are put into effect. This will be a distinct measure of food conservation and should demonstrate to the public how food and transportation may be saved by using only local products.

One of the greatest problems in our domestic food situation is that of transportation, which has been sorely strained to meet the heavy demands of war. By using home-grown foods, railroad facilities are released for the transportation of war necessities and the strain upon our railroad facilities is materially lightened.

While a special campaign is being waged to have these recommendations accepted by the public eating places, at the same time the Food Administration is urging all private households, as a patriotic conservation action, to make Thanksgiving a day for saving rather than a day for unusual feasting.

We Must Stand By Our Friends

(By Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.)

The signing of an armistice, even an agreement upon terms of lasting peace will not increase once to the sadly depleted food supply. The release of millions of men from the ranks of the army cannot produce one more grain of wheat until the next harvest. Not a single meat animal will be grown in time to prevent disaster. If the American people are unwilling to make peace time sacrifices as great as have been made by them during the period of the war we may dissipate the blessings of peace before they have been fully realized. The ultimate salvation of the situation rests with America, and we must understand and be prepared to do our full duty in the gigantic task of feeding the world, until such time as it can feed itself.

It must be remembered that only through food control exercised in the United States, effective solely through the whole-hearted co-operation of all our people, worked to the special advantage of those who could not have afforded to buy staples. In the face of competition that would have resulted from an unregulated sale and distribution they would have had to do without. The speculators would have controlled wheat, meat, sugar and essential fats, and prices would have been prohibitive. The food administration's regulatory measures served not only to keep prices something near to normal but to prevent actual food shortages. Through the preaching of conservation, requests for voluntary sacrifices of meat, wheat, sugar and other staples, on fixed days, we managed aged to feed the starving populations of Europe out of our surplus.

It will ill become America now to desert those across the sea. Those who have been saved to a return of peace, through the bigheartedness of every patriot in this country, are more dependent upon us now. During the heat of hostilities they had something to offer as an offset to our sharing of food with them. They were helping to fight a common battle; now they set out for themselves alone. The hour of America's greatest trial, in the court of civilization, with humanity as the judge, is at hand. Our vindication depends upon our maintaining a supply of food to the devastated countries of Europe. We can effect this only through a most determined and insistent program of food saving. Conservation must continue the nation's watchword, in food, even more than in money and other material wealth, if we are to pass the approaching crisis successfully and satisfactorily.

Council Terminates Detailed Activities

store at the earliest moment the usual conditions that prevailed before the war.

"The future meetings of the State Council can be held when called by special call of chairman and secretary. There will be no occasion for the Council holding its regular weekly meeting in the future. If there is necessity for a meeting the Council can be convened on special call of the chairman and secretary."

Judge Ibach's motion further authorized the chairman to proceed in his discretion to a curtailment of the expenditures of the Council. Chairman Foley announced a policy that will terminate the detailed activities of the organization November 30th.

The Council will not disintegrate at once, but will maintain the form of organization, pending an official pronouncement from Washington. The Council adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

The Council adopted a resolution relative to readjustments of industrial problems, offered by Charles Fox. This resolution appears elsewhere in this issue of the Bulletin.

Fred A. Loftin, of Indianapolis, asked approval of a resolution indorsing publication of county and state historical data. The matter was referred to the Publicity Committee.

At the instance of the Committee on Scientific Research, the Council indorsed the daylight saving law, which was effective for seven months during the year. The law is a federal one, and indeterminate in its operation.

Red Cross Activities

In October 2,824 families of Indiana soldiers and sailors made use of Red Cross chapter Home Service Sections, it is shown in the monthly report of the Department of Civilian Relief, Lake Division, American Red Cross.

Of the above number, 1,143 families made use of the information bureaus of the Home Service Sections.

Financial aid amounting to $4,948.55 was administered during the month by Indiana Home Service Sections.

Red Cross Points Out Vast Work to Be Done

Moment Now Has Come to Prepare for Peace Where Important Duties Are to Be Met.

"Carry on!" is the keynote of a Red Cross statement of policy just issued by national Red Cross headquarters in view of the apparent nearness of peace with Germany.

The statement which says "but even with peace let no one suppose that the work of the Red Cross is finished," was read by General Manager George E. Scott of the Red Cross at a national Red Cross conference at Chicago and was telegraphed to Lake Division headquarters for the information of the thousands of Red Cross workers in the States of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky. The statement reads:

"On February 10th last year, nearly six weeks before the United States declared war, the National Red Cross headquarters advised its chapters to prepare for war. That which has followed in the records of the Red Cross in helping to win the war and to relieve the suffering growing out of it, constitutes something of which every American citizen has a right to be proud. Every Red Cross worker must feel a sense of satisfaction in having had a share in it all."

"The moment now has come to prepare for peace. Actual peace may come at any moment; it may be deferred some time. But until peace is really here there can be no relaxation in any Red Cross effort incident to active hostilities."

"But even with peace, let no one suppose that the work of the Red Cross is finished. Millions of American boys still are under arms; thousands of them are sick and wounded. Owing to a shortage of shipping it may take us a year or more to bring our boys home from France. But whatever the time, our protecting arms must be about them and their families over the whole period that must elapse before normal peace life can be resumed."

"Our soldiers and sailors are enlisted until the commander-in-chief tells them there is no more work for them to do. Let every Red Cross member and worker, both man and woman, show our soldiers and sailors that to care for their health, wealth and happiness we are enlisted for no less period than they."

"The cessation of hostilities will reveal a picture of misery such as the world has never seen before, especially in many countries which cannot help themselves. The American people will expect the Red Cross to continue to act as their agent in repairing broken spirits and broken bodies. Peace terms and peace conditions will determine how we can best minister to the vast broken areas which have been harrowed by war and for this great act of mercy the heart and spirit of the American people must continue to be mobilized through the American Red Cross."

"On behalf of the War Council, we accordingly ask each member of our splendid body of workers throughout the land, to bear in mind the solemn obligation which rests upon each one of us to carry on. We cannot abate for an instant in our efforts or our spirits. There will be an abundance of work to do and even at the moment of peace, let no Red Cross worker falter."

"Our spirit must now call us to show that not the roar of cannon, nor the blood of our people alone directs our activities, but that a great people will continue to respond greatly and freely to its obligation and opportunity to serve."

The storehouses of Europe are empty—its food has been consumed—its material resources have been destroyed—its man-power bled white, but the destiny of a free mankind is assured.
